Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, September 26; Agra, September 22; Calcutta, September 21; Madras, September 19.

The accounts from the North-West are as peaceful and as puzzling as ever. The forward move, which, as the telegrams told us, began in October, had been delayed, it seems, for so many previous weeks by the backwardness of the reserves, and the Viceroy's express injunctions against moving without an ample supply of hill-carriage. It is generally supposed that the expedition will not cross the Indus, will have little if any annoyance from any of the hill tribes, and will have to confine itself to the old familiar business of destroying the enemy's crops and burning down their villages; a very mouse of outcome from so mountainous a travail. According to some writers however the enemy have no desire to shirk our challenge, and have given us a foretaste of their warlike intentions in the shape of one or two small raids against friendly villages. The Hussunzaies were also said to be fortifying a pass at the head of the Agroah Valley, and some hundreds of them might be seen clustering together seven or eight miles from the British camp. Our own belief is that they are dreadfully frightened, and would gladly humble themselves to any extent, if so they might escape the impending punishment.

AUTHORITIES differ also as to the intentions of the Akhoond of Swat. Some will have it that a late attack on a police post in Kohat was got up at his suggestion, while others of a less imaginative turn acquit him of all such foolish waste of effort against a Power whose goodwill he has every reason to cultivate. Would it not best serve his purpose to extend his sway over his immediate neighbours instead of plotting evil against the English? According to the Times of India, he has no wish to foment a quarrel between the hill tribes and the Indian Government, which would interfere with his own plans of self-aggrandisement. At any rate, whichever way his own feelings go, it is pretty certain that the people of Swat and Bonair have sent deputations into the British camp to clear them from all complicity in the Hussanzai inroad. And the Akhoond himself has done us an apparent service by driving the Wahabee fanatics out of his dominions. If the Akhoond should succeed in proving himself a smaller Runjit Singh among the hill-men on our borders, it might become worth our while to accept him as a useful ally.

ON board the steamer which brought the last mail homewards from Bombay embarked also Sir Alexander Grant, Director of Public Instruction in that Presidency. He has left India for good, after nearly ten years' invaluable service, to take up his appointment as Principal of Edinburgh University. He was already a ripe scholar—known to Englishmen by his edition of Aristotle, when he went out to Bombay as professor of History and Political Economy in the Elphinstone College. In 1862 he became Principal of the College, in succession to Dr. Harkness. Three years later he was chosen to replace Mr. E. I. Howard as Director of Public Instruction. He had also for some years been Vice-Chancellor of the University, and was not long ago appointed a member of the Bombay Legislative Council. In the farewell address presented to him by the Educational department at Poonah, and at the public meeting afterwards held in his honour at Bombay, his signal services in the cause of education were gracefully acknowledged, and a hearty tribute was paid to his administrative success. In the first two years of his directorship he increased the middle-class pupils from 18,310 to 26,310, and the lower-class pupils from 45,310 to 86,321. To the high schools, which he found for the most part in a very bad way, he gave a fresh start, and has left them in sound working condition. Of female education he soon became a zealous and successful promoter. Finally he was the first to introduce and develop the system of grants in aid which had been sketched out in the despatch of 1854.

CERTAIN changes are said to be impending over the Bombay army. It has been discovered that Bombay has proportionally more brigade commands than Bengal. There are four divisions and eight brigades in the smaller presidency against seven divisions and twelve brigades in the larger. Accordingly it has been decreed that Nusseerabad, Neemuch, and Ahmednuggur shall lose their second-class brigadiers and be commanded henceforth by the senior officer in each station. It is further reported that two good military stations are to be transferred from the Bombay army to Bengal and Madras, the former regaining Mhow in exchange for Kamptee, and the latter taking over Belgaum. The reason of this arrangement, as the Bombay Gazette remarks, is not very clear. Both Ajmere and Nusseerabad are at once strategically and geographically nearer to Bengal than Mhow can be. The last-named belongs to the line of the Nerbudda, and is nearer Khundwa and Baroda than it is to any of the Bengal stations. Still less reason can be found for the probable transfer of Belgaum to Madras.

It is said that Sir John Lawrence will not leave India till the middle of January next. Under any circumstances however he will have left before the arrival of the Duke of Edinburgh; an arrangement which we agree with the Times of India in regretting. No fitter host could have been found for the princely visitor than he who, apart from his long Indian training, did more than anyone else to carry our Indian Empire through the crisis of 1867. According to the Bombay Gazette,

Sir John will embark from Calcutta, a proceeding to which that journal demurs in the interests of Bombay. It may be matter of regret that such a viceroy has never cared to visit the Western Presidency. We for our part should like to see every viceroy bound to pass some time both in Madras and Bombay. But we cannot see what advantage Bombay would derive from a mere flying visit of a governor-general on his way home. It might gain something perhaps from the presence of Sir John's successor on his way to Calcutta. •

MR. MAINE has brought in a Bill to legalise marriages between "certain natives of India not professing the Christian religion." This step has been taken, not too soon, at the instance of Baboo Keshab Chunder Sen, leader of the growing sect of Brahmoe, the Unitarians of Hinduism. At present a Brahma marriage, being performed neither after the orthodox Hindu nor the Christian ritual, is virtually unrecognised by law. Mr. Maine therefore pleads that the Brahmoe may in this matter be raised to a position no worse than that of the Khonds and Santals. He thinks however that the sect "lacks stability," and that the movement which produced it will produce others also, more or less distinct. His measure of relief therefore has an eye to further possibilities. He would legalise all marriages between natives of India "not professing the Christian, and objecting to be married in accordance with the rites of the Hindu, Mohammedan, Buddhist, Parsee, or Jewish religion," on these conditions:—The marriage must be solemnised in the presence of an official Registrar-general of Native Marriages; the parties must be unmarried; the husband must be more than eighteen, the wife more than fourteen years of age; and they must not come within the degrees of affinity prohibited by a certain schedule annexed to the Bill. The Registrar, who will probably be also registrar for insurances, must certify to the marriage, and enter it in a register kept open for public inspection. A clause in the Bill legalises former marriages of the nature contemplated by the Bill itself, if they have taken place before three witnesses, between persons otherwise legally marriageable. Mr. Maine's Act further makes bigamy punishable on the part of those who marry under its provisions. It is in fact a measure for legalising civil marriages throughout India, among all who accept the principle of monogamy and can find no legal footing in any of the existing semi-religious codes. Further in this direction we can hardly go, so long as the bulk of Indian society insists on the right to marry more wives than one.

THE weather reports from most parts of India are this time more encouraging. Both in Bengal Proper and generally throughout Upper India heavy showers have fallen, and if the rain continues a little longer in the Upper Provinces the threatened scarcity will be reduced to harmless proportions. In Rajpootana and the Central Provinces the prospect is still very gloomy. At Joudpore a quart of brackish water was selling for two annas. Ajnere and Nusseerabad have large lakes to depend upon, but Marwar is almost drained dry. Thousands of villagers are making their way towards Guzerat or Central India. Those that remain must look to Government for some mode of saving them from a lingering death. In the North-West Provinces the price of grain had not yet begun to fall, but large quantities were coming in from Oudh; and the recent rainfall will tell for the better in due time. Correspondents from Jubbulpore write more hopefully, though even at the best no more than a six-anna crop could be expected there. Measures of relief were being steadily forwarded in all parts of the threatened districts. For a sure sign of the impending scarcity, we are told to look at the state of the piece-goods market in Calcutta. Not a bale of the favourite markeen has been sold there, it seems, for weeks; all the money being kept back to buy food. As usual, there is an absurd outcry against the greed of the bunniah, who are really doing a great public service by studying their own advantage in the matter of prices. Nothing seems so hard to impress on the popular mind as the self-adjusting processes of supply and demand.

LAST year the health of the native army of Bengal was nearly as good as in 1864, the death-rate in the former being 16·77 per 1,000, as compared with 15 per 1,000 in the latter. Bengal Proper kills off proportionally the greatest number; the figure there rising to 28·50 per 1,000, and the number of deaths from cholera being nearly double what it was in the Upper Provinces. In the jails the death-rate was as much as 38·32 per 1,000. There too Bengal maintains a bad pre-eminence, with a death-rate of 56·65, while the jails of Agra, Meerut, Rohilkund, and the Punjab show a death-rate of only 24 in the thousand.

THE native petition for the immediate instalment of the young Rajah of Mysore has been referred home by the Viceroy for the consideration of the India Office. Sir John for his part opines that, until the young prince has reached years of discretion, proved his fitness for the post, and agreed to certain conditions that may seem good to the Indian Government, he ought not to be formally installed. Is that another phrase for an indefinite adjournment of the whole question?

THE statement of a Calcutta paper touching the compensation granted from the India Office to Mr. Norton, of the Bombay Civil Service, must have been the baseless fabric of a vision. No such compensation has yet, to the best of our information, been granted.

OUR military readers will note that the question of bonus compensation is again being stirred, with a very good prospect of a happier issue than that to which Lord Cranborne's letter has hitherto led. The claims of the aggrieved are to be vigorously taken up in the next Parliament. Officers should therefore lose no further time in making out their memorials.

IN looking over the printed proceedings of the meeting of the British Association for the advancement of science, held at Norwich in August, we observe that a considerable number of savants connected with British India were office bearers of different sections, and took part in the discussions. Among these were Sir Wm. Denison, Sir A. Phayre, Sir Walter Elliot, Sir A. Waugh, Mr. Edgeworth, General F. C. Cotton; and Dr. Thomas Thomson, formerly Superintendent Botanical Garden, Calcutta, was elected to the important office of Joint Secretary, in room of Mr. Francis Galton, who retired in bad health. From the numerous papers read we subjoin a list of those bearing specially on India and our other Eastern Dependencies:—

- Sir Walter Elliot—Sepulchral Remains in Southern India.
- Dr. W. Cleghorn—On the Distribution of the Principal Timber Trees in India, and the Progress of Forest Conservancy.
- Dr. Cobbold, F.R.S.—Flukes from the Indian Elephant, with remarks on their Affinities.
- Colonel Strange—On the Necessity for State Intervention to Secure the Progress of Physical Science.
- T. Logan, F.R.S.E.—On the Abrading and Transporting Power of Water.
- Professor A. Vamberg—On the Uigurs.
- F. A. Abel, F.R.S.—On the Chemical Composition of the great Cannon of Mohammed II., recently presented by the Sultan Aziz Khan to the British Government.
- Granville Sharp—Description of Hong Kong.
- C. R. Markham—Geography of the Abyssinian Expedition.
- Dr. H. Blanc—Native Races of Abyssinia.
- Dr. R. J. Mann—The Gold Fields of South Africa.
- Dr. R. J. Mann—Notes on the Character of the Coal Field in Natal.
- Dr. Mann—On the Resemblance and Contrasts of the Climates of Mauritius and Natal.
- Dr. Mann—Abstract of Meteorological Observations made at Pietermaritzburg, Natal.
- Professor C. Meldrum—Synoptic Weather Charts of the Indian Ocean.
- Professor C. Meldrum—Storm-warnings in Mauritius.
- H. M. Jenkins—On the Tertiary Deposits of Victoria.
- T. Baines—Victoria and Albert Rivers, North Australia.

At the previous meeting in Dundee, the resume by Dr. Oldham of the progress of the Geological Survey of India attracted much attention, and on this occasion the summary of the Advancement of Forest Conservancy, submitted by Dr. Cleghorn, was received with much interest. An abstract of this paper will be found in another column.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, October 21, 1868.

FAIRPLAY FOR THE NATIVE SOLDIER.

IF it be true, as we are told by an Indian journal, that even the 6th Foot have gone to the front in Hazara, furnished with only forty rounds of Snider cartridges a man, we can only hope that the war on the North-west frontier will by this time have resolved itself into a military parade. There is another likelihood of which we are not quite so hopeful, namely, that having so little ammunition to spare, the men will not be in a hurry to use it all up. Quick firing in nervous or unskilful hands almost necessarily tends to wild firing. Still the noise of swift-recurring volleys, or of a well-sustained, however harmless, file-fire, does go far to frighten an inexperienced or fitfully brave enemy; for which reason any lack of ammunition in the present instance may well be regretted, if such lack there be. Unless we are fully prepared to teach these hill tribes a convincing lesson once for all, we had done better to wait for a fairer opportunity of testing the range and accuracy of the new rifle.

But it may be said that the Snider is a luxury which troops engaged in Indian warfare can afford to go without, although it was found useful against a much less formidable foe in Abyssinia. And therefore we suppose it is all right to send native regiments once more into action, armed with nothing better than old Brown Bess. Is not that the weapon with which all our Indian victories have been won? And a very good weapon it is too for quick firing, with some few possibilities of doing mischief at very short ranges. Besides, it is well-known that since the Mutiny native troops are never to be trusted with any weapon good enough to bear turning against their white comrades.

Have we not heard enough however by this time of that policy of general suspicion which the events of 1857 were supposed to make inevitable? It may sound very wise in theory to arm native troops with inferior weapons. Such an arrangement might seem tolerable, if the reign of universal peace had already begun, and our native army were merely doing the work of a military police. It might even answer if natives alone were employed in any field of Indian warfare; whatever the enemy might think of the advantage thus kindly furnished them in the probable possession of a weapon superior to our own. Matchlocks, as we know, have a trick of carrying further and to better purpose than the old British musket. But is it not rather unfair to send out side by side on the same service two bodies of troops unequally armed, merely because the one have white faces and the other dark? If both are called upon to encounter the same foe in the same kind of conflict, why should not both have equal chances, so far as weapons can make them equal, of gaining a victory profitable to both alike? The strength of an army lies in its weakest point, and nothing can be more foolish than deliberately to weaken two-thirds or so of a British-Indian force at a critical moment, for fear of a contingency which may never happen, and would not happen a bit the sooner for a more generous line of conduct on our part. If you bring native troops into line with English, let them in common fairness be armed like their white comrades. They can fight as bravely under proper leading. If they lack somewhat of our dogged energy and cool hardihood, so much the more reason for giving them the best weapon they are capable of handling. If the Snider musket be good for our countrymen, will it not prove equally good for those brave fellows who at Delhi and in Abyssinia bore their full share of the common hardship, and achieved their full share of the common triumph?

What is there to fear in the event of our making so simple a concession to justice? That the improved musket might some day be turned against ourselves? Well; we cannot see how that fact alone would increase our danger. Of what use would the Snider be without ammunition, and whence could an insurgent army obtain the needful supply of the latter? We have wisely transferred to British keeping the arsenals and strong places of Hindustan. Ever since the Mutiny our batteries have been worked by European gunners alone. Native troops deprived of their English officers and armed with breech-loaders of cunning make, would thus find themselves infinitely weaker for mischief than they were a dozen years back, when Delhi was garrisoned by sepoys and smooth-bore muskets were slowly giving place to Enfield rifles. The better the weapon supplied to our native army, the less dangerous would it be likely to prove to ourselves in the event of another outbreak. Any sort of cartridge might serve at a pinch for Brown Bess; but native artisans would find it no easy task to furnish makeshift ammunition for the more delicate Snider.

We have said nothing yet as to the effect which our mistrustful policy must produce on the temper of our native troops. It is certain that they will not love us the better nor respect us the more for so plain a symptom of conscious weakness on our part. To treat your friend as if he might some day become your enemy, may be a principle as wise in practice as it is selfish in appearance; but do not show him that you mistrust his friendship unless you are bent on turning him into a foe. That sort of policy had more to do with the Mutiny than most of us care to own. Let us rather resign ourselves to the obverse process of treating our enemy as if he might some day become our friend. Let us try to think of him as a reasonable being, who will find his interest in rendering good service in return for sufficient pay, kind treatment, and a fair prospect of rising in the world. There is no need to overdo the kindness, to grant him too many indulgences all at once. But we can never hope to gather grapes from thorns, or to reap otherwise than we have sown. Give the native soldier a fair trial, a decent start, with some likelihood of becoming an officer before all his teeth have dropped out of his head, and the chances are that he will serve us quite as loyally as he did in earlier days. Fairplay, tempered by ordinary prudence, will be found in the long run a much safer and cheaper policy than one of general mistrust and negligent repression.

THE OLD COMPANY'S EUROPEANS.

IN a few months more the 101st Royal Fusiliers will be landing for the first time on English ground. One of the youngest regiments in her Majesty's service, it may yet claim to rank among the oldest in respect of the military renown earned by a century of gallant deeds. Few regiments in the British army have done more to merit the gratitude of a proud nation than that which Anglo-Indians best remember as the old Company's First Bengal Fusiliers. From Plassey to Lucknow and Sitana, it has toiled and bled in half-a-hundred memorable campaigns. To every call made upon its courage, discipline, or powers of endurance, it has answered with a ready boldness and a conquering persistency beyond all praise. Its colours have struggled on to victory through some of the stormiest scenes in the first march to Kabul, in the fights of Ferozeshuhur and Sobraon, in the world-famous siege of Delhi, and the last and most successful advance upon Lucknow. Its powers of endurance stood the most trying tests in the campaigns of Burmah, of Upper India, and Sitana. With one trifling exception, for which noble amends was promptly made, no tale of shame or disaster hangs about the war-stained records of the First Bengal Fusiliers. Even in the so-called European mutiny of 1859, provoked by Lord Canning's ill-timed obstinacy, this regiment at least never allowed the irritation born of official injustice to break through the restraints of outward discipline. The men did their duty without a murmur, waiting for the concession which failed to hinder nine or ten thousand angry soldiers from taking their discharge.

In thus dwelling on the services of one particular regiment, we do but cite an average sample of the stuff that went to the making of the whole Company's European army. What we have said of the 1st Bengal Fusiliers may be applied with mere differences of detail to every other regiment and arm of a service which, all things considered, remained to the last day of its being unequalled for real efficiency. It was always ready "to go anywhere and do anything." Its discipline as a body stood proof against the sorest temptations. Martinets from the Horse Guards might sometimes sneer at superficial defects of pipeclay routine; but true soldiers like Gough and Napier had a truer insight into the practical worth of the men they repeatedly owned themselves proud to command. The privates of one of these regiments might die off at such a pace that in ten years or so the regiment was virtually renewed. But always the old spirit lived to add fresh lustre to the old renown. Whatever question there might be as to the smartness of the Company's Europeans on parade, and even there they could show themselves, under due conditions, at least a match for their comrades in the Royal Army,—it is certain that in all requisites of true soldiership they had nothing to learn from, if not indeed something to teach the latter. At Ferozeshuhur and Chilianwalla no body of Company's Europeans fell short of its duty under circumstances never so trying. After Goojrat it was a weak Company's regiment that took up the pursuit of Shere Singh's beaten army, in place of a Queen's regiment declared unfit to go on. The same thing happened, we believe, to another regiment after the fall of Delhi, when the 1st Fusiliers had the honour of marching onwards in its stead to Lucknow. General Balfour, among others, has borne witness to the superior elasticity of Company's over Queen's troops during a long and arduous campaign. Nothing seemed able to exhaust the pluck and energy of the former, so long as any work remained to do. Their "go" was proverbial. The 2nd Bengal Fusiliers on their march to Attok and Peshawar in 1848, and the Madras Fusiliers, struggling painfully forward in 1857 from Allahabad to Lucknow, are but two of many instances that might be quoted in point.

As for the old Indian Artillery, the mere names of battles and sieges in which it has earned the very highest distinction would fill nearly a column of this paper. "Quæ caret ora cruce nostro?"—the comrades of Pollock, Wilson, Eyre, Tombs, and Whish might ask with literal truth, so far as Southern Asia is concerned. It would need a goodly volume to set forth, however briefly, the more memorable feats performed by that noblest arm of a peerless service. Wherever guns could possibly be taken or worked with good effect, those of the old Company's regiments were worked and taken. No matter how rough the ground, how great the distance, how formidable the odds against them, they were sure to occupy the post of danger and offence under the fearless lead of soldiers like Tombs, Dawes, Fordyce, and Horsford. We have no wish to exalt one service at the expense of another, but if constant practice in the field be worth anything, the old Company's Artillery must have been without a rival, and it is certain that during the Mutinies the first batteries that came out from England had to take some lessons in the art of handling guns from their more experienced comrades on the spot.

A word too must be said for the superior discipline of the old European corps, as compared at any rate with the Queen's Regiments serving in India. Nothing could have been better in its own way than the spirit which prevailed between men and officers in the former. On the one side there was none of that harsh overbearing manner, that tendency to treat the soldier as a mere machine for the carrying out of needful orders, which so often provokes a sullen, insubordinate temper on the other. The mutual goodwill and respect that come of frequent contact under favourable conditions held them together in the bonds of an easy discipline, never needlessly tightened, nor yet unduly relaxed. In these regiments that continual exchange of officers from one corps to another, which weakens the efficiency of the Royal Army, was wholly impossible; and comparatively few of their officers were drained away into the staff. The bulk of them made their regiments their home, and not a few of them preferred staying with their own countrymen, whom they knew and trusted, to seeking for better paid employment elsewhere. The men on their part were proud of their officers and ready to follow them anywhither. In the days of Lord Gough's command, when soldier after soldier in her Majesty's forces was tried, and more than one finally shot for downright insubordination, not one instance of the crime, so far as we remember, was recorded against any private in the Company's Europeans. We should be sorry indeed to see the old character pass away under new conditions from the younger representatives of a service which has played so proud a part in the history of our Indian Empire.

Correspondence.

A QUERY ANSWERED.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I have read "P. B.'s" letter in your issue of October 14, and will venture to reply to it.

I should like to know whether your correspondent has been out to India, and whether he has ever travelled by railway to the North-West Provinces; if he has not, he had better obtain my address from you, and put himself in communication with me, and I will give him full particulars, as I have travelled—I may almost say—all over India, and know what the O.K. thing to do is.

If "P. B." intends taking his wife and family with him I would strongly recommend him not to travel via Nagpore for more reasons than one, but principally on account of the great inconvenience and hardship to be endured for want of many necessities of life, and the difficulties of travelling over that part of the country unconnected with the line of rail. Where is "P. B." bound to? North-West Provinces, the Punjab, or Oudh? When is he likely to arrive in India and begin his journey? A good deal depends on this, as the weather, the engagements of dak garries, and the rush of passengers by train at particular periods of the year, have to be taken into consideration. To an experienced traveller discomfort of the nature "P. B." wishes to avoid might be guarded against; but an inexperienced one might, even with proper caution and forethought, experience discomfort. However, if your correspondent thinks it worth his while to obtain from you my name and address (which I enclose), and writes to me, I shall gladly give him every assistance.—Yours faithfully,

A ROLLING STONE WITH MOSS.

BONUS COMPENSATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I have read with much satisfaction the letter of "A Struggler for Redress" in your last number. I, for one, shall lose no time in making out my petition and forwarding it to the gentleman who writes under that signature, but who is, I believe, also known personally to me. I have been hitherto astonished to find so much apathy prevail amongst my brother officers upon this subject of "bonus compensations," for there can be no doubt that if any body of public servants ever were hardly and unjustly used, it is ourselves upon this question; nor do I believe a parallel case, involving so real a grievance and so much hardship, can be found in the records of the last century. Were the officers of the home army to find their commissions suddenly unsaleable, from no fault of their own, what an outcry there would be, and how Parliament would be inundated with petitions! Were the owners of advowsons of livings to be informed that the sale of them was virtually prohibited for the future, what dissatisfaction would be thereby created, and what remonstrances would arise! Such measures, indeed, could not be carried through a constitutional House of Commons, nor receive the sanction of the English people. And yet, in what, I should like to know, does our case differ from these two? The values of our commissions were as real as those of our brethren of the home service, or as the advowsons of the livings of the clerical profession. All three are existing interests, which are, usually, I may say always, supposed to be respected, when, for imperial purposes, a change is effected in the laws, or in the constitution, or in the services of the country. Apart therefore from the pecuniary view of the matter, which however I do not deny is to me of considerable personal importance, I do hope, on public grounds, that members of the profession thus wronged will not be backward at this crisis in showing, by combined action, that they feel that an injustice has been committed to their class, which can be easily repaired at this, the eleventh hour, and will be so, I conscientiously believe, as soon as Government can be persuaded, from our earnest but respectful attitude, to go into the merits of the case.—I am, Sir, yours faithfully, PERSEVERANCE.

A NEW INDIAN MELO-DRAMA.

It is remarkable that with all its rich dramatic materials India has never been a favourite field for the explorations of the dramatist, and little indeed has been made of its grand historical and military records or its legendary lore. Surely an histrionic part might have been made out of so stirring a military character as "Lally Tolendal," or good romantic plays constructed out of the "Kahla and Dimna," or "Rama and Luxman." Very recently a powerful Indian historical and romantic novel, entitled "Tara," appeared from the pen of Mr. Taylor Meadows, which we think well deserved adaptation to the stage.

The new Indian drama, entitled "Pindee Singh," produced at the Royal Alfred Theatre, Marylebone, under the auspices of Prince Alfred (who has given his name to the new theatre, and inaugurated its opening with his presence), is, we understand, a translation and adaptation from the French. "Pindee Singh" consists of a series of tableaux of Oriental life and manners contrasted with the more artificial existence of Europeans in India. The double action is carried on amid the beautiful scenery of Oude, and the period is that of the mutiny. We are introduced to the penetralia of a Rajah's Court, and our attention alternates between the pomp and circumstance of the Rajah's Palace and the society of the Anglo-Indian community resident at a military station. The plot of "Pindee Singh" is consistent, the story clear, and the language, always brisk and vigorous, occasionally rises to the poetical. There are several good sensational situations, and the spectacular effects are on a scale of magnitude and splendour seldom to be seen at a minor theatre. The festival and nautch in the first act is a bright and animated scene of an Oriental character, and we can testify that the management has made good use of authorities in the representation. The Hindoo deity Siva is represented in the Festival Scene according to the best approved model of the idol. The fable of "Pindee Singh" has the right Oriental ring; but the name is inappropriate, as the term "Singh" cannot be employed in the feminine gender. The human interest of the play in the first instance is made to turn upon the conflict of the heathen and Christian creeds. While the Hindoo dramatis personæ obey Siva's behests, the Europeans are actuated by the principles of Christianity alone. The social or domestic interest arises out of the fortunes and vicissitudes of Pindee Singh, through her apostacy from heathenism, and her acceptance of the Christian creed. Pindee (who is in reality of English blood and only the adopted daughter of the Rajah) has clandestinely become the wife of a British officer; thus her affections are partly alienated from her supposed father, Khan Merab Khan, Rajah of Oudh. The rising against British rule in Oudh is about to take place, and Pindee becomes the instrument by which the English residents at the military station are made acquainted with the intended massacre. The dénouement is the defeat of the mutineers, and the flight of the Rajah. Pindee having performed deeds of valour and heroism in leading the English to victory, is rewarded by being placed on the abdicated throne of the fugitive Rajah; receiving the fealty of her subjects under the protection of the British. It is in the character of the Princess Pindee that the chief histrionic interest of the play centres. Miss Amy Sedgwick, the directress of the Prince Alfred Theatre, has created a fine part of the melodramatic heroine type in her impersonation of the heroic maid of Oudh.

We cannot conclude without referring to the tasteful decorations of the Royal Alfred Theatre, and to the elegant new act drop which represents Prince Alfred's ship, the Galatea, at anchor. This marine picture has been exceedingly well painted by the artist, Mr. F. Matthews.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

LORD MAYO.

The Madras Times thinks that if India is wise she will make the very best of her new Viceroy, and though reading attentively the unusually severe and almost unanimous criticisms of the home press, she will not permit herself to meet Lord Mayo with a scowl on her brow and prejudice at her heart. Many will regret that a man who has achieved a greater reputation, and attained the rank of a first-class statesman, has not been selected; but it is not altogether unprofitable to reflect that Lord Mayo has made no great blunders. He is, so far as his fellow-workers have yet seen, a man of ability, and he has not let slip opportunities for gaining fair credit. At any rate he should have a clear stage here, as India cannot veto the appointment. "What can't be cured had best be endured," and as Lord Mayo, with national self-confidence, does not distrust his own qualifications for the office he has accepted, it would be well for India to take a hint from him, and to be hopeful that he will prove himself a good ruler, until at least she has satisfied herself that he is a bad one. With the prospect of the Conservatives soon giving place to the Whigs Lord Mayo will commence his labours here with the utmost circumspection, for it will depend perhaps on his earliest proceedings whether or no the Liberal Ministry will keep him in India. He is thought so little of as yet that he may be sure he will not disappoint high expectation of him, since high expectation there is none; and on the other hand, should he succeed in ruling India with ability and tact, he will achieve a great reputation indeed.

THE GREAT LAND QUESTION.

The Friend of India holds that Bengal was utterly unfit for a permanent settlement at the time that Lord Cornwallis declared it. The frightful misrule of the Mussulmans in their last days had been followed by the famine and by the "public auctions" of Warren Hastings. A third of the land was waste, a third of the people were gone, and it was under such circumstances that Lord Cornwallis, in an evil moment, made his ten years' settlement and declared it perpetual. We do not blame him. All India had at that time to be conquered from Bengal. The company consisted of traders, and the number of officials was lamentably few. Not only so, but the Governor-General, always occupied with distant wars and provinces, has never exacted the wise and benevolent conditions on which the zemindar holds his tenure. The zemindars have been allowed to ignore every duty except the district post, till now they have the audacity to declare that they received their splendid estates without conditions and free from all duties. The results we need not describe. The last is sufficient—the spectacle presented by the zemindars in council the other day against the educational and road cess. But admitting and lamenting all this, the fixed assessment school still assert that even the Bengal settlement has been politically and financially a success. From that province we have conquered Upper India, and it would yield us a rich surplus were we confined within the Kurumnassa to-morrow. Only let the local and central Governments see that the zemindars discharge their portion of a contract which has enriched without humanising them, and, bad as the Bengal settlement was, the principle of permanency on which it was based will be found to triumph. But if a permanent settlement be given to millions of peasant proprietors, instead of to "hereditary zemindars," as in Bengal, and be given only in districts which are fully assessed and have received all the development that may be looked for from railways and canals, for some time at least, the question assumes another aspect. The State will, in such cases, surrender nothing except its right to interfere as prices rise and the value of the precious metals vary. And in return for surrendering so little it will secure what?—not only the well-being of the people and the development of society in a healthy way without interference; not only passive contentment and the growth of intelligence; not only the creation of capital, increase of trade, and consequent extension of the area of indirect taxation, but what is of primary importance to us as rulers of alien millions—active loyalty created by a tenure which no other Power would respect for a moment. The “aristocracy” and sepoys of India tried their best against us in 1857, and were defeated because the people were passive. The lesson is plain that we should not interfere with rights, as we did in Oude, nor tolerate indiscipline. If an attempt to break the easy yoke of our civilisation be again made it will not be more successful unless it be made by the mass of the people. Give that people a tenure which they will identify with the English, and education to use it for their own growth in wealth, and they will yet present the, at present impossible, spectacle of their rallying to our side should our power be ever again contested, even by their own natural leaders. We are not called on, with the leasehold school, to oust big landlords, as was done in Oude, any more than with the advocates of large holdings to trample on the people, as is done in Bengal. Wherever the right to the soil exists there let us, under fair conditions, confer a permanent assessment, assured that society will grow better in its own way for the people and for ourselves if we abstain from such vivisection of it as marks every new settlement.

RUSSIA IN CENTRAL ASIA.

The Times of India can hardly conceive it possible that Bokhara was invaded by a handful of Russians with the fixed determination of keeping possession of the country. And it cannot conceive that the Russians, if their object is that of opening up the khanate for the reception of their own crude manufactures, can be so short-sighted as to adopt an efficient method of ruining the country, when it is their interest in such a case rather to promote the prosperity of its population as a purchasing community. At the very outbreak of the war with Bokhara after the capture of Tashkend, the Amcer was said to have reduced his people to poverty, or at least to have then exhausted all his means in order to equip an army. Prices of everything ran exorbitantly high, and the goods lying in store at the bazaars could find no sale, because there was neither money nor cattle nor commodities to give in exchange. It was, and is to a great extent, the same to this day in Tashkend, a condition of affairs which is greatly deplored by the local Government, whose pecuniary interests are thereby very materially effected. The balance-sheets of the Turkistan treasury have shown an excess of revenue over expenditure, but they were only prospective estimates, and we are given to understand that there are deficiencies in each year's revenue, which, as the Home Government cannot afford to contribute to the maintenance of the forces and administration, can be covered by no other way than out of the indemnity which it has cost so much greater experience to extract from Bokhara. Here, then, we have perhaps the secret of the invasion of Bokhara. The province of Turkistan is a costly encumbrance, which cannot be held and governed without extraneous supplies of money. The £4,500 will serve to pay up a portion of the arrears owing for military and civil services, and if the balance of the contribution due from Bokhara is obtained, well and good for Turkistan and Bokhara, until the one rights herself and the other can pay; but as Russia is not versed in the ways of commerce, and generally fails to turn her acquisition to her own real advantage, Bokhara will, at the cost of all future profitable relations with the Russia empire, be reduced to poverty, until she will fall an easy though barren conquest to the increase of Russia's present difficulty in Central Asia.

ARRIVALS FROM EUROPE.—The undermentioned officers have reported their return from England:—Lieut.-Colonel Bivar, of the Bengal Staff Corps, Deputy Commissioner, in charge of the Cossyah and Jynteah Hills, and Lieut. Morrison, of the General List, Infantry, 1st Wing Subaltern, 3rd Goorkha (The Kumaon) Regiment; date of arrival at Fort William, Sept. 1 last.

MILITARY FURLONGHS.—The following officers obtained furlough to Europe:—Major King, Bengal Staff Corps, Commandant 13th (the Shekhawattce) Regiment N.I., for two years; Major Waddington, Bengal Staff Corps, Mooltan, August 31; Mr. C. Horne, C.S., ditto; Major Maitland, 79th Foot, to remain in England, on private affairs, from March 15 to November 30, 1869, in extension; Brevet Major Dance, Royal Artillery, overland, from date of embarkation; Major Græme, 104th Foot, overland, for fifteen months, from date of embarkation; Captain McCausland, to Calcutta, for one month from date of leaving regiment, and to England for fifteen months, from date of embarkation, on private affairs; Captain Kempson, 26th Foot, to England, for four months, from date of embarkation, on private affairs; Lieut. Young, No. 5 Battery 24th Brigade, to England, overland, from date of embarkation, to appear before a medical board; Lieut. Napier, aide-de-camp to the Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay army, for twenty months, from May 31 (the date of his departure from Zoulla); Captain Wood, 3rd Battalion Rifle Brigade, to England, for fifteen months, from date of embarkation, on private affairs.

HAZARA.

ABBOTTABAD, Sept. 22.—Nothing of importance has occurred in the Agror Valley during the past few days. The independent Swattees are stated to be sending deputations, and to have sued for terms. The Trans-Indus Hindustanes are said to be in flight before the Akhoond's levies, and are not attempting to cross the river. The camp is very healthy.

The Bombay Gazette's correspondent writes thus from Hazara, Sept. 15:—Government has after all sanctioned the advance of our troops to inflict a heavy punishment on the Huzzunzaies. Operations were only delayed till the sanction of the Government should be obtained, and no further delay can now occur in the advance of the force. The Black Mountain to the east of the Indus, whose height is calculated to be 10,000 feet above the level of the sea, and which, considering its relative position among a cluster of other hills, is rather difficult of access, will be the scene of the present campaign. The number of troops that are to penetrate into the interior has not yet been definitely fixed. A force comprising not less than 7,000 troops will for the present operate, while reserves will be maintained at both the Hazara garrison and the Rawul Pindee station to take the field when ordered. The assertion in the Friend of India that 20,000 troops had been sanctioned for this hill campaign—of no less political importance than that of Abyssinia—cannot in the least be doubted, for there is the fullest necessity for this force. Taking it for granted that the tribes on the other side of the Indus—Mudda Khylo and others—are not to join the Hussun Khyles of the Black Mountain, still the various tribes inhabiting the eastern side of the stream, if gathered under one banner, could not number less than 40,000 fighting men. True, they are a savage, a barbarous nation, ignorant of the discipline and order of a well organised force; yet, inured to war and fatigue, accustomed to undergo all the severities of the climate, and familiar to their hill fastnesses and ambuscades, they are naturally warlike, and are expected to offer strong resistance to the invading army. The enemy make demonstrations occasionally, a number of from three to four hundred of them have been seen at a distance of seven or eight miles from the British camp, but they do not dare to come nearer, and so keep aloof. They are, however, not inactive. Breast-works, &c., are being erected by them, and other arrangements made to meet the proposed attack. As for arms, they have matchlocks, spears, swords, and the like weapons. The Akhoond of Swat has apparently nothing to do with the present frontier affairs—having his hands full of other business, besides being at a good distance from the scene. You are aware that the Akhoond directed a force under his son, or the Khalifa, from Swat to punish the section of the Boonair tribes who had sided with the Wahabee Moulvis, Zaidoolah Khan, Ishak Khan, and others. These last had on some occasion received presents from the British Government—a proceeding which was greatly disliked by the Akhoond, who has been always jealous of our influence on the tribes adjoining our border. The Akhoond's son succeeded in punishing the Wahabee Moulvis, who have either been killed or driven from the Akhoond's territory. Ishak Khan was now the only person at the head of a body of fighting men. He, too, with forty of his comrades—the Moollahs—has now been seized and put to death by the Akhoond's orders. The Akhoond is now above a hundred years of age. It is reported that he is going to resign in favour of his son, but that may be doubted. The other day a police station on the Ushat border was attacked. The attacking party was, however, driven off most successfully by the police. I will continue to inform you of what is new in frontier affairs.

The Delhi Gazette understands that the 3rd Bengal Cavalry, the 20th Hussars, the 77th Foot, and a troop of artillery from the Peshawar Brigade, have been warned for active service. The Beezoottees are still unquiet among themselves, and news has reached us that one or two of our policemen have been killed, either by accident or intentionally, by the tribe in question.

There is no foundation (says the Indian Daily News of Sept. 12th) for the statement which has appeared that the Commander-in-Chief will proceed to Hazara to superintend the military operations on that frontier. All intended to be done hardly justifies the employment of a major-general, much less necessitates the presence in Hazara of the head of the Indian Army. The expedition—and as we write it has probably marched—will be little more than an ordinary Punjab frontier one. If the operations were through any at present inconceivable cause to be delayed until, say, after November, when the chief generally takes a cold weather tour of inspection, his Excellency might probably consider it would be as well for him to be in the Punjab as in any other part of the Empire. On the other hand, it will be almost necessary for his Excellency to be in Calcutta in January, when the Duke of Edinburgh is expected to land here.

A letter to the Mofussilite from Camp Agror, September 10th, mentions that the services of Colonel H. C. Johnstone, of the Punjab Survey, have been placed temporarily at the disposal of the Foreign Department, and under the orders of General Wilde, for the purpose of surveying the country our troops may pass through during "the campaign in Hazara." Colonel Johnstone will also have charge of the "Intelligence Department of the Army." The same correspondent adds that "the enemy have not ventured into the plains since they received their les-on on the 12th of last month, but there are numbers watching on the spurs of the Black Mountain."

A correspondent of the Pioneer, writing from Oghee on the 13th, says:—"The telegraph line has not reached Oghee yet, but no doubt it will have done so before you receive this letter. We are not likely to advance before another week, and until we do the enemy are not likely to molest us in any way. Colonel Johnstone's survey party are employed in making sketches of the country from their own personal knowledge, as well as from native information. Since I last wrote the 2nd Goorkhas and De Bude's battery have come in; the 24th Punjab Infantry hold the Soosul Gully, a pass about eight miles in our rear; H.M.'s 19th Foot are at Pukli, about six miles further, with Rennie's battery of Armstrongs; the 6th Royals and the 20th and 23rd Punjab Infantry are at Abbotabad; the 4th Goorkhas are at Hurreepore; and three of the Maharajah of Cashmere's regiments are at Gurhi, near the Jhelum. These are the troops at present in Hazara, with the addition of those at Oghee, mentioned in a previous letter. Everything else remains statu quo. The enemy take much pleasure apparently in showing us their flags, and inflicting on our ears the music of their drums occasionally, but nothing more. They have nearly all gone back to their villages, but it would not take them long to return and show fight, were they so inclined. The intended movements of the force are kept with the strictest secrecy, that is, if any definite plan of operations has yet been decided on. Of course the proposed plan has been submitted for the consideration of Government and the Commander-in-Chief, and nothing will be known until the sanction of these authorities has been received. Meanwhile stores are being pushed to the front, information collected, and maps prepared to be ready for General Wilde's inspection on his return to Oghee."

Indian Public Opinion of the 18th September contains the following telegrams regarding a frontier raid, which, as will be seen, must have been of the pettiest description:—"All quiet in Agror Valley. The enemy actively employed in fortifying the Pass into the Tikree Valley at the head of the Agror Valley and the spurs of the Black Mountain. The 1st Goorkhas are at Hurreepore, and the 4th Goorkhas are here. The Amazai tribe, Trans-Indus, on the 15th attacked an Umb village, but were driven back by the Tunnawallees. The health of the camp remains excellent. Preparations for an advance steadily progressing. A party of Mudda Kheyls and Amazaies had attacked a Tanawul Village, Trans-Indus, close to Umb. Tanawullies lost five men in repulsing the enemy, but inflicted considerable loss. Commissioner is in Agror Valley. 9th Bengal Cavalry and 31st Native Infantry, are to form part of General Wilde's force; the latter reached Pindee this day, so that there will be further delay."

The following items come from the same paper:—"On Friday last, 11th instant, about 150 of the Ootman Kheyls and Bezotees made a raid on Meerai, a village about twenty-four miles from Kohat. They killed one and wounded two policemen, and burnt two houses, but were beaten off with a loss of six men. It was done in revenge, as the Meerai people had captured two of the Ootman Kheyls and one Bezotee, who had broken the blockade and come into our territory, and are now learning to make paper in the Kohat Gaol. This is in truth civilising the wild tribes beyond the border with a vengeance."

ABBOTTABAD, Sept. 16.—The advance of the troops is expected to take place shortly. The 6th Royals leave this on the 18th instant, and the 20th Punjab Native Infantry on the 19th. The 4th Goorkhas and 3rd Sikhs are here, and, it is supposed, will soon receive their route. The mortar and rocket batteries are expected daily. The 1st Goorkhas are at Hurreepore, but will march up as soon as they are relieved by the next regiment from the rear. It is rumoured that a regiment of native infantry and a detachment of the 9th Bengal Lancers will be stationed at Durbund, to which place Captain Wace, Assistant Commissioner, will go as political officer.

According to the Pioneer, Captain Buller, A.D.C. to the Commander-in-Chief, and Lieutenant W. S. Lockhart, 14th Bengal Lancers, who has just returned to India from Abyssinia, have been made Deputy-Assistant Quarter-masters-General to the Hazara Field Force.

STATION TALK.

SIMLA, Sept. 17.—Three weeks or a month ago any one reading the Indian journals would have been led to the conclusion that an arduous, extensive, and costly frontier war, with at least all the tribes from British Hazara to the Khyber, was ready at hand for us. And yet what has the reality proved to be? Simply that one, or at most a few Cis-Indus clans have raided into our territory, stormed a miserable police post, and are now about to receive the punishment they have thus so richly earned. The whole affair is likely, as far as actual operations are concerned, to prove the least noteworthy of the many frontier expeditions we have had to send forth for the chastisement of the tribes since annexation. And yet the wonder really is that out of this miserable affair there has not already arisen a war with all Eusufzye and Swat, entailing the expenditure of crores, and likely to last months, if not more than one season. It is beyond question that a month ago all the tribes north of Peshawar were apprehensive of being attacked by the British, and were making preparations of one kind or another for resistance. It is not wonderful that such apprehension should have been entertained by them. There was hardly an English journal at this side of India that was not giving forth that, instigated by Russia, all the tribes of the frontier, in concert with Afghanistan, were on the point of invading the Punjab, and that it behoved the Indian Government at once to send into the field such a military force or forces as would not only suffice to crush the Hussunzaies, but to annex Bonair and Eusufzye, and reduce Swat and Afghanistan to the condition of dependencies of British India! The Government of India should feel thankful that it has not now such a task before it; it has narrowly escaped the labour. Indeed the Akhoond of Swat and the councils of the several tribes have on this occasion shown more cool-headedness and power of judging the true import of political seemings than have many publicists of repute and pretension on this side of the border.

Sept. 18.—There is as yet no news of any forward movement in Hazara. In all probability no move of the kind will take place for days yet. It is necessary that all the troops of the Reserve should be well to the front before General Wilde crosses the border, and you will have seen that some of those corps had not yet got beyond Lahore by the first week of this month. Another cause of delay is the necessity which is felt and which has been enjoined upon General Wilde, of not moving forward without the amplest supply of hill carriage; for to have the column or columns brought to a check in a hilly country for want of a carriage would be simply an invitation to disaster. The strategic arrangements are entirely between Sir William Mansfield and General Wilde, but on the point of carriage Government has considered it necessary to impress a caution on the military authorities. None better understands than the present Government of India the main practical requirements of a hill frontier scour. There is, as you have already been informed, to be no annexation; nor is it intended that the expeditionary force shall cross the Indus. The scope of the operations is understood to be the punishment of the offending Hussunzaies. This will amount to thrashing them wherever they can be got to make a stand, burning their villages, destroying their stores of grain, burning down their crops, and, in short, doing the very utmost to inflict on them the bitter pangs of want for at least one season—the only effective way, experience has shown, of effectually punishing a Punjab frontier tribe. The tribes beyond the Indus, and the people of Swat and Yusufzye in general, bear us, it is well known, no great love, and would probably to a man joyfully respond to any call to arms that seemed to offer a certain prospect of dealing us a very heavy blow. But these tribesmen are, in a way, wise in their generation, and know that their greatest strength is inadequate to such a purpose. Possibly, were the whole Punjab up in arms against us, these people—like the Afghans in 1848-49—would throw in their weight against us, under the joint influence of love of plunder and hate of the infidel. But until some such not very probable contingency has arisen there is very little room to apprehend from those tribes anything more serious than an occasional petty raid, and from such occasional outbursts no power on earth could wholly restrain them. They will indulge in such freaks from time to time, and each time they have so offended must be treated to punishment of the same description as is now about to be served out to the Hussunzaies. In the present case, however, it is not apprehended that the Trans-Indus tribes will attempt to interfere in behalf of their Cis-Indus relatives. All the tribes are more or less under the influence of, and held in hand by, the Akhoond of Swat, who is not considered to be at all desirous of seeing them in collision with the British. The Akhoond possibly aims at establishing a compact power of his own in Yusufzye and Swat, and dislikes any of the border tribes negotiating with the British except through himself; and possibly were he to succeed in establishing for himself a quasi State or kingdom, strong and well ordered, our Government would for the sake of the peace of the frontier gladly recognise him as its ruler.—Times of India Correspondent.

SIMLA, Sept. 17.—Colonel Campbell, commandant of the Kussowlie depot, died here a day or two ago, and was buried yesterday morning in the cemetery. An abscess in the liver was the immediate cause of death, though the unfortunate gentleman had been troubled with an insidious affection of the part for the last two or three years. The Viceroy and all the great of the station followed his remains to the grave, thus rendering the last sad respect to the memory of one who will be universally regretted. The 46th, Colonel Campbell's regiment, goes home in a couple of months, and the ill-starred gentleman was but waiting for their departure to bid adieu to the shores of India for ever. This is the third death of the season from liver complaint. First came Colonel Couper, then Major Dawson, lastly Colonel Campbell. The usual visit of the Punjab Chiefs is expected in October, when a sort of darbar on a small scale will be given to receive them. I have heard of none other than the usual three Rajahs who are coming, however, Puttiala, Nubba, and Jheend. The prospects of another Darbar during the regime of the present Viceroy seem quite knocked on the head. The petition of the Punjab chiefs, praying for a State darbar in which to bid farewell to their whilom Lieutenant-Governor, will be answered in a small way, as they will be allowed to present themselves at the railway opening at Umballah, though with a much curtailed retinue. The experiences of Hurdwar are still too fresh in the memory of Government officials to permit the Viceroy to sanction any large gathering of the multitudinous tag-rag and bob-tail which forms the following of a native chief. Even the sanitary arrangements of the Agra Durbar, than which nothing could be better, did not prevent a slight outbreak of cholera, and the tamasha was over just in time to do away with the possibility of further mischief. Visitors to Simla who remain rather later than other people are congratulating themselves that the new railway will do away with their dak gharry travelling from Umballa to Delhi. It is an open question, however, even after the opening by Sir John Lawrence, whether the railway will be available for traffic before the end of the year.

JHANSIE, Sept. 18.—A meeting of the chief civil and military officers of the station was held at the office of the Deputy-Commissioner, on the morning of the 16th, to concert measures for providing relief to the starving natives during the prevailing scarcity. After the usual preliminaries, and after the members for a committee of management were chosen, the following measures were resolved upon: to raise funds by public subscription, eating or relief houses to be established according to the funds in hand, or as the exigencies of the case may require; that the Rajahs of Gwalior and of the adjacent petty States be invited to subscribe to the funds; that Government be solicited to aid the funds, and that the able-bodied portion of those seeking relief should be employed on some work to be decided upon by the Government. A difficulty arose as to how they were to be employed in the meantime. Some one suggested that they be made over to the executive engineer, but that gentleman would not have them at any price; another proposed that they should build up the new post-office, but that work had already been put into hands; then some one else wanted some building pulled down and built up again; no one proposed the roads being put into such order as becomes a station inhabited by civilised beings. It was finally agreed that they should be employed in improving the water course which runs through the station, and which might at a small outlay be made one of the chief ornaments of the station. One poor-house has already been opened in the station, and on the first day no less than four hundred souls presented themselves for food. Though there has been a good deal of rain in this district since the 16th, I fear there will still be a necessity for keeping up the relief fund to some extent, and for a short period, and this only if the rain continues, otherwise we shall find ourselves in a terrible plight. Since the day before yesterday gram has fallen half a seer, and wheat and other grain in proportion, while the price of children has risen slightly, the market value of a healthy boy or girl being Rs. 7 or 8. Hitherto this trade has been confined to the city and native States.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

DEATH AT ALLAHABAD.—We regret to announce the death, from cholera, on Thursday evening last, of Mr. W. Greenway, Assistant Commissioner of Paper Currency, Allahabad Circle.—Pioneer, Sept. 14.

DISTRESS IN CASHMERE.—The distress in Cashmere from high prices and the absence of rain is very great indeed. It is feared that the harvest there will be even worse than that in Upper India.

OLD PAPERS REPUBLISHED.—The Record Commission has resolved to publish with the minutes of Warren Hastings, a selection from the papers drawn up by that statesman during his career in Bengal, prior to his accession to the Governor-Generalship. Mr. Long has carried through the press the records illustrating the social condition of Bengal from 1747 to the period of the Black Hole.

THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT.—The Englishman says:—In a recent debate in the Council of the Secretary of State for India, it was finally decided that the seat of Government is not to be removed from Calcutta. At the same time, final sanction was given to an expenditure of eight lacs annually on the improvements of the capital and the erection of suitable Government offices.

MILITARY.—The following alterations in the annual relief for 1868-69 have been ordered:—6-22nd R.A., from Mean Meer to Sangor, on 2nd November; 3-25th R.A., from Fort William to Morar, on being relieved; 2nd Battalion 1st Foot, from Nussacerabad to Agra, under orders of the Bombay Government; 1-8th Foot, from Malta to Fyzabad; 1-14th Foot, from Malta to Lucknow; 1-21st Foot, from England to the Bombay presidency; 39th Foot, from England to the Bombay presidency; 62nd Foot, from England to Cawnpore; 96th Foot, from Poona and Neemuch to Fort William.

DEATH OF SURGEON H. D. JONES.—We regret to announce the death, at Barrackpore, of fatty degeneration of the heart, of Surgeon H. D. Jones, of the 17th Bengal Cavalry, formerly for some years in medical charge of the Governor-general's Body Guard. Dr. Jones returned from sick leave in England but a few months ago, and was posted to Colonel Robart's Regiment of Cavalry, on the 10th March, 1868. On his return to this country it was evident to his friends that his health was not re-established, and he has never been altogether well since. He became seriously worse two days ago, and died yesterday (Wednesday) morning.—Englishman, Sept. 17.

POSTINGS.—Official notification has been received of the under-mentioned officers having, on their recent promotion, been posted to the battalions of their regiments specified:—Lieutenant Andrews, 11th Foot; Captain Phillips, 12th Foot.

THE INDIAN TELEGRAPH RATES.—(OFFICIAL TELEGRAM) SIMLA, Sept. 22.—Notify to the press, and bring into operation on October 1st, the following new telegraphic tariff for messages transmitted between any two telegraphic stations in India or British Burmah:—For every ten words of ordinary English language one rupee; for every ten words in foreign language, or words of concealed meaning, or in cipher, two rupees; for repeating a message by order of sender twice the value of a single charge. Railways and other private lines will charge precisely the same rates, and divide in equal shares the cost of messages passing over more than one line; no booking fee. This does not affect Indo-European messages.

MILITARY LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following officers obtained leave of absence:—Major Fraser, Commandant 25th N.I., to remain at Murree and adjacent hills, from August 13 to October 15, on m.c. in extension of privilege leave; Brevet-major Ramsay, 10th Madras N.I., to remain at Darjeeling, from June 7 to November 30, in extension; Major Bunbury, doing duty at Berhampore, from the 9th to the 15th July, in extension of privilege leave, to enable him to re-join; Major Palmer, 90th Foot, to Calcutta, for one month, from Aug. 31, in extension; Captain Haydock, 41st Foot, to remain at Mussoorie, on private affairs, from September 9 to October 15, in extension; 2nd Captain Robinson, Adjutant 22nd Brigade, to Calcutta, from Aug. 15 to September 15; Assistant-surgeon Anderson, C Battery, 19th Brigade R.A., to Mussoorie and the hills north of Dehra, from Aug. 4 to October 15.

NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS' ALLOWANCES.—It is ordered that the extra or command allowance of Rs. 20 per mensem, hitherto sanctioned to non-commissioned officers of the Commissariat Department, when employed at a distance from their stations, shall be granted to every such non-commissioned officer, under the following circumstances:—1st.—While on the march in charge of the actual arrangement of a regiment or detachment. 2nd.—While in charge of a depot of cholera, or other camp situated five miles and more distant from his proper station, or when in charge of two or more cholera camps irrespective of their distance. 3rd.—While on field or foreign service. The allowance is not admissible to non-commissioned officers of regiments or detachments acting as Commissariat Sergeants with their own regiments or detachments during the march. Such non-commissioned officers will be restricted to the full staff salary of the Commissariat Department, in addition to the full military pay of the grade of the incumbent.

FEROZE SHAH.—The Government have received information which proves that Feroze Shah is not so quiet, nor so harmless, as the rumours circulated about him would seem to imply. He has written, and circulated largely amongst the Swatees and the border tribes, an "Istahar," or narrative in Persian, in which he gives an account of himself. Bundles of this "Istahar" have been, it is said, despatched to various parts of the Bengal Presidency for circulation amongst the Mahomedans. The narrative contains a detailed account of his many wanderings after the break-up of the last relics of the revolt under Tantia Topee, in Arabia, Persia, and Turkistan, and then passes on to relate how a saint, named Khoja Khajee, appeared to him in a dream, and bade him wait a few years before attempting to recover his inheritance, as the term of the rule of the English was not yet completed. The paper winds up with a diatribe against the English for the gross injustice with which they have treated Mahomedans in general. This "Istahar" is doubtless the reply of Feroze Shah to the many reports of his being an impostor, which have of late been circulated.—Englishman.

THE "BLACK HOLE."—A site of some interest in Anglo-Indian history is said to have been lately discovered by Dr. Norman Chevers, a well-known writer on sanitary matters. Hitherto no one has been able to ascertain precisely where the famous Black Hole of Calcutta stood, although its whereabouts has often been suspected. "Orme calls it a dungeon," writes Mr. Marshman, "but the room immediately adjoining it was used as the settlement church for twenty-eight years after the recovery of the town." The place, whatever it may have been, was less than twenty feet square, and within it on the night of June 21-22, 1756, 146 of our fellow-countrymen were confined. Only twenty-three came out alive on the following morning. It now appears that the southern curtain of the old Chevers has come upon a room or space "which is the exact counterpart to the Black Hole." It is not improbable that some traces of the tragedy may still be found, although the natives took no notice of it at the time, and the English were too busy in dealing with Serajah Dowlah to mark it in any way.

PANIC IN THE SMALL CAUSE COURT, CALCUTTA.—About 1 P.M. on Tuesday last there was quite a stampede out of the Small Cause Court premises—plaintiffs, defendants, bailiffs, and pleaders rushing unceremoniously away from the presence of the law. It was neither the holidays after which they were flying, nor was it a retreat because Mr. Pagan's feathers were ruffled, or a full bench had split up into angry factions—but a huge block of the inner cornice in an upper room had fallen in unpleasant proximity to the learned cranium of the first judge. The building is not noted for its stability, it has not been substantially repaired since the cyclone, which shook it considerably, and only a few days previously it was considered advisable to make a close inspection of the beams. In the course of this inspection the mortar had been probed too deeply, detaching the large mass that subsequently fell and frightened every man out of the first judge's court except the judge and two pleaders, and sent others flying from every apartment in the building into the surrounding compound. In a few minutes the alarm subsided, and the learned judges, quenching any secret desire for adjournment for the day, calmly resumed their functions.—Indian Daily News, Sept. 17.

CAPTAIN SLADEN'S RETURN.—Regarding Captain Sladen, it was reported not long since, on this side of the Bay, that he had returned to Mandalay, and that the expedition, owing to failure of funds and the disturbed state of the country to be traversed, had practically failed. This appeared more unsatisfactory, as no restrictions had been imposed on Captain Sladen as to money, and he held the Royal word from Mandalay—whatever that was worth—of further supplies, when needed, and of a safe guard to the limits of Burman territory, and through tributary States. The division in the camp was likewise unpromising, and disappointment was said to have been expressed in high places. It is with greater pleasure therefore we hear that Captain Sladen—according to a Burmese letter received in Mandalay—hoped to be in Bhamo on the 1st inst.—and that the three routes over the Khakyen hills had all been thoroughly surveyed by Mr. Gordon, and the old Bhamo route to China virtually re-opened. The Burmese traders in Mandalay and Bhamo are said to be pleased beyond measure with the success of the expedition, and their admiration of Captain Sladen seems to know no bounds. At Momien news reached the gallant captain that when the French party from Saigon was in that neighbourhood last year, it was attacked by some of the hill tribes; several were killed, and three or four guns are now in possession of people in the district.—Indian Daily News.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—Mr. Morgan, Asst. Engineer, 2nd grade, Delhi Division, has passed the colloquial examination in Hindostanee prescribed for P.W. Department, Punjab, Sept. 12; Mr. Cooke, Asst. Engineer, 1st grade, Rajpootana, passed the departmental standard examination in Hindustani prescribed in P.W. Standing Order No. 22 of 1867, on the 12th Aug.; Lieut. Freeth, Asst. Supt. Revenue Survey, Coorg, has passed the examination in Canarese language according to the test prescribed in G.O. Sept. 9, 1864. The undermentioned officers in the Punjab have passed a further examination in the Vernacular:—Lieut. Bartholomew, Asst. Commissioner, Punjab; Mr. Tucker, ditto, Punjab. The undermentioned candidates, who appeared for examination in the native languages before the half-yearly committees held on the 10th July last, have been declared by the Board of Examiners, at Fort William, to have passed the higher standard in Hindostanee, agreeably to Clauses 5 and 6 of G.G.O. No. 734, of 1864:—Lieut. Bennett, 7th Hussars; Cornet Hogge, 20th Hussars; Lieuts. Pitcher, 21st Hussars, and Stratford, 1st Battalion 6th Foot; Capt. STATION TALK.

SECUNDERABAD, DECCAN, Sept. 16.—An epidemic of a serious character has broken out among the cavalry and artillery horses in this station. About 180 horses of the 4th Madras Light Cavalry have been attacked, and are, I believe, now on the sick list. In the 18th Hussars, the disorder commenced a few days after the outbreak in the Light Cavalry, and there are this moment about eighty horses under treatment. The Artillery have also suffered, but their horses are, as a rule, younger, and for that reason, perhaps, better able to contend with the disease. The disease is of a low febrile character. The horses suddenly refuse their food, and fever sets in. The fatal cases are for some time hard to distinguish from the rest. The animals seem to grow worse all of a sudden, and die sometimes in six or seven hours. Post mortem examination shows that all the vital organs are in a highly morbid state. The lungs are fearfully congested, the intestines almost rotten with inflammation, the liver and brain more or less affected. In the 4th Light Cavalry there have been as yet few deaths, and it is believed that the extreme virulence of the attack is abating. Milder cases are being reported, and the sick are showing signs of pulling through. In the 18th Hussars matters are already at their worst, we hope, and the next bulletin may be more satisfactory. Officers' horses are beginning to fall victims to the plague, and, you may imagine, there is considerable anxiety in most stables in the cantonment. The attentions of the veterinary surgeon of the 4th Light Cavalry, upon whom the sudden pressure of duty has devolved, are most unremitting, and he certainly has his hands full. It would be idle for me to speculate as to the specific cause of the epidemic. I have heard some say that it is the effect of the sun, which is now peculiarly trying. The atmosphere is damp, and there is an unwholesome wind blowing. Although the cavalry horses here are, in my opinion, too well insured to the rays of the sun to allow us at once to attribute the disorder to such a cause, it may very probably be due to some atmospheric influence. This is an unhealthy time here both for man and beast.

Miscellaneous.

MOVEMENTS OF GENERAL McCLEVERTY.—The Commander-in-Chief and Staff were to leave Ootacamund on the 21st Sept., on a tour to Quilon and Cannanore, and be absent about ten days. Head Quarters will return to Madras at the end of October.

OFFICERS RETURNED FROM ENGLAND.—The undermentioned officers have returned to their duty, by permission of the Home Government, without prejudice to their rank:—Captain G. W. M. Strickland, Staff Corps, attached to Sappers and Miners; Lieutenant C. Curtois, Infantry General List, attached to 35th Regiment Native Infantry—arrived at Madras on Sept. 10 last. Assistant Surgeon W. A. Smith, Medical Department—arrived at Madras Aug. 28.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—Privilege leave of absence has been granted to Captain Markham, Superintendent Mounted Police, Madras, for one month, from 14th September; Conductor Bateman, Sub-Engineer of the 1st grade, one month; Mr. McWatters, Acting Head Assistant to the Collector of Madura, one month; Mr. Hall, Assistant to the Collector and Magistrate of South Canara, three months' privilege leave; Captain Clementson, Cantonment Magistrate, Saint Thomas's Mount, one month.

FURLONGS.—The following officers, civil and military, obtained furlough to Europe, on medical certificate, under new rules, in September:—Major Hawkes, Staff Corps, Deputy Assistant Commissary General, 1st Class, for two years, to embark from Madras; Lieutenant Melver, Quartermaster 6th Regiment N.I., for two years, to embark from Madras; Mr. Burnell, Sub-Collector and Joint Magistrate of Nellore, two years, from the 14th October next; Captain (Brevet-Major) Saukey, Royal (Madras) Engineers, Chief Engineer, Mysore, for two years, to embark from Madras.

DEATH AT OOTACAMUND.—The Madras Times regrets to announce the death, at Ootacamund, of Lieut. Henry Russell, Staff Corps Assistant Superintendent of Police in the Kurnool District. The deceased gentleman was on a short extension of leave, on medical certificate, and proceeded to Ootacamund for the benefit of his health. On Wednesday, Sept. 16, he rode out to consult his medical adviser, and while returning home he fell from his horse. When he was lifted up life was extinct. On examination it was found that the deceased had died from disease of the heart. Lieutenant Russell entered the Madras Army on the 4th September, 1858. He was appointed to his present grade in the Mofussil Police in May, 1867. The deceased is the son of Colonel G. W. Russell, Paymaster of Bangalore.

A NARROW ESCAPE.—Mr. James Fraser, Collector of the Godavery, who has just returned from six months' leave to Europe, on private affairs, narrowly missed causing a vacancy yesterday in the higher ranks of the Civil Service. While stepping from the ladder of the Simla into the Masoolah boat that was waiting for him, the swell of the sea being rather great, his foot slipped, and he fell into the water. Happily he was at once rescued, and brought into the boat in a damp but sound condition of body. This Presidency could ill afford to lose the services of this gentleman, and the best thanks of the public are due to the boatmen and others by whose instrumentality Mr. Fraser's life appears to have been saved.—Madras Times, Sept. 11.

THE OFFICIAL REPORT ON THE LATE ECLIPSE.—We learn that the final reduction of the eclipse observations will be a work of several weeks, and will not probably be begun this year; but a preliminary general account of what was done will be submitted to Government very soon. The Government Astronomer, it seems, has to await the reports of his colleagues at Masulipatam, and of his assistant at Vunpurthy, before he can send in his own. They succeeded far beyond Mr. Pogson's most sanguine expectations; but probably after all the mere descriptions of unprofessional gazers possess far more real interest in the eyes of the public, than the brief, dry, and to the mass unintelligible, numerical results of actual observation. The latter are, however, what the scientific would seek, and what Governments pay for; and, relatively to other more costly expeditions, the Madras Government party hope and believe that they will have more to tell than most who saw the eclipse.

GALLANT RESCUE.—On the morning of the 16th September, while the Rev. Dr. Sayers, Acting Garrison Chaplain, was taking his usual walk on the rampart facing the sea, and adjoining the sea-gate of the fort, he observed, while yet at a considerable distance, a soldier deliberately coming up to the edge of the rampart, and immediately afterwards throw himself into the ditch below, a height of some fifteen feet or more. Dr. Sayers ran rapidly to the spot whence the man had disappeared. Apparently the man was fast sinking, for, in a moment after his arrival, Dr. Sayers himself was seen to disappear, dressed as he was, over the rampart. Some officers who happened to observe this from their own residence immediately ran up the rampart, whence they saw Dr. Sayers holding up the soldier by the hair of his head, and himself treading water. By this time several soldiers and others descended the steps leading to the ditch, and helped both the doctor and soldier to land, on reaching which Dr. Sayers was warmly grasped by the hand by his friends who were on the spot, and congratulated on his gallant and noble conduct, while a murmur of approbation ran through the crowd. Beyond a thorough wetting, Dr. Sayers sustained no injury whatever. It is supposed that the soldier attempted to commit suicide. The case will be investigated in due course.—Madras Times.

FAREWELL ADDRESS OF THE EDUCATIONAL OFFICERS IN THE DECCAN TO SIR ALEXANDER GRANT.

On the evening of Monday, the 21st September, a number of gentlemen, amongst whom was his Excellency Sir Seymour Fitzgerald, the Hon. Mr. Ellis, the Hon. Colonel Marriott, Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, Bart., the members of the Educational Department present in Poona, including Mr. Wordsworth, Principal of the Deccan College, Mr. Oxenham, Professor Deccan College, Dr. Kielhorn, Professor of Sanscrit Studies, Major Candy, Mr. Draper, Educational Inspector, Professor Keru Luxmon, Professor Krishna Shastree, Principal of the Poona Training School, &c., &c., and a large number of the personal friends, natives and Europeans, of Sir Alexander Grant, met in the hall of the Deccan College, on the banks of the Mootapoola, near Poona, on the invitation of the Principal and Professors of the Deccan College, for the purpose of witnessing the presentation of a farewell address from the educational officers to Sir Alexander Grant, on his resignation of the office of Director of Public Instruction in this Presidency. The fine hall of the College was very neatly arranged for the occasion, and a raised dais occupied the centre of the northern side, on which sat his Excellency the Governor, supported by Sir Alexander Grant, Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, and the Hon. Mr. Ellis. The students of the Deccan College were seated at the eastern and western ends of the hall, and the intervening space was occupied by the friends invited to meet together to do honour to the interesting occasion.

The address was read by the Principal of the Deccan College, W. Wordsworth, Esq., B.A. At the conclusion of the reading, which was warmly applauded, Sir Alexander Grant rose and replied to it in a speech of considerable length, in which he spoke very eloquently in praise of the good feeling and unity which had always existed amongst the officers of the department towards himself, and the valuable services they had rendered him as Principal of the Elphinstone College, and more recently as Director of Public Instruction in this Presidency. He spoke very favourably of the intelligence of the people, and rapidly sketched all that had been done since the establishment of the University of Bombay, and bore eloquent testimony to the ability and worth of his late lamented and distinguished predecessor, Mr. E. I. Howard. He made particular reference to the valuable services, and heartily acknowledged the aid he had always received from Mr. Wordsworth, Mr. Oxenham, Dr. Kielhorn, Mr. Keru Luximou, M. Krishna Shastree Chiploonker, Narain Bhai, Dajee Nilkunt, Major Waddington, Major Candy, Mr. Bocarro, and others, whose names he mentioned; and after bearing testimony to the present state of efficiency of the department, and to the great progress that has of late years been made in extending the benefits of education throughout this Presidency, he stated that his only regret was that he had not been able to affect so much good as he could have wished during the period of his administration of the office of Director of Public Instruction. The limits of his success would appear, from what fell from him during the early part of his reply to the address, to have been caused by what he sarcastically termed the "adverse gales in the East, which generally came from Simla and Calcutta," and which had prevented him from doing many things that it would have been very desirable to do. He rendered his acknowledgments to the local Government, which he said had on all occasions given to his recommendations their hearty and warmest support and co-operation; and in concluding his reply, he spoke very feelingly of the happy years he had spent in the Deccan, which he loved for its people, its scenery, its air, its good old Brahmins and Pundits, amongst whom he had many friends; for all the associations by which his sojourn in this part of the country was surrounded, and for its "black bucks." He finally concluded by expressing his grateful thanks to the officers of the Educational Department in the Deccan for their affectionate address, and intimated his acceptance, with pleasure, of the testimonial offered to him. He should always think of those years passed at Poona as the happiest of his life, and in bidding his former colleagues affectionate adieu, he stated that the able and judicious remarks in the address showed that there is plenty of ability in the department to carry on the work before it. —Times of India.

Miscellaneous.

ARRIVALS FROM ABYSSINIA.—Intimation has been received that the undermentioned officers arrived at Suez, en route to join their regiment in Abyssinia on the 24th March, 1868:—Captain Hooke and Ensign Skinner, 45th Foot.

FREE PASSAGES TO SOLDIERS' SONS.—The Secretary of State has been pleased to sanction the extension of the limit of age within which soldiers' sons are entitled to free passage home, from fourteen to sixteen years.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The undermentioned are reported to have passed the required examination in Hindustani, according to the lower standard:—Lieut. Dunlop, Ensign Hamilton, Lance Corporal Walker, Private Charles Clancey, and Private Thomas Storey, 96th Foot; Ensign W. A. Wetherall, No. 849, Color Sergeant W. E. Taylor, and No. 857, Lance Corporal J. Hughes, 49th Foot; No. 1,717, Gunner P. Crawley, R.A., E Battery 14th Brigade R.A.

BANK OF BOMBAY.—It will be remembered that when the old Bank of Bombay went into liquidation Government consented to wait for Rs. 25,00,000 until all other claims were satisfied; or rather Rs. 25,00,000 was advanced by the new to the old bank on a Government guarantee, to enable the latter to meet promptly all its current and other deposits. The Times of India is glad to state that the whole of this Rs. 25,00,000, with interest, has long since been repaid, and that the liquidation is now being carried on solely for the benefit of the shareholders. This will no doubt be disappointment for the Friend of India, and for the Calcutta correspondent of the Times, who are never tired of alluding to this Rs. 25,00,000 as an actual loss to Government, in addition to its loss as a shareholder.

PROMOTIONS FOR SERVICE IN ABYSSINIA.—No. 594.—Sub. Conductor C. Tyler, Unattached List, is promoted to Conductor for his services in Abyssinia. No. 595.—Conductor Moon, of the Commissariat Department, is promoted to Deputy Assistant Commissary for his services in connection with the Abyssinian Expedition.

MR. NORTON'S CASE.—We learn from the Indian Daily News that the case of Mr. Norton, a retired officer of the Bombay Civil Service, now in England, who was a shareholder of the old Bombay Bank, and lost the sum of £15,000 deposited in the Bank, has been favourably decided by the Secretary of State, whom he memorialised on the subject. Sir Stafford Northcote, while taking into consideration the case of certain widows and orphans, who sustained similar losses, considered the above case to be almost as equally hard. The Right Honourable Secretary decided that the amount should be refunded to Mr. Norton by such instalments as the Government of India should deem fit, and the Governor General has accordingly ordered that the sum of £15,000 be refunded by monthly instalments of Rs. 10,000, so that in fifteen months the whole amount will be paid off.—[The I. D. N. is all wrong however.—Ed. A. I. M.]

MARINE DEPARTMENT.—The following temporary appointments are confirmed (16th September):—Mr. Lawson, mate of the tug Rustom, was appointed to the command of that vessel from the 1st April, 1868, vice Mr. Hillman, late master in charge, discharged on the 31st March, 1868; Mr. Hayward, 1st officer of her Majesty's steam vessel Sir John Lawrence (relieved from duty), was transferred to her Majesty's hulk Semiramis, as supernumerary, from the 31st July, 1868, pending the arrival of the Dulhouse from Suez; Mr. Hall, 3rd officer of the Coromandel, was transferred to the Sir John Lawrence as supernumerary, from the 31st July, 1868.

THE BENGAL BANK AGENCY.—The secretary and board of the new Bank of Bombay have, we understand, strenuously exerted themselves towards inducing the authorities to carry out the order of the Secretary of State respecting the early closing of the Bengal Bank's agency in this city. These efforts have, we believe, been fairly supported by H. E. Sir Seymour Fitzgerald, than whom none would be more likely to see and to expose the absurdity of the course taken by the Government of India in referring the subject to their law officers, after receiving the express directions of the Home Government to close the Bengal agency here. We often hear loud complaints, because of the Viceroy being overborne by orders from the authorities at home; but it seems when Bengal interests are concerned the Supreme Executive can afford to snap its fingers in the face of the Indian Secretary, as it is doing as yet in the matter of the intruding agency.—Times of India.

MILITARY FURLONGS AND LEAVES OF ABSENCE.—H.E. the Commander-in-Chief in India has granted leave of absence as follows:—Captain Mostyn, 96th Foot, twelve months, from date of embarkation, to England, on urgent private affairs; Lieutenant Adams, 23rd Foot, to England by the overland route, for m.c.—this officer is not available for duty with troops, and will, on arrival, report himself to the Adjutant-general, Horse Guards. The undermentioned officers and warrant officer have obtained leave of absence:—Assist.-surgeon Robinson, 19th Brigade R.A., from September 9, 1868, to October 9, 1868, to proceed to Ghizree, on m.c.; Ensign Gyll, 1st Foot, from September 16, 1868, to October 15, 1868, to Calcutta, on m.c.; Captain Galwey, 96th Foot, thirty days, from date of departure, to Bombay, on m.c.; Capt. Bourdillon, Invalid Establishment, thirty days, from date of departure, to Bombay, on m.c. The undermentioned officers are directed to proceed to England by the overland route, for the purpose of joining the regimental depot:—Captain Crowther, and Lieutenants Scott and Paterson, 1st Foot. The undermentioned officers have obtained leave of absence:—Captain Stewart, 1st Foot, from October 10, 1868, to December 31, 1868, on urgent private affairs; Lieutenant Greatorex, 2nd Dragon Guards, from Aug. 4, 1868, to Feb. 3, 1869, in extension, to remain in England, on private affairs; Captain Griffith, Royal Bombay Engineers, Executive Engineers, Kaira, for two years; Captain Malcomson, Bombay Staff Corps, Assistant Engineer, P. W. Department, Kulladhee, for two years.

REDUCTION OF THE INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH RATES.—The following official intimation of the reduction in charge on Indo-European telegrams was yesterday placed at the disposal of the press:—To the Secretary to Government, Bombay. From the 1st of January next the maximum rate of a message of twenty words from London to Calcutta, and vice versa, will be £2. 17s. 0d. This tariff will apply to eight routes as follows:—Five "Indo Ottoman," entering (or leaving) the cable at Fao. 1. By Holland, Austro-Germanic Union, Turkey; 2. By Belgium, Austro-Germanic Union, Turkey; 3. By France, Austro-Germanic Union, Turkey; 4. By France, Switzerland, Austria, Servia, Turkey; 5. By France, Italy, Turkey. Three "Russo Persian," entering (or leaving) the cable at Bushire. 6. By Northern Germany, Russia, Persia; 7. By Holland, Germanic Union, Russia, Persia; 8. By Belgium, Northern Germany, Russia, Persia. The fourth of the above routes will be especially utilised for Indian correspondence, by a convention between the States concerned, of which a copy has been submitted to the India Office; and the sixth is the promised line of Messrs. Siemens Brothers. Under these circumstances I do not think that the popular objection, that telegraphic communication with India will be in the hands of one or two European Powers, can be considered valid. On the subject of cipher telegrams, I have addressed Colonel Robinson fully by the present mail for his information and that of the commercial public.—I have, &c., T. J. GOLDSMID, Lieut.-col., Director in Chief Indo-European Telegraph, London, 7th of August.

THE ABYSSINIAN CAMPAIGN.—The following extract from a private letter received by last mail from England has kindly been placed at our disposal, and will, we doubt not, possess interest for many of our readers:—"You may not have heard that Government have appointed Captain Holland and Lieutenant Hozier to write an official history of the campaign in Abyssinia, and that the services of these officers have been placed at the disposal of the War Office for that purpose. It is expected that this will keep them occupied for twelve months at least. The idea originated in the War Office, and a suggestion was made that the India Office should appoint an officer to co-operate with Lieutenant Hozier. The choice was left to Lord Napier, and he immediately named Captain Holland, than whom one more qualified could not be found. Instructions have been sent to the various Governments of India to render every assistance that may be required in the compilation of the work. The numerous photographs taken by the Royal Engineers will, I believe, be lithographed, and placed at the disposal of Captain Holland and his associate, to select therefrom such as they may consider valuable. This will greatly enhance the value of their history." It is probable that several—more than half-a-dozen, and less than half a score—C.S.I.'s will be distributed amongst Bombay officials and departmental officers, for their services in connection with the Abyssinian expedition. We trust these stars will fall thickly amongst the more active officers of the Commissariat and Bombay Marine, whose arduous labours, though undergone in the temperate climate of this favoured isle, were very similar to those performed at Zoula, for which Brevets and C.B.'s have been granted. Although it would be a mistake to fritter away the special significance the Star of India was intended to bear, by bestowing it for meritorious service wherever rendered, we do not think the statute of the Order will be unduly strained in granting it liberally in the present instance. It is not, however, to be expected that decorations can be conferred on every hard-working and useful officer; recourse must also be had to promotion in the military branch, and for the officers of the Bombay Marine suitable and desirable posts will, we trust, be secured in the reorganised Indian navy. The old Indian navy had an admirable representative at Zoula in Lieutenant Dawes, and the severe and long-continued strain its officers endured in Bombay proves, if proof were needed, that it had excellent officers at its head-quarters.—Times of India.

INDIAN FORESTS.

The following is an abstract of a paper "On the Distribution of the Principal Timber Trees of India, and the Progress of Forest Conservancy," read by Dr. Cleghorn at the recent meeting of the British Association at Norwich:—

When the British Association met at Edinburgh in 1850, a committee* was appointed to consider "the probable effects, in an economical and physical point of view, of the destruction of tropical forests." Their report was presented in 1851 at Ipswich. Attention was thus directed in India to the importance of preserving every influence which tends to maintain an equilibrium of temperature and humidity, of preventing the waste of valuable material, and the special application to their various uses of the indigenous timbers of the country.

A few years later forest establishments were sanctioned in British Burmah (1855), and in the Madras Presidency (1856); and in 1864
 Government laid the foundation of an improved general system of forest administration for the whole Indian Empire, having for its object the conservation of State forests, and the development of this source of national wealth. The appointment of Inspector-General of Forests was made, and is now held by Dr. Brandis, formerly the able Conservator in British Burmah.

The executive arrangements were left to the local administrations, general principles being laid down, the most important of which is that all superior Government forests are reserved and made inalienable, their boundaries marked out to distinguish them from waste lands available for the public. Act 7 of 1864, defining the nature of forest rules and penalties, has been adopted by most of the local Governments.

Valuation surveys have been made to obtain reliable data as to the geographic distribution of the more valuable trees, the rate of growth, and the normal yield of the forests.

Bengal.—In British Sikkim and the Doorgs of Bootan there are large tracts of Sal (Vatica robusta) not yet surveyed. The produce of these forests is required for any extension of the Eastern Bengal Railway which may be determined upon, and for the doubling of the East India line now in progress. In the Darjiling district the higher slopes above 6,000 feet have been reserved, and plantations both of temperate and subtropical trees have been formed. In the Terai several thousand mahogany trees have been raised and planted out—raised partly from seed naturalised at the Calcutta Botanic Garden, and partly from seed received from the West Indies through the Colonial-office and Dr. Hooker.
 In Bengal the department had for two years the great advantage of Dr.
 Thomas Anderson's superintendence, whose botanical knowledge was of special value in the exploration of the little known forests in Sikkim and Bootan.

North-West Provinces.—The recent surveys have added much to our knowledge of the forest resources of the North-west Provinces. In Kumaon and Gurhwal the area surveyed is about 400,000 acres; a large part of this is covered with Pinus longifolia, bearing an average of fifteen trees per acre. The Himalyan Box is plentiful in certain localities, and has come into use in the schools of art for wood engraving. The Goruckpore forests cover 120,000 acres, and consist mainly of Sal (Vatica robusta), with an average of twenty-five well-grown trees to the acre.

The northern limit of indigenous Teak is in Bundelkhand; it has been planted in the Punjab, but in that dry climate it is poor and stunted.
 The management of the forests of the North-west Provinces is second in importance only to that of Burmah.

Oudh.—From the survey in Oudh it appears that more than half the Government forest consists of Sal; the other reserved woods of greatest value are Sissoo (Dalbergia Sissoo), Toon (Cedrela Toona), and Ebony (Diospyros Ebenum). Considerable sums have been expended in clearing the Sal trees of destructive twining plants, particularly Bauhinia Vahlia, Argyrea speciosa, and other Convolvulaceae.

Punjab.—In the Punjab, the forests growing on the banks of the Five Rivers have been formed into so many ranges under skilled officers, and timber operations have been conducted with more or less success in the intra-montane districts. Long leases of the Deodar forests, in the territories of the Rajas of Chumba and Bussahir, have been negotiated.
 Wood is the only fuel at present available in quantity for locomotive purposes. The requirement of the railway alone is estimated at 50,000 tons annually, and the yield of the old skikargahs, or fuel reserves, being inadequate, skilled management has been brought to aid in the increased production of fuel.

Selected tracts have been trenched and ploughed before planting, and cattle and camels are strictly excluded. The services of a trained forrester have been secured. The suitability of some Australian trees to the arid plains of the Punjab is remarkable, and several species of Acacia, Casuarina, and Eucalyptus have been tried with apparent success. The northern limit of the Sal is on the bank of the Beas River, in the Kangra Valley, but here it is small and stunted.

Dr. J. L. Stewart is the conservator of the Punjab forests, he has contributed some valuable papers to the Journal of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India, as "Tour in Hazara and Khagan," "Flora of the Peshawur Valley," and "Bijnour and its Trees."

Central Provinces.—In the Central Provinces the revenue settlement was proceeding when the forest department was sanctioned, and the demarcation of reserved tracts took place simultaneously, which was a great advantage. Six ranges have been established, and Teak plantations have been commenced on the Taptae and Nerbud la Rivers, and are to be steadily pursued on the plan of the Conolly plantations in Malabar. Two trained foresters from Scotland have been employed for some time. The attention of the department in this province is directed equally to Teak and Sal timber. The other reserved woods are Sissoo (Dalbergia Sissoo), Saj (Terminalia tomentosa), and Bijasal (Pterocarpus Marsupium).

* The late Dr. Forbes Royle, King's College, London; the late Colonel R. Baird

Hyderabad.—Forest operations have been more recently undertaken in the Hyderabad Assigned Districts. The character of the vegetation resembles that of the Central Provinces, and the same species of trees are reserved. The only Teak tract is at Mailghat, north of Ellichpore, and it is carefully preserved.

Mysore.—The territories of the Rajah of Mysore have always been famous for Sandalwood and Teak; the former occupies a remarkable belt about thirty or forty miles inland from the crest of the Ghats, though fine self-sown patches are diffused over the whole tableland. In the adjoining district of Salem, a considerable quantity of Sandalwood has lately been discovered in the Collamully and Putehamully Hills, and two small patches occur in South Canara, but these are at a lower elevation, and the timber is inferior in quality. The western part of Mysore is clothed with fine forest, but much has of late given place to coffee culture. Tectona grandis, Dalbergia latifolia, and Calophyllum elatum (Beddome) furnish the most valuable timbers.

Burmah.—The progress of forest administration in British Burmah has been steady, with a large increase in the forest revenue. In 1864-5 nine Teak forests were demarcated in the Tharawaddee division; the aggregate area of these is about fifty square miles. The necessity and importance of forming plantations is becoming every year more apparent. A recommendation to plant on a large scale was made forty years ago by Dr. Wallich, and afterwards by Dr. Helfer. It was again strongly urged by Sir A. Phayre and Dr. Brandis, in their joint report of June, 1864, and planting is now systematically carried out. There are now eight Teak plantations, which are being added to by annual increments, and planted in different ways to test the expense which must be incurred in raising Teak on a large scale. The facts recorded in the last report as to the germination of seed from different localities, and the measurement of growth of young trees, are interesting for comparison with the results obtained in Malabar and in Java. Further experience in management is annually gained, and it will be ascertained how far the same system is applicable to different provinces.

In Arracan, the most valuable timber is the Inga xylocarpa, termed Ironwood, from its exceeding hardness. The wood has been found useful for railway sleepers, and is exported to Bengal.

Madras.—The forests of Madras have for twelve years been under the care of a special department. The most valuable timber is Teak, which is to the South of India what Deodar is to the North, and Sal to the Central Provinces. Energetic efforts are being made to restore the woods in this Presidency, and very extensive plantations are formed, particularly in Malabar and South Canara (Teak), Neilgherries (Eucalyptus and Australian Acacia), Cuddapah (Red Sanders-wood), Shevaroy (Toon and Teak), and Sigur (Sandalwood). By far the most important of these are the Conolly Teak plantations in Malabar, which are rapidly increasing in value by the growth of the old plantation, and the annual increment of fresh planting. In 1866-7 120,000 seedlings were planted out. The consumption of wood for railway fuel is enormous; a special train laden with wood for locomotives leaves Coimbatore, and another leaves Cuddapah, every day, in addition to the regular trains taking in wood at fuel stations. The natural jungles, which have hitherto supplied this large quantity, are now in some districts so nearly exhausted, that the mere protection of those which now exist will not yield a permanent supply. The natural reproduction of the indigenous jungles (where cattle are excluded) is expected to furnish a large supply of fuel, but it is further intended to form plantations for locomotive requirements. These, in accordance with the instructions of the Secretary of State, are to be under the management of the Forest Department, and their cost to be a charge in that department. These operations involve present and prospective outlay, with no returns till after the lapse of seven or eight years. This important branch of forest work must increase with the extension of railways, and it is hoped that the example set by Government may have the effect of stimulating private individuals to form similar plantations. The financial condition of the Forest Department in Madras is so far satisfactory. The total net surplus in eleven years, including the value of timber in store on the 30th of March, 1867, is £180,000, or from £15,000 to £20,000 a-year. Within the last few years much has been done in the way of improving forest communications in remote and difficult places. Major Beddome, at present in charge of the forests, has done much for science, and is well known by his work on Indian Ferns.

Bombay.—In the Presidency of Bombay the forest department is of old standing. Mr. N. A. Dalzell succeeded Dr. Gibson, the first conservator, and is an accomplished botanist. For some years the receipts have exceeded the expenditure by several lakhs, say £30,000, annually. The demarcation of reserves in the Deccan has been in progress, and is a most important measure. The administrator of the forests in Scinde has received the commendation of Government. The demand for firewood, both for large towns, steamboats, and railways, has augmented very considerably, showing the absolute necessity of husbanding the resources, so as to keep up a regular and abundant supply of fuel. Acacia arabica is the tree which thrives best in Scinde, and the timber is much prized for many purposes.

The importance of continuing the forest surveys and demarcating the reserved tracts was urged, and the want of a Flora sylvatica of India insisted upon.

Mr. M. P. Elgworth, in commenting upon the above paper, stated that little was to be added to Dr. Cleghorn's exhaustive report, but he might refer to a recent article in the Calcutta Review, February, 1868, on the fuel supply in the Punjab. He mentioned his early attempt at planting and protection in the jungles of the Mooltan district; at that time they thought the supply sufficient for the steamers, but since the railway had been completed, down the desert tract of the Bari Doab, the indigenous fuel had been used up. In the Kangra district he had to make careful inquiries about the possibility of procuring a sufficiency of fuel for some iron furnaces that were in contemplation, but the apparently inexhaustible forest was considered insufficient. In Banda he remarked that the iron miners used for the rough iron any wood for charcoal, but for steel charcoal made from Bambusa stricta is always employed. The silica contained in it may explain the excellence of the jungle steel, which is celebrated.

Miscellaneous.

CAPTAIN THE HON. G. R. BOURKE, of the Inniskilling Dragoons, will fill the post of Military Secretary to his brother, the Earl of Mayo, in India.

APPOINTMENT.—(India Office, Oct. 9).—The Queen has been graciously pleased to appoint Lieut.-col. Sir Henry Creswick Rawlinson, K.C.B., to be a Member of the Council of India.

THE LE BAS PRIZE.—CAMBRIDGE, Oct. 19.—This prize, instituted by members of the Civil Service of India who were members of Haileybury College during the thirty years that the Rev. C. W. Le Bas was connected with that institution, in perpetuation of the memory of that gentleman's services, and given annually to such graduate, of not more than three years' standing, for the best English essay on a subject of general literature, occasionally chosen with reference to the history, institutions, and probable destinies and prospects of the Anglo-Indian empire, has been this day adjudged to Charles William Stubbs, B.A., Sidney Sussex College. Subject: "The Origin and Growth of Sentiments of International Morality."

MISS CARPENTER AT BRISTOL.—Miss Carpenter was presented on Monday, by the ladies of the congregation to which she is attached in Bristol, with a handsomely bound Bible and hymn-book. In acknowledging the present and bidding her friends farewell, Miss Carpenter said she did not believe any views except those which she held (Miss Carpenter is a Unitarian) could have enabled her to persevere as she had done in the work which she felt called to do. Those views gave her such elevated ideas of our Heavenly Father's parental love, and of the capabilities of the human being—that each individual, however apparently low and degraded, was a child of the Heavenly Father, and had His Divine Spirit within him—that they had made her feel the most intense and inextinguishable desire to help those whom circumstances had ground down, so that their own glorious nature might have free scope in order to develop itself in such way as the Heavenly Father had seen fit to appoint under their own peculiar circumstances. Those who believed dogmas essential to salvation did not feel stimulated to help these poor down-trodden beings unless they could at the same time introduce to them those dogmas which they deemed essential. In England she had made the Christian religion the basis of all her teaching wherever she had been, and should rejoice to do the same in India, and it was a great self-denial to her that she could not; but she was withheld by a duty. If she did so, she would prevent herself in the first place from being admitted to teach Indian ladies; and, in the second place, she should be putting the Government of this country in a very painful position. A certain course had been adopted by the Government—a certain principle laid down which they considered most important, and the breaking of which might cause many painful events. That principle was that there should be no interference with the social and religious views and customs of the natives. It was not for them now to discuss whether this was wise or not. It was accepted with the greatest joy by the natives, and so far from the Government introducing a godless teaching, as had been often said, from her own experience and observation she should say that the system adopted by the Government had really more undermined heathenism than any amount of Christian teaching that could be given. Miss Mary Carpenter left her residence at Bristol the following day for Marseilles, en route for India, where she intends to found a system of schools, with a view to the elevation of the native female character. Miss Carpenter will be followed by some English ladies who are to assist her in the conduct of an intended normal college, and in other of her philanthropic works.

THE FRONTIER WAR IN INDIA.

The Pull Mall Gazette holds that there are two lessons to be derived from the story of the recent outbreak. The first is that if we would inflict unpalatable innovations on such people as those who inhabit our frontier districts we must take care to be strong enough to enforce them. The probability of the Agreore chief resenting the introduction of our police system into the country under his management was so great that it almost amounted to a certainty. We should, therefore, have been prepared for resistance. In such a case,

To be weak is to be miserable,
 Doing or suffering.

Even if an unwise thing is to be done, it is better to do it thoroughly, with a strong hand; and nowhere more surely than in India, where every sign of feebleness is eagerly observed, and want of promptitude in suppression soon turns a small local outbreak into a widespread and dangerous rebellion. The other moral we have, in a great measure, anticipated in the earlier part of this article. Civilisation is a very excellent thing; but the best agents of civilisation are those which move slowly. The standing error of our Government in India is a too rapid development of English ideas of what is right. With the very best intentions in the world, we begin to systematise among a people who are unaccustomed to system, extremely suspicious, easily alarmed, and very prone to resent our innovations, however beneficent they may be. Of course, the British Government are theoretically right. The laws and regulations which they would introduce into these semi-barbarous districts are doubtless very excellent laws and regulations, and it would be very much to the advantage of the people that they should accept them cheerfully and conform to them loyally like good subjects of the Queen. But, unfortunately, they are a stiff-necked generation, and they like their own pestilent heresies. Our systems have only one fault, which is that they are not always suited to the people to whom we offer them. There are parts of the Punjab in which civilisation has made and is making great progress; but Agreore is not yet one of them. We might be content, for a while at least, with our triumphs at Lahore and Umritsur, and leave Atta Mahomed and his clansmen alone. He will not serve us any the better for being dragooned into the acceptance of our codes.

THE DEBTS OF PRINCE AZEEM JAH.

The Times thinks there is one feature about the case of Azeem Jah that is well worth a passing notice, from the curious and instructive light which it throws upon official affairs in India, and specially upon the popular theory of Anglo-Indian "administrative capacity." This feature, stripped of surroundings, is briefly this—that, having long ago pledged themselves to relieve Prince Azeem Jah from the pressure of his debts and to pacify his creditors, the Indian authorities have managed the task in such an extraordinary way that at the present moment they have not only failed to accomplish it, but have actually increased the importunity of the more important creditors, and, as a consequence, the troubles of the Prince. Yet the task was by no means a difficult one, and the rock upon which it has been wrecked was one which it needed no political prescience or penetration to avoid. A little common sense, combined with the most ordinary knowledge of human nature, was all that was required. The Prince's creditors formed two very different classes, one class, the "secured," having great powers of annoying him—by selling his mortgaged property and arresting the friends who had gone security for him—the other, or "unsecured," having no such means whatsoever, being dependent entirely on the promise of the Prince, who is himself above the jurisdiction of the Law Courts, and exempt from arrest. Now, as the main object of the authorities was to relieve the Prince—who had, in return, pledged himself to cease from all agitation for what he had previously claimed as his ancestral rights—it would have seemed that the one fact which above all others they ought to have kept prominently in view was this vital all-important distinction between the two classes of creditors. For some inscrutable reason, however, they either could not or would not see this, but resolved to treat all the creditors in precisely the same way. They appointed a commissioner to examine all claims and to distribute the Government grant, but at the same time formally stipulated that any creditor who brought a claim before the commissioner should, merely by so doing, resign all right whate'er further to sue or to solicit the prince, no matter whether the commissioner accepted the claim or not. The natural, we might almost say the necessary, consequence of this extraordinary measure was that only the "unsecured" creditors accepted the polite but precarious invitation. As they never had any means of putting pressure on the prince, they did not care if the commissioner rejected their claims; their hold on the prince remained practically just what it was before—a matter for his free consideration; while, on the other hand, if their claims were even in part accepted, they got some Government money. But the "secured" creditors, having a firm hold on the prince, of course declined to run the grave risk incurred by thus putting themselves entirely at the mercy of the commissioner. They failed to see the advantage of giving up everything on the chance of getting nothing. They left the Government grant—£150,000—to the "unsecured" creditors, upon whom it is, to all practical purposes, utterly wasted, since paying them in no way "relieves the prince," and they themselves set to work to badger him more vigorously than ever, very nearly creating a serious riot among the Mussulman population of Madras by attempting to arrest one of his sons in the harem. The Indian authorities are accordingly, after years of worry and of the most wasteful expenditure of money and "administrative capacity," much further from their object than when they began. Not only are the prince's creditors more troublesome than ever, but his debts—some of them chargeable with such enormous interest as 60 per cent.—have been increasing like a rolling snowball, to say nothing of the expense of the ingenious commission itself. It is rumoured that they now, with almost equal ingenuity, have devised a scheme for paying the secured creditors with money stopped out of the prince's revenues. In other words, they wish to take money out of his left pocket and put it into his right.

THE HIGH RATE OF EXCHANGE.

The Broad Arrow asks, What is the matter with the Indian exchanges? Have the bankers and merchants entered into a combination to keep money in India by keeping up the rate? Or is the present high exchange legitimately a consequence of the general stagnation of trade, no speculation, few shipments of goods and produce by merchants abroad on the requisition of merchants at home, and consequently little demand for bills drawn on England to pay for such produce? The members of the Army and Civil Service in India, and all those who are connected with them in this country, may well complain of the high rate; for our Indian friends, having to provide for the maintenance of their wives and families and education of their children at home, finding it an expensive operation to burn the candle at both ends, groan at the exchange, melting it in the middle also, and so are induced to plead the high rate of exchange as an excuse for not remitting. Regiments and individuals make the same general plea; those who do remit can only do so by submitting to the extortionate exchange of 7 to 8 per cent. for a thirty days' bill, unless they seek to obtain slightly more favourable terms for six months' bills, but this is at the expense of paying high interest upon accounts which have probably been two or three years overdue. This can hardly be considered an exceptional state of things, the long time it has prevailed almost makes the unfavourableness of the exchange against England a fixity; it is, however, an evil that must be discussed and the cause of it understood, or serious injury will continue to be suffered by our Army and Civil Service in the East. The Government also, which has admitted the principle of officers remitting through the public channels sums of money for the benefit of their families or relatives, or to tradesmen and others, in payment for goods purchased in this country, shows a disposition to discountenance the system, and place difficulties in the way; for instance, officers are restricted in the amount to be remitted, and the remittance returns are made up quarterly instead of monthly.

therefore, supposing Colonel Jones in India, arranges to remit Rs. 1,000 to Mrs. Jones, in England, it may be six months or more before the corresponding amount is realised in this country, pending which delay Mrs. Jones is of course excessively inconvenienced. It almost seems as if the banking or commercial interest (termed by the Times correspondent the public opinion of India) had been at work with the Government authorities, urging them to put difficulties in the way of members of the Services anxious to remit through the remittance rolls, so as to force officers into the exchange market, that such institutions as the Eager Bank (Limited), and the great Occidental Concern (unlimited), may be afforded the opportunity of making past losses out of the pockets and necessities of officers and civilians of the present day. It is somewhat difficult to suggest a remedy. The Services in India are so much in the hands of the Indian banks, and these latter play so much into the hands of each other, that there would seem to be little else to do than to grin and bear it. One thing however is very evident, that it is literally dishonest on the part of the Government to establish a fixed rate of exchange at which an officer's pay shall be issued to him, and yet not give him every reasonable facility for turning the Indian currency into English currency again at the same rate, for the purpose of remitting to England for the support of his family or the purchase of necessaries.

MAILS TO INDIA, ETC.

The Mails to all parts of India, VIA SOUTHAMPTON, are now made up in London every Saturday at 8 A.M., and those VIA MARSEILLES every Friday, at 6 P.M.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"I am not without a hope that these memoirs may be regarded, in some sort, as a Biographical History of India from the days of Cornwallis to the days of Canning. * * I have not attempted, indeed, to write History; the work has grown up spontaneously out of the Lives of the great men who make history * * and, unless the ability of the execution has fallen far short of the sincerity of the design, I have done something, in these pages, to do honour to a race of public servants unsurpassed in the history of the world. * * I have striven to show how youths, from the middle-class families of our British Islands, have gone forth into the great Eastern world, and by their own unaided exertions carved their way to fame and fortune.

"J. W. KAYE."

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

From the ATHENÆUM.

"We say at once that more admirably-written and interesting narratives are scarcely to be found in any literature. We do not envy the man who could read without deep emotion the lives here given of Conolly, Lawrence, and Nicholson; and we doubt whether the whole range of history can show more perfect characters. Nobler subjects of biography could not have been chosen, and higher praise it is impossible to bestow on a writer than to say, as we do of this author, that he is fully equal to such a theme. * * Mr. Kaye's 'Lives of Indian Officers' will take a high place among the standard books of England."

From the SPECTATOR.

"A cadet, an artillery officer, an editor, an employee of the first rank, a successful historian, Mr. Kaye unites in his own person all the qualifications requisite to the biographer of the great Indian soldiers."

From the EXAMINER.

"Two stout volumes of biography, which, arranged chronologically, have, in addition to their biographical interest, great historical value as illustrations of the progress of political government, warlike exercise, and philanthropic effort in India during the last three generations. It is a work of remarkable interest; the interest being due not only to the stirring subjects of which it treats, but also to the admirable way in which the subjects are treated."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not supply a want and fill a place."

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "108 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 6d., and 1s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

PRICE LIST, 76 PAGES.—D. N. and Co. invite the attention of their Foreign and Colonial Correspondents to their Trade List, or Price Current, gratis and post free, just published, which contains seventy-six pages of matter, comprising full particulars of every description of Silks, Woollen Goods, Muslins, Calicos, Prints, Ladies' Under-clothing, Baby Linen, Mantles, Shawls, Men's and Boys' Clothing, Linens, Blankets, Carpets, Hosiery, Gloves, Ribbons, Lace, Haberdashery, Jewellery &c., &c. Also, numbers and widths of Ribbons, Tapes, &c., and sizes in Gloves and Hosiery; in short, all necessary information for ordering this class of Goods from D. N. and Co.'s house in London.

PATTERNS BY POST.—D. NICHOLSON and Co. undertake to forward to India, post free, Packets containing upwards of 200 Patterns of Fashionable Silks. A similar assortment may be had of Muslins, Grenadines, and every kind of Dress Fabric; also Prints, Calicos, Linens, Woollen Cloths, Doeskins, &c., &c. Each Pattern is marked the width, and price per yard or dress, so that Correspondents are able to insure having the exact Goods they order, by retaining a portion of the pattern of each article they require.

OUTFITTING DEPARTMENT.—D. N. and Co. also forward an abridged List containing every requisite for Indian Outfits for both sexes, properly classified for the especial use of Correspondents, Military and Civil, who might be perplexed with some of the technical terms used in the Trade List.

CONTRACTS FOR UNIFORMS, &c.—D. N. and Co. undertake to supply Commanding Officers with every description of Regimental Clothing, Cloths, Serges, Belts, Shoes, and other details necessary for completing Uniforms at considerably less than agent's prices.

Orders addressed to D. N. and Co., accompanied by a Remittance of 50 per cent., will be forwarded on condition that the balance be paid to their Agents in Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, or Colombo, on presentation of the Bills of Lading.

AGENCY DEPARTMENT.—D. N. and Co. undertake the purchasing of Goods for Merchants and Traders in India, who have not buyers in London, for a Commission of 2½ per cent. on Indents of £250 and upwards; on smaller amounts the charge is 5 per cent. As D. N. and Co. have accounts for their own business with every house of importance in connection with the Silk and Manchester trade, they can offer their Correspondents considerable advantages beyond what could be obtained from an ordinary agent. Under arrangements of this kind the original Invoices are in all cases furnished.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, October 3; Agra, September 29; Calcutta, September 28; Madras, September 28.

According to the latest accounts in the Bombay papers from the Frontier, General Wilde had established his head-quarters at Oghee, in the Agroah valley, on the 28th September. The 19th Foot marched in the next day, followed two days later by the rest of the column. Some of the enemy were still demonstrating in front, but no serious resistance was generally expected. Indeed all the tribes not concerned in the recent raid were hastening to offer their submission, one after another, declaring that they never dreamed of making war against us, and promising to continue the best of neighbours in the future. As for the Akhoond of Swat, he was still engaged in hunting down the Wahabies, and seemed, whether from fear or policy, to have come to a thorough understanding with the English authorities. All speculation however on the probable character of the campaign has been set at rest for us by the latest telegram from Bombay, which announces the speedy close of the expedition and the return of our troops into British ground, about a fortnight only after their setting out from Oghee. No resistance worth speaking of could have had to be conquered in so short a time. We must therefore assume that none was offered, that in some way or other the Hussunzais were sufficiently punished, and that we have done all we ever meant to do. It is positively affirmed also that the whole strength of the force employed, including the reserve, did not exceed eleven thousand men—certainly a more reasonable estimate than the twenty thousand whom so many papers brought into the field.

EVEN at the smaller estimate General Wilde's force seems to have been absurdly large for the apparent purpose. It is possible of course that so great a show of strength has frightened some of the hill tribes into timely abstinence from warlike movements; but it is far more probable that none of them had any notion of deliberately provoking the British Lion. And now that the Hussunzais have got their quid pro quo—in what way we have yet to learn—are we a bit nearer to solving the problem of border government than we were before? For the present they and their neighbours are doubtless overawed, and in that direction the peace will not be broken for a year or even two. But how long will the punishment work, and will any lesson of that kind deter the tribes from quarrelling with each other, even if they can keep their hands off British-Indian policemen and surveyors? These periodical frays seem almost a necessity of border life, unless we resort to acts of tremendous cruelty, or succeed in coaxing some powerful border chieftain to keep the peace for us among his weaker neighbours. The latter policy has answered well enough on the Sindh frontier. Perhaps we have already begun to try it on the caterans of the Punjab with the help of the Akhoond of Swat.

SOME small outbreak seems to have occurred or to be feared on the side of Kohat, perhaps among the Bazoties. At any rate the 77th Foot have been moved in that direction, and a whole brigade at Peshawar has been warned to hold itself ready for active service.

THE quarrel with the Arab Chief of Bahrein, in the Persian Gulf, has at length been settled by British arms. After a delay of several months, caused apparently by the greater exigencies of the Abyssinian campaign, Colonel Pelly secured the co-operation of H.M.S. Vigilant and three vessels of the Bombay marine. In a short time the pirate chief, who had so long defied all threats of punishment for his wanton raids against peaceful neighbours trading under the British flag, was a fugitive and an outlaw; his forts, ships, and ordnance were destroyed; full compensation was exacted from Bahrein and its ally Gunthter for the previous outrages; and the Arabian Gulf is once more a haven for peaceful trade. In view of events like these and of the great commercial interests staked on the peace of the Gulf, we cannot help thinking that India should once more have an efficient navy of her own.

THERE is good reason to believe that the new Ameer of Kabul, Shere Ali Khan, means to fight it out with Abdurrahman Khan, unless the latter will aid in rendering Azim Khan up into the hands of his so far successful rival. Apparently, Abdurrahman Khan takes no particular interest in the fate of his defeated uncle, and yet he is said to be arming as if he feared an attack from Shere Ali. A correspondent of the Bombay Gazette gives a doubtful-looking story of a mysterious Jew who is said to have arrived at Kabul with private letters for the Ameer from St. Petersburg. This story however may rest on no better foundation than most of those which reach us from Afghanistan.

ACCORDING to the Bombay Gazette, the post of Director-general of Public Instruction, lately filled so worthily by Sir Alexander Grant, has been offered to Mr. Peile, of the Bombay Civil Service, now on leave in this country. His appointment, we are assured, would give general satisfaction both without and within the department. Should Mr. Peile decline the offer, it is probable that the choice would remain between Mr. Wordsworth and Mr. Chatfield.

THE long drought in the North-Western Provinces and in Western Bengal has led the Supreme Government to make anxious inquiries of the local authorities touching the prospects of scarcity in those parts. The latter are requested to send in timely reports of the extent to which special measures may be needed for the relief of the poorer classes, and of any likelihood they may see of popular riots consequent on the distress. It is to be hoped however that the rain which has lately fallen so freely in the up-country stations may have turned the impending famine into a less fearful scarcity. According to the latest accounts however the country about Agra had not yet been refreshed by a drop of rain.

SIMLAH has this year been enlivened by a new entertainment. Amateur artists, some of no common ability, are far from rare among our countrymen in India. A number of these lately formed themselves into a committee, under the presidency of Sir Richard Temple, and the result has been the opening of a Fine Arts Exhibition in that pleasant summer capital. The Viceroy himself opened the Exhibition on the 21st September, in the presence of a goodly company. Some six hundred pictures of all kinds were set forth for their contemplation, including about two hundred water-colours, the finest—judice Sir R. Temple—"ever yet seen in that part of India." Among the seventy oil-paintings were "some of the very best pieces" in the collection. Of the architectural drawings Sir Richard could not speak so approvingly, but hoped to "succeed better next year." The photographic collection on the contrary he describes as "both extensive and excellent," a result which might have been expected from the zeal with which photography has long been studied and applied in Simlah. The subjects of the pictures in all departments are chiefly Indian, as they should be, and most of them are drawn from Hindostan, the Punjab, and Central India. Of course the unrivalled scenery of the Himalayas, which except for water surpasses everything of the kind in Europe, plays no inferior part in such a collection. Why do not some of our best known artists spend a year or two by way of change in that high-billowing sea of mountains? Sir R. Temple's speech on the opening was neat and pertinent. He touched among other things on the advantage which such gatherings offered to the large body of amateur artists scattered throughout India, isolated from each other by the great distances and the duties of their several posts, and thus "deprived of the benefit of mutual criticism and mutual instruction." If the present attempt to remedy in some degree "this cardinal difficulty" should prove successful, Sir Richard proposes to start "a regular Art Society for Northern India." We for our part wish him all success, and trust that the Indian Government may in due time do as much for art as it is now doing for science and learning.

THE new tariff for telegraphs in India seems, amidst many wise improvements, to contain one element of future injustice. According to the new rules mercantile messages written in English, but "in words of concealed meaning," will now pay double the ordinary rates; that is two rupees instead of one for every ten words. This, say the merchants of Bombay, will press very unfairly on the chief employers of the telegraph, who must send their messages in words of concealed meaning, to prevent the publicity to which Indian telegrams are notoriously liable. With regard to ciphers, the case is quite different; but there can be no more trouble in telegraphing a message of English words used in a non-natural, than of English words used in a natural sense. The Bombay Chamber of Commerce has addressed Colonel Robinson on this point, but no answer has yet been received.

THE same body in their yearly report complain of the discouraging replies received from the India Office to their demand for a Red Sea cable; and of the Indian Government's refusal to extend the Central India Railway from Ahmedabad to Vee-rumgaum, the centre of a rich cotton district. Other lines "of greater State importance and also financially advantageous" need constructing first, say the Central Powers, and the Chamber has to rest in hope that the excuse will prove valid.

THE Port Canning Company declare that their new mills are capable of husking eight hundred tons of rice a-day, an amount sufficient to freight two hundred and fifty large ships in the year. This seems directly at war with Mr. Grey's somewhat hasty conclusions on the same point. Much however may be done in the course of a year to justify a reversal of the sentence now hanging over Lord Dalhousie's pet creation, which somehow came to be miscalled after his successor.

SARAWAK, the rejected legacy of Rajah Brooke to England, may yet prove worth annexing to the British Empire. In spite of the stagnation caused by the Chinese insurrection and the late commercial crisis, the place is beginning to look up again. The Borneo Company is driving a steadily improving trade in antimony and sago. New factories and smelting works have been constructed to meet the growing demand for those staples. A new trade has just been opened in cinnabar or ore of mercury, a rich vein of which has lately been struck in a mountain range between the two branches of the Sarawak River. This ore yields on analysis 84 per cent. of quicksilver, which sometimes runs in pure beads out of the broken rock. The coast line of Sarawak now reaches about half-way to Bruni. Strong forts have been built on all the chief rivers. There is peace throughout the land, and the Dyaks take kindly to trade and money-making. It will not be long before Sir James Brooke's foresight vindicates itself in the profits accruing to his successor. We can only hope that the English Government will ere long see the advantage of taking over charge of a settlement so prosperous and so well placed for the promotion of our interests in the Chinese and Malayan Seas. The European society however in Sarawak seems to have decreased.

OUR fellow-subjects in India will have to keep their enthusiasm cool for many months after next February. A new turn has been given to the Duke of Edinburgh's plan of travel. Instead of reaching India in time for the hot weather, he will not show himself in those torrid regions before next October; a much more rational arrangement unless he could have spent the hot season in the Neilgherries or at Chini, the summer paradise of Lord Dalhousie. The Duke leaves in the Galatea at the end of this month or the first day of the next, calling at the Cape, and spending a few months at various places in Australia. At the end of June the Galatea will be due at Yokohama, whence she proceeds by way of China towards Calcutta. The Prince will reach that city about the end of October, when the weather becomes tolerably cool, and the British residents are rousing themselves for a brief spell of exercise and amusement.

It seems that Captain Cunningham, the paymaster to whose case we lately referred, is really seeking redress in Westminster for the sentence passed on him in India last year by the Court-Martial of which Colonel Priestly was President. The five years' penal servitude for embezzlement—not as the Army and Navy Gazette stated for desertion—was remitted by the home authorities on grounds not yet published; and the ex-paymaster came home in March to open a suit against those who condemned him, as he maintains, without cause. If he too should get reinstated, what a satire on our precious system of Courts-martial!

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, October 28, 1868.

A PLEA FOR INDIAN PAYMASTERS.

To have a grievance is not always a synonym for being unfairly treated. Some people air their grievances much in the same way that others ride their hobbies or talk about their health: it does them good to feel injured; they fatten on the sense of suffering, and would be quite unhappy if all grounds for grumbling could be taken away from them. Others, again, are apt to feel seriously aggrieved on insufficient or unwarrantable pretexts. An overweening sense of their own deserts, or an unreasoning jealousy of more successful neighbours has more to do with their dissatisfaction than any real wrong that might be remedied.

To neither of these classes, however, do the subjects of the present article seem to belong. So far as we can gather from various sources, the regimental paymaster in India has reason for the loudness and frequency of his complaints. He has not been crying out for nothing. His grievances, on examination, do not resolve themselves into mere wind. His passionate demands for redress deserve, at any rate, a patient hearing from the powers that have hitherto answered them with rebuffs. So many paymasters would not be writing to the papers, all in the same strain, to much the same effect, without some tangible cause for so much bitterness.

The gist of their complainings seems to be this. According to certain Royal Warrants of 1860 the position and rights of paymasters were reconsidered and clearly defined. Starting from the honorary rank of captains, they could rise in time to the rank of majors. The honorary title was declared to carry with it all the allowances and privileges of the substantive rank. Thus a paymaster ranking as a major was entitled to draw the pay and allowances of a regimental major. At home and in the colonies these provisions have ever since been faithfully observed. Whatever else they may have to complain of, in this respect no injustice seems to have been done.

But in India the paymaster has not fared so well of late. The old rules of the Indian services made a vast distinction in respect of pay between honorary and substantive rank. The honorary or brevet rank bore with it no increase of pay and allowances. These rules are still in force, and ever since 1860 paymasters in India have come under their action. Before that time they seem to have held no military rank as paymasters, but to have drawn the full pay and allowances of captains. From that date however their troubles began. In due time a paymaster of so many years' standing could claim the rank and title of major and all other good things thereto belonging; for the Royal Warrant distinctly affirms that "honorary rank shall carry with it all precedence and advantages attaching to the rank with which it corresponds, and shall regulate choice of quarters, allowances," and so forth. He might therefore claim the tentage, house-rent, and batta of a regimental field officer. So Hotspur's Welsh friend could call spirits from the vasty deep; but their obedience to the call was quite another question. Anyhow these poor paymasters have been calling in vain. The Indian authorities have but one answer to all their pleadings and remonstrances: it is against the rules of the Indian service to give brevet-majors the pay and allowances of regimental majors. And let the complainants turn where they will, this is all the answer they have hitherto got. Repulsed in one quarter, they have tried another, and yet a third and a fourth time has the cry gone up in vain. Sir W. Mansfield will not stir a finger to write one word on their behalf. The Secretary for War refers them to the Secretary for India, and the latter refers them back again to the Indian Government. "The barbarians drive us into the sea, and the sea casts us back upon the barbarians." Red-tape has completed its circle, and a few gentlemen of long and tried service already find themselves the poorer by hundreds of pounds.

It is cold comfort to the sufferers in question to know that they are suffering according to rule, in view of the fact that for some of their non-combatant comrades the bands of red-tape have been less tightly drawn. The medical officers for instance, who have no honorary titles, receive according to their years of service the full pay and allowances of subalterns, captains, or field officers. Riding masters also are entitled to draw the full allowance of their relative rank. A difference may indeed be alleged between relative rank which carries no title, and honorary rank which does carry a title; but in the case of riding-masters no such difference, we believe, exists. And what if brevet rank in the Indian army brings the officer no increase of pay? Such a rule is in itself, we think, a manifest injustice which ought to have been remedied long ago. Besides, these paymasters are not in the Indian army, albeit drawing Indian allowances. If Royal warrants have any force at all with English regiments serving in India, they should be applied impartially to all concerned. We cannot see on what principle of justice paymasters in India should be shut out from the benefits of a rule which lets in riding-masters. It is only fair that the increased pay which all sections of the British army draw on Indian service should be dealt out according to War Office usage, rather than Indian. To our thinking there can be no middle course between total rejection of a Royal warrant and its uniform application. And the paltry saving of a few hundred pounds a year is dearly purchased by what many people must regard as a breach of faith with a small but deserving body of public servants, whose efficiency is best secured by fair treatment and high pay. If Sir W. Mansfield will make no sign, let the home authorities act on their own good inclinations, and redress a real grievance without more delay.

ENGLISH APATHY ON EASTERN QUESTIONS.

[COMMUNICATED.]

It is curious to remark what little interest the prospect of a campaign in Hazara has awakened in England—how infinitesimal has been the excitement felt by the British public concerning it. It is enough that the matter concerns India, and everyone knows that India is the "B. P.'s" aversion and bete noir. Can any good—or interesting—thing come out of Galilee? So the stout party known as the "B. P." only suspiciously buttons his pockets up a little tighter as he hears the news, and changes the subject as soon as possible.

How different was his conduct at the commencement of the Abyssinian Expedition! Hope and fear then alternately thrilled through his well-fed frame, and by turns blanched or flushed his rubicund visage. At one moment agitated with doubt, he found expression for his feelings in repeated leaders of despondent tone in his favourite Times; at another, when success appeared imminent upon his efforts, to Poëms of frantic joy instead resounded through successive pages of the leading journal. "Own Correspondents," in reckless squadrons, rushed wildly in the van of Sir R. Napier's column, and despatched home at frequent intervals those long histories of the proceedings in camp which we all so devoutly devoured and enjoyed at the time. But now—comment nous avons changé tout cela! Although the dead season of the year is in full sway, and the Thunderer, together with the other dailies, is constrained to set before his readers a bill of fare, which, for insipidity and qualities of an indigestible nature, has been rarely, if ever, known to be equalled even by the oldest inhabitant—the fact that a campaign in India, on an extensive scale, leading possibly to important results, has been quite on the cards, has only forced one languid leader droned in a monotone from the Jupiter of the press, and (with one exception) but a few faint and colourless remarks from the other journals. We do not mean to imply from the foregoing however that the interest of England in Abyssinian affairs was on the whole excessive or overstrained; we only wish to be understood to say that the aspect of matters on the frontiers of India demands greater attention than it receives, and that the contrast between the attention paid to it and that conceded to the doings in Æthiopia a year ago is too great and too marked with reference to the relative importance of each. Even if the gale upon the waters of the Upper Indus has already blown over as the telegrams declare—still, in that case, our indifference to the subject came too early; for no one can doubt but that the force of ten thousand picked troops placed in battle array under General Wilde, at so serious an expense to the State, was so placed, in face of some eventuality of an important nature, of which the public is not yet fully cognisant, and that if the contingency alluded to has not arisen, and the probability of its doing so has been decreased for the present, so as to render advisable the disbanding of General Wilde's army—that fact does not remove the gravity of the past situation, or excuse our fellow-countrymen's insouciance in presence of a danger which was then possible. And after all, these Indian difficulties are closely connected with those of an Imperial nature, and not remotely with the interests of the British taxpayer himself. Say, for instance, that the Hazara campaign were not yet at an end, and that General Wilde's advance would be continued, who can foresee or limit the results of his expedition? One thing leads to another. The rectification of the frontier might have been decided upon for instance, leading either to a rupture or a closer alliance with the present ruler at Cabul. Both or either of these events might have been brought indirectly about in consequence of a semi-conscious fear of Russian intrigues on the part of our Government; for, disguise it as we will, the country of the Czar is already beginning to exercise some influence upon our situation on the North-west frontier of India, and every one knows that if ultimately we should be brought into collision with it, it is the British taxpayer and the British taxpayers' pocket that must inevitably suffer.

Such considerations as these then should surely be sufficient to awaken in England an interest more commensurate with the importance of the foreign policy of India in general, and the episode lately taking place in the Black Mountains of Hazara in particular, than is generally felt; nor should the feeling that our great dependency is far-off—that "it is a far cry to Lochawe," deter us here at home from realising the connection that undoubtedly exists between India's safety, the security of our English hearths, and the prosperity of our English money-bags.

BONUS COMPENSATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In continuation of my last letter, will you allow me to say, that if further proof be needed of the injustice of putting the extra pension given by Government to induce senior officers to retire in the scale against the compensation promised them for the loss of their regimental bonus, I beg to call your attention to the fact that Government benefit largely by the retirement of those officers who accepted it? As a case in point: If I had remained in the service, I should now be in the receipt of £950 per annum (this even as a field officer doing general duty, on which roll there is already a surplus), and should have been entitled in a year or two to my off-reckonings, which would have enabled me to retire with a pension of about the same amount, instead of my present one of £500; consequently, in this instance, the liberality of Government constitutes its own reward—namely, a saving of £450 per annum; proving, I submit, a sufficient object for giving a small extra pension without, as an after thought, irrelevantly throwing in our lost bonus as a makeweight. Nominally, I am in receipt of an extra pension of £150, my real gain (as I before stated) being £60 per annum; this fact I fully explained to the Bonus Committee in Calcutta.

Being, as regards promotion, one of the unfortunates of the army, having been twenty-two years a subaltern, and then having to purchase my company whilst on consolidated allowances, and having only had one death-step during a service of thirty-one years, I could not be mulcted, like many other officers, on the score of advantages gained by promotion, so the Committee, in my case, went on another tack. "You have no claim, as the amount of your special annuity (£60) so far exceeds the payments made by you if converted into an annuity."

Now, I put it to you, Mr. Editor, would any man have been selfish enough to sink principal, intended as a provision for his wife and family, in an annuity, of which his death might deprive them at any moment? In the name of common sense, then, why should this far-famed committee arrogate to themselves the right of supposing such an act of insanity on my part, it being about as reasonable a supposition as the old one—"If ifs and ans were pots and pans"? "Drest in a little brief authority" they have done their utmost to blight the future of their brother officers; but it is not with them we have to do.

Our eagle takes a higher flight. Our present failure in obtaining justice is based on the rules so ingeniously but tormentingly framed by Lord Cranborne, that they gave with one hand what they took away with the other. We trusted to find in them some kind of adjustment of our claims. After the noble lord's statement in Parliament "that interest would neither be allowed for nor against us," and by his computation (also stated in Parliament) of the sum the redress of our grievances would cost the Government annually for several years, I should like the authorities to be questioned as to the disbursement of this money, for I have as yet not heard of any officer receiving compensation!

I expended £1,300 in purchasing out my seniors, in various sums extending over a period of thirty years. Had Lord Cranborne's promise been carried out in its integrity I should certainly have received the money I actually paid, as any disinterested accountant would have considered the loss of the interest sufficient; as with the principal it would have equalled the sum of which the amalgamation deprived me, namely, £3,500. I have made a rough calculation, and find that compensation to officers on the Bengal side would be but a trifle to the Government, whilst the loss to many of us, who have no private means, is simply ruination—not only to ourselves, but, what we hold dearer, the future of our children.

When the Bill for the amalgamation was introduced by Lord Derby, as Prime Minister, to the House of Lords, he explained that we should have reserved to us "all the rights, privileges, and expectations" we were led to form at the time of our admission into the service; foremost amongst these "privileges and expectations" ranked our regimental bonus; it is to these promises we must appeal, and when our case is laid before, and fairly and generously discussed by the new Parliament, I feel assured we shall meet with that justice from the hands of our countrymen which "if slow is sure." Our wrongs are not imaginary, and possessing that indomitable spirit of an Englishman which, though repulsed, returns again and again with vigour to the attack, I shall, whilst life lasts, until our cause is won, prove myself respectfully, but earnestly,

A STRUGGLER FOR REDRESS.

FROM ALLAHABAD TO BOMBAY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

DEAR SIR,—Having recently travelled with my family from the North-West Provinces through Central India to Bombay, it gives me pleasure to furnish the information required by "H. B." and others about to proceed to Northern India.

The train leaves Allahabad in the cold weather about 6.15 A.M. and arrives at Jubbulpore about 7 P.M., halting about twenty minutes for refreshments at Sutna, the half-way station, and as there is only one line of rails it remains until the train from Jubbulpore passes. The whole line is 227 miles. At Jubbulpore there is an excellent hotel, styled the Residency Hotel, with good accommodation and moderate terms. Jubbulpore is 161 miles distant from Nagpore, and as the line between the two places will not be finished for two years, the journey must be done by carriage or bullock dawk. But the road is magnificent, being well bridged and macadamised throughout, barring two places—viz., at the Nerbudda, five miles from Jubbulpore, and at Kamptee, over the Cunar River, ten miles from Nagpore. But over both rivers good ghauts have been made, and there is no delay in crossing, as they contain but little water in the cold weather. At Nagpore there is a good hotel, kept by a native named Nuttoo. For the journey Messrs. Howard supply good and roomy carriages, and to prevent disappointment and delay it is necessary to give ten days' notice. For a whole carriage, licensed to carry two inside and two out, Rs. 160 are charged. For this sum two ponies are given at each stage, and travel at the rate of about six to seven miles per hour. En route there are thirty-three stages, each stage being about five miles. Along the whole line of route there are good dawk bungalows, where travellers can now receive refreshments and shelter during the heat of the day. Thus:—

Jubbulpore to Dhona, 35 miles, dawk bungalow; Jubbulpore to Chuppara, 65 miles, dawk bungalow; Jubbulpore to Seonce, 85 miles, dawk bungalow; Jubbulpore to Korye, 106 miles, dawk bungalow; Jubbulpore to Deolapar, 124 miles, dawk bungalow; Jubbulpore to Kamptee, 151½ miles, dawk bungalow; Jubbulpore to Nagpore, 161 miles, Hotel.

The country in many places is very hilly, and to reduce the steepness of the road immense cuts have been made. By these grand cuttings, in which great expense and labour have been incurred, the heights of the passes have been greatly reduced. The worse passes are the Selwa Pass, which has a rather steep ascent from the twenty-fifth and a-half to the twenty-seventh mile; the Guneshgunge Pass, which has a descent from the fifty-third to the fifty-fourth mile; the Ghoonga Pass, which has an ascent from the fifty-ninth to the sixtieth and a-half mile, and a descent from the sixty-first to the sixty-third mile; and the Korye Pass, which has a descent from the one hundred and fifth to the one hundred and sixth and a-half mile. In macadamising the road trap rocks have generally been employed, but in many places great masses of rose-coloured quartz are seen, which, when mixed with other binding materials, forms a magnificent road. By the civil authorities of the Central Provinces, represented by Mr. G. Campbell, servants have been appointed to all the bungalows, who are a great accommodation to travellers, particularly to those who, like myself, have families to provide for. Parties ought to halt during the heat of the day, and if this be done, the journey can easily be accomplished in two nights.

The train leaves Nagpore for Bombay at 7.45 A.M.; halts at Bhosawul at 7.8 P.M. for half-an-hour, to allow passengers to get dinner, &c., and reaches Bombay the day following at 11 A.M., the distance being 519 miles. En route several ranges of mountains are traversed by the rail, and the works there exhibited are on a scale of grandeur and magnificence not surpassed by any railway engineering works in the world. The whole distance from Allahabad to Bombay is 907 miles. From Allahabad to Delhi the distance is 389 miles; and from Allahabad to Calcutta 629 miles.

The expenses of the journey are as follows:—

From Allahabad to Jubbulpore, per train, 1st class...	£2	2	9
Carriage from Jubbulpore to Nagpore ...	16	0	0
Nagpore to Bombay, per train, 1st class ...	5	1	3
Allahabad to Delhi, per train, 1st class ...	3	13	2
Allahabad to Calcutta, per train, 1st class ...	5	18	2

During this month the railway was to be opened up to Saharunpore, and in December to Amballah. In eighteen months more there will be an open line from Calcutta to Lahore—a line of upwards of fourteen hundred miles. W. J.

INCREASE OF CHAPLAINS' SALARIES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

DEAR SIR,—There is a Government notice in your paper of September 30 last, page 973, regarding the salaries of the Church of Scotland chaplains. Can you kindly inform me when the salaries of senior chaplains on the Madras and Bombay establishments was raised to Rs. 800 per month? When I left India in February, 1867, we received Rs. 700 per month, and had petitioned in vain to be put on an equality with our Bengal brethren; moreover, I can find no notice of this increase of salary in your paper.—I am, dear Sir, yours truly,

Oct. 16, 1868.

A SENIOR CHAPLAIN, Madras.

[The increase was sanctioned by a financial despatch from the Secretary of State to Government of India of June 14, 1867, No. 227.—Editor A. I. M.]

INCOME-TAX DEDUCTIONS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

DEAR SIR,—You will oblige a great number of your readers by inserting the following queries in your paper, or by replying to them in your notice to correspondents.—Yours faithfully,

Oct. 17, 1868.

Z. Z. Z.

Query 1.—Are retired officers of the old company's army "who reside out of Great Britain" liable to pay income-tax on their retired pay or pension? If not, kindly quote regulation or order under which they may claim a refund of tax already deducted.

Query 2.—Would officers to whom income-tax may be returned become liable to pay in arrears (or in prospectu) income-tax on the scale charged in India? If so, the exemption here would be no desirable boon.

Query 3.—Are officers whose pay or income comes below Rs. 2,000 (i.e., £200) per annum exempt in India from this tax, or from any portion thereof?

[The income-tax is always deducted, but the amount can be recovered by applying to the Income-tax Commissioners at the India-office. Query 2 we have not the means of answering. With regard to Query 3 we believe that for incomes under £200 the tax is reckoned on what remains over £60.—Ed. A. I. M.]

THE ADMINISTRATION OF RAJPOOTANA.

The Englishman opines that nothing could show more clearly than Lieutenant-Colonel Keatinge's "Report on the Administration of Rajpootana" that, whatever may be the merits or demerits of native rule, the present condition of most of the native States is such as to afford grounds for the most serious apprehension. British interference, whatever good it may have effected in other respects, has developed elements of incongruity in the body politic which threaten its violent disorganisation at no distant period. Now that the British Government performs the functions of an international policeman between the States, that community of interests which the force of circumstances formerly served to maintain between the feudal nobility and their sovereign chiefs no longer exists. Having no longer any common foes, they have become mutual foes, for all their interests subordinate to that of self-preservation, of which we have relieved them, are antagonistic. Restrained to a great extent by the control we exert from displaying this enmity in open hostilities, that control yet leaves one side at least altogether free to indulge it in a manner none the less real because mainly passive. The chief has no means of maintaining his power over the nobles, because, while he has not learned to adopt constitutional measures, he is prevented from using force for the purpose. "The violent means," says Colonel Keatinge, "by which in by-gone days they maintained their power, would now cost them their thrones, and, as a rule, they have taken no steps towards substituting well-organised and respected judicial tribunals for the fire and sword with which they formerly enforced obedience." But we may well ask, what judicial tribunals would be likely to secure the respect of powerful and semi-savage barons, who, Colonel Keatinge admits, will not permit a civil functionary of their chief to enter their estates otherwise than as a traveller on sufferance, who will respond to no calls for statistics, and who do not even acknowledge his civil criminal jurisdiction. The consequences of this absence of all responsibility, and immunity from all punishment, may easily be imagined. Numbers of the nobles "maintain bands of plunderers, who, in return for the protection given, are always ready for an emergent service. Trade is trammelled by every conceivable exaction by which a small present profit can be made, and the cultivators and poorer classes are degraded to the condition of serfs." Yet the British Government holds these chiefs responsible for robberies, expects them to promote railways, and makes the condition of their ryots the subject of friendly admonition, as long as it is tolerable, and of punishment or confiscation, when it becomes intolerable. For our part we are convinced that short of confiscation there will soon be but two alternatives open to us to pursue. We must either give the native chiefs more liberty to work out their own ends in their own way, or we must assume all their responsibilities, and carry our interference into the minutest details of internal administration. The former course is next to impossible, the latter would convert them into useless and expensive puppets.

HOW TO ACCLIMATISE EUROPEAN SOLDIERS IN INDIA.

The Madras Times holds that every possible care is taken of the European soldier in India with two exceptions. One is, in the gradual acclimatisation to the heat, and the other is in the matter of bounties. Experience teaches us that a gradual acclimatisation to heat is pleasant and wholesome. For instance, a year on the Neilgherries, or at Bangalore, on first arrival in this country, is an agreeable introduction to the heat to be expected in the plains. If we compare India as a whole, and, perhaps, not unjustly, to a Turkish bath, these sanatoria may be considered as the moderately heated rooms, through which we must eventually pass to the bath itself. To walk straightforward, and without a rest, from the cold atmosphere outside into the steaming sanctum of a Turkish bath, is to commit an act of great personal discomfort, if not of absolute torture. To approach the hottest portion of the establishment by degrees is a very different matter, and may be performed with pleasurable sensations. So in India the violent change to the recruit from the sea-breeze on board the Serapis or the Crocodile to the hot winds of Kamptee, all in the space of a few weeks, must, we think, prove highly injurious, and calculated to produce those frequently dangerous bowel complaints that in former years were embraced in the generic name of "Griffin's Colic." We cannot see why India should not have depots for European troops as well as England. We conceive that the proposal is at least worthy of a fair trial. We would, for instance, establish a European depot at Bangalore for all the European troops in the Madras Presidency. A better and a more healthy station might probably be found, as the plan worked, but Bangalore would be very well for the present. To this depot might be sent all draughts from England for, let us say, six months, or a year if possible; such a period of Bangalore service being, we presume, sufficient to acclimatise new arrivals to the heat of such stations as Madras, Bellary, Kamptee, Secunderabad, &c. As a consequence of our proposal, we would reduce depots of regiments on the Indian roster in England by one half, and in fact give to regiments on Indian service two depots, one in Great Britain and one in India. The transfer is easy, from the English depot to the India depot, whether the latter is formed at Bangalore, at Mahableshwar, or the Himalayals. We would only select as a place for a depot in each Presidency a climate sufficiently warm as to gently inure recruits into the heat they must eventually encounter. A brief article, such as the present, affords us no space in which to enter into details of such a scheme. At some future opportunity we may revert to the subject; at present we can only broadly state the broad basis on which we would found a plan of gradual acclimatisation for our European soldiers, feeling convinced that if some such idea were acted upon, and if "bounties" of every description were to be at once and for ever placed under proper restrictions, the general health of the soldier might be greatly improved, and much money saved to the Government and the public.

SAVINGS' BANKS.

The Englishman congratulates the Government of India on their determination to establish Savings' Banks in every district. The experiment is one which ought to be tried; but at the same time we are by no means sanguine of its success, at least as far as natives of the country are concerned. Supposing them to have the most perfect confidence in the Government, we are not aware of any large class of natives who feel the want of a means of investment for their money. Among the agricultural classes a ryot who manages to accumulate a few rupees can, if he is inclined to be speculative, find a ready investment for it at a high rate of interest in his own village. He turns money-lender on a small scale. A considerable number of ryots of the better class so employ their money very profitably with almost perfect safety. These men would certainly not bring their money to the Government Savings' Bank for the inducement of five or even ten per cent. interest. If, on the other hand, it is expected that the sums now spent in gold and silver ornaments will find their way to the Savings' Banks, we do not share in the expectations; for if these ornaments were readily dispensed with, there are existing opportunities of investment much more tempting. Moreover, it is a long way for most ryots to have to go to the district treasury to deposit a few rupees, and they will feel themselves a long way from their money after the deposit has been effected. To give the Savings' Banks any chance of success there must be one at least in every Pergunnah. If there should be any depositors at all under the proposed system they will probably belong to the Town population; among men who have become so long disconnected from the country and the agricultural classes, and from all interest in or knowledge of agricultural concerns, that practically the opportunity for investment we have described does not exist for them. They, however, are not a large class; and we doubt whether even they will to any extent become depositors. One has only to look at the class with whom we are brought most in contact, that of domestic servants, and observe what the thrifty among them do with their surplus money, to see how very insignificant is the inducement held out by the Savings' Banks. They have no difficulty in finding among their own class borrowers at an anna per rupee per mensem.

A SURE TELEGRAPH TO INDIA.

The Bombay Gazette points out that if France finds it worth while to promote a direct connection with America, upon whose mainland she has not a single possession, and off whose coasts she has a direct interest only in a few fishing isles in an inhospitable climate, how much more ought England to find worth while the establishment of direct communication with the East. France, the continent itself, has no interest in America compared with ours, which stretches from Alexandria through all the lands and seas, as far eastward as the mouth of the Peiho and the northern waters of Japan. The possible benefit, independently of commerce and trade, which France and the continent may derive from America, is almost entirely contingent and speculative. But the stake, direct and indirect, which England has throughout the East, is direct, constant, immense. Not only is there the vast commerce—the cotton of Bombay, the opium of Calcutta, the gold of Australia, the silk and tea of China, the produce of the great valleys watered by the Indus and the Ganges, the safety of all which traffic has to be guarded; but there are political liabilities so extensive and imperative, so nearly touching our existence as an empire, that no State in the world can show a status like that we occupy, or pretend to be our rivals in responsibility and power. At any moment we may be involved in war, not only with a European nation, but with one or more of the countless tribes of men which destiny has placed under our influence or control. We may have troubles in our own wide circuit of immediate dominion; we may have quarrels beyond its pale; we may meet face to face some sudden emergency demanding prompt treatment, but requiring aid from home for its ultimate settlement. Yet, knowing well that swiftness and certainty of communication is an essential of safety under the new conditions of the world, we are content to allow our readiest lines to remain in the hands of nations any one of whom, or the whole of whom, might in a week be our bitter foes. At this moment the Indian Government cannot send a swift word to London without the sufferance of Persia, Turkey, Germany, Belgium, Holland, France. To the list of possible hostile Powers it is now proposed to add Russia, the very nation above all others which may be the most interested in blocking the wires. Yet, oddly enough, Colonel Goldsmid thinks the fact that a Siemen's line through Russia is to be established ought to destroy the "popular objection" that telegraphic communication with India will be in the hands of one or two European Powers. We are puzzled to see how the construction of the new line invalidates the popular objection. A line of cord is only as showy as its weakest part, and a line of telegraphic wire comes under the same rule. Now the weakest parts of existing lines are Persia on one sides and Belgium and France on the other. It is true that we might protect the Persian part of the line, but in the event of a European war the lines through France and Belgium might be useless, except on the unlikely hypothesis that we are always to be an active ally of the French Emperor. At any moment the Eastern question may break out in a form involving us with more than one European nation, and assuming that Persia can be thoroughly controlled, we should have to rely upon the precarious route by Constantinople and the Hague. Are we justified in placing our Empire in the East upon the peril of such a chance? If that question can be answered in the affirmative then Colonel Goldsmid is right. But what statesman would dare to answer yes, to our interrogation? No doubt the force of the objection is mitigated by the proposed establishment of the new line, because it is possible to conceive of a war in which we should not have Russia for a foe; but recent events on the Danube—Russian preparations for the contingency of a war on the Rhine—show that the quiescence of Russia in such a conjuncture is eminently unlikely, while it is manifest that any move of that Power towards the Bosphorus must bring England into the field. And all the time that we are satisfied with makshifts, the geographical conditions conducive to our imperial sway have furnished us with a means of taking at least one more measure to preserve it. We are still the greatest naval Power in the world, and still possess unexhausted means of increasing our force afloat. There is no limit virtually to the navy which we could place on the seas to guard the great lines of communication and uphold the honour of the flag. Moreover, the courage and foresight of our ancestors have secured for us posts along the open waterways, studding the oceans with places of strength and reservoirs of power. Between England and Egypt we have two first-class fortresses, and what is of more moment, two depots and arsenals, where fleets can take shelter or refit, and where immense resources can be stored up. The right of way through Egypt cannot be taken from us, if we are true to ourselves and make a right use of our means; and from Suez to the continent of Ind no power exists which can dispute our control. Why is it, then, that, except as avowed makshifts, do we desert our own element, and take the telegraph wires through foreign lands? Why do we not submerge a line from England to Lisbon, from Lisbon to Gibraltar, and from Gibraltar through Malta to the Nile? What has become of the old imperial spirit that we depend on foreign Powers for an advantage which we ought to hold by our own right? True it may be said that a line from England to Gibraltar would lie within reach of France and Spain, and run risk of being cut; but surely this is an odd argument in the mouths of those who counsel continued dependence upon, and run their wires actually through the lands of foreign, and it may be, hostile Powers. It could not be so easy to break a deep sea line as it is to stop a land line, and while the risk in the former case is contingent, in the latter it is certain. We will not assume to judge of the motives which prevent the adoption of a direct British telegraph from England to the East; but we are sure that no European of the first-class would put up with the expedients doing duty for a satisfactory and safe communication between the home of our empire and its great Eastern dominions. At least we might have a cable from Gibraltar to Alexandria and from Suez to Bombay, a measure which would diminish the peril which now overhangs our communications. The British Government has just adopted a scheme giving it the command of the home lines. Let the operation of the Act be extended, and let the Home Government, in connection with the Government of India, assume the duty of providing prompt, swift, direct, and secure communication with the seat of British power in the Eastern world.

ABSENTEE ALLOWANCES.—According to the Indian Daily News it has been ruled by her Majesty's Government, in order to allow civil servants to draw absentee allowance in England, that a certificate of substantive appointment, period, and nature of leave, and date of its commencement, should be granted to them on temporarily leaving this country.

ADMINISTRATION OF ESTATES.—List of estates which have come under charge of the Officiating Administrator-General during the month of August, 1868:—

Bartlett, Arthur Nelson, late a British subject trading at Delhi, and other places in the North-West Provinces and Punjab.
Burgess, Henry, late a sergeant and master tailor of H.M.'s 55th Regt.
Chadwick, John Richard, late a platelayer in the service of the East Indian Railway Company.
Conlan, John, late record-keeper in the English department of the High Court, Agra.
Crossman, Francis Geach, late a lieutenant-colonel in the Bengal Infantry.
Falcon, R., late extra assistant commissioner of Durrung.
Finch, Arthur, late a contractor residing at Furruckabad.
Gosling, Charles, late a lieutenant in H.M.'s 60th Rifles.
Hirons, John Guthridge, late superintendent of the Press of the Public Works Secretariat of the Government of India.
Jolley, W. J., late mate of the Government schooner Charlotte.
Niven, George, late a sergeant in the Bombay Sappers and Miners.
Parlby, Brook Samuel Bridges, late a captain in the Bengal Staff Corps.
Trevelyan, John Frederick, late a lieutenant in the Bengal Staff Corps.
Volkers, G. H., late an inspector of police at Shahjehanpore.
Wyse, E., late a probationary pilot in the River Mutlah.
N.B.—All persons having claims upon, being indebted to, or holding property belonging to the above-mentioned estates, are requested to place themselves in immediate communication with Mr. C. J. Wilkinson, Officiating Administrator-General.

TELEGRAPHIC MESSAGES.—The number of commercial or private messages transmitted along the Mekran Coast and Submarine Telegraph in August last was 2,276, in addition to which there were 71 Government despatches. The number of messages from Great Britain via Turkey was 769, and via Russia 191; in August, 1867, the numbers were, respectively, 655 and 71. The mean time occupied in the transmission of messages via Russia, between Great Britain and India, was considerably less than the time occupied in the case of messages via Turkey. With regard to those via Russia the following are the figures:—Longest time, 5d. 15h. 28m.; shortest do., 0d. 10h. 53m.; mean do., 2d. 8h. 27m. This shows a considerable improvement as compared with the figures for the same month in 1867, which are—longest 9d. 16h. 11m.; shortest, 0d. 21h. 4m.; mean, 3d. 4h. 24m. The time taken in transmitting telegrams via Turkey will be seen from the following:—In August, 1868, longest time 10d. 1h. 56m.; shortest, 0d. 13h. 28m.; mean time, 3d. 23h. 6m.; in August, 1867, longest, 14d. 0h. 20m.; shortest, 0d. 3h. 46m.; mean, 3d. 14h. 52m. The following shows the mean time, in the case of both routes, for thirteen months:—

	Via Turkey.			Via Russia.
	3d.	1h.	52m.	3d.	4h.	24m.
1867.
August	3d.
September	3	...	14	25
October	2	...	7	0
November	3	...	4	10

April	14	...	0	32
May	8	...	2	5
June	2	...	23	55
July	2	...	8	20
August	3	...	8	27

Thus, in eight months out of thirteen the mean time by the Russian route has been less than the mean time by the Turkish route.

HAZARA.

The Bombay papers give the following telegram from Oghee September 29:—"The head-quarters of the British forces were established here yesterday. The 19th Regiment marched in this morning, and the 6th Regiment and 2-25th Royal Artillery, with mortars and rockets, will arrive to-morrow, by which time the force will be complete. The heat here has been great, but rain having fallen the air is cooler. The troops continue very healthy. The reported departure of Feroze Shah, with one or two followers, for Cabul and Bokhara has been confirmed. Most of the Hussunzaies and independent Swatees have submitted. The bulk of the Hindustanee fanatics are at their old head-quarters at Tunjoie, but a few of them are on the banks of the Indus. The plans for their future movements are apparently still undecided. The Salarzais are stated to be willing to submit to the British authorities."

The Delhi Gazette learns from an Oghee letter of Sept. 18 that the first brigade to move towards the Black Mountain is half a troop and half a battery of Artillery, the Hazara Mountain Battery, 1st and 5th Ghorkhas, 19th Regiment B.I., 2nd and 20th Regiments N.I. A correspondent of the same paper writes thus from Hazara on Sept. 20:—"The 6th Royals marched from Abbottabad to Maunserah yesterday, and the 20th Punjab Infantry, under command of Lieut.-Colonel Brownlow, from Maunserah to Khakee, en route to the Soos-sal Pass to relieve the 24th Punjab Infantry, which goes on to Oghee. The 3rd Sikhs arrived at Khakee this morning. The 9th Bengal Cavalry and two batteries of Artillery, E 19 and 2-24, are en route for Abbottabad. The 19th Foot, 16th Bengal Cavalry, and Renny's Battery are still at Khakee, and likely to remain there for some day yet. Everything quiet in front."

An Abbottabad letter of the 20th Sept. says:—"We are only waiting now for a mortar battery from Meer, which is expected here daily, for all the preparations to be complete. The 6th Royals marched last Friday for Maunserah. The 3rd Sikhs have also moved on, and Abbottabad seems comparatively silent and deserted. Two companies of the 77th remain here to garrison the station. It is a very small force for the purpose; but a deal better than any native regiment in my poor prejudiced opinion. You will have heard, perhaps, by this time, that the 77th, with the exception of the two companies here, are ordered to Kohat. The 38th and 20th Hussars are to hold themselves in readiness to march, but whither nobody seems to know; perhaps up the Indus to Umb and Durbund, so as to effect a diversion on that side of the Black Mountain, and assist the friendly Rajah of Umb. A force in that direction via Hurrepore and Torbela would be useful, or via Hloti Murdan and Yusufzai."

Indian Public Opinion hears from Hazara, Sept. 22, that the general feeling is that the independent Swatees want peace; many of their influential Chiefs are now with the Commissioner. The Akazaies and Chuggurzaies are at present for war; they will probably be assisted by the Hindustanees, who are said to be crossing the Indus, fleeing from the wrath of the Pope of Swat. Nothing definitely settled as to the forward move.—Sept. 23.—There is nothing of importance at the Agror Camp. The independent Swatees are sending deputations to camp to sue for terms. The Hindustanees across the Indus are said to be in flight before the Akhoond's levies, and are not attempting to cross the river as a body. Rain has reduced the temperature greatly. Camps very healthy.

The Mofussilite understands on excellent authority that the object of the large force now assembled in Hazara is to disarm the country, to compel the pugnacious inhabitants to convert their swords into ploughshares, and their pistols into peashooters; rather a difficult matter, we fear, to accomplish. It is to be hoped that arms will not be left with these warlike tribes, under the impression that they will be used pacifically; but after all it will not prove of much consequence, for considering that Delhi was thoroughly disarmed in 1857-58, and that percussion rifle caps could be purchased in a Bunniah's shop lately, our system of "disarming" cannot be so perfect as it should be. Besides it is a well-known saying that cannon, swords, and match-locks are indigenous to the soil of the Punjab, so that it will be but labour in vain to collect only what shows above the surface.

A letter in the Pioneer gives the following account of the origin of the late disturbance:—About three years ago it was decided to have a survey made of Hazara, and the North-West Frontier Revenue Survey party from Murree (Colonel Johnstone's) was ordered to make it. As this survey proceeded, false reports were assiduously spread about the district, stating that Government intended taking away the hilly tracts from the inhabitants, and giving them to wood and grass contractors. Hence, by the time the operations had extended to Upper Hazara the chiefs began to grow suspicious, especially Ata Mahomed Khan of Agror, whose valley few Europeans had yet visited. No hostile demonstrations were, however, made till April, 1867. Two subalterns, Scott and Smith, were then conducting operations between Pukli and Agror, when one night a sentry was shot within a few paces of their tents. The chief in whose village the outrage was committed was heavily fined, but suspicion appears to have fallen on Ata Mahomed of Agror. The surveyors next entered Kaghan, and though at first annoyed by the chief, they managed to get along without molestation. Late in the season Colonel Johnstone himself entered Agror to carry on operations there, and the chief, though sulky and even insulting at times, was obliged to give such help as was considered necessary. But he took no pains to conceal his dislike for these operations; he further made himself, by his continued insolence and obstinate and repulsive manner, suspected by the civil authorities; and at length, when their forbearance was exhausted, the Deputy Commissioner went in July 1868 to Agror, and marked out a site for a police thannah. This the Chief still more resented; but it was too late to retract, and besides some check on his conduct had become absolutely necessary. So, in spite of his protestations and forebodings of evil, the necessary money for the thannah was sent under an escort of police to the village of Oghee, in Agror. The Deputy-Commissioner had but just returned to Abbottabad, when intelligence of the attack on the thannah arrived. He at once hastened out again with the 5th Gorkhas and Hughes's Mountain Battery, and was joined by some of the neighbouring chiefs and their retainers—among others by the young Chief of Umb. . . . The 2nd P.I. arrived on the 12th, and the force now began to act on the offensive. The enemy were attacked, routed, and driven with loss out of the village. The various survey parties were still in Kaghan, except Mr. Scott's, which was on the border of Ellahi, about forty miles from Agror, and between that valley and Kaghan. Here he was attacked, and only escaped after the retreat from the border by a steady march for two nights and a day through steep mountainous country and empty villages, for the passes to his right were nearly all occupied by the enemy. The other surveyors returned without molestation.

STATION TALK.

SIMLAH, Sept. 23.—Putting aside such little spurts—spurts of almost everyday occurrence—as that of the Amazais against the Umb villages the other day, an affair which might have occurred had there been no Hussunzai disturbances whatever, the probability is that the Trans-Indus tribes will give us no provocation. There is little question that the power and influence of the Akhoond of Swat are predominant over the majority of those tribes, and there is just as little doubt that the Akhoond has recently assumed towards us an attitude that is anything but that of active unfriendship. Indeed, the belief now is, as I have already told you, that while General Wilde is disposing of the Hussunzaies on one side of the river, the Akhoond will be found actively engaged on the other, scattering the fanatics of Sittana, his and our enemies, but hated by the Akhoond because of their being Wahabees. A rumour is just now prevalent on the frontier districts, and wears such an aspect of truth, that it has been flashed to Simlah, that the Sittana peoples are so well aware of the Akhoond's intention of attacking them, and so conscious of their own inability to withstand him, that many of them are preparing to cross over into our territory, with the view of throwing themselves on the mercy and protection of the British officials. This, however, your correspondent can only give as a rumour.

Sept. 26.—General Wilde's force will probably cross the frontier within less than a week. The 9th Bengal Cavalry, the last of the reinforcements, has arrived at Hurreepore, and there appears nothing likely to cause further delay. Simultaneously with General Wilde's onward move, British and native reinforcements will move west to Durbund on the Indus, to support the Khan of Umb, who with his Turnoulee tribesmen has, in defence of his own fief, as well as in concert with our forces at Oghee, proved himself a worthy descendant of the heroic Payudah Khan, his grandfather, who in the best days of Runjeet Sing contrived to preserve the independence of Umb and Turnoulee against the very best leaders—including the famous Hurree Sing—of that brave, astute, and rapacious conqueror. The present Khan, as was his father, is our feudatory; and most loyal fiefsmen, both father and son, have on all occasions proved themselves. The Khan has a force of about two thousand horse and foot of his own, and though he may not need our aid, it is as well he should be strengthened by British troops and levies; for Durbund commands an important Indus ferry, and the tracts of the Hussunzaies and Khan Kheyles (the foremost of the offenders against us) march, for some distance, with the boundary of Turnoulee. The troops now in Hazara, counting the reserves, number from 6,500 to 7,000 men. The delay that has taken place in bringing together this force has not been productive of any evil, and is considered by those most competent to form an opinion on the subject, to have materially tended to our advantage. There was no time lost in reinforcing the attacked or threatened frontier posts; troops were at once pushed up to Oghee (and similar advanced positions) from Rawul Pindee, the immediate reserve for Hazara. The posts were thus, without any delay whatever, made strong enough to defy any attack on them the offending tribes could possibly make. Thus, the new system of supporting threatening frontier posts, not by supports from other frontier posts, but by reinforcements from the organised reserves in the interior, has answered well in Hazara. The system is a new one; this is the first year of its adoption. It obviates the necessity hitherto felt of supporting a threatened post by troops drawn from the next or neighbouring posts, a plan admirably adapted for extending the conflagration along the entire frontier. But the reserve at Rawul Pindee was but adequate to putting the Hazara border in a defiantly defensible condition. For an advance across the frontier, a stronger force, with a reserve in proportion, became necessary. Such a force General Wilde has now under him; but the delay which furnishing it has caused has been productive of excellent results. The commissariat and carriage arrangements are now so fully completed and organised, that when once the advance is made, there will be nothing to stop the rapid and irresistible progress of the columns to carry out whatever may be the designs of Government. Then the weather is now every day becoming more and more favourable for military operations, and our European troops are in no danger of having to succumb to the sun of the northern valleys of Hazara—a fierce sun until October has come round. And while, ever since the strengthening of the advanced posts, we have been so strong in Northern Hazara as to defy any offensive movements on the part of the enemy, the gradual arrival of reinforcements has convinced the tribes of our determination to secure retribution for their insulting attack on our frontier thannah, and, gradually, one by one, the Jirgahs or Councils of all the tribes which did not participate in the attack on Oghee are coming in, eager to secure exemption from any portion of the punishment they know is to be dealt out. Several councils of tribes have thus presented themselves at the camp of the Commissioner; the Tillee Syuds, the Hussunzaies, the Ullai, &c., &c., amongst the number. But the consequences of the formidable military demonstration which has been made are not confined to Cis Indus; the Akhoond of Swat, hitherto so often quoted as the source of much of the excitement on the Eusufzai border, has taken alarm at the possibility of the Swat valley being attacked from the passes of Bonere, as well as by the Mallikhand and Mora passes from Peshawar, and the result is that he is now most actively exerting himself to achieve for us some of our most desired objects. The Salarzai Jirgah of the Bonerewals is consequently on its way to Hoti Murdan, to know our wishes; while hundreds of Swatees, after having expelled the Wahabee fanatics from Mulka and Tanjoie, are hunting them up the Indus, evidently determined to rout them out of their country.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MR. E. CLIVE BAXLEY, the Home Secretary, was to leave India in October, on three months' privilege leave.

REWARD FOR GOOD SERVICE.—The Chief of Umb has been granted by Sunnud the title of Nuwab Bahadoor, in acknowledgment of his deceased father's services during the Mutiny and his own valuable assistance against the insurgents in Hazara.

WEATHER AT SAUGOR.—We are glad to hear that rain at Saugor has been tolerably plentiful. It rained heavily all the night of the 19th and all day and night of the 20th, and was still pouring when our correspondent wrote on the 21st.—Delhi Gazette, Sept. 29.

EDUCATIONAL.—The following gentlemen to be members of the Local Committee of Public Instruction at Burrisaul, viz.:—Mr. Brown, Moulvie Dillawar Hossein Ahmed, B.A., and Sub-Assistant Surgeon Nocoor Chunder Banerjee.

INSPECTOR OF SCHOOLS.—The following educational appointment has been made:—Mr. J. Platts, Assistant Inspector of Schools, North-Western Provinces, to officiate as an Inspector of Schools in the Central Provinces, Northern Circle, until further orders.

LORD MAYO'S SUMMER ABODE.—The question of the annual migration to the Hills seems settled for the next year at all events. Lord Mayo has engaged Barnes' Court, formerly the Simla residence of so many Commanders-in-Chief, but lately desecrated by the "base uses" of the Adjutant-General's Office.—Pioneer.

MUNICIPAL COMMISSIONERS.—The following gentlemen to be Municipal Commissioners:—Mr. Hopkins, Major Searle, Dr. Macleod, Baboo Ram Chunder Mookerjee, and Baboo Mironjoy Roy. Mr. Hopkins to be also vice-chairman of the Municipal Commissioners for the town of Kishnaghur.

POLICE ALLOWANCES.—Under the provisions of Punjab Orders Nos. 149 and 150, of the 16th January last, Messrs. W. Haslett and P. Broadway, Assistant District Superintendents of Police of the 3rd grade, 2nd class, will draw Rs. 350 each per mensem, with effect from 1st August last.

THE MEINGOON MENGTHA.—On Saturday last H.M.'s steam-ship Kwang Tung, Captain F. Duncan, arrived from Port Blair with the Burmese Prince, the Meingoon Mengtha, whose presence in the Shan country for the last two years has been so great a source of vexation to the King.—Mofussilite, Sept. 19.

ALLOWANCES OF PUNJAB ASSISTANT COMMISSIONERS.—It is notified that in future a list will be published in the first or second Gazette in each month showing the names of assistant and deputy commissioners, &c., who become entitled to officiating allowances during the preceding month, and of those who have reverted to their substantive pay.

ARMSTRONG BREECHLOADERS.—It will interest many of our readers to know that it has been decided to arm all the artillery field batteries in India with Armstrong breechloaders.

DEATH OF MAJOR REVELEY.—We deeply regret to hear from Aden, under date September 4th, that Major W. Reveley, late Deputy Commissioner of Police for Calcutta, died at sea on the 30th of August. The Mongolia, on board of which Major Reveley was a passenger, left on the 15th of August.—Englishman.

SUTTEES IN THE RAJPOOTANA STATES.—The Government of India have under consideration the propriety of issuing stricter orders in the matter of Suttees occurring in the States of Rajpootana. This has become necessary in consequence of some of the chiefs having released persons concerned in a recent case of widow-burning.

TIME TO WRITE A BOOK.—An extension of leave for four months, without pay, has been granted by the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India to Mr. W. W. Hunter, of the Bengal Civil Service, to enable him to complete a Dictionary of the Non-Aryan languages of India, on which he is at present engaged.

MAGISTERIAL POWERS IN ASSAM.—The following assistant-commissioners are vested with the powers of a magistrate in Assam:—Lieutenant M. O. Boyd, Kamroop; Captain Blathwayt, in charge of the Sub-Division of Golaghat, Sebsaugor; Lieutenant J. Butler, Officiating Personal Assistant to the Commissioner of Assam.

MOVEMENTS IN THE N.W. PROVINCES.—A large exodus amongst civilians of the North-Western Provinces is expected at the end of the cold weather. Mr. Spankie, of the High Court, goes home sick; his place will not be filled up, we believe. Two judges come down to Allahabad on 2nd November. The others follow in January.—Friend of India, Sept. 24.

A RAILWAY TO THE NEILGHERRIES.—The proposal to construct a branch of the south-west line of the Madras Railway to the foot of the Neilgherries—from Coimbatore, that is, to Kullar—seems to have met with the approval of the Government of India. The Government has forwarded the paper on the subject to the Secretary of State, "with the recommendation that this branch should be considered on its own merits, and independent of the general question of Railway extension in India."

WARRANT GRADE PROMOTIONS.—The following promotions are made in the warrant grades of the Army Commissariat Department:—Permanent—Sub-Conductor Patrick Leahy, to be Conductor; Sergeant and Officiating Sub-Conductor John Routleff, to be Sub-Conductor, from 24th August, 1868, vice Conductor George Duncan, deceased. Temporary—Sergeant Edmond Hill, to be Acting Sub-Conductor, from 24th August, 1868, vice Acting Sub-Conductor Routleff, confirmed in that grade.

POLICE DEPARTMENT, PUNJAB.—The Honorable the Lieutenant-Governor is pleased to invest the following Assistant District Superintendents of Police with the powers of a magistrate, defined in section 6 of Act V. of 1861, within the limits of the general police district:—Mr. Charde, Lieutenant Nicholetts, Messrs. Smith, Jones, Christie, Ward, Stone, Turnbull, Kelly, Warburton, Holbrow, Mercer, Hatchell, Beattie, Marshall, Aldridge, O'Connor, Edwards, White, Teasdale, Allsopp, Haslett, Broadway, and Tronson.

EXAMINATION COMMITTEE.—The Hon. the Lieutenant-Governor is pleased to appoint the undermentioned officers a committee for conducting the half-yearly examination of officers seeking admission to the Staff Corps:—Mr. C. W. W. Alexander, Inspector of Schools, Lahore Circle, President; Mr. J. Frizelle, Officiating Judge, Small Cause Court, Lahore, and Mr. H. S. Cunningham, Government Advocate, members. The examination will take place on Monday, the 26th October, 1868, and following days.

SIR G. COUPER.—Our Judicial Commissioner, Sir George Couper, we are informed, has been offered a seat in the Imperial Legislative Council. We are glad to think that our little province will be so strongly represented by two of its highest officials in Council. Sir George is a perfect gentleman, and a thoroughly conscientious man. We have no doubt the best interests in Oude will find in him a most powerful advocate. Mr. St. George Tucker, we understand, is to occupy Sir George Couper's place as Judicial Commissioner.—Lucknow Times, Sept. 26.

MILITARY LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—Lieutenant J. F. Brough (doing duty with the Eurasian Battery), to remain in Calcutta, to study the native languages, from the 16th October, 1868, to the 16th February, 1869, in extension of privilege leave; Captain Constable (doing duty 7th Native Infantry), to Calcutta, to study the native languages, from the 1st to the 15th October, in extension; Ensign Brookes, 1st Battalion, 5th Foot (2nd Wing Subaltern, on probation, 33rd Native Infantry), to Calcutta, from the 1st October to the 30th November, in extension, to study the native languages.

THE BRITISH BURMAN FRONTIER.—The establishment of police posts and patrols along the Shan and Karen borders has resulted in the complete suppression of the raids which were formerly so frequent along this frontier. With the lessening of gang robberies trade has increased, and well-established routes from the Shan and Karen country to Moulmain have been opened. This has resulted in giving a new impulse to the timber trade of the port. A considerable number of traders from Yunnan, and the independent hill tribes have found their way to Moulmain.

THE WEATHER AT JUBBULPORE.—A letter from Jubbulpore informs us that heavy rain has fallen there during the past week, and that, as the rapidly succeeding currents appear to be passing down from the North, the welcome bounty is doubtless being shared in by the length and breadth of Central India. The incalculable benefits which these showers will confer both on the crops as well as on the public health, provided of course they are adequate, are too manifest to require mention. But there is where our anxiety lies—in the insufficiency of the showers.

TRADE WITH LADAKH.—The Central Asian trade by Ladakh has been brisk this season. The export trade to the interior was insignificant up to the end of July, but few traders return home until later in the season. During the month of July merchandise valued at Rs. 17,880 passed through Leh. Half of this value was represented by Buzzazi cotton goods. The other imports of importance were spices and copper vessels. Only 20 maunds of Pushim, valued at Rs. 1,060 came, in. The export tea trade has been extremely dull: only 23 maunds, 23 ceers of the Lhassa brick tea have passed through. The exports amounted to Rs. 4,366.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—The Times of India has reason to believe that the Commander-in-Chief, Sir William Mansfield, intends to remain on the frontier throughout the cold weather season; and we are able to confirm the statement, already made public, that there was no difference between the Viceroy and the Commander-in-Chief regarding the force to be employed against the frontier tribes. The presence of Sir William Mansfield at the scene of action refutes the notion which has been bruited abroad that Lord Napier of Magdala would take command of a strong army on the North-West frontier.

THE EFFECTS OF SMOKING "DATURA."—From Cuttack we have an observation which well deserves the special attention of all medical men. It is one which seems to show that the habitual smoking of datura, though apparently in moderation, leads to cerebral derangement of a very serious character. The case is that of a European, who had recourse to the drug as a remedy for paroxysms of asthma, which, it certainly relieved. Though always having enjoyed good health in other respects, this man became violently maniacal; and there seems little room to doubt that the datura was the cause. Natives, it may be observed, are firmly convinced of its action in this respect. As datura is a popular remedy for asthma, and one that has received the sanction of the medical profession, the question assumes considerable importance.

MAP OF TURKISTAN.—The Government of India has issued a new map of Turkistan, in four sheets, by Lieutenant-Colonel J. T. Walker, Superintendent of the Great Trigonometrical Survey. The Friend of India describes the work as follows:—"It is an exquisite specimen of cartography by the photozincographic process, and is in all respects superior to the map of 1866, satisfactory as that was then considered to be. Colonel Walker has made use of the latest Russian surveys, up to the end of 1867, specially a map by A. Ilyin, St. Petersburg, received in India only last month. Colonel Walker's four sheets show the territories adjoining Russian and Independent Turkistan, as far as Meerut and Nynce Tal to the south, Meshed and Seistan to the west, Lake Balkash to the north, and Kuldja, Yarkand, and the Chinese Empire to the east. The map is on the scale of fifty miles to the inch."

LEGISLATION.—At the meeting of the Governor-general's Council at Simla on the 10th September, the Hon. Colonel Norman moved for leave to introduce a Bill to consolidate and amend the Articles of War for the government of her Majesty's native forces. He said that this measure would have been brought before the Council by the Hon. Major-general Sir Henry Durand, but for his unavoidable absence, and he (Colonel Norman) was authorised to state that the Bill had received Sir Henry Durand's entire concurrence. The bulk of the existing Articles was contained in an Act passed in 1861, but this Act had subsequently been amended twice—namely, by Acts V. of 1863 and XXVI. of 1865. Considering that the Act of 1861 had been passed not long after the suppression of the Mutiny, it was matter of surprise and satisfaction that so few changes of substance had been found necessary. Some such changes, however, were desirable, and it was thought better to embody them in an Act consolidating the whole law on the subject than to add a fourth to the three Acts in which that law was now contained. The Bill had been prepared with great care in the Military Department. It was then submitted to the Legislative Department, and hon. members would find that the opportunity had been taken, not only to improve the arrangement of this large and somewhat complicated body of military law, but also to make numerous verbal alterations which would have the effect of rendering more precise the description of the crimes punishable under the proposed Act. Care had been taken, however, to avoid falling into the error of over-technical particularity. The Bill would be accompanied by a statement of objects and reasons, which would afford the Council and the public full information as to all the changes of any importance which the Bill proposed to effect. The Bill was concurred in by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, and careful attention had been paid by its framers to the communications on the subject which had been received from the Governments of Bombay and Madras. The motion was put and agreed to.

INSTALLATION OF THE RAJAH OF MYSORE.—The Maharajah of Mysore was installed with all due ceremony at noon on the 23rd of September. There has been a great desire on the part of his Court and subjects that this enthronement should be allowed during the present Dusserah, and sanction was accordingly given to the proceeding.

CIVIL FURLONGS.—The following civilians obtained furlough to Europe on m.c. under the new rules in September:—Mr. Dewes, Executive Engineer, 2nd grade, Julpigoree Division, for one year; Mr. J. C. Dodgson, Officiating Civil and Sessions Judge at Jessore, for one year, with the usual subsidiary leave preparatory. The following officers reported their departure from India per steamship Mooltan, which was left at sea by the pilot on the 31st August:—Mr. Sutherland, C.S.; Mr. Adams, Bengal Police. The under-mentioned officers of the Telegraph Department, proceeding to England on special duty, reported their departure on the dates specified opposite their respective names:—Mr. Superintendent Blissett, 21st August, 1868; Mr. Superintendent Lane, 17th August, 1868; Mr. Superintendent Thompson, 1st September, 1868; Mr. Assistant-superintendent Burke, 15th August, 1868.

THE CROPS IN BENGAL.—The Board of Revenue's reports on the crops in Bengal up to the end of August give favourable accounts of twenty-seven districts. In Palamow the prospect is gloomy, in Malda, Patna, Gya, Shahabad, and Burdwan the outturn of rice will be short. In Hooghly the destruction is very great from the late inundation, but if the weather progresses well, the season will not be one of distress. In Howrah little produce is expected this year. In the southern portion of Midnapore great mischief has been done, and some distress in the cold weather is anticipated. Irrecoverable damage has been done over the greater part of the metropolitan country, the Twenty-four Pergunnahs. The rice crop will be a failure over two-thirds of the whole district. Preparations are set on foot on an extensive scale, and relief has already for weeks been in operation at one place.

"ETTU BRUTE!"—Amid all the honours and rewards that have been dealt with no niggardly hand for the Abyssinian Expedition, there is one class, and only one, which has been altogether overlooked. Considering the nature of the campaign, that there was really no fighting worth speaking of, and that the glory consisted in surmounting physical obstacles, the claims of the class to which we refer are especially strong, seeing that without their well-sustained efforts the successful results which rewarded the labours of the force could not have been sustained. We refer to the mules, and are glad to hear that in consideration of their eminent services her Majesty has been pleased to direct that on every anniversary of the fall of Magdala each is to receive an extra seer of gram. Descriptive rolls of the animals entitled to this distinction are to be made out in duplicate and forwarded through the "usual channels" to the War-office.—Delhi Gazette.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.—We have already been prepared by our Simla correspondent for the painful accounts that are now reaching us from the North-West Provinces. The Delhi Gazette receives "reports of continued and increasing distress from all sides." Rain, as we have heard, has fallen at Benares, Allahabad, and Cawnpore, but it did not reach as far as Agra. Villagers are there selling their bullocks for what they fetch, parting with them for a quarter of their value; and the scarcity is aggravated by the constant accumulation of people from distant districts, who flock thither, vainly seeking a land of plenty, where all is scarcity. Our contemporary states that a band of 400 the other day passed through Agra from Ajmere and Marwar. They said they were going on to the Meerut district, "to look for food." Rain has fallen in some districts during the last day or two, so that the prospect is improved.—Times of India.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE ON FEMALE NORMAL SCHOOLS.—A despatch from the Secretary of State for India to the Governor-General of India in Council, dated 12th Aug., 1868, has the following remarks:—"Your Excellency in Council has determined to give the experiment of female education in India a fair trial, by assigning to each of the Governments of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay an annual sum of Rupees 12,000 for five years, for the establishment of Female Normal Schools in the three Presidency towns. Your Excellency in Council considers that, in a cause in which success so greatly depends on the exertions of the native community, the sum above mentioned constitutes an adequate contribution on the part of the State. I entirely concur in the views of your Excellency in Council, and approve of the proceedings reported in your despatch. I desire that the most careful attention may be paid to this experiment while in progress, and that I may from time to time be kept informed as to the results which may be achieved."

AN APPEAL TO LAW.—The Christian and only son of the late Baboo Prosunno Coomar Tadore, C.S., has instituted a suit to upset the will of his father, which grants to a nephew already enjoying an annual income of £20,000 a further sum of £40,000 a year. The claim of the son is equitable, and his chance of success is so considerable that shrewd Bengalees say the father must have, after all, wished to give his son the property while dying in the odour of Brahminical sanctity; for so good a lawyer would never surely have made a will contrary to English statute law, attempting to tie up or influence the destination of his property for a century. If the will is upset the legacies to the University and several charitable societies, as well as to the idol, will be void, though the son may consider it his duty to carry out his father's wishes; but as the decision is sure to be appealed to the Privy Council, speculation is premature. For the next few years the lawyers will have the best of it.—Friend of India.

ARMS AND ACCOUTREMENTS.—Under instructions from Government, the following orders are issued for the guidance of officers commanding British regiments returning to England, in substitution of general order No. 303, dated 30th December, 1867, which is cancelled:—When a regiment is under orders for England, and after the volunteering for other regiments has closed, all arms in possession in excess of the number allowed for the full strength of the corps are to be surveyed as laid down in Memo., dated 28th of May, 1867, of the Chief Inspector of Musketry, and returned into the nearest arsenal or magazine. Regiments will take with them to England the number of arms allowed for their established strength; all in excess of what are required for actual present strength being packed in arm-chests (which should be obtained by indent from the Ordnance Department in ample time beforehand), and taken with the regiments to the port of embarkation. Regiments will take with them to the port of embarkation the ammunition in pouch and the one set of accoutrements belonging to each man; all in excess being returned into the nearest ordnance store, before leaving their stations. On arriving at the port, and before embarkation, all ammunition in pouch, and such accoutrements as may have become in excess of actual strength, owing to casualties en route, are to be returned into store; arm chests being obtained for packing the arms which have so become in excess, as they must be taken with the regiments. Ammunition is provided on board her Majesty's Indian troop ships for the use of corps embarking on them.

MILITARY FURLONGS.—The following officers have obtained furloughs:—Lieutenant Southey, 10th Foot, to the Cape of Good Hope, for fifteen months; Second Captain Sexton, Adjutant Royal Artillery, Aden District, to England, for fifteen months, from date of embarkation; Lieut. Daubeny, 36th Foot, to remain in England, on urgent private affairs, from April 28 to October 28, 1869, in extension; Lieutenant Brehon, 11th Foot, to Calcutta, for one month, from September 15, and thence to England, for twelve months, from date of embarkation; Lieutenant Grimes, attached to the 9th N.I., to Calcutta, for one month, from September 1, preparatory to applying for furlough to Europe, on private affairs; Assistant-surgeon Parsons, officiating in medical charge 38th N.I., to Calcutta, for one month, from date of availing himself of it, preparatory to proceeding on furlough to Europe (in cancellation of the leave granted on the 22nd July last); Major King, Commandant 13th N.I., to Calcutta, for one month, from October 20, preparatory to applying for furlough to Europe, for two years, on private affairs; Lieutenant Jones, Assist. Commissioner, Central Provinces, for two years, being entitled to furlough; Captain Mackesy, Executive Engineer, Fyzabad Division, Department of Public Works, Oudh, for two years; Lieut. Grimes, General List, Infantry, for two years; Surgeon-major Playfair, M.D., from Aug. 25; Assistant-surgeon Mayer, of the Madras Medical Establishment, for twenty months, on m.c.; Second Captain Thackeray, V.C., of the Royal Engineers, Executive Engineer, Meerut Division, Department Public Works, for two years.

BENGAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.—At the last meeting of the Bengal Asiatic Society a communication was read from Captain Cole, the superintendent of Coorg, giving a description of the fine Cromlechs lately discovered in this country. These Cromlechs are generally under burrows, but sometimes also under large mounds covered with trees and brushwood, which had evidently been untouched for centuries. All the Cromlechs have square or segmental apertures, which the natives always point out as a proof that these structures used to form the abodes of the pygmy race. As urns are invariably found in these apertures, it is probable they may have been used for purposes of sepulture. Several antique-shaped urns and pots, composed of thick red and black pottery, apparently highly glazed, some four feet, and some tripods have been discovered. Rude iron weapons have also been found in the chambers. A brief account of the Kerahis, an aboriginal tribe in the hill tracts of Maunbhoom, by Mr. V. Ball, was also read; and an interesting account of the Aboo lion, which is now fast becoming extinct, by Dr. George King. An announcement was also made that a further instalment of the "History of Burmah," by Sir A. P. Phayre, in continuation of that published in the thirty-second volume of the society's journal, had been received. In that paper the author traced the history of the Burmah race from the earliest times to the arrival of the two sons of the King of Tagrung at the site of the present town of Prome. The national chronicles from that time proceed with the history of the monarchy established at Tuare Kheltara, to the east of Prome. In the present paper the author condenses the principal events of that monarchy, and of the succeeding dynasties of Burmah kings, which reigned at Pagan, on the Irrawaddy River, about 180 miles above Prome.

CIVIL LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following leaves of absence were granted in September:—Mr. French, Assistant Superintendent of Police, Kamroop, for three months; Lieutenant Grey, Assistant

EXAMINATION IN NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The undermentioned officer has been examined in the Tamil language:—Capt. Dickinson, Staff Corps, Madras, passed the elementary test. On the report of the committee for the examination of assistants, the following gentlemen are declared to have qualified according to the higher standard:—Messrs. J. Kelsall, J. Cameron, and J. B. Jones.

MILITARY CHANGES.—The Supreme Government have telegraphed to the Madras Government to send one cavalry and four infantry regiments to occupy Saugor permanently, and to relieve Bengal troops. The Madras Times thinks it probable that the Madras regiments now in the Bombay Presidency will be ordered to march immediately to the Central Provinces, and that the contemplated reduction of the local Madras army will be postponed.

GENERAL HAINES.—We learn from the Madras Times that Gen. Gregory Haines, brother of Gen. F. P. Haines, in command of the Mysore division of the Madras army, has been appointed by the Secretary of State to be guardian to the young Maharajah of Mysore, on an allowance, including house rent, of Rs. 3,000 per mensem. The gallant and lucky friend of Sir Stafford Northcote is sixty-two years of age. He was formerly in the Mysore Commission.

MOVEMENTS OF THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, accompanied by the Adjutant General, Quartermaster General, Military Secretary, and one aide-de-camp, has left Ootacamund for the western coast, with the view of inspecting the troops at Quilon, Cannanore, and Calicut, after which he will return to Ootacamund on the 7th proximo. The remainder of the head-quarter staff will remain in Ootacamund until his Excellency's return.—Madras Times, Sept. 28.

THE KEONGHUR DISTURBANCES.—The five companies of the 41st Regiment Native Infantry, located at Perambore, consisting of four commissioned officers, five non-commissioned officers, and three hundred and eighty rank and file, have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness to embark for Gopaulpore en route to Cuttack, on the coasting steamer India, expected here on the 27th September; the Collector of Ganjam has been directed to provide carts for the conveyance of their baggage to Cuttack.—Madras Times.

CIVIL LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The undermentioned gentlemen have obtained leave of absence under the new rules:—Mr. Thomas, Civil and Session Judge of Calicut, for six months, on medical certificate; Rev. W. A. Liston, Junior Chaplain of the Church of Scotland, Madras, privilege leave for two months, from the date of quitting his station. Mr. Thomas, Civil and Session Judge, of Calicut, for six months; Reverend William Alexander Liston, Junior Chaplain of the Church of Scotland, Madras, privilege leave for two months, from the date of quitting his station.

MILITARY LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—Lieutenant-colonel Fulton, of the Staff Corps, is granted an extension for three months of the leave to Tasmania, on medical certificate; Lieutenant Montgomerie, 28th brigade Royal Artillery, from July 24 to November 24, in extension; Lieutenant Saxton, from July 28, 1868, to November 28, 1868; Lieutenant Sale, from July 24, 1868, to January 20, 1869, in extension; Lieutenant Lucas, 1st battalion 1st Foot, from September 1, or date of departure, for three months, to Neilgherries, on sick certificate; Lieutenant-colonel Smith, 36th N.I., from date of departure to December 31, to Poona, on medical certificate; Captain Miller, Staff Corps, attached to 16th N.I., from date of departure, to Madras, on sick certificate.

GOOD BREAD AT LAST.—By the ship Art Union, due here next month, the Government are expecting two baking machines, one of 20-horse power for the Madras Bakery, the other of 15-horse power for Bangalore. It is believed that by this machinery not only will ample supplies of good bread be obtained for the troops in garrison, but that there will be no difficulty in supplying the general public also to some extent. The bread manufactured by native bakers is often so insipid, gritty, and unsightly that the intention of Government to turn an honest penny by supplying the public with more wholesome food is very commendable. The bakers, whose occupation will be gone, should be left to the horrid doom of eating their own bread.

MAGISTERIAL POWERS.—The following officers are empowered to hold the preliminary inquiry into criminal cases triable by the court of session or high court, to commit or hold to bail persons to take their trial before such court of session or high court, and to exercise all the powers necessary for that purpose, viz.:—Messrs. Luttman-Johnson, assistant magistrate and collector, Nuddea; Vowell, assistant magistrate and collector, Jessore; Power, assistant magistrate and collector, Bheerbhoom; Kembel, officiating magistrate and collector, Sylhet, leave for two months; Forbes, assistant superintendent police, Hooghly, leave for one month; Lewis, officiating judge, Dinapore, leave for two months; and Wyer, officiating joint magistrate and deputy collector, Purneah, leave for three months. The following assistant commissioners are vested with the powers of a magistrate in Assam, viz.:—Lieut. Boyd, Kamroop; Capt. Blathwayt, in charge of the sub-division of Golaghat, Sebsaugor; Lieut. Butler, officiating personal assistant to the Commissioner of Assam; Mr. H. A. C. Wroughton, to officiate temporarily as district superintendent of police, Kamroop. Lieut. Boyd, assistant commissioner of Kamroop, is vested with the powers to try cases under Act XIII. of 1859.

FURLONGS.—The undermentioned officers are permitted to proceed to Europe, m.c., under new rules:—Major Fairlie, 2nd in command and Squadron Officer 1st Regiment Light Cavalry, for two years, to embark from Bombay; Captain Campbell, 1st Wing Subaltern 23rd Regiment Light Infantry, for twenty months, and to embark from Madras; Lieutenant-Colonel Fulton, of the Staff Corps, is granted an extension for three months of the leave to Tasmania; Captain J. Creagh, 1st battalion 1st Foot, to England, overland, from date of embarkation; Captain Kirby, 19th Foot, to England, via the Cape, from date of embarkation; Captain Swinton, 1st Madras Light Cavalry, thirty days, from date of departure, to proceed to Bombay on m.c., preparatory to obtaining a furlough to Europe; Lieutenant West, Royal Horse Artillery, to proceed to England for the purpose of going through the long course of instruction in gunnery, commencing on January 1, 1869; Lieutenant Warren, Royal Horse Artillery, to proceed to England with a similar view, under orders from H.E. the Commander-in-Chief in India. These officers will proceed in sufficient time to admit of their arriving home in December next, their services being available, if necessary, for duty with troops on the voyage.

THE TRIGONOMETRICAL SURVEY.—Some of the gaps in the survey maps of the Madras Presidency are likely to be soon filled up. They seem to have been caused by the omission to survey tracts of Zemindary land and of Government waste land, excluded by the demarcation, as not likely to be taken up for cultivation for many years; and although the Board of Revenue consider that the maps as now prepared are sufficient for purely revenue purposes, it appears to them as in the highest degree unadvisable not to take advantage of the present survey to secure a complete map of each district. This, Colonel Priestley assures them, can be done now at a moderate cost, and without in any way impeding or delaying the Revenue and district boundaries have not yet been authoritatively laid down. In Salem, for example, the boundary with Mysore on the north and west is not yet fixed. In Tinnevely the same remark applies as regards the Travancore frontier, which is not even laid down on the maps in places where there is no dispute regarding it. The talook boundaries are not laid down, and where several Zemindaries are in juxtaposition, they, together with adjoining Government waste, appear as one block without any definition of their respective interior boundaries. In urging the board remarked that it "is needless to enlarge on the importance of the completeness of maps in a country like India, where the Government have so many interests in the land. The value of such information was insisted on by the Court of Directors in their letter in the Statistical Department, dated 23rd July, 1856, No. 2, and instructions given for supplying the omissions as Zemindary boundaries should be fully surveyed. At this present moment the area of the different districts is not accurately known, nor that of many of the largest proprietary estates. A good topographical map is an imperial necessity, and the board are of opinion that if this opportunity is neglected, the Government will have to incur a much larger outlay, the purpose." The Government fully concur with the board's views, and have requested the Superintendent of the Revenue Survey to submit proposals for carrying out their suggestion.

Bombay.

THE PERSIAN GULF AT REST.

Mahomed bin Kuleef, late Chief of Bahrein, is a fugitive and outlaw; his fort, war vessels, and ordnance are destroyed; the demands of the Bombay Government on Bahrein and its marauding ally Gunter, in respect of the plunder of the traders of Abbotabace, have been complied with to the full, and once more there is security for all henceforth in the Arabian side of the Persian Gulf. Such, in brief, is the result of the much-battled cruise of H.M.'s steamship Vigilant, which left Bombay about ten weeks ago, in response to a requisition for armed assistance made on this Government by Colonel Pelly, the British Resident of Bushire and Agent in the Gulf. The occasion for the request will be fresh in the recollection of our readers. The said Mahomed of Bahrein, an old acquaintance of Colonel Pelly's—for the two had given each other much trouble aforetime—had fallen upon certain Banian traders and other peaceable "British subjects" of sorts, who mostly resided in the little maritime State of Abbotabace, and had fleeced them of goods and money to the tune of several lakhs. In this the brigand of Bahrein had been cordially aided by the neighbouring maritime chief of Gunter. These lawless proceedings, having a great tendency to become contagious, were regarded by Colonel Pelly with much anxiety, and he proceeded very promptly to demand that a stop should be put to them, and that reparation should be made to the sufferers. For the first of these demands Colonel Pelly's moral influence had sufficed; but to ensure restitution and prevention more weighty arguments were needed. These last that active officer would no doubt have applied at once to the case of Bahrein had it not been for an unlucky oversight on the part of those who should have equipped the Sinde, a small steamer of the Bombay marine, used by Colonel Pelly as a despatch boat. This vessel was duly provided with powder—sufficient, no doubt, to blow up the whole fort of Bahrein, but there were neither shot nor shell on board; in default of which Mahomed, the then successful rover, felt himself at liberty to defer acceding to the demand for restitution of spoil. Hence the Resident found himself constrained to pepper the Sheikh with remonstrances and threats, while weary months were consumed in tedious endeavours to obtain the aid of a Royal navy vessel, the whole squadron on this station being with the Commodore at Annesley Bay. For several months the requisition of the Resident in the Gulf, and, if we mistake not, those both of the Bombay and Supreme Government, were slighted by the naval authorities; and when Commodore Heath sailed away to his new station, on the coast of Africa, he gave a tardy intimation that a vessel should be sent when the season became suitable for operations in the Gulf. The Indian Government then supported Sir Seymour Fitzgerald in ordering Captain Brown, R.N., of H.M.'s Vigilant, to proceed to the Gulf, and all the business has been got through full two months before any ship would have been available under the regulations of the Admiralty.

Scarcely any details of the operations in the Gulf since the arrival there of the Vigilant are yet to hand. It is not likely there can be much interest attaching to them; but the general results, of which we have sufficient account, are very complete and satisfactory. All the demands of the Resident have been acceded to, and additional guarantees have been taken for the maintenance of maritime peace. To this end it was found needful to use force only against the Chief of Bahrein, whose defences and munitions of war were disposed of as already described. Nothing is said about Guntter. Probably he disgorged the Banians' piece-goods and ruppes before coercion could be applied. For anything that appears he may have joined with all the rest of the chiefs, who at last made common cause before the Resident, in denouncing Sheik Mahomed as the head and front of the offending. He it was, they all aver, who instigated the plunder and piracy, and as he had fled, refusing to meet Colonel Pelly, there was nothing for it but to take the word and bonds of those present that peace should be kept for the future. The chief men of Bahrein agreed that the Sheikh who had fled should be cast out henceforth, and that his brother and the leading chiefs should alone rule in the island. It remains to be seen how this arrangement will stand the test of those replies and protests which, in one shape or other, will some day be put in by the fugitive. Undoubtedly it was the best plan that could be adopted at the time, and we are inclined to think that the troublesome Sheikh was exceptionally fierce amongst the valiant or reckless tribes of the Gulf. There is reason to hope that commerce is now making its inherently pacifying influence felt in the Gulf, and that the thorough though tardily applied punishment inflicted on this turbulent chief will go far to reassure the traders and pearlfishers for a long time to come.

SIR ALEXANDER GRANT.

The department of Public Instruction has now, by the labours of Sir Alexander Grant himself and his two predecessors, Mr. Erskine and the late Mr. Howard, been so well organised, that "good men and true," capable of carrying forward what has so well been begun, may be readily found either within the ranks of the Civil Service or without. Nor will Government have much difficulty in getting another Vice-Chancellor, though the list to select from is a small one. What it will have difficulty in finding for the office is a gentleman himself distinguished for his attainments as a scholar, experienced in the work of imparting instruction in those liberal studies necessary to the higher education; intimately acquainted with the University systems of Europe in their various forms and manifestations; and bringing all his learning, knowledge, and experience to aid in giving life and strength to an infant institution, only recently called into existence by the State, and jealously guarding its privileges in a very unequal struggle to maintain its independence in its own sphere, and prevent its becoming a mere register of the edicts of Government. To find a person with these qualifications for the office of Vice-Chancellor of the Bombay University will indeed be difficult, yet all are possessed in an eminent degree by the gentleman we are now about to part with. It is now eight years since we had occasion to congratulate ourselves on the arrival amongst us of Sir Alexander Grant to aid in the work of education in this Presidency. He was appointed in October, 1860, by the Government of Sir George, Clerk to the Professorship of History and Political Economy in the Elphinstone College, with the reversion of the Principalship on the retirement of Dr. Harkness. The effect of his teaching, management, and influence with the students was rapidly made apparent, and in the course of a year or two he had become a power amongst us in all that related to collegiate education and the work of the University. On the retirement of Dr. Harkness in 1862 he became Principal of the Elphinstone College. At an early stage of his connection with collegiate education in Bombay Sir Alexander Grant put his finger on the weak part of our educational system, the inefficiency of the elementary and higher schools at that time throughout the Presidency. In one of his earliest reports he said—"The least satisfactory portion of my work has been that spent on the first year students. This fact of course reflects on the condition of the Central School and other schools from which we obtain our supply of students. It is needless to say that the efficiency of the Elphinstone College is entirely dependent on the higher schools of the Presidency. If they send us badly-grounded students, our time is wasted in teaching what ought to have been taught at school. And all hope of extension of the number in the college depends on the schools being able to prepare a large number of boys so as to render them fit for college instruction." To improve the character of these higher schools was a work which engaged the attention of both Sir Alexander Grant and Mr. Howard, and the result of their exertions has been evidenced by the increasing number of students that have every year come forward to be tested by the University examinations. It is to the influence of Sir Alexander Grant's character and the success of his teaching that the Elphinstone College and University have of late risen so rapidly in favour with so many influential natives; and there can be no doubt that it was mainly through his influence that the munificent benefactions of Mr. Cowasjee Jehanghier to both the College and the University were procured. On the resignation of Mr. Howard, in June, 1865, Sir Alexander Grant succeeded to the office of Director of Public Instruction; he had two years before been appointed Vice-Chancellor of the University, which office he resigned when he proceeded on a short furlough to England in 1865, but was again reappointed in the same year on the death of Mr. Justice Kinloch Forbes, and has held the office ever since. There can be no better testimony to the value of Sir Alexander Grant's services to the cause of education amongst us than the fact that he should be in possession of the two most important offices that can be held in connection therewith—and that in each case he is looked upon by common consent as the right man in the right place.—Bombay Gazette, Sept. 26.

STATION TALK.

NERIAD, Sept. 21.—A pretty large gathering of the inhabitants of this place, consisting chiefly of Desais, Pateedars, bankers, dealers and others, took place on Saturday last at the Banyan Mahajuns' dhurmasala, to consider and adopt a petition to the Legislative Council of Bombay against the City Surveys Bill. The petition embodies a strong but respectfully worded protest on the part of the people against the principle involved in the Bill. After calling the Council's attention to the circumstance that sufficient time is not allowed to the people in the Mofussil to understand the general scope of measures before the Council, and to express their views on the subject, the petition proceeds to show the objectionable character of the Bill in respect of its several provisions. Great stress is laid on the circumstance that by seeking to confirm the rights of owners of lands situated in towns and cities, the Bill establishes a principle of State interference with private rights and private property which has never obtained in this country under any previous Government. It unsettles people's minds in respect of lands which from generation to generation have come to be possessed and enjoyed as a matter of course, without any questions having been raised or doubts expressed as to the rights of private proprietorship. Similar petitions, I hear, have been forwarded from Broach, Surat, and Ahmedabad. The select committee will thus have ample work before it, in the way of reviewing the different arguments for and against the proposed measure, and to report upon the advisability or otherwise of placing it on the statute book of the country. You are perhaps aware that Neriad is one of those talookas where cultivation has reached its extreme limit, there being over 90 per cent. of land under actual culture. One hardly meets with a single extensive tract of land lying waste. Even the ground set apart for the grazing of cattle is eagerly sought after for the purpose of being broken up for cultivation. The recent monetary crisis over the Presidency has affected the value of land in Bombay, but here it is remarkably steady, and likely to be further increased by the increased facilities of railway communication. The principal crops raised in this talooka are cereals, especially bajree, joway, rice, gram dal, tobacco, cotton, sugarcane, &c. The late heavy rains, besides doing a great deal of injury to the houses in the town (six hundred being reported to have been pulled down or otherwise injured), causing a loss estimated at about Rs. 50,000 has seriously affected the crops, some of which have been replanted (the previous plantations being washed away by the rains), in the hope that with a fresh fall of rain they would soon grow up. In this hope the ryots have been completely disappointed; ever since the late floods hardly a drop of rain has fallen in this or the Ahmedabad Zilla, and the extensive tracts of land replanted with cereals and other crops are suffering badly from a want of rain. Calculating on a short supply, dealers have already raised the price of grain for January delivery. The price of new bajree is raised from Rs. 19 to Rs. 28 per kulsee of sixteen maunds. The small natural reservoirs of water have dried up one by one. It is a pity to find that the talooka, with the richest land under cultivation, possesses such wretched artificial means of collecting the abundance of natural rain water which heaven kindly pours upon it. No extensive tanks or ponds are to be found where the late superfluous water could be collected, and which would be invaluable to the ryots in a time of scarcity. The result is that the cultivators have fallen back upon well-irrigation, to which they resort during winter and summer for raising dry crops.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

DEATH OF A LADY AT POONAH.—The Bombay Gazette regrets to announce the death, after a brief illness, of Mrs. Oliphant, the wife of the Collector of Poonah. The loss of this young and accomplished lady will be lamented wherever she was known.

FLOODS IN UPPER SINDH.—Upper Sindh has not been exempted from the disasters that have been current in the other provinces. The Bigree canal has inundated some 7,000 beegahs of cultivated land, and destroyed the crops. The Jowarees was fortunately so far advanced as to be able to stand out of the water, and some 5,000 beegahs of that grain will be safe. House property to the amount of Rs. 6,000 or Rs. 7,000 has been damaged in Jehanpore, and the local jails in several instances were destroyed. Colonel Phayre promptly despatched Mr. W. H. Bolton to Kasmore to arrange for relief.

ARRIVALS FROM EUROPE.—The undermentioned officers returned to duty, by permission of the Secretary of State for India, on the 25th September, 1868:—Major Macauley, Staff Corps; Surgeon Glen, Bombay Medical Establishment.

OFFICIAL ITEMS.—The Superintendents of Police on the G. I. P. and B. B. and C. I. Railways are appointed Deputy Commissioners of Police in the city of Bombay. Mr. R. H. Showell, second magistrate of police, returned from England by the last mail steamer, and resumed charge of his duties at the Mazagon Police Court.

EXAMINATIONS.—The undermentioned officers are reported to have passed the required examination in Hindustani, according to the Lower Standard:—Lieuts. Walker and Hewitt, Royal Horse Artillery; Lieut. Morgan, Royal Artillery; and Capt. Madan, 49th Foot. The undermentioned officer is reported to have passed the required examination in Hindustani, according to the Higher Standard:—Lieut. Humfrey, 2nd Belooch Regiment.

CARWAR.—A European vessel is about to sail from this harbour to Carwar, to take in there 7,000 bales of Dharwar cotton. From that port the ship will sail direct to her destination. The saving of time effected by the vessel between waiting here for the cotton to be brought up by pattimars and going down to Carwar, taking in her cargo, and sailing thence direct to Europe, must be nearly a month. Were there but a railway to convey European goods up from Carwar to the Nizam's territory and Western Madras, the saving alike to the import and export trade would be immense.—Times of India.

THE BOMBAY BANK COMMISSION.—The members of the Bank Commission left Bombay by the mail of the 26th September. It will be impossible, we understand, to examine either Mr. Hannay, the late chairman of the Bank, or Mr. Blair, the manager, both gentlemen being in too critical a state of health to allow of their appearing without danger before the commission. Mr. Morrison, the late manager of the Asiatic Bank, is in Ceylon. We believe that Mr. Birch, Mr. Cassels, Mr. Tracey, Mr. Robertson, and Mr. Mell-wraith are about all the witnesses likely to appear before the Commission at home.—Times of India.

MILITARY LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The undermentioned officers and warrant officers have obtained leave of absence:—49th Foot: Captain Gavegan, from September 18 to December 18, on private affairs. Commissariat Department: Conductor Budd, from June 26 to August 7, to Bombay, preparatory to his transfer to the Invalid Pension Establishment. 25th Regiment N.I.: Lieutenant Walter, from October 1 to October 31, on private affairs, in extension to appear before Examination Committee. 28th Regiment N.I.: Lieutenant Singleton, from September 20 to September 30, in extension. Mr. Blathwayt, Acting Second Assistant Collector of Kuldagee, for three months, from October 10; the Reverend Blunt, Chaplain of Ahmedabad, one month's privilege leave, from the 21st of September.

DEPARTURE OF THE 46TH FOOT FOR ENGLAND.—On Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 1, H. M.'s Indian troopship Euphrates sailed from Bombay with 1,474 officers, troops, and others, comprising the 46th Regiment from Poona, and invalids and time-expired men from Bombay, Kurrachee, Beypore, and elsewhere. The invalids and time-expired men from Kurrachee arrived by steamer Scotia, and those from Beypore by the s.s. Asia on Wednesday morning, and were at once put on board the Euphrates. The following are the particulars of the several details:—From Kurrachee—Invalids and time-expired men—1 officer, 1 officer's wife, and 2 children, 25 men, 2 women and 13 children. From Beypore—Invalids and time-expired men—5 officers, 160 men, 20 women, 30 children. From Poona—The 46th Regiment—18 officers, 3 officers' wives, 5 officers' children, 1 bandmaster, 489 men, 26 women and 20 children.—From General Depot, 3 officers, 193 men, 25 women, and 60 children. From Bombay—8 officers, 3 officers' wives, 3 officers' children, 3 warrant officers, 2 warrant officers' wives, 7 children, 1 man, 2 women and 5 children. The total number of passengers by this transport is thus—first class:—36 officers, 7 officers' wives, 12 officers' children; second class:—1 man 1 woman, and 5 children; staff sergeants and their families:—10 men, 2 women, and 4 children; troops, third class passengers and their families:—860 men, 74 women, 132 children.

TESTIMONIAL TO THE REV. W. B. KEER.—A purse with Rs. 245 was presented on Monday, Sept. 28, by Capt. Watson, of the ship David Malcolmson, on behalf of several captains, officers, dubashes, and crews of ships either now or recently in harbour, several of them in connection with the late Abyssinian expedition, "To the Rev. Wm. Brown Keer, Harbour Chaplain, S.P.G., Bombay, in testimony of their appreciation of his indefatigable zeal in promoting the Christian welfare of the seamen of Bombay." In addition to the services held on shipboard, sometimes on three or four several ships on Sundays, the Sailors' Home, and European General Hospital, at both of which there has been an unusually large number of seamen for many months past, upwards of 300 volumes of books have been lent to the ships, besides the distribution of about fifty copies of Dr. Chevers's pamphlet "On the Health of Seamen in Indian Ports," and several large parcels of tracts, periodicals, and newspapers, which have been highly appreciated by the seamen. On the occasion of the presentation the rev. gentleman begged to thank Capt. Watson and the other subscribers "for the substantial expression of their kindness and sympathy, the recollections of which he hoped would serve to encourage him in his work in the future, as he felt that but little could be done for the moral and religious improvement of our seamen without the hearty co-operation of their commanders."—Times of India.

PLANS FOR IMPROVING KURRACHEE HARBOUR.—Kurrachee is the fifth port of India in importance. Ever since the days of Sir Charles Napier the bar of its harbour has frightened away shipping of large size, has been the battle-ground of engineers who are sometimes as dogmatic as doctors of divinity or of medicine, and has involved the State in much expense. After years of squabbling there is now a prospect of action. Mr. Parkes has just submitted to the Bombay Government a report on the whole subject, as clear, practical, and moderate in its plans, as any of Mr. Leonard's. It is based on his former experience of the harbour and on a series of surveys said to form "one of the most perfect records of the effects of natural forces upon the bed of a harbour which have ever been made." He proposes to continue the Minora breakwater for 1,500 feet at a cost of £109,000, to admit the waters and native traffic of the Chinna creek into the harbour and to go on with dredging. Already the capacity of the harbour has been trebled, he declares, and if the breakwater permit the depth caused by the groyne which has wrought this result to be maintained, Sind and the Punjab will have reason to be grateful to Mr. Parkes. The harbour of Kurrachee is a subject of imperial interest, for it will come next to that of Calcutta and of Bombay in political as well as commercial value the moment it is linked on to the frontier. We observe that Colonel Merewether supports Captain Merriman's project for supplying Kurrachee, which has a rainfall of only 6½ inches a-year, with water from the Mulceer river, sixteen miles from the town, at a capital cost of Rs. 630,000.—Friend of India.

A RAJAH REDIVIVUS.—Some of our readers will remember that during the troubles of 1858 the Beder or Berdar Chief of Shorapoor, or his people for him, for he was comparatively a young man, joined in the revolt and rebellion, and that after a short action Shorapoor was taken by a body of the Hyderabad contingent, the Rajah seized and taken captive to Hyderabad, where he was tried and convicted, his sentence being transportation. On the road to the coast, however, with a guard commanded by an officer, on the occasion of the guard halting to rest, the prisoner Rajah got hold of a pistol and destroyed himself, and the little territory was bestowed by Lord Canning on the Nizam. To all appearance the transaction and all connected with the Berdar Chief of Shorapoor there closed, and during the past ten years the Nizam's talookdars have been collecting the revenues and administering justice. But at the close of 1867 a rumour became current in that Berdar town that their Rajah was not dead, but was wandering about the western skirts of the principality, and he was ultimately seized near Kalladghee and brought to Shorapoor. Some identified the captive with their late chief, but others denied all identity, and amongst the latter was the widow of the Rajah, who years before had performed the rites customary on widowhood. The uncle also of the Rajah denied the captive's identity; but the treasurer and other old servants asserted the prisoner to be their own chief, who ten years before had been taken from them. On this Sir Salar Jung, in November or December last, ordered him to be sent to Hyderabad, and he has remained a prisoner in the Kotwali ever since, while the Minister has been making inquiries regarding him. We understand, as the result of these inquiries, that Sir Salar Jung has transferred the matter to the Resident for disposal. Of the fact of the death of the person proceeding under the charge of the guard there has never been a doubt; but the prisoner asserts it was a substituted servant, and he details all connected with the change with much clearness. He alleges, we are told, that another petty chieftain, the late Rajah of Wanparti, arranged for his escape. The case, it is understood, is being investigated by Captain Tweddie, the Assistant-Resident, and we shall be curious to learn the result of his inquiry.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

LAST-PAY CERTIFICATES.

Sept. 15.—The following two resolutions received from the Government of India, in the financial dept., are published for general information :—

Simla, Aug. 28.—No. 2,130.—Read a letter from the accountant gen., Bengal, No. 787, dated the 20th ult., and enclosures, proposing that the accountant gen., Bombay, should be authorised to issue last pay and last pay certificates to officers on leave passing through Bombay from other Presidencies or Provinces on their way to Europe on their producing—

1st. A copy of the order granting them leave.

2nd. A certificate of their average salary during past 3 years and their past leave from the account office in which their salaries have hitherto been audited.

3rd. A certificate in the following form from the coll. in whose district they have last served :—“This is to certify that A. B. has received his salary from this treasury at the rate of Rs. _____ per mensem, less deductions as shown below, up to the _____, and to no later date, and that he made over charge of his office on _____ noon of the _____.”

Resolution.—The G.G. in Council is pleased to authorise the account. gen., Bombay, to issue last pay and last pay certificates to officers in civil employ proceeding on leave to Eur. via Bombay from other Presidencies and Provinces.

Aug. 31.—Read a letter from the accountant. gen., Bengal, No. 813, dated 22nd ult., enquiring whether it is necessary to require covenanted civil servants proc. on furl. to Eur. under the new rules to produce no demand certificates.

Resolution.—The G.G. in Council is pleased to decide that no demand certificates shall not be required from covenanted civil servants proc. on furl. under the new rules, except when the furl. involves loss of appointment.

FREE PASSAGE TO OFFICERS ON CIVIL EMPLOY.

Simla, Sept. 3.—No. 2,199.—Read the undermdtd. papers :—

Resolution No. 3,524, passed in this dept. on Dec. 15, 1865, prescribing rules for the provision of free passage to public officers in civil employ travelling on duty by sea.

Resolution No. 1,467, passed in this dept. on July 23, 1866, prescribing rules in supersession of those contained in the resolution No. 3,524 of Dec. 15.

Letter from Mr. H. A. Mangles, accountant gen., British Burmah, No. 1,296, dated June 24, soliciting the exten. to covenanted civil servants of the benefit of that portion of the rules of Dec. 30, 1865, which declared that mily. officers in civil employ would be allowed a free passage “when being employed at a station beyond sea, they may be obliged to return to their Presidency in progress to Eur. or to a hill station on leave on m.c., and also when they rejoin their station on return from that leave.”

Resolution.—Premising that Mr. Mangles has erroneously referred to the obsolete resolution of Dec. 1866, instead of the resolution of July 23, 1866, the G.G. in Council observes that the new rules for the grant of leave of absence to mily. officers render it unnecessary to allow them a free passage under the circumstances described in the extract quoted above from the order of Dec., 1865, and is accordingly pleased to rescind the portion of the order of July 23, 1866, in which that concession was repeated.

RAILWAY PASSES TO OFFICERS.

The following extract from a letter, from the Govt. of India in the military department, to the controller of military accounts, No. 283, dated Aug. 13, 1868, is published with reference to G.O. No. 239 :—

“When an officer is ordered on temporary duty from one station to another, and permanently retained at his destination in the interests of the service, or permanently posted to any other station, he is as much entitled to a pass to enable his family to join him as he would have been for them to accompany him if he had been originally ordered on permanent duty.”

“3. But should the transfer of an officer be made for his own convenience, or at his own request, he would of course have no claim to a passage for his family.”

ADVANCES.

No. 276.—The following extracts, from the military department letters noted, are published for general information and guidance, in continuation of G.O. No. 249 of 1867, and Nos. 66, 170, and 182 of 1868 :—

“Military Dept., No. 567, dated June 20, 1868.—The Right Hon. the Gov. gen. in Council considers that the procedure laid down in G.G.O. No. 149 of 1868, under which all applications for advances for building purposes are submitted through the quartermaster general's department should be maintained, even in the case of officers not serving under the orders of the C. in C.”

“Military Dept., No. 353, dated Aug. 15, 1868.—The ruling power contained in military department letter No. 567 of June 20, 1868, is equally applicable to military chaplains and officers of the public works department.”

SAPPERS AND MINERS.—PAY.

Simla, Sept. 8, No. 271.—In continuation of G.G.O. No. 816 of 1865, G.O. No. 136, April 30, 1868, the following letter from the Government of India in the military department, to the controller of military accounts, No. 388, dated Aug. 17, 1868, is published for information :—

With reference to your letters No. 1,853d, dated March 26, 1868, No. 195e, dated May 8, 1868, submitting a question as to the amount admissible to temporarily attached subaltern officers in receipt of the Sappers' allowance, when appointed to act in the fixed regimental establishment of the Sappers and Miners, I am directed to acquaint you that his Excellency the Governor-general in Council is pleased to decide that, in the event of an officer of the fixed establishment of four being absent on duty, or on leave, and half of his staff salary being available, any temporarily attached officer who may be appointed to act for him will be entitled to half the regular staff allowance, without forfeiting his own Sapper allowance, provided that the aggregate sum shall in no case exceed Rs. 112.

2. The Government G.O. No. 816 of 1865 in no respect altered the nature of the Sapper allowance of Rs. 60.

STAFF CORPS.

No. 265.—In calling attention to the G.O.G.G. re-published below, the C. in C. is pleased to notify that the Govt. have ruled that the spirit of that order is equally applicable to officers of the Indian army not belonging to the staff corps :—

No. 29a, dated July 2, 1863.—“To obviate misapprehension the Right hon. the Governor General is pleased to notify that all officers of the C.S. who may be at any time without staff, civil, or miscellaneous appts., are at the disposal of H.E. the C. in C. for tempy. employt. in garrison or with corps H.E. may consider desirable.”

“2. Whenever an officer of the C.S., therefore, relinquishes or is removed from staff employ, he will report himself by letter to the adjt. gen., from whom he will receive the orders of the C. in C. as to the regt. or garrison to which he is to be tempy. attached.”

“3. Should the officer be at the time residing at or near a mily. station, he will, pending the orders of the C. in C., report himself for duty to the officer comdg. that station.”

“4. The principle of this order is applicable to the three presidencies.”

OFFICERS IN THE COLONIES DRAWING PAY.

No. 889.—The Right hon. the Secy. of State for India having intimated that the necessary instructions have been issued by the War-office to the controllers of the army expenditure in the colonies to allow of officers of H.M.'s Indian army who may be there on leave drawing their pay from the local commissariat chest on the production of the requisite authority in each case from the Indian Govt., H.E. the G.G. in Council is pleased to notify that such officers as may be desirous of availing themselves of this priv. should either directly before embark, or through their agents in India, subsequently, apply to the pay examr. of the Presidency to which they may be attached for the necessary warrant on this account, which will then be duly furnished by the pay examr. concerned, after obtaining the endorsement of the controller of mily. accounts, and the counter-signature of the Secy. to Govt. in the mily. dept. of the Presidency concerned:—

The warrant referred to will be in the following form:—

WARRANT No ——— of 186—6—.

FURLOUGHS.—The following officers, Civil and Military, obtained furloughs to Europe on medical certificate, under New Rules, in September:—Major-General Skinner, to Europe for two years, from Oct. 31. The furlough to Lieutenant Jacob, Staff Corps, Superintendent Army Schools, dated May 7, is commuted to a furlough for two years. The undermentioned officers are appointed to do duty with the invalids, time-expired men, &c., under orders to embark for England on the 1st Oct., and will join the general depot forthwith:—Captain Cardew, 82nd Foot; Captain Lawrie, 108th Foot; 2nd Captain Sturt, Royal Engineers—the senior officer to command; Captain Thorburn, 2nd batt. 21st Foot; Lieutenant Hughes, 1st batt. 4th Foot. Cornet Ord, 2nd Dragoon Guards; Captain Galwey, 96th Foot—to proceed to England by the overland route; these officers are not available for duty with troops, and will, on arrival, report themselves to the Adjutant-General, Horse Guards. 2nd Captain Sexton, R.A., for fifteen months, from date of embarkation—to England on urgent private affairs; Captain Laurie, 108th Foot, from Oct. 10 to Jan. 9, 1870—to England, on private affairs; Captain Laurie's services are available for duty with troops. Major Millett, Bengal Staff Corps, Inspector-General of Police, Berar, for two years. Captain Bourdillon, Invalid Establishment, Pension Paymaster, Poona; Lieutenant Singleton, General List, Adjutant H.M.'s 28th Regiment N.I.; Lieutenant Hennell, Staff Corps. Cornet Ord, 2nd Dragoon Guards, thirty days from date of departure—to Bombay, on medical certificate, preparatory to obtaining a final certificate to England. Rev. A. Polchampton, Joint Chaplain of Poona, for two years. The leave for six months on private affairs granted to Mr. A. Rogers, Revenue and Police Commissioner, Northern Division, on April 27 last is cancelled, and he is allowed instead a furlough for eighteen months. Mr. W. Boulton, Third Class Deputy Collector of Kurrachee, for twelve months—to Europe. Lieutenant Ryves, Adjutant 2nd Regiment N.I., has furlough to Europe. Mr. Havelock, Acting Revenue Commissioner, Southern Division, three months, from Oct. 9—to England.

Home.

A RELIC FROM CAWNPORE.—Surgeon-major Clarke, 84th Regiment, has just presented to the Museum of the College of Surgeons, Dublin, the skeleton of Jowallah Pursand, one of the most notorious of the high-class Brahmins connected with the massacre of Cawnpore. The museum is very rich in ethnological specimens.—British Medical Journal.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for bills on India took place on Wednesday, the 21st inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta £188,000, and to Madras £12,000. The minimum price was fixed, as before, at 1s. 10½d. on both Presidencies. Tenders at 1s. 11½d. will receive about 30 per cent.; those above will be allotted in full. The result shows a slight diminution in the demand for remittances.

A TOUCHING CEREMONY.—The Guardian states that "the sombre colours of Westminster Abbey were relieved on Saturday by the presence of an Indian prince, dressed in his native costume, with his prime minister and attendants, who came for the purpose of strewing Lord Canning's grave with flowers. The servants bearing the trays containing the flowers, held aloft in Eastern fashion, were very picturesque. After expressing his deep love of Lord Canning, and his grateful remembrance of his rule in India, the prince knelt and himself strewed with flowers the stone slab which covers the remains of Lord Canning, and also of his father, George Canning. The dean pointed out the spot on which the monument is to be erected, a fact which was of much interest to the Indian strangers. After bending in prayer, the prince bent down and kissed the stone, followed in the reverent act by his retainers. This is perhaps the first act of Mohammedan worship which the Abbey has seen within its walls."

PROPOSED REDUCTION OF THE ARMY.—There is a probability of a much greater change resulting from the recent consultations of the Government about the army reduction than most people will have been prepared for. It is understood that the Commander-in-Chief is rather in favour of remodelling or altogether reconstructing the Depot Battalions on a more extended basis than of simply suppressing them. One or other will happen. There is no doubt that in their present condition they answer no useful purpose; but if, instead of sweeping them away altogether, they can be developed into a sort of District Depot Staff, in conjunction with the Militia Staff, a great step in advance will have been made. What the Depot Battalions mostly lack is a good staff of non-commissioned officers, and this the Militia has in the shape of picked men, who are necessarily idle for ten or eleven months in the year; the Duke's eye has probably detected this means ready at hand for getting rid of the evils of the present depot system, and rendering possible an easy connection of line regiments with the Militia of their several counties, as well as for a more efficient organisation of the recruiting department, and the bringing the various branches of the reserve army together under one organisation in the various districts.—Broad Arrow.

EXPORTS OF BULLION.—Gold has been finding its way to this country from Bombay lately in consequence of a glut of the precious metal at that Presidency; nevertheless the exports of gold continue. The exports of gold and silver to India and the East appear, from the subjoined analysis of the last two fortnightly returns (Low's Indian Circular) to have been very large; the moiety being, however, to Alexandria for the Pacha of Egypt. Mr. Low's report for the 9th instant shows that £247,000 in gold was sent to Alexandria per P. and O. Company's steamers during the month of September, and £235,376 in gold and £3,320 in silver, per Messageries Impériales steamers. The exportations to India, &c., during September were—to Calcutta, gold, £55,000; Ceylon, gold, £2,800; Bombay, gold, £13,250—silver, £1,050; Madras, gold, £5,994. Per Messageries Impériales steamers—Ceylon, gold, £10,000; Pondicherry, gold, £700; Madras, gold, £10,644—silver, £996; Calcutta, gold, £10,000—silver, £23,596; Batavia, gold, £8,000; Mauritius, silver, £10,000. The exports per P. and O. steamers of 9th inst. were—Bombay, gold, £70,700—silver, £25,000; Madras, gold, £1,729; Singapore, silver, £17,200. Subjoined are the exports per P. and O. steamers of the 11th, 17th, and 18th inst.:—Bombay, gold, £47,160—silver, £89,000; Ceylon, gold, £5,000; Madras, gold, £1,174; Calcutta, silver, £4,888.

† Three Batteries of 5th Brigade are stationed in the Bombay Presidency.

NOTE.—The Regiments and Brigade to embark for India this season are as follows:—3rd Hussars, 6th Brigade Royal Artillery, 1st Battalion 8th Foot (Malta), 1st Battalion 14th Foot (Malta), 1st Battalion 21st Foot, and the 39th and 62nd Regiments.

LIEUT.-COLONEL LAWRIE.—We regret to record the death of Lieut.-col. J. J. Lawrie, of the Bombay Staff Corps, which occurred at his residence in the Marine Lines yesterday. The deceased entered the service on the 2nd February, 1841, and since the beginning of May last had been officiating second in command of the 21st N.I. (Marine Battalion). He served in Sind from 1841 to 1844, and was present at the battle of Hyderabad, for which he received the medal. He served also in the campaign in the Southern Mahratta country in 1844-45, and was present at the operations against the Hill forts, including the affairs of Kulumbeest, Gotea, and Moolus. As staff officer, he was present at the revolt at Neemuch in 1857, and he served in the actions at Neembhara and Jeerun. At the latter he was severely wounded in three places, and his horse was shot under him. For these services he was made brevet major, and received the medal. He also took part in the siege of Neemuch in 1857, and in the affairs in the Santpoora Hills, in pursuit of Tantia Toppe. The deceased officer, who was only forty-three years of age, was buried with military honours.—Times of India, Oct. 3.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.
THE GRAND REQUISITES.—Nobody will deny the assertion that for man's comfort and happiness pure blood and a sound stomach rank among the first requirements. Both may be safely and inexpensively secured by these admirable Pills, which act gently on the weakest frames, and cause no violent shock to the most sensitive system. Holloway's Pills have proved themselves competent to deal constitutionally with those infirmities which descend from parent to offspring, which often mar the brightest prospects, and throw a constant gloom over youth. These Pills purify both the solids and fluids of the body, and by that salutary process rouse every organ to perform naturally its proper function, and strengthen every nerve for its proper duty.

SARSAPARILLA.
WILKINSON'S (late Bridge's)
ESSENCE or FLUID EXTRACT OF RED JAMAICA SARSAPARILLA, prescribed by the Faculty for purifying the blood, debility, liver complaints, and freeing the system from the effects of mercury. Exclusively used in India and the Colonies as a prevention to tropical diseases.
"Superior preparation that may always be relied upon."—Sir Astley Cooper.
"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.
"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—Medical Review.
Sold in quarter, half, and pint bottles.
CAUTION.—Many spurious, worthless, and injurious preparations are offered to the public. See that both bottle and label have the name and address.

QUINTESENCE OF JAMAICA GINGER AND CAMOMILE.
WILKINSON'S PREPARATION OF GINGER and CAMOMILE has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine. It is a most efficient stomachic tonic, and the best remedy for flatulency and disorders arising from impaired digestion.
It is not affected by climate.
No European in India or tropical countries should be without it.
Sold in one-eighth, quarter, and half-pint bottles.

AROMATIC TINCTURE OF QUINOIDINE.
For the Prevention of Fever, Ague, and effects of Malaria. An unailing remedy. It may be mentioned that those who, during the campaign in the Crimea, daily took a small quantity, passed entirely unharmed through the raking fire of fever and dysentery that thinned the ranks around them.
Sold in half and quarter-pint bottles.
Prepared by THOMAS WILKINSON (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

MURIATE of AMMONIA LOZENGES.
—In Bottles, 2s. Useful for Bronchitis, by loosening the phlegm and preventing violent fits of coughing. P. and P. W. SQUIRE (Gazetted August 5th, 1837—December 31st, 1867), Chemists on the Establishment in Ordinary to THE QUEEN, 277, OXFORD-STREET, LONDON.

DINNEFORD'S FLUID MAGNESIA.
The Medical Profession for thirty years have approved of this pure Solution of Magnesia as the best remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion; and as the best mild aperient for delicate constitutions; for Ladies, Children, and Infants; and for REGULAR Use in Warm Climates.
DINNEFORD and Co., Chemists, 172, New Bond-street, London; and of all other Chemists throughout the World. N.B.—Ask for Dinneford's Magnesia.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.
"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body. . . . It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.
TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.
MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.
Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. WEBB'S residence, free of charge.
His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.
WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 229, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.
ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.
JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 229, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.
UPWARDS OF FIFTY YEARS' experience has fully confirmed the superior reputation of these Lozenges in the cure of ASTHMA, WINTER COUGH, HOARSENESS, SHORTNESS OF BREATH, and other PULMONARY MALADIES.

Sold in boxes, tins, and bottles, of various sizes.
KEATING'S CHILDREN'S WORM TABLET.—A PURELY VEGETABLE SWEETMEAT, both in appearance and taste, furnishing a most agreeable method of administering a well-known remedy for INTESTINAL or THREAD WORMS.
It is a perfectly safe and mild preparation, and is especially adapted for Children.
Sold in tins and bottles of various sizes.

KEATING'S PERSIAN INSECT DESTROYING POWDER.—This Powder is QUITE HARMLESS TO ANIMALS, but unrivalled in destroying Fleas, Bugs, Emmets, Flies, Cockroaches, Beetles, Gnats, Mosquitoes, Moths in Furs, and every other species of insect in all stages of metamorphosis.
Sold in packets, tins, and bottles, of various sizes.

SEWING MACHINES.
W. F. THOMAS & Co.

These Machines were the first made and patented in England, and ever since 1846 have maintained their pre-eminence. They are adapted for Manufacturing and for Domestic purposes, and range in prices from £5. 5s. upwards.

FOR FAMILY USE THEY ARE UNRIVALED.
ALL LOCK STITCH. WORK ALIKE ON BOTH SIDES.

DEDICATED, BY PERMISSION, TO HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN,

THE CRUISE OF H.M.S. GALATEA,

CAPTAIN, H.R.H. THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH,
IN 1867-1868.

By the Rev. JOHN MILNER, F.R.G.S., Chaplain of the Vessel; and O. W. BRIERLY.

Illustrated by a Photograph of H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, a Map, and numerous Illustrations in Chromo-Lithography and Graphotype, from Sketches taken during the Cruise by O. W. BRIERLY.

* * This work contains an account of the various events connected with the Visit of his Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh to the Cape and the different Australian Colonies, by way of Lisbon, Gibraltar, Malta, and Madeira; a brief description of the Voyage out and home, embracing remarks on Rio, and the particulars of a very interesting call at Tristan d'Acunha, a lonely island visited on the passage to the Cape; as well as the latest information respecting the state and prospects of the Australian Colonies. The work has been prepared with the sanction of his Royal Highness, who was desirous that a record of so important a cruise should be preserved, and has himself contributed his own account of an Elephant-Hunting Expedition to the Knysna Country, and a Sketch of the Cape of Good Hope.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, October 10; Agra, October 6; Calcutta and Madras, October 5.

From the Bombay papers we get some brief details of the little campaign in the Black Mountain. On the 4th of last month the First Brigade of General Wilde's force had a short brush with the enemy at the Koongullie Pass. The heights however were soon occupied without any loss. The Second Brigade seems to have advanced in concert up the same spur of hill. In a night attack on the same date the enemy managed to kill two and wound seven sepoy. The heavy fire of our troops made short work of the defence. From that time the enemy seem to have made no regular stand. On the 5th the Muchi Peak, on the highest crest of the Black Mountain, was occupied by the two Brigades, with the loss of three wounded, the enemy retreating as our men advanced. On the next day the Elephant Battery was expected to reach the same point. Some exchange of shots must have taken place, for Lieutenant Unwin was slightly wounded, and apparently seven sepoy were also wounded and one killed. Water was reported to be scarce. The troops were busy making a road up the Mountain. From that date all resistance seems to have been over, and on the 8th no enemy remained in front. The burning of Hussunzai villages had begun in the usual style of our frontier warfare, and the Hussunzais, thoroughly cowed, were suing for terms.

THE Akhoond of Swat, whom so many journalists credited with all kinds of evil plottings against the English, has proved his judgment, if not his friendliness towards us, not only by refusing to call out the 40,000 warriors who are burning to attack the infidel, but by chasing the whole of the Hindustani refugees out of his dominions. One inveterate alarmist however, as quoted in the Bombay Gazette, revives the old story about the 40,000 warriors, and declares that a large number of Afreedies, with 2,000 muskets, have already joined the Akhoond's standard. Sixteen competent persons—the writer is very circumstantial—"are engaged in making gunpowder and balls for the use of the Akhoond's men." The Chief of Bajour and the six sons of the Chief of Der have also, on the same authority, made ready to lead their thousands of followers at a signal from the Akhoond against his enemies and theirs. Much of this may be literally true, and yet those enemies may have no sort of connection with his English neighbours.

ANOTHER chieftain who ought by some people's showing to be at heart our foe, has just made most friendly advances to the Indian Government. According to the latest news from Simla, Shere Ali Khan, the Ameer of Kabul, has notified to the Viceroy his desire for full diplomatic relations with British India, and the Viceroy has sent him a favourable answer. This incident, which ought to silence the clamourers against Sir John's plan of "masterly inactivity," confirms other accounts received from Afghanistan concerning the gracious reception of Sir John's vakeel, and the Ameer's readiness to send a vakeel in his turn to Peshawar.

THE Governor of Bombay held a grand durbar at Poonah on the 6th October. Some two hundred and thirty or forty chiefs and gentlemen of rank mustered in the old Mahratta capital, each followed by a crowd of armed retainers. Prominent among them were the Rajahs of Kolapoor, Edur, Barea, Loonawarra, Jowar, and Akulkote. The great hall of the Engineering College supplied a fitting theatre for the splendid pageant, in which not a few Englishmen of both services and a fair display of ladies bore their part. The address was read by the young Rajah of Kolapore, a prince of much promise, and a good English scholar. It congratulated the Queen on the successes achieved in Abyssinia, complimented the Governor on his share in promoting them, spoke in proud terms of the part played by the Bombay sepoy, and made grateful reference to the helpful counsels of Sir Bartle Frere. Sir Seymour Fitzgerald in his reply paid a pretty compliment to the Rajah of Kolapoor, and suggested the founding at Poonah of a school at which the sons of the native aristocracy might receive a fitting education. He also gave the chiefs a hearty invitation to come and talk with him as often as they could. Altogether, the durbar was a real success.

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE, the new Finance Minister, is said to be shaping out a scheme for equalising the salt duties, which under the present system press hard on the poorer peasantry of Bengal as compared with the inhabitants of Bombay and Madras. A reduction in the Bengal rates will probably diminish the smuggling that now flourishes on the North-Western frontier. Sir Richard was also intending to visit Nagpore, which was getting ready to receive him with becoming honours.

HARDLY has Colonel Pelly settled the little dispute with Bahrein, when another source of difficulty springs up for him in the Persian Gulf. The Imam of Muscat, whose throne was so sorely shaken last year by the attacks of an ill-disposed uncle and aunts, has again been driven into a strait by his brother-in-law, whose forces, by last accounts, had got possession of Muscat itself; the Imam being shut up in a fort overlooking the town. He had just time to get his harem and treasures on board a native frigate, whose protection was entrusted to the captain of H.M.'s steamer Sindh. The captain had his guns shotted and his rocket-tubes ready against a threatened attack of the insurgents, which had not come off when the mail steamer of October 2 left the harbour. Colonel Pelly himself had returned in the Vigilant to Kurrachee, when news of the outbreak reached him in time to hurry off the Sindh from Mussendom to the scene of uproar. If India is to keep the peace of the Persian Gulf, it is high time to give her back a navy of her own.

PERSIA also is hankering after an ironclad fleet. According to the Army and Navy Gazette, our Minister at Teheran has applied in the Shah's name to Lord Stanley for the loan of an English naval officer, to be engaged for at least twelve months, who will help with his counsels towards equipping a squadron for police service in the Gulf. "A distinguished officer, high upon the list of captains"—can it be Captain Sherard Osborne?—had the first offer from the Admiralty, and declined it. Only officers junior to Commodore Heath are supposed to be eligible for the post.

WARNED by the signs of the season in the provinces of Upper India, the Indian Government has issued a timely paper of instructions for the guidance of the local authorities. An area of about 320,000 square miles, containing 58,000,000 of people, is threatened by a scarcity which next spring may possibly turn into a tremendous famine. The Kareef, or autumn crops, have generally failed, and "if there should be a further failure of the September and October rain, and the Rubbee sowings be lost, preparation must be made for a great calamity." Very much will depend on the weather during the time for sowing the rubbee or spring crops, and the amount of rainfall about Christmas. Meanwhile, the benefits of last year's plenteous harvests would continue to tell on prices in November, and the pressure caused by the failure of the autumn crops would most likely be gradual enough to give time for pouring in fresh supplies from other parts of India. Compared with 1860, prices still rule low in the North-West Provinces. Wheat is little higher than during the past eight months. Jowar and Bajra however, the mainstay of the peasantry, had become in July twice as dear as it was in January. The recent growth of railway and irrigation works—300,000 acres being now watered by the Ganges Canal alone, and the railway joining Calcutta with Lahore and Mooltan being nearly finished—will tell greatly in mitigating the present distress. At least two months remain for preparing against the worst. The attention of the Local Governments is therefore called to the question of public works in relief of the threatened suffering. Certain lines of railway and canal are specially pointed out. The authorities are to indent at need on the services of all officers in every department. The Inspector-general will remain at his post in the North-West. In every case of admitted expediency, the Government will contribute towards measures of local relief a sum equal to the amount raised by private subscription.

THE provinces threatened comprise the Punjab, the North-West, Oudh, Rajpootana, and Central India. The hopes revived by the showers that fell towards the end of September have already died out. Rajpootana is an especial sufferer. In Ajmere not a blade of grass is left, and from Marwar the people are emigrating in shoals. Gwalior also is hard pressed. Its ruler is taking a lesson from ourselves, by remitting the land-rent, and promising to support the worst sufferers at the public cost. The Chief of Jeypore has also come forward to help his subjects in their need.

ONE step towards separating fiscal and judicial functions in Bengal has been taken by the local Government. It is going to bring in a Bill for transferring revenue suits from the Collectors' Courts to those of the Moonsiffs, Sudder Ameens, and Judges. This will leave the district officers time to mind their proper business, and keep themselves in closer connection with the people under their charge.

DR. SHORTT, of Madras, seems to have done for the primeval tribes of the Nilgherry Hills a similar service to that rendered by Dr. Campbell for the tribes on the North-Eastern Frontier. His recent memoir embodies the results of his own researches during two seasons' residence among the tribes, besides a valuable report by the late Colonel Ochterlony on the Geography and Statistics of the Nilgherries. Avoiding speculations on the origin and past history of the tribes in question, Dr. Shortt contents himself with furnishing useful information as to their present habits. Of the five distinct tribes that came under his notice the two chief are the Todas and the Badagas; the latter however being infinitely the more numerous. The Todas, about seven hundred in number, seem to be the oldest dwellers there, while the eighteen thousand Badagas are evidently of Hindu descent. Three "Helot" tribes, the Kotars, Kurumbas, and Irulas, complete the list. The most industrious of all these tribes are the Kotars, who speak broken Canarese with a Tamil accent, and are thought to be low-caste refugees from the plains. They are good farmers and skilful artisans, held in much the same kind of vassalage to the Todas as the Canaanites were to the Jews. They are mainly monogamists, with a tendency to drinking and opium-eating. The Badagas are supposed to be Hindu refugees from Mysore, retaining their old religious worship, but given to eating flesh. They too are good farmers, and vassals of the Toda chiefs. Their spiritual homage, largely mingled with fear, is concentrated on the Kurumbas, a small tribe of uncouth-looking wizards, who work spells and cure diseases by means of their medical knowledge. They are the augurs without whose services no Badaga will begin any kind of agricultural labour. Their religion is a rude kind of Pantheism. These people in their turn have a traditional awe of the lordly Todas, who claim to be the "autoc-thones" of these hills, and stoop to no lower occupation than tending flocks and herds. The buffalo is their sacred beast, to whom holy men minister in sacred groves. Tradition describes them as fleeing to the Nilgherries from the yoke of the victorious Rama, and they seem to have brought with them into their present retreats some definite traces of the worship of Krishna. One custom which they share with the hill-men in the Himalayas is polyandry, the marriage of one woman to more than one man. The wife claims all her husband's brothers as partners of her bed, and the husband and his brothers can take similar possession of the wife's sisters. The children of these strange unions are divided impartially among the different husbands; the first-born going to the eldest brother, the second to the second, and so on all round. It seems however that the Toda women are remarkably well treated, and are exempt from all outdoor drudgery.

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS, the captain of the Galatea, has been pulled up short at the very threshold of his new voyage round the world. On her way from Barnpool into Plymouth Sound on Monday the frigate grounded, and it will take two or three days to repair the damage done. The Duke, who was on board, returned to London the same afternoon.

Two noteworthy speeches were delivered last week on Indian affairs. Lord Salisbury, whose remarks we have analysed elsewhere, addressed the Manchester Chamber of Commerce in terms of eloquent sympathy with the efforts of Manchester to secure the foundations of a close commercial union between England and India. From beginning to end his speech was pervaded with a deep sense of the responsibility under which England lies, of doing her very best by the great dependency which events have brought under her sway. Cotton and railways formed the burden of his strain. Mr. Massey at Liverpool took a wider range. He began by exposing the new cant about non-annexation, and respect for the rights of native princes. "Had the policy of non-annexation been carried out in its integrity, we could never have had our Indian empire." That policy could not be enforced at all times, in all circumstances. As for the rights of native princes, they had sometimes to be overruled by reasons of "urgent political necessity." The development of the railway system was working a great social revolution throughout India. In the interests both of actual and possible trade the Indian Government was ordering new railways everywhere "without regard to cost." On the yet more important question of irrigation it had long been anxiously reflecting, and was now "prepared to raise millions of money" in order to save the dwellers in the "arid plains" of Upper India from the perils of recurring drought. With regard to cotton, Mr. Massey declined to be over-sanguine, but looked forward to a large increase in the supply of that now precious staple.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, November 4, 1868.

LORD SALISBURY AT MANCHESTER.

LORD SALISBURY'S appearance on a Manchester platform marks an epoch in political progress. Saul also is enrolled among the prophets. In the interests of India we may congratulate his lordship on a conjunction which furnishes one more proof of his readiness to march with the times on all questions lying outside the pale of party politics. There is no good reason indeed for importing political partisanship into matters concerning the general welfare of some two hundred millions of Asiatics divided from their English masters by half a world of land and water, and by infinite distances of moral and mental conformation. But the force of homegrown habits and traditions will always tempt a large proportion of homebred statesmen to gauge the wants and feelings of one country by the standards of another; and the old indifference on Indian questions finds but a sorry substitute in the livelier motions prompted by this or that form of class or party prepossession. Manchester itself, in spite of Lord Salisbury's tribute to its "constant vigilance over the interests of the people of India and the affairs of that country," can hardly be held clear of looking at those interests from local rather than imperial standpoints, from the side of India's commercial usefulness to England, rather than the side of England's duty towards her great dependency. Still it is only fair to credit Manchester also with a genuine desire to forward India's welfare in accordance with principles tending to the benefit of both countries alike. And Lord Salisbury's speech in answer to the admiring welcome of his new friends justifies the belief that he for one will steadily support all efforts, made by whichever class or party in the State, to advance the well-being of that "strange people which a most remarkable series of events has placed within our power." It must have been more than a mere stroke of rhetoric which led him in the opening of his first speech to deplore the almost utter indifference betrayed at this moment by the constituencies throughout the country towards the "tremendous interests" committed to their charge in the matter of British India. It might perhaps be objected that all remoter interests are just now naturally swamped in the excitement stirred by a question of more immediate moment to this country. But anyhow we may thank his lordship for reminding us of one equally difficult problem which demands an early solution at our hands. It is an ill wind that blows nobody good. His isolation from his party at this juncture has at any rate left him free to preach up the duty of governing India on the twofold principle of consulting the good of its own people, and of extending to its utmost the commercial intercourse between the two countries.

On the main question it may be said that all parties are theoretically at one. In these days nobody professes to govern India solely or mainly for the good of her English masters. We are all for studying the interests of the natives in the first place, even if we insist on not quite overlooking our own. But on coming to ask ourselves what those interests are, and how they may best be forwarded, we immediately begin to part company from each other. Everyone draws his own picture of things as they are, and fills in his own programme of things as they ought to be. From a fatherly despotism to a self-governed federation of native States, all sorts of schemes for the good of India find their befitting champions. None of these however needs discussing here. But on one principle of future action few, we imagine, will care to differ much from Lord Salisbury and the Manchester Chamber of Commerce. Experience and self-interest alike urge the same moral, the duty of binding India and England closer and closer in the bonds of a mutually beneficial trade. The commercial solidarity of the two countries offers a safe text for administrative reformers of every school. Whoever helps us on the road to so gracious a wedlock, deserves not the doubtful honour of a statue or a monument in the newest style of British art, but a warm place in the memories of a grateful people.

Among such benefactors the late Secretary of State for India may fairly be reckoned. His first speech at Manchester points to several ways of applying a sound principle. One aid for instance to commercial intercourse may be found in assimilating the currency of the two countries. As Lord Salisbury rightly observed, no one conversant with the subject can doubt the expediency of substituting a gold for a silver currency in India. Nor, in spite of the "curious delays" to which he referred, can such a reform be kept back many months longer. Whenever it is finally conceded, we may count on having for both countries a common unit of currency, in itself a sure pledge for the development of trade between the two. To alter the currency in one country without establishing a common unit for both would be a blunder impossible, we trust, to any body of Anglo-Indian statesmen.

But the question of currency, in Lord Salisbury's opinion, yields in importance to that of cotton. Now is the time for India to develop her cotton-growing powers and take fast hold of the English market. It is the quality, not the quantity, of Indian cotton which needs bettering for that purpose. Government inspection within due bounds would teach the ryot to be more careful in getting up his cotton for sale. But that would sin against the principles of free trade? Not at all, says Lord Salisbury, who rightly objects to turning rational faith in a good principle into a sweeping superstition. There is no just connection, he argues, between the doctrines of free trade and the question of State-supervision over certain manufactures. In India, as in France, the State, which represents the nation at large, is expected to wield an influence which we in England, with our traditional zeal for the rights of private persons, are only just beginning to tolerate here and there. But all this has clearly nothing to do with the broad principles of free trade in cotton or anything else. English manufacturers will take any amount of Indian cotton properly cleaned. If the State can help the ryot to meet this prime want, without encroaching on his lawful freedom of action, it will render a very great service to all concerned. All care must of course be taken not to meddle with the ryot's perfect freedom to grow whatever he pleases, nor yet to stimulate too wide a production of a staple which some new turn of events in America may yet tempt our manufacturers to purchase at a lower rate from beyond the Atlantic.

But the development of our Indian trade, whether in cotton or any other staple, must be aided by improved means of conveyance. "The question of commerce in general"—remarked his lordship—"is in the main a question of conveyance. It is the opening of navigable rivers and the opening of railways to which you must look." On this point Lord Salisbury's recent experiences come to his aid. He has the sense to see that even if a railway does not pay immediately, yet "by scattering wealth along its path, by stimulating commerce, by opening out the resources of the country, by bringing new ideas to increase the diligence and thrift of the natives of the country, it opens out to the Government new sources of revenue, it makes the people a more taxpaying people than they were before," and in these ways the Government may look to being eventually reimbursed.

Roads, railways, canals, and rivers—all these channels of Indian trade need opening up to a far greater extent than the rulers of British India have hitherto deemed it prudent to go. But there are evidences abroad that the bolder policy recommended by Lord Salisbury is to mark the future course of Indian administration. Mr. Massey, at any rate, in his recent speech at Liverpool has credited the Indian Government with a desire henceforth to spare no pains or outlay in developing these sources of national wealth. Besides the millions it proposes to spend on railways it is prepared, he tells us, "to raise millions of money in order to utilise the Indian rivers, and make them channels for irrigating those arid plains" which have hitherto been the scenes of periodical famines, consequent on failures in the annual monsoon. Thus in every direction there is a call for more money to spend on works of public importance; and cautious statesmen may well be excused for thinking that works of irrigation should take precedence of works mainly tending to develop trade. Both however will henceforth be carried on together without too much regard for present outlay.

Lord Salisbury's proposal to give the mercantile interest some sort of representation in the Council of India need not be dismissed as unfeasible because the same idea was embodied in Mr. Disraeli's rejected India Bill. All other Anglo-Indian interests are fairly represented in the Council, and the mercantile interest grows yearly more important. You cannot expect from eminent lawyers, soldiers, and statesmen "that minute and detailed knowledge of the wants of the mercantile community which nothing but a mercantile training can afford." Very true, but might not a like plea be urged with much greater force for the admission of native members to represent interests yet more nearly connected with India's well-being? The presence however of one or two able mercantile members might infuse into the Council a certain amount of practical acquaintance with one large field of modern statesmanship. But after all, it is neither mere merchants, nor mere lawyers, nor mere administrators, who are wanted for the Home Council; but statesmen of wide experience, enlarged sympathies, active intellects, and trained judgment. If such men are wanting, mere professional knowledge will hardly fill the gap.

LORD NAPIER ON THE BRITISH SOLDIER.

WITH all deference to the conqueror of King Theodore, we are inclined to demur a little to his highly-coloured contrast between the British soldier of to-day and the British soldier of forty or fifty years ago. That a general improvement has taken place in the ranks of our army as well as in other classes of the community, we are not going to dispute. But when so eminent a personage as Lord Napier hints plainly enough that the British soldier in the days of Wellington was an utter reprobate, from whom men, women, and children in a foreign country were never safe, we cannot be surprised to hear of old Peninsular officers protesting loudly against the libel. One of them, writing to a brother officer, wants to know if Lord Napier's remarks implied "that women and children would have been insulted or injured by British soldiers fifty years ago. . . . Not to speak of our own old corps, did Lord Napier wish his hearers to believe that women and children would have been ill-used in a camp of the 43rd, or the old 95th, or 4th, or 71st, or 79th, whom we well knew?" In spite of Badajoz and such exceptional cases, we imagine that respect for the helpless and the weak has long formed a marked trait in the conduct of our soldiers.

Under the Rose. Poems written chiefly in India. By H. G. Keene, Author of the "Moghul Empire." London: Bell and Daldy.

"The tolerable poets," says Nathaniel Hawthorne, "we leave upon the shelf." This dictum we conceive to be for the most part true; but while it implies a tribute to the pre-eminence of the art of poetry, it bears rather hardly upon the poets. There would be a fearful outcry if the treatment were to be extended to the other arts. What should we say to an exhibition at the Royal Academy, with the tolerable pictures excluded from it? The collection would be very small. And how if the tolerable music were denied a hearing? The result would be that nine-tenths of the professional people in London would lose their livelihood. While however it is true that the general public will not interest itself in poetry that is not of the first order, yet we conceive that a man is to be excused for publishing a volume of poetry, if he thinks he will thereby gratify a circle of friends, or call the attention of those on whom he has some claim from the circumstances of his and their relative positions.

Such, in our view, is the justification for the volume whose title heads this notice. It will be perused with interest by those who are personally acquainted with Mr. Keene, and who have known him to have been for many years in the habit of writing verse; and, as a book of Anglo-Indian poetry, written by an Anglo-Indian, it may ask some attention from that circle who either from personal experience, from relationships, or—it may be—from pure curiosity, cultivate an acquaintance with things Eastern. The volume is not altogether new; some of the poems have appeared in India, others in Blackwood, and several are reprinted from a previous collection entitled "Ex Eremita." But there are new poems in it; the old ones have been retouched and improved, and this edition has the great advantage of the clear printing and pretty boards which Messrs. Bell and Daldy always afford. Indeed, it is the same thing to say that a book is gracefully got up and to say that it is published at the York-street establishment. The first impression, and it is, in our opinion, also the last and the enduring one, produced by a perusal of Mr. Keene's poems, is the superiority of the expression and the mechanical execution to the ideas. It is generally otherwise with the tolerable poets; we have too often to make allowances for a want of distinct articulation, and to admit that a conception would not be bad, if it were only better expressed.

But with Mr. Keene our feeling is:—Here undoubtedly we have a readiness and a richness of language amounting to a gift, but which are inadequate to produce a satisfactory result, in many instances, from the indistinctness of thought in the writer's mind, and his inability or neglect to round off any conception into a separate, artistic form.

There are some shorter pieces in "Under the Rose" which seem to be on the verge of being excellent, and which you peruse under the impression that with such happy choice of words the author must certainly have got firm hold of an idea; and then, to your dismay, there is either no conclusion, or one which could not reasonably have been expected. Like a soap-bubble, the lyric swells into form, streaked with delicate colours, but at the exact moment that it seems likely to complete its shape, and become an independent and self-contained piece of work, it has burst—it has gone—there is nothing.

But whilst this haziness of conception prevents any one poem from being quite approvable, the execution of certain passages, viewed entirely by themselves and apart from the context, is equal in workmanship, in our opinion, to the happiest inspirations of the great masters in the same style. This is a great deal to say, and may sound like extravagance, but a similar criticism was pronounced by the late Mr. William Empson—an excellent judge—who said of certain lines, reproduced in this very volume, that Wordsworth would not have been ashamed to have written them. Indeed, individual passages are real poetry, and when that has been said, all has been said. As long as gold is gold, crystal crystal, poetry will be poetry—to slightly vary a favourable testimony which Goethe once bore to Wieland's merits.

We will at once quote a passage which bears out, as we think, what has been stated:—

There, on the upland, shall a milder sun
 Smite the white cottage and the glistening vane
 And nestle in the balmy stack, and float,
 A fruitful flood, upon the southern wall:
 There the great oak shall stir his solemn head,
 The lime-tree shed her blossoms, sweetly faint,
 The poplar tremble, like the heart of man,
 Whose darkest thoughts have underlights of hope;
 The beech shall spread his venerable shade,
 The stately elms' procession guard the walks,
 The birch-bark gleam through foliage, and the ash
 Wave ruddy clusters; willows then shall weep,
 And the wet alder shall delight to wade
 Knee-deep in sluggish waters, when the kine
 Take the whole meadow with contented eye,
 Philosophers of nature.

The poem from whence these charming lines are taken is called "Michael de Mas," and is, on the whole, an unsatisfactory attempt to portray the adventures and end of an unscrupulous soldier of fortune who seeks to achieve power through the instrumentality of gold.

Both from this piece, as also from the second poem, entitled "The Twins," dramatic power is wanting, and there is observable great obscurity of intention on the writer's part. Indeed, with regard to the longer pieces, it may in all truth be said that they are without form and void, and that darkness is upon the face of the verse. And yet they are clustered with well-said things, and much of the imagery is chaste and beautiful and in every sense poetic. Take a passage or two anywhere:—

And now he drooped, and felt an inward dread,
 Such as the priests of old Jerusalem
 Felt, when they heard the sighing gusts that swept
 From the dark shrine to the gate beautiful,
 Upon the fatal night before the Storm,
 When the Shechinah left them audibly.

In "Shechinah" we conceive the penultimate to be short, but let that pass, and take another extract—an Indian monyah at sunset:—

Under the moist star of eve
 The village seemed to slumber—girt with trees—
 Intensely still, and immemorial pools
 Silently shining, save when, now and then,
 The alligator glided from the bank,
 Warned by the chill of evening, or the girls,
 With tinkling bangles, and the ringing laugh
 Of youth, and happiness and unrestraint,
 In coming down for water, scared away
 The timid monster of two elements.

In the "Twins" there is an excellent description of a spirit-haunted cavern, and there are many passages which, like the following, show a light, graceful hand:—

The birds were scarce awake, the butterflies,
 Bees, and all tribes that live about sweet flowers,
 Had not yet met the morning; for they knew
 The petals would not open till the sun
 Had mounted somewhat higher—now he hung
 Like a red banner o'er the gates of dawn.

But we will now give complete one of Mr. Keene's sonnets, and we select one which appears especially to corroborate what we have said about his merits and faults:—

TO TIME.

When setting constellations counsel sleep,
 All through the silent watches of the night;
 Then, when the maiden Dawn, with chrysolite
 Paves the great sun's path up the eastern steep,
 All through the working hours of dusty day,
 I miss her, miss her, always, everywhere,
 To nerve my labour or to soothe my care.
 Time, flying time! I do not bid thee stay,
 But rather let my thoughts outwing thy pace;
 So might I once, before my manhood vanish,
 Behold her free from all but love's alarms,
 Fold her dear form within these empty arms,
 See my own love reflected in her face,
 And hear the voice my memory will not banish.

Now no one can possibly say that this is not good English, that the rhythm is not musical, and that the management of the difficult form is not skilful. Nor is pathos wanting. But if one was condemned not to have anything to eat till one had written down on a slate the exact sequence of thoughts in the writer's mind, oh, what a morning of penance, hunger, and lassitude would be in store for us!

However, some poems much more nearly approach completeness than others, and the two entitled "Perhaps" and "Sowing the Wind," though not free from occasional fog, are very nicely executed, and will repay perusal. Indeed, the whole volume will repay perusal; the reader must not expect absolute artistic gratification, but he must take what he can get, and he will certainly find many charming touches, and many evidences of an eye that can see nature, and a hand that can follow the eye. And even in the works of the highest genius how often do we have actually to practice this, resting thankful with what we can get. What carries us through the long and impotent attempt to prove Frederic the Great a hero but the delights to be enjoyed on the fruitless journey? We may then be thankful to a tolerable poet for graceful handiwork, without insisting that he should have that larger grasp of art to which few indeed can attain. The power of expression possessed by Mr. Keene and his aptness in hitting on good words and neat turns qualify him, in an especial degree, for a translator; and the piece entitled the Flowers' Revenge, from the German of Freiligrath, is remarkably well done. It reads with the freshness and ease of an original poem, and yet adheres with quite sufficient fidelity to the original. This is a branch of his art which we counsel Mr. Keene to follow up more closely; the discipline of another man's thought would be good for him, whilst at the same time ample scope is afforded for richness of vocabulary and felicity of phrase.

We will just mention why the volume is called "Under the Rose." Goethe has those lines, which bear this interpretation. No man confesses willingly in prose, but we often confide ourselves to the silent grove of the muses on the sly (sub rosa). The idea of a man's poetry being the confession of his whole being was a favourite one with Goethe. On this passage Mr. Keene has founded the following neat dedication to Barry Cornwall:—

No man his inner nature shows
 Willingly on the paths of prose,
 Yet oft the secret is betrayed
 In the Muses' silent shade—
 Under the Rose.
 So lonely Goethe. I who have found
 Among my fellows humbler ground,
 Still love to trifle truant hours
 Where dies beneath those magic bowers
 Each earthly sound.
 O, father of our modern lyre,
 You know the pulse such hours inspire,
 Accept these songs, though poor and slight,
 And judge them not by your clear light,
 But my desire.

The title seems to us a happy one for verses written amidst professional avocations. "These are my works," said Charles Lamb, pointing to the ledgers in the old India House. And it is to be hoped Mr. Keene is confessing himself in prose, in some distant Kuchcherry, whilst we are criticising his minor works here. The line before those forming the motto of "Under the Rose" is this:—

Lob und Tadel muss ja seyn.

We have praised and we have blamed; the faults are obvious, the merits claim from all, we think, certainly from Indian readers, a friendly appreciation.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

LORD MAYO.

The Englishman holds that the arguments of the public at home on the subject of this appointment are imperfect, as long as it is not shown that a good man, even as they estimate a good man, for India was available, and was passed over. This no one has yet attempted to show. A statesman of the Dalhousie type is certainly needed in this country, now more than ever. But who, of all the English statesmen of the present day, could be called a statesman of the Dalhousie type, without in a great degree anticipating his future career? The events of the last quarter of a century have hardly been of a nature to call forth a display of qualities of the Dalhousie type either in England or in any part of our possessions, except this country. Statesmen of the Dalhousie type may exist in posse, but we certainly do not know them. According to all accounts, Lord Mayo is not deficient in either pluck or obstinacy—two qualities without which another Dalhousie would certainly be impossible. We are far from saying that they are all that is required; but we have had quite enough of non-muscular statesmen, in Indian experience notwithstanding.

The Delhi Gazette believes that Lord Mayo is not by any account a man to rule his subordinates by fear, and cannot see why he should not be a Governor such as India shall remember in years to come with a kindly feeling, if not with pride and gratitude. The Ministerial organs—who, we presume, are as truthful and have as much right to have an opinion and to be heard—say he possesses qualifications which to us appear all that is necessary for success in the high office he is destined to occupy. By their version he is at once plastic and inflexible, patient and persistent, moderate and determined, industrious, unostentatious, painstaking, sensible, and sympathetic. This picture is doubtless overdone, too bright and glaring, but we remember it has been exhibited as a contrast to those which are too dark and sombre. Any way, we do not accept either as a correct representation. We prefer, as we have said, to try the rulers of India by our own standard. It may be a severe, but it is always an unprejudiced and therefore an impartial one. If Lord Mayo is possessed of that most important of all qualifications in a ruler of India, a fitness of acting through others; if he be capable of judging men sufficiently to select proper advisers; if he have the happy tact of choosing and using the best instruments at his disposal; if he give his mind to the great work before him, he will do for us. He will do for us all the better perhaps because, as we are led to believe, he will be for the greater part, if not for the whole of his career in India, in the Opposition. Mr. Disraeli's Viceroy is not likely to be neglected by Mr. Gladstone's Secretary of State for India.

IRRIGATION WORKS IN INDIA.

The Englishman cannot congratulate the officers of the Irrigation Department on the amount of work performed in connection with the new projects for irrigation in the Punjab and Oudh during the last season; but it is only fair to say in their favour that they laboured under considerable disadvantages. Many of them did not commence operations until the season was too far advanced, and then only with small establishments; whilst common coolies had to be trained to the duties of Khullassies, and by their mistakes in chaining and flagging out the lines, caused the officers to have to go over the whole of their work a second time. The new schemes reported upon by Major Gulliver, on the 31st of August last, consist of three, viz., operations connected with the Western Jumna Canal; operations connected with the Inundation Canals from the right bank of the Sutlej in the Lahore and Montgomery districts, and from the right bank of the Indus in the Dera Ghazee Khan district; and operations connected with the design for the canal from the left bank of the Sutlej at Roopur for the irrigation of the country between that river and the Guggur and Sursooti rivers. On the Jumna Canal the Kandrah drainage channel was nearly completed, and the Jooah channel and Ker escape commenced, whilst several projects for draining the country from the floods and utilising the water were considered. Actual measurements were also made of the quantity of water available from the Jumna in the monsoon, but the season was so exceptional that no reliable data could be arrived at. The report says, however, that enough information was obtained "to allow the general scheme for the irrigation of this portion of the country to be sketched out." Owing to the officers having been appointed so late in the year, a commencement only was made upon the survey of the Inundation Canals on the right banks of the Sutlej and Indus, general levels only having been taken. On the Sirhind Canal the position of the head of the Canal at Roopur has been decided on, and the channel marked out as far as the junction of the Puttiala branch. Eighty miles of the Puttiala branch have been surveyed, and designs and estimates prepared, and 988 miles of cross sections were taken to decide the courses of the other branches. In making these surveys several valuable quarries were discovered near the head of the canal, the rights of working which were purchased from ten villages for the sum of one thousand rupees. The necessity of pushing on these works has been fully shown by the scarcity of rain during the present year.

THE SALT DUTIES.

The Indian Daily News says it is quite true that the Financial Minister has under consideration the Salt Duties, with a view of forming a judgment as to whether those duties may not be equalised, or nearly equalised, throughout India—instead of remaining in their present anomalous condition—a condition under which the rack-rented cultivators and, generally speaking, poverty-stricken ryots of Bengal, pay a higher duty on the salt they consume than do either the very well-off village communities of Bombay, or the rapidly-becoming-wealthy cultivators of the Madras Presidency. A different rate of duty prevails in every gubernatorial division of India. That in Bengal is higher than that in Madras or than that levied in Bombay—is, in fact, the highest rate in India. Thus the rate in the North-West Provinces is not the same as that in the Punjab, nor as those in Oude and the Central Provinces; while, in the Punjab there are two, if not more, rates of duty! There is no room to doubt that under the existing system, or rather absence of any general and uniform system, much fiscal iniquity obtains; nor any doubt whatever that the ryots of Bengal Proper, the poorest of the cultivating class of India, have been and are the heaviest sufferers. Now that the energetic and indefatigable Sir Richard Temple has taken the question in hand we may expect to see it brought forward, in a manner to secure for it the attention its importance demands, in the Imperial Legislative Council during the ensuing cold season. There is, however, neither probability nor chance of any reduction being made in favour of the Hill tribes, as suggested by a North-western contemporary. Those wild but still cunning desperadoes require—that is, should have served out to them periodically—a Snider cum grape peppering and salting, instead of an obtainment of their supply of the saline condiment at less than the almost nominal rates of duty—two and four annas per maund—they now pay on the quantities they obtain from within our Punjab territories.

OFFICERS RELATIVELY WORSE OFF THAN SOLDIERS.

The Bombay Gazette contrasts the advantages open to soldiers as compared with officers. It might not perhaps be feasible to place both on a complete equality as regards the points discussed, but at a very little cost to Government the inequality might be greatly diminished. For instance, considering the large amount of transport available in the new transports—still further to be increased, it is said—Government could often if not always give a free passage home to those officers' wives who could produce a medical certificate to the effect that a change to England was absolutely essential to the recovery of their health. In the same manner officers' wives who had not accompanied their husbands to India for some valid reason might also be given free passages out. This would cost Government nothing, and would be an inestimable boon. As to the railway fare through Egypt, we cannot see the justice of making officers' families pay it out of their own pockets, while the fare for soldiers' families is paid by the State. In the matter of malt liquor, also, a considerable advantage might be given to officers by allowing them to purchase a certain amount from the Commissariat at cost price. This, again, would cost the country nothing. In the matter of quarters also, something might be done to benefit the officer without involving any expense to the State. Government has sanctioned a scheme for the erection of officers' quarters at all military stations, officers paying for the same at the rate of seven per cent. on the cost of the quarter. This is a very liberal arrangement, and has the further advantage of not costing Government anything. Years, however, will elapse before the intentions of Government can be completely carried out, and in the meantime married officers have to pay from Rs. 40 to Rs. 70 a-month for quite small houses. It is true that Government have sought to mitigate the hardship by advancing officers the amount of their tentage for the purpose of buying houses whenever no dwelling suitable to the rank of the applicant can be hired. The sum, however, is quite insufficient for the purpose, and even if it were not, but slight benefit is derived from the liberality of Government. The houses in most stations are generally the property of a few monopolists, who combine to keep up the present high rents. There may be a sufficient number of houses for all residents, and a Government grant be therefore unattainable; consequently the poor married subaltern is compelled to pay in rent a sum equal to the fourth of his income. This will be to a great extent remedied by the building of officers' quarters; but if there are many applicants, a married captain or subaltern will only be able to obtain quarters suited to his rank, which would give ample accommodation for a bachelor, but are quite insufficient to a man with a large family. Again, most men very naturally object to letting their wives live in barracks, and we imagine that when these officers' quarters shall have been completed every one will have to occupy, or at least pay rent for them. A far quicker, as regards the present, and a far more convenient method of protecting officers from the extortionate demands of house owners would be for Government to build quarters only for bachelors, and to buy as opportunity offered as many existing houses as would suffice for the average number of married officers in each station. The rent to be charged for these would of course depend upon the individual circumstances of each case, i. e., the state of repair and the age of each building. In any case, however, Government could charge such a rent as would afford good interest for the outlay, provide for repairs and deterioration, and yet demand about half what is at present paid to private house-owners. There are several other ways in which Government might practically add to the emoluments of officers without really adding a farthing to the military estimates. Were the quarters or purchased bungalows, for instance, provided with some of the more bulky articles of furniture, such as beds, tables, chairs, and almirahs, or wardrobes, charging a fair sum for the hire, officers would be saved a large portion of that ruinous outlay required in setting up house and the selling off, often at a great sacrifice, on leaving the station. Again, the Austrian plan of causing all articles of uniform to be kept in the regimental store and sold to officers at cost price would be a great boon. Another Austrian plan of saving the pockets of officers might be adopted—namely, of allowing staff and mounted officers to purchase chargers at the Government breeding studs at a reasonable rate. Indeed, were but a little trouble taken, a few inquiries among practical men made, many devices would be discovered by which the emoluments of officers would be increased without any augmentation of the army estimates. It would only be common generosity to make the endeavour, and it certainly would be wise, for there is much discontent at present among the officers of the army.

Bengal.

HAZARA.

The following are the latest telegrams published in the Bombay papers:—

SIMLA, Oct. 3, 4 P.M.—No decisive news has yet been received from the camp, but the troops were positively to march at three o'clock this morning. Colonel Rothney is to remain and guard the camp. The Cashmere troops are to hold the passes of Soosang, Kattar, and Anato, and also to guard the camp. The neutrality of the Hussunzaies and independent Swatees is considered very probable. No news of any of the Hindoostanee fanatics.

Oct. 4.—The troops occupied the Jalgulle Pass at 10 A.M. No resistance was met with on the Keahrotee spur; the heights above the Koongulle village to the left were weakly defended, but the enemy were driven off without loss on either side. A further advance will be made to-morrow.

BLACK MOUNTAINS, Oct. 4.—The 1st Brigade engaged the enemy yesterday, and occupied Chitterbut, on the crest of the Black Mountain; the 2nd Brigade is four miles below Chitterbut. Both brigades ascended the same spur. The enemy were driven from their first position without loss. At night the enemy attacked the bivouac of the 1st Brigade, inflicting a loss of two Sepoys killed and seven wounded. To-day three wounded as yet reported.

Oct. 5.—The operations yesterday were most successful, and resulted only in the loss of six Sepoys, wounded. The enemy, unable to stand our heavy fire, bolted.

Oct. 5, 10 P.M.—The 1st Brigade occupied Muchi Peak, the highest on the Black Mountain, at three o'clock this afternoon. The enemy, who appeared in large numbers, made no resistance, but retreated as the British troops advanced. The attacking force consisted of one British and four native regiments, covered by two mountain batteries. The troops are engaged making a road up the mountain. To-morrow the Elephant Battery will be on the Muchi plateau. The enemy, it is believed, will make no stand against the advance of our troops.

Oct. 7.—Resistance is collapsing, and some of the belligerent tribes are begging for terms. Lieutenant Unwin, 5th Goorkhas, was slightly wounded yesterday; one Sepoy killed, and seven wounded. Water is somewhat scarce. The troops are busy road-making.

Oct. 8.—No appearance of any enemy in General Wilde's front. The British troops were engaged yesterday burning the enemy's villages.

According to the Indian Daily News the rumour of the Sittana and Mulka fanatics being about, many of them to seek refuge in British territory, turns out to be well founded. A number of the fanatics have crossed, and others continue to follow them. There is no quarter for them now beyond our frontier. They are being attacked on the one side by the Khan of Umb, and on the other by the Akhoond of Swat and his people. These Wahabecs have really fallen on evil times; and what makes their case worse is, that there is nobody to pity them.

The Pioneer informs us that the column of observation to be stationed at Derbund will consist of 500 men of H.M.'s 38th Regt., the 31st Regiment Native Infantry, and a squadron of the 9th Bengal Cavalry. The entire force will be under the command of Colonel Willis, H.M.'s 38th Regiment. A brigade major and a commissariat officer will be attached to the force. Captain Wace is the officer endowed with political duties in that quarter. This force will, it is considered, be amply sufficient for the protection of the Khan of Umb, or—to give him his new title—the Nawab Bahadur of Umb, should the necessity for protection arise.

A correspondent of Indian Public Opinion, writing from Hazara, September 30, says:—"The head-quarters of the force were established at Oghee yesterday. Her Majesty's 19th Regiment marched into Oghee this morning. The 6th Royals and the 2-25 Royals and the 2-25 Royal Artillery, with mortars and rockets, will arrive to-morrow and complete the strength of the force. The heat has been very great, but a slight fall of rain to-day (September 30) has cooled the atmosphere. The troops continue healthy. The news that Feroze Shah and his one or two followers have left for Cabul and Bokhara has been confirmed. Most of the Hussunzaies and the independent Swatees have already tendered their submission to our political officers. The bulk of the Hindustanee fanatics are at their old head-quarters at Tanjora. Some few, however, are still on the banks of the Indus, and their plans seem as yet undecided. From Murdan it is stated that the Salarzaies are willing to tender their submission as to the points at issue, but they fear coming into Murdan, lest they should excite the anger of the Akhoond of Swat."

STATION TALK.

SIMLA, Sept. 30.—Days before this reaches you will probably have heard by telegraph of the little fighting there is to be done on the frontier having been commenced. General Wilde's force and preparations are complete in every respect; the reserves are in their proper places; the long-looked for 5½-inch mortars are in park; the three brigades are organised under, respectively, Colonels Vaughan, Bright, and Willis. All the tribes are in the most lively state of apprehension, and the fellow styling himself Prince Feroze Shah has had to fly out of Swat to Afghanistan. The Akhoond will have nothing to say or do with our enemies; so much for the good demonstration we have made. Many thought the force was too large, your correspondent among; but the chief and General Wilde know better, and are paid for "knowing better." There is now no doubt that the Afreedee and Omakzar raid on Murai, in Kohat, was the work of the Moulvees, and not of the Akhoond of Swat, who has had a good many things unfairly laid on his shoulders. A moulvee was supreme in Murai, and his tenets were different from those held by some moulvees across the border, and the latter, in their religious zeal, got those not unwilling "holy boys," the fishermen, to organise a raid upon the heterodox Murai, or rather to attempt such, and suffer for having attempted it. The Home Secretary, Mr. E. C. Bayley, leaves this in a day or two, on three months' privilege leave—to England! Something new, is it not? To England and back in three months! The materials of the Commander-in-Chief's camp will be at Umballa by the 25th proximo; but not even his Excellency himself knows anything further of his movements. Should—which is most improbable—the Hazara business not end with October, his Excellency may go as far as Lahore. All notion of going to Jhansie and Central India this year has been abandoned, and what is most likely is that Sir William will either accompany Sir John to Calcutta or quickly follow him there from Umballa. The opening of the Umballa and Delhi branch of the railway will be on or about the 25th proximo, and from the 25th to the 31st proximo special trains will run daily to Delhi from Umballa. They may, however, be only for the Government staff and employees.

Sept. 31.—The articles of war for the native troops are to be amended in some very important particulars. The Bill, as you are aware, has had "leave to be introduced," and is understood to effectually "cry down" the sepoy's credit, much in the same way as the British soldier is, by the law, made a personage whom no tradesman or dealer will permit "to sign." The sepoys we have been getting since the mutiny are, some people think, very unlike their Poorbea predecessors, inasmuch as instead of "saving" the tendency with them is to get into debt. Possibly complete inquiry would show that it is not so much the sepoys who have become changed and improvident as the "cost of living" which is greatly enhanced. Fifteen years ago a sepoy could lay by, and transmit to his friends at home, at least Rs. 3-8-0 a month; but he cannot do so now, finding it, as he sometimes does, a difficult matter to live as a soldier of the State should, and save a single pice! We accordingly find it not by any means so easy to procure native recruits of a desirable order as formerly; and "cutting names"—in other words, taking discharges—has become much more frequent than of yore. The men who would otherwise seek military service now find profitable employment as chuprases, in the Public Works Department, and as durwans to Europeans and natives of respectability. They no longer look upon the army as offering the best paid and most distingue employment. This should not be; for our native army should always be so paid and ruled that discharge from its ranks would be regarded by the sepoys as the greatest punishment which could be inflicted. This system, which tells so well on the Guards at home, should be that of the British army at large, European as well as native. A curious rumour has been afloat here that the Home Government, or some "friend" of theirs, telegraphed out to know whether Sir John Lawrence would resign a month or a month and a-half before his time in favour of Lord Mayo? The rumour is only heard outside official quarters, and may be a "shave;" nevertheless, I have heard very well-informed people, when talking of the present shakiness of the Tory administration, add emphatically that there was not the slightest chance of Sir John resigning the viceroyalty a single hour before his full period had expired, no matter how anxious and desirous he may be to rejoin his family in England.

MHOW, Oct. 3.—The old (Company's) artillery are to leave here next month; the head quarters and No. 6 Battery 21st Brigade for England; the D.-E. Battery R.H.A. for Nusseerabad. With the head quarters two of the best and most popular officers that ever served in the Indian Artillery go home—namely, Colonels Petrie and Murray. I have known the former from the time of his arrival in India in 1841, and can confidently say that a more popular man, or excellent officer, never served in the regiment. From the battles of Meeanee and Hyderabad, to Magdala, is a long stretch, and Colonel Petrie has served in India nearly all that period. Colonel Murray served for many years in the Ordnance Department, and was a general favourite with his subordinates. Many of the latter were expecting him to join the department again, on Colonel Mellersh proceeding to England on furlough, but although offered the appointment, he prefers, I am told, going to the "banks and braes o' bonny Doon" again. Wherever he and Colonel Petrie go they will carry with them the best wishes of the men who served under them in India.—Times of India Correspondent.

USE OF SNIDER RIFLES BY THE TROOPS.—Officers commanding regiments armed with muzzle-loading rifles and muskets are cautioned against making any changes in the drill of manoeuvre because of alterations consequent on the introduction of Snider rifles in a few regiments.

Miscellaneous.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.—Intelligence has reached the Presidency that her Majesty's Second Battalion Rifle Brigade will proceed in wings to Seetapore and Benares, instead of Benares and Darjeeling. —Englishman, Sept. 29.

MILITARY.—Colonel Roberts, v.c., formerly of the Quartermaster-general's Department, is expected shortly from England to succeed Major C. C. Johnson as First Assistant in the same department. Major Johnson will then most probably be appointed chief of the Barrack Department. —Englishman, Sept. 29.

ARRIVALS FROM EUROPE.—The undermentioned officer and warrant officer have reported their return from England:—Major H. E. Quin, of the Bengal Staff Corps, Deputy Assistant Quartermaster-general; and Sub-Conductor P. Keay, Sub-Engineer, 2nd Grade, Department Public Works, date of arrival at Fort William, 14th September, 1868.

APOTHECARIES' EXAMINATIONS.—Hospital Apprentice G. B. R. Ellis, of the Subordinate Medical Department, is reported to have passed for the grade of Assistant Apothecary on the 15th January, 1864. The undermentioned Hospital Apprentices have been reported qualified for promotion to the grade of Assistant Apothecary, with effect from the 17th July last:—Henry Watson and Fred. Chas. Adie.

LEGISLATION AT SIMLA.—A meeting of the Viceregal Council was held at Simla on the 1st Oct. Sir George Couper, Bart., a newly-appointed member, took the usual oaths of allegiance, &c. The Inoculation (Kumaon and Garhwal) Bill was passed; the report of the committee on the Coorg Courts Bill was presented; and the Lock Hospitals Bill was referred to a Select Committee.

REMOUNTS.—Major-General Colin Troup, C.B., Colonel W. H. Ryves, Lieutenant-Colonel T. James, Major E. Harnett, and Staff Veterinary Surgeon W. Johnson, have been appointed to form a committee to enquire into and report on certain points connected with the system under which remounts are at present supplied to the Bengal army.

RATIONS.—H.E. the Governor-general in Council directs that, whenever Indian allowances shall be drawn by troops embarked on board transport or hired ships to England, or from port to port in India, the malt liquor sanctioned must be paid for at the rate of 1d. or 8 pie per pint. It will, however, be optional with the men to take the malt liquor on that condition.

SETTLEMENT OFFICERS' EXAMINATIONS.—It is notified that the notification, dated the 7th July, 1866, investing all settlement officers who had passed the higher standard of examination, or had been exempted from examination, with the full powers of a magistrate, to be exercised in the district to which they are attached, is applicable to every settlement officer who has since been, or may in future be, appointed in the North-Western Provinces.

PENSIONED SOLDIERS IN INDIA.—With regard to soldiers who elect to reside in India on pension, after completing the regulated period of service, H.E. the Commander-in-Chief deems it very desirable that commanding officers should discourage soldiers of this class from settling in the country, unless they are satisfied that the men can obtain respectable and permanent employment or means of living.

BENGAL COMMISSIONERS.—A proposal is before the Government involving a reduction in the number of Commissioners. It has been suggested that the number of Commissioners under the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal be reduced from eight to four. Under this arrangement each Commissioner would receive charge of two divisions. But to remedy any inconvenience from such an arrangement, it has been added that they are to be constantly on the move. —Indian Daily News, Oct. 3.

CAPTAIN SLADEN.—The Rangoon papers state that letters, dated 6th September, had been received from the Bhanmo Expedition. Captain Sladen and party had reached Bhanmo after surveying three routes between that place and Momein. Before leaving Bhanmo for the Burmese capital Captain Sladen had called a meeting of the Tsaubwas, with a view to induce them to keep the route open. On the return journey the people were found to manifest a decidedly friendly feeling to the explorers.

MUNICIPAL.—The election of Mr. James Casamaijor Robertson, Officiating Magistrate and Collector of Allahabad, as President, and of Mr. Robert Carr, as Vice-President of the Municipal Committee of Allahabad, is approved by the Hon. the Lieutenant-governor. A Supplementary Commission of the Peace has been issued by the High Court of Judicature at Fort William, in Bengal, directed to Captain Henry Auriol Prinsep, Cantonment Magistrate of Agra, and directed to Mr. David Anthony, Deputy Magistrate of Mirzapore.

CHAPLAINS' GRIEVANCES.—It is said that the Lord Bishops of Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras have respectively recommended to the Government of India that the period of service which entitles chaplains to retiring pensions may be reduced from twenty-five to fifteen years, or assimilated to that of judicial and educational officers, and that they may be permitted to remain in service even after that period if they deem fit to do so, and not be compelled to retire when superannuated. The Government of India has referred the case to the favourable consideration of the Home Government.

A PLEASING TESTIMONIAL.—The Pioneer states that an address, bearing the signatures of the Maharajahs of Dholpore, Benares, and Kupoorthala, of Sir Rajah Deva Narain Singh, and of several native gentlemen—pleaders, bankers, landholders, &c., residents of different parts of India, from Calcutta upwards—is about to be sent to England for presentation to Mr. Edwards, late a Judge of the High Court, N.W.P. The address is to be accompanied with a purse of Rs. 8,000 for the purchase of a testimonial to Mr. Edwards, the selection of which is left entirely to that gentleman's taste and discretion.

MEDICAL ARRANGEMENTS.—HAZARA FIELD FORCE.—The Hazara Field Force order, dated the 1st of September, directing Assistant Surgeon Chesnaye to assume medical charge of the field hospital (native troops) at Abbotabad, with effect from the 28th of August is confirmed. Ditto, dated the 28th of August, directing Surgeon Major Turnbull, 24th Native Infantry, to assume medical charge of the head quarters staff Hazara Field Force, in addition to his other duties. No. 2 Brigade Hazara Field Force order, dated the 7th of September, directing Surgeon Gulland, M.D., 1st Battalion 6th Foot, to assume medical charge of the staff of No. 2 Brigade, with effect from the 27th of August.

DEATH OF ASSISTANT-SURGEON J. H. WHITE.—A general court-martial was to have assembled at Barrackpore yesterday for the trial of Assistant Surgeon White, who was recently tried at Fort William. It will not however take place, the unfortunate gentleman having been found dead on his bed at about five P.M. on Thursday. He was last seen alive at a quarter-past one o'clock by an officer of the 9th N.L., who went into his room. At that time he expressed a wish to go to sleep, and must have died immediately afterwards. We have not heard of the result and post mortem examination, but it is supposed he was attacked with apoplexy whilst asleep. —Indian Daily News, Oct. 3.

NEW SYSTEM OF ROOFING BARRACKS.—The newly-roofed European infantry barracks at Jubbulpore are said to have undergone so great an improvement, having stood the rains of 1867 and 1868 remarkably well, that we draw the attention of builders in general to the description of roofing. It consists of a double layer of tiles, instead of a single one, over a flat brick. The roof is light and keeps the inside of the buildings cool in the hot season. The design is that of Mr. O'Donnell, Executive Engineer at Jubbulpore, who could scarcely have any objection to communicating a description and plan of the tiles and roofing to some professional publication, such as the Roorkee paper or the Bombay Builder.

CIVIL LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following civil servants obtained leave of absence in September last:—Mr. Henry, Executive Engineer, 4th Grade, Central India, three months' special leave, from the 15th Sept., for the purpose of studying the Hindustani language; twenty days' privilege leave is granted to Dr. Cullen, Civil Surgeon, Hoshungabad, from the 10th November next; two months' privilege leave, under Chapter II., Section 19, of the Rules of June 1868, is granted to Mr. Hadow, Civil Surgeon of Boolundshuhur; privilege leave for three months is granted to Mr. Bayley, Secretary for the Government of India, Home Department, with effect from the 5th Oct.

DISTRESS IN GWALIOR.—The Maharaja of Gwalior has remitted or at least postponed the payment of the first instalment of the land revenue in his territory on account of the season, and a large number of the population who crowded at Gwalior last month are returning to their homes. But we hear that a stream of people is still pouring downwards towards Malwa, deluded by the belief that they will find wheat selling there at two rupees a maund—the fact being, as a rule, that the further they go south they find prices invariably rise, at any rate along and in the vicinity of the high road. The poor wretches, those of them who have any cattle, dispose of them for what they will fetch as they go along. Round about Goona the crops are in good order, but a scarcity of grain is apprehended.

MARCH OF ENLIGHTENMENT.—We heard rather a good story a few days ago in which the Maharajah of Jeypore showed, we think, rather more than the usual acumen of native princes. Our readers are probably aware that there has been scarcely any rain in Rajpootana, and that a famine is expected. The other day an individual came to the environs of Jeypore and gave out that he had power over the rain, and that if his Highness would visit him that he would cause the clouds to give the long wished for showers. In former days lands have actually been given to persons who have been supposed to possess such powers, and these lands are still in the possession of their descendants, on whom however the mantle of their forefathers does not seem to have descended. The Maharajah, on hearing of this man's boast, pitied his folly, and suggested that a man who was so powerful as to rule the clouds and cause rain to come could surely order the King of Jeypore to come into his presence if it was necessary to produce rain! We ought to hail with gladness these breaks in the chain of superstition with which the nobles of this land have so long been bound. We also hear that his Highness, owing to the scarcity, has exempted all grain from duty. He loses about Rs. 1,20,000 this year by the measure, but he will have the blessing of many poor starving creatures; and who will not join in giving him credit for such a noble example! —Delhi Gazette.

THE SCARCITY IN THE NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.—Accounts from Hissar, Sirsa, and Bikaner are very distressing as regards the effects of famine. At the latter place we hear that parents are selling their children to save them and themselves from starvation. The Rajah does his utmost to alleviate the sufferings of the poor, but as his own means are limited, he cannot do much towards it. The Hurreana district, notwithstanding its verdant name, is generally the first to suffer in seasons of scarcity. Rain seldom falls in sufficient quantity to enable the cultivators to hope for a fair out-turn once in three seasons; and when there is a scarcity of rain elsewhere Hurreana is sure to suffer most—notwithstanding a very fine canal which runs through the district.—Mofussilite, Oct. 3.

JUBBULPORE EXTENSION OF THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.—A letter from Jubbulpore confirms the intelligence given by us in a recent issue of the earnestness displayed at that station for the speedy completion of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company's works. The earthworks have been completed within a few yards of the terminal station site, and the turfing of the banks is rapidly progressing. Ballast is being carted and laid on the roadway; the girders for the bridges have nearly been finished at the local workshop; plate-laying has been brought within the civil station limits; and a small engine with half-a-dozen trucks may be seen going up and down the new line with the permanent way material. The East India Railway Company are also pushing on their works in continuation of their present temporary station towards the terminal site, and will be quite ready to meet the Great Indian Peninsula by the time the latter have their roadway completed to the junction point. The day will be duly celebrated by the usual festivities.—Delhi Gazette, Oct. 3.

MILITARY FURLONGS AND LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The undermentioned officers have leave of absence:—Brevet Major Pearce, F Battery, 20th Brigade, R.A., to remain in England, from December 29, 1868, to September 29, 1869, on urgent private affairs, in extension; Second Captain Robinson, Adjutant 22nd Brigade and Royal Artillery, Gwalior District, to England, via the Cape, from date of embarkation; Lieutenant MacDonnell, 12th Foot, to Darjeeling, from Aug. 25, for four months; Major Barter, Commandant, 15th (the Loodianah) Regiment N.I., for two years; Captain Knapp, 46th Foot, to England, via the Cape, from date of embarkation; Lieut. Crofton, 60th Foot, to England, overland, from date of embarkation; Major Wilkinson, 82nd Foot, to England, overland, from date of embarkation; Lieutenant-colonel Wedderburn, Staff Corps, to Simla, from Aug. 6 to November 1; Major Pierce, Staff Corps, to Buxar and Nynce Tal, from September 15, for two months, on urgent private affairs; Major Barter, Commanding 15th N.I., to Calcutta, from the 1st to the 10th November, preparatory to applying for furlough to Europe, on private affairs, under the new rules of 1868; Lieutenant-colonel Russell, R.A., Commissary of Ordnance, 1st Class, for sixteen months; Lieutenant Vertue, Assistant Commissioner, Boorhanpore, in Nimar, availed himself of the preparatory leave granted to him on the 7th inst., making over charge of his office to Extra Assistant Commissioner Mahomed Zainool-ab-deen Khan.

CIVIL FURLONGS.—The following civil servants obtained furloughs on m.c. to Europe in September under the last new rules:—Mr. Field, to Europe, for a period of two years, from the date of embarkation. Subsidiary leave for two weeks is also granted to Mr. Field from such date as he may avail himself of it. The privilege leave for two months granted to the Honourable Brandreth, of the Bengal Civil Service, dated the 9th of April last, is cancelled, and he is now granted leave of absence preparatory to furlough, with effect from the date on which he availed himself of privilege leave up to the date on which he sailed from India. The Honourable Brandreth, of the Civil Service, is permitted to proceed to Europe for a period of two years, from the 1st of July last. Twenty-five days' subsidiary leave, to enable him to reach the port of embarkation, with the view of proceeding to Europe on leave on private affairs, is granted to Lieutenant-Colonel Robert Unwin, Cantonment Magistrate of Bareilly, with effect from the 9th of November next. Captain Impey, Political Agent, Marwar, has been granted one month's preparatory leave, from the 20th of September, to enable him to proceed to Bombay with a view of applying for furlough. Major Ramsay, Military Assistant to the Commissioner of Mysore, is granted preparatory leave from such date as he may avail himself of it to enable him to proceed to Madras, with the view of obtaining furlough. Mr. Paterson, Judge of Agra, was a passenger on board the steam-ship Mooltan, which was left by the pilot at sea on the 31st of August. Major Allardyce, Deputy Commissioner, Mekhur, and Officiating Commissioner, West Berar, left Bombay on furlough on the 1st of September by the steamer Rangoon.

DECISIONS ON THE NEW MILITARY FURLOUGH REGULATIONS.—The Commander-in-Chief has directed the following decisions by the Government of India, on questions relating to the Furlough Regulations of 1868, to be published:—"1. Rule 16, which limits the amount of furlough which an officer may be allowed with pay and retention of appointment during his service to eight years, has retrospective effect. 2. The period passed on furlough on private affairs or on medical certificate out of India, under former rules, must be included in the eight years. 3. Any leave taken out of India Proper, although within Indian limits according to the old leave rules, will count against the eight years allowed under rule 16. —Rule 25 refers only to leave taken actually in India."

THE NEW VICAR APOSTOLIC.—We have to congratulate Madras on the accession to episcopal dignity and the rule of the Roman Catholic Vicariate of Madras of the now Right Reverend Stephen Fennelly. The great and good work which has been performed by the Irish Mission here for many years is, we should say, in a very large measure due to the very earnest and excellent man who has now succeeded to the episcopal charge of the Vicariate. He was doubtless stimulated in the performance of his arduous duties by the veneration he justly felt for his late respected brother, who esteemed him, not as his right hand man, but as his right hand. There are few appointments on which the interests of so many poor people are dependent as upon the appointment of a successor to the late Right Reverend John Fennelly.

MILITARY LEAVE OF ABSENCE ON MEDICAL CERTIFICATE, &c.—H.R.H. the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief has been pleased to grant leave of absence to the undermentioned officers of the Royal Artillery, as follows (September 14):—Assistant-Surgeon Lower, Brigadier, from July 21, 1868, to November 27, 1868; Lieut. Tyzack, 23rd Brigade, from August 4, 1868, to February 4, 1869; Major Skottowe, Staff Corps, for six months, from date of departure, on private affairs, within the limits of the Madras Presidency; Lieut. Graham, 16th Lancers, from August 31, 1868, or date of departure, for three months, to Neilgherries; Lieutenant McIver, 6th N. I., from September 2, or for one month, to Madras; Lieut.-Colonel McMaster, A. C., Staff Corps, from September 20 to December 20, to Ootacamund and Bangalore, on private affairs.

EXAMINATIONS.—The undermentioned officers have been examined in the Telugoo language:—Captain Swiney and Lieut. Bradshaw, Staff Corps; and Lieut. Stainforth, General List.—Kamptee—Passed the elementary test. The undermentioned medical officer has passed the lower standard examination in the Hindustani language:—Assistant Surgeon Stewart, Bengal Establishment. Assistant Surgeon White, 1st Foot, proceeding to England on medical certificate, will take charge from Madras of the invalids from Presidency, Mysore and Burmah circles to Bombay per the overland route. On the report of the Committee for the Examination of Assistants, the undermentioned officers are declared to have passed the legal test prescribed in the proceedings of Government, dated 6th September, 1865: Lieut. Tillard, Assistant Superintendent of Police, Bellary; Lieut. Whitlock, Acting Assistant Superintendent of Police, Nursapore.

CIVIL FURLONGS AND LEAVES OF ABSENCE.—The following furloughs and leaves were granted in September, under new rules:—Mr. Wilson, Acting Sub-Collector and Joint Magistrate of Kistna District, two years' furlough; Mr. McQuhae, Acting Collector and Magistrate of Kistna District, two years' furlough in January next, under sections 3 and 6, with subsidiary leave; Captain Bogle, of the Staff Corps, Executive Engineer of the 4th grade, two months, on medical certificate, from the 1st August, 1868; Surgeon Graham, Assay Master, Madras Mint, privilege leave of absence for one month; Mr. Wigram, Acting Registrar of the High Court of Judicature at Madras, privilege leave for two months; privilege leave of absence to Captain Sewel, Deputy-Assistant Commissary General, for sixty days from date of departure; privilege leave of absence to Lieutenant-Colonel A. Stewart, Royal Artillery, Acting Deputy Inspector-General of Ordnance and Magazines, for fifty days, from the 28th September, 1868.

MILITARY RED TAPE.—In our issue of the 19th September we offered some remarks in connection with questions of military hygiene. At the same time we alluded to the health of the 21st Fusiliers. It now seems that the medical authorities, regimental and station, have protested against the move to Burmah, as a large number of men have suffered from dysentery and other diseases incident to the climate. Even the non-professional observer, seeing the regiment on parade with other corps, cannot, it is said, fail to be painfully struck by the generally unhealthy appearance of the men; while the high sick-rate and death-rate, compared with all other regiments in the Madras command, is strikingly shown in the quarterly returns of the Inspector-General's Office circulated from headquarters for the information of officers commanding stations. Notwithstanding all this, as we remarked the other day, the 21st Regiment is to be sent "out of the frying-pan into the fire," because it and the 24th Regiment stand first for removal at the office of the Quartermaster-General, in order that routine may not be disturbed. The cost from sickness, invaliding, and mortality certain to result from so injudicious a movement of the troops does not appear to have been duly thought of. It might be imagined that late experience in the Mauritius would have been sufficient warning to prevent the authorities committing like blunders in Madras; but here again we have a fresh instance of the common-sense recommendations of those best able to judge having been set aside, and a movement ordered which cannot be considered safe or inevitable. It is well known that the sickness and ill-health of the 21st Regiment was materially aggravated by the large amount of bounty money paid to the men; any plan, therefore, by which men might be encouraged to re-engage without injuring themselves morally and physically would be highly desirable. Either some such plan as we proposed for the gradual acclimatisation of the European soldier should be adopted, or the recommendations of the Royal Commission should be acted on so as to leave a certain part of the force in hill stations.—Madras Times.

THE BANK OF MADRAS.—On the 21st September the Government sanctioned the establishment of a branch of the Bank of Madras at Mangalore.

INSTALLATION OF THE YOUNG RAJAH OF MYSORE.—A correspondent has sent us a few particulars anent the installation of the young Rajah of Mysore, which was celebrated on a grand scale on Tuesday, the 22nd September. The only festivities observed in the palace are the Dasarah, the birthday, and a few more. The non-observance of Dasarah in the palace this year, sanction not coming from the Supreme authorities, augmented the sorrows of both the people and the inmates of the palace to such an extent that the whole town wore a gloomy appearance. It is said that in the zenana some of the Ranees of his late highness never tasted even a morsel of food. They being far advanced in age, it was apprehended that they would suffer seriously in health. But to the surprise of one and all, and for the good of the country, a telegram was received announcing the assent of the Home authorities to the installation of the young Maharajah. The rejoicings manifested by the people on that day are beyond description. The Commissioner, with other European officers and some cavalry came a day previous to the ceremony. There was also a very large gathering of both European and Hindu ladies and gentlemen in the palace. The young Prince is a fair, graceful looking boy of five or six years of age, and performed his part so well during the ceremony as to command the admiration of all present. The Commissioner placed the young Prince on the elevated and splendid golden throne, which is richly embellished with pearls and precious stones. The band played in the front; the State elephant, horse and cow, were standing near, richly caparisoned, and offering their homage. The retinue comprised various insignia bearers, and the officers of the palace, accoutred for the special occasion, formed a corps in attendance. The various sorts of music and tom-tomming were quite deafening to the ear, and made the whole palace resound. It is usual, it would appear, to hold durbar for three successive days, during which time all respectable native gentries pay their respects to the Rajah. Further than this, the whole town, without distinction of caste or colour, was fed on that day, and liberal presents were given to the deserving servants.—Madras Times.

MILITARY FURLONGS AND LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The undermentioned officers are permitted to proceed to Europe:—Lieutenant-Colonel Kempster, Staff Corps, Commandment 6th Regiment Native Infantry, on furlough (private affairs) for two years, under the regulations of 1868, and to embark from Madras; Captain Miller, Staff Corps, attached 16th Regiment Native Infantry, on m.c. for two years, under the regulations of 1868, and to embark from Madras; Lieutenant Vertue, Staff Corps, Assistant Commissioner Central Provinces, on furlough, m.c., for two years, under the regulations of 1868, and to embark from Madras; Captain Cook, of the Staff Corps, Superintendent of Police, British Burmah, has been permitted to proceed to Europe on m.c. for twenty months, under the furlough regulations of 1854, with effect from the date of his embarkation from Rangoon. The undermentioned officers have leave of absence:—Brevet Major Dance, Royal Artillery (No. 5 Battery 20th Brigade) to England, overland, from date of embarkation to appear before a Medical Board; Major Palmer, 90th Foot, to Calcutta, to appear before a Medical Board, for one month, from the 31st of August, in extension of privilege leave; Brevet-Major Ramsay, 10th Madras Native Infantry, to remain at Darjeeling, on m.c. from the 7th June to the 30th November, in extension of privilege leave. (In cancellation of the leave granted by G. O. of the 22nd July.) THE DURBAR AT POONA.

The first durbar held by Sir Seymour Fitzgerald took place at Poona on Tuesday, Oct. 6th. The scene of the ceremonial was the handsome hall of the Engineering College, a room well adapted for the purpose, under the circumstances. The day was fine; the roads were crowded with natives in holiday costume, and they evidently enjoyed the tumasha as they always do. Nothing could have been more successful than the imposing ceremony, and no one could have performed his part, as representative of the Queen, better than the Governor. The chiefs and Sirdars mustered in considerable force, and several were attended by groups of followers more or less picturesquely attired. There was a brisk demand for vehicles of all sorts; neither the elephant nor even the paliki was wanting. Outside the hall were guards of honour, both horse and foot; in the latter the British infantry were conspicuous for their solid and handsome appearance. A battery was drawn up just off the road, and suggested, like the British foot, the power that lay under the surface of the lively display.

Within the hall the native rajahs and Sirdars were seated in rows on each side of the avenue leading to the dais, placed at the end opposite the door. A gold-bespangled cloth or carpet overspread the steps and the platform. Three chairs were placed thereon. That on the right hand was filled by the Rajah of Kolapore, that on the left by the Maharajah of Edur. The central seat, covered with cloth of gold, was intended for His Excellency the Governor. Further off, to the right and left, were seats for the members of the Civil Service, Legislative Council, and the Military Staff. The galleries were originally intended for the ladies, and they formed a bright portion of the spectacle; but a pressure for space compelled several gentlemen to seek the galleries, and red and blue uniforms and black coats formed a background to the fair ladies of Poona. One portion of the gallery, screened from profane eyes by lattice work, was set apart for the native ladies who had the courage to attend. About half-past four the sound of guns and the strains of the band announced the arrival of the Governor, who presently walked up the avenue to his seat, amid the whole audience who stood to receive him. He shook hands with the near neighbours of his throne, and bowing to the assembly seated himself, a signal for the down-sitting of all. (Nineteen great nobles and more than 200 minor chiefs and sirdars were present, besides a great number of English and native officials.) Then one after another the rajahs were presented, the boy rajahs of Barca, Loonawarra, and Jowar leading the way; Nuzzeranas were tendered and presents made in return; the High Priest of the Parsees, a most noble, dignified, and wonderfully well-dressed gentleman, received a handsome gold medal. Wreaths of flowers were distributed in the usual way, duly besprinkled with scent, the perfume of which filled the hall. Not the least interesting incident was the address to the Governor, read extremely well by the Rajah of Kolapore, whose training reflects the greatest credit on Captain West. The reply of the Governor was worthy of his reputation as a good speaker in the most fastidious chamber in the world. He was fluent, weighty, dignified. During the delivery of his speech the scene was really beautiful. All the bright colours harmonised, and produced an effect worthy of a grander scene. On the whole, though we hear there were some complaints and mischances, the ceremony was an entire success, creditable to all who had a share in the arrangements, and who took part in the proceedings.

The Rajah of Kolhapoor, a young man of about twenty years of age, is an admirable English scholar, and there is every reason to hope that the high education he has received will fit him to govern his State in the way that an enlightened ruler should. The Rajah of Edur, Sir Jowan Singjee, has a slight acquaintance with English, of which he makes the best use he can. He was appointed some months since to an additional seat in the Legislative Council of the Governor of Bombay, and the earnest attention which he pays to the duties of his office, and his desire for improvement, seem to show an admission on his part of the fact that "a life of ease is not for any man." We may add that the Rajah of Kolhapoor is a descendant of Sivajee, the great founder of the Mahratta Empire; and that Sir Jowan Singjee claims a lineage, by the side of which Guelph, Bourbon, and Hapsburgh would seem but houses of recent creation.

The address congratulated her Majesty on the late successes in Abyssinia, complimented Sir S. Fitzgerald and Lord Napier, expressed pride in the good conduct of the Bombay Sepoys, and referred gratefully to the "good counsels" of Sir B. Frere. In his reply the Governor of Bombay quoted the speaker of the address as a "striking example" of the good done by education, and suggested the forming in Poonah of some institution for teaching the younger members of the aristocracy of Western India.

Miscellaneous.

THE 82ND FOOT.—Orders have been received at Kurrachee for the embarkation of the head-quarters of the 82nd Regiment on the 6th October. The regiment proceeds to Aden by the steamers Asia and Scotia.

NEWS OF DR. LIVINGSTONE.—H.M.S. Octavia arrived at Trincomalee on the 24th ult. from Zanzibar, and, according to a telegram received in Madras, brought intelligence that Dr. Livingstone was well, and was believed to be within one week's march of Zanzibar.

ACTING APPOINTMENTS.—The following officers acted in the appointments and for the periods set against their names:—Mr. Davies, Acting Deputy Commissioner of Customs, Salt, and Opium, P.D., Commissioner of Customs, Salt, and Opium, from March 15, 1868, to April 17, 1868; Mr. Taylor, Senior Assistant Commissioner of Customs, Salt, and Opium, Deputy Commissioner of Customs, Salt, and Opium, P.D., from March 15, 1868; Mr. Major, Assistant Commissioner of Customs, Salt, and Opium, Deputy Commissioner of Customs, Salt, and Opium, N.D., from March 18 to March 31, 1868; Mr. Cameron, Assistant Commissioner of Customs, Salt, and Opium, Deputy Commissioner of Customs, Salt, and Opium, N.D., from May 19 to June 6, 1868.

ACCIDENT TO LIEUT.-COL. BIVAR.—We regret to state that Lieut.-Col. Bivar, commanding H.M. Light Cavalry, met with an accident at the children's fete on Friday, whereby his arm was broken above the elbow. It appears that he was distributing presents from the Christmas tree, when something fell upon his outstretched arm, and snap the bone. He is, we are glad to say, progressing favourably.—Poonah Observer, Sept. 29.

THE GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY.—We (Bombay Gazette) understand that H. E. the Governor of Bombay has given up, for the present, the idea of a tour in Kattywar. When he quits Poonah he will, we believe, proceed to Mahableshwar, and after that return to Bombay, in order to receive Lord Mayo, should that nobleman sail for India. The Exhibition at Broach may also be honoured with the personal attendance of Sir Seymour Fitzgerald; and he may then, perhaps, take the opportunity to visit Kattywar.

A GAZETTEER FOR BOMBAY.—Mr. W. Crowe, a promising young civilian, attached to the Poonah Collectorate, has been appointed to compile a gazetteer of the Bombay Presidency. The work is one that promises to be very useful, and Mr. Crowe has an opportunity of making some reputation. Similar works are to be undertaken in the other presidencies and provinces, and the whole when completed will form a valuable addition to our statistical, geographical, and administrative knowledge of India.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The undermentioned civilians passed examinations in the following languages on the 1st Oct.—Guzerathee, Mr. Ayerst; Hindoostanee, Mr. Porteous and Mr. Johnston. Mr. Little, Executive Engineer, 4th Grade, and Lieutenant Mander, Assistant Engineer, 1st Grade, have passed an examination in the Guzerathi language as prescribed in the Public Works Code. The undermentioned officers are reported to have passed the required examination in Hindustani, according to the Lower Standard:—Assistant Surgeons Batty, Gordon, and Arnott, Indian Medical Department; and Assistant Surgeon Fleming, M.D., British Medical Service, Bengal Presidency.

CIVIL FURLONGS.—Captain Crispin, Staff Corps, is allowed an extension of his privilege leave from August 10 to October 31, 1868, on m.c.; Mr. Kemball, Judge and Session Judge of Surat, is allowed privilege leave of absence for two months, from Sept. 17; the leave for fifteen months, on m.c., granted to Mr. Jacomb, Under Secretary to Government in the Revenue, Financial, and General Departments, on the 3rd March last, is cancelled, and he is allowed instead a furlough for two years under the New Covenanted Service Leave Rules; Hon. Shaw Stewart, Acting Secretary to Government in the Revenue, Financial, and General Departments, and Acting Chief Secretary to Government, is allowed privilege leave for two months, from the 1st instant.

A MAHRATTI TRANSLATION OF THE QUEEN'S BOOK.—Mr. Gunputrao Moroba Pitale, the librarian, head clerk, and very efficient assistant to the Registrar of the University of Bombay, has received the permission of H.M. the Queen to publish a Mahratti translation of the book entitled "Leaves from a Journal of our Life in the Highlands," which has afforded so much enjoyment to the subjects of her Majesty in Great Britain and the colonies, and indeed wherever the English language is spoken. Mr. Gunputrao has received from the English publishers of the work, by the express permission of the Queen, all the casts of the illustrations to the original work, and these will be used for the production of illustrations to the Mahratti translation. It is also proposed, we believe, to have a Guzerati translation of the work, and thus, through the medium of the two principal languages of this Presidency, a book by the Queen will be made available for the enjoyment of the princes, the chiefs, and the people of Western India, in their own languages.

MILITARY FURLONGS, &c.—The undermentioned officers are allowed furlough to Europe, on medical certificate:—Lieut.-colonel Hodgson, Staff Corps, for two years; Lieut.-colonel Constable, Bengal Staff Corps, for two years; Captain Swanson, Royal Artillery, for one year and 135 days; Colonel Snow, Madras Staff Corps, Deputy Commissioner, Baitool, Central Provinces; Lieutenant Bogue, 49th Foot, twelve months, from Nov. 1, 1868, to England, on urgent private affairs; Lieutenant-colonel Gibbard, 18th Brigade, R.A., from Oct. 7, 1868, to Jan. 4, 1869, on private affairs; Lieutenant Golding, 95th Foot, thirty days, from date of departure, to proceed to Lucknow, on m.c.; Colonel Field, 10th Regiment N.I., thirty days, from date of departure, to proceed to Bombay, on m.c., preparatory to obtaining a final certificate to Europe. The following officers, who are under orders to proceed to England, are appointed to do duty with the invalids, time-expired men, &c., to embark at Bombay on the 12th Oct.:—Lieutenant West, R.H.A.; Ensign Tuck, 10th Foot; Lieutenant Hooper, 18th Hussars; Lieutenant Ferguson, 21st Foot; Lieut. Mosenthal, 96th Foot—these officers will proceed to Bombay, and report themselves to the Brigade Major of the garrison; Lieut. Mosenthal, 96th Foot, fifteen months, from date of departure, to England, on private affairs; Captain Hayshe, 49th Foot, to Bombay, on m.c., preparatory to obtaining a final certificate to Europe; Lieut. Thornhill, R.A., from Aug. 28, 1868, to Feb. 28, 1869, on the recommendation of a medical board.

MUSCAT.—No sooner is peace restored in one quarter of the Persian Gulf than disturbances break out in another. We announced last week that Colonel Pelly had succeeded, with the aid of H.M.S.

Vigilant, and one or two vessels of the Bombay Marine, in establishing order in Bahrein, and that peace again pervaded the Gulf. This week we have to report the outbreak of hostilities at Muscat, which threaten to drive Syud Selim, the Sultan of that place, from his throne. There is nothing surprising in the fact that Muscat is in an uproar; it has been quiet for six months; therein lies the wonder. Last year it will be remembered Syud Selim cleared his way to the throne by the murder of his father. He was thereupon attacked by his uncle, Syud Thorkee, and by some of his aunts; Muscat was stormed, but unsuccessfully, and it was a long time before peace could be restored. At length Colonel Pelly prevailed upon Thorkee to leave Muscat altogether, and come to Bombay, where he has since remained on his pension, unheard of except at the Governor's durbars, and in masonic conclaves. But the position of the Imaum, his nephew, was never secure, and now a powerful brother-in-law, in the interior of Oman, has risen against him, taken Burkeh, a town some thirty-eight miles from Muscat, and the Imaum's summer residence. The insurgent ranks were receiving daily accessions of strength, and were advancing upon Muscat when news was last received from the Gulf. So weak and hated is Syud Selim represented to be, that Muscat too is expected to fall on the first attack. The British subjects in the place are in a sad state of alarm, and are removing their goods to vessels in the harbour as rapidly as possible. They are mostly Banians and Khojahs. Life and property will never be safe on these coasts till the Bombay Government has well-armed vessels constantly visiting every harbour, a terror to evil doers, and a protection to those who do well. Colonel Pelly has returned to the Gulf in the Vigilant.—Times of India.

A LOCAL PLAGUE.—Among the minor nuisances of this fortunate isle we may fairly recognise the rats. How they swarm! Go where you will rats are almost as plentiful as frogs in the swamps, and at night many of the horrid creatures are nearly as noisy, although it may be said to the credit of some that they practice the golden rule of silence, and perform stealthily their appointed tasks. Two or three recent and tragic instances of man-eating rats and rat-eaten men ought to arouse attention to the disgusting prevalence of these loathsome animals. We may not inaptly apply to Bombay the descriptive lines in Browning's Pied Piper of rat-infested Hamelin:—

Rats!

They fought the dogs and killed the cats,
And bit the babies in the cradles,
And ate the cheeses out of the vats,
And licked the soup from the cook's own ladles,
Split open the kegs of salted sprats,
Made nests inside men's Sunday hats,
And even spoiled the women's chats,
By drowning their speaking
With shrieking and squeaking,
In fifty different sharps and flats.

The rats of Bombay are not at all inferior to the rats of Hamelin, either in capacity for strident uproar, or impudence. Hear them, and see them in the Fort or Marine Lines at night, or in the grain market by day! They are so boisterous, plump, and well-to-do, you might be excused for thinking that they had all been directors and speculators in the great share mania, now so industriously sought to be revived in the interests of rodent bipeds. But when one comes to reflect, one sees that the rat and the speculator have a like raison d'être—the speculator feeds on gullibility and fattens, when he does fatten, on human weakness; and the rat grows sleek on filth and corruption, levying toll on toes and grainsacks by way of desert. No doubt the practical question is how to get rid of both classes of predatory animals. In the Persian markets they pay a man £60 a-year to hunt and slay the ferocious hordes infesting the cellars and levying tribute on the stalls. But there is a surer mode of waging war—cut off the supplies. We do not want a Ratcatcher-general on the staff of public servants; the work must be done by the Purifier-general. The prevalence of rats is conclusive evidence of a dirty community—remove the garbage, cleanse noisome gullies, get rid of slovenly habits—and the rats will find their occupation gone. At present—and let us be just, even to rats—they perform the duty of scavengers, help to keep down the death-rate, and render the town less unwholesome. But what strange allies of the Municipality! What odd friends of civilisation!—Bombay Gazette.

COURT-MARTIAL.

LIEUT. R. D. LOWE, CADRE 48TH MADRAS N.I.

Head Qrs., Simla, Sept. 25.—At a general court-martial assembled at Camp Poona on Sept. 2, 1868, Lieut. R. D. Lowe, cadre 48th Madras N.I., attached to 12th Madras N.I., was arraigned on the following charge:—

CHARGE.

For conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in the following instances:—

First Instance.—In having, at Poona, on or about the 28th day of July, 1868, made use, at the regimental mess, of the following provoking and grossly insulting language to Lieut. Charles Woolley Blenkin, of the 12th regt. of Madras N.I.:—"You are nothing more or less than a spy, to find out what I did, and go and report it, sneaking spy," or words to the like effect.

Second Instance.—In having, at the place and time mentioned in the first instance of the charge, used provoking language, at the regimental mess, to Lieut. C. W. Blenkin by saying to that officer, in a mocking and sneering tone—"What were you afraid of last night, eh! why did you stop at the door?" or words to the like effect.

Third Instance.—In having, at the place and time mentioned in the first instance of the charge, seized a tumbler, and made use, at the regimental mess, of the following grossly insulting and provoking language:—"My ears burn to throw this at somebody's head," or words to the like effect—at the same time looking at and leaning across the table towards Lieut. C. W. Blenkin, thereby indicating that he, the said Lieut. Blenkin, was the person to whom the above specified grossly insulting and provoking language was addressed. The above being in breach of the Articles of War.

FINDING.

The Court find that the prisoner, Lieut. Lowe, is guilty of the charge in the first, second, and third instances.

SENTENCE.—To be cashiered.

(Signed) A. G. VESSEY, Colonel, President.

Camp Poona, Sept. 4, 1868.

APPROVED AND CONFIRMED.

The C. in C. in India would have been inclined to remit the sentence but for the fact that, on a previous occasion, when the prisoner was convicted of assaulting an officer, he was treated with extraordinary lenity.

To repeat forbearance, which has been met with no return of good conduct on the part of the prisoner, would therefore be to trifle with the discipline of the army.

(Signed) W. R. MANSFIELD, General, C. in C. in India.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

MEDICAL COMMITTEES.

Head Qrs., Simla, Sept. 25.—No. 289.—With reference to the Queen's Regulations, page 168, para. 188; Horse Guards G.O. No. 93, November, 1867; Adj. Gen.'s Circular No. 23, of March 3, 1868; Adj. Gen.'s Circular No. 66, of June 18, 1868; and in view to the removal of misapprehension in regard to the signification of the term "Medical Board," which is at present understood in a different sense by military and medical authorities, the following rules, which have received the sanction of Government, are published for general information and guidance:—

1. Medical officers are not in future to be nominated members of any boards, except such as are purely professional or departmental.

(a) Professional boards to be considered all "medical boards on officers or soldiers."

(b) Sanitary boards, when matters influencing, or likely to influence, the health of the troops or community are concerned, and on which a medical opinion only is required.

(c) Boards for examination of candidates for admission into the subordinate medical department.

Departmental boards mean—

(a) Boards on medicines and surgical equipment.

2. Such boards to be composed of medical officers exclusively, and to consist of a president and two members under all circumstances.

3. Boards of survey on hospital bedding, clothing, and utensils, on hospital diets and wines, although considered departmental, may, however, be composed of medical and military officers indifferently.

4. Boards to examine as to the fitness or otherwise of soldiers for re-engagement are purely "professional." At stations where there are two or more regiments, these boards should be presided over by a medical officer of a regiment other than that to which the soldier belongs. If, however, there be only one regiment at the station, the medical officers of the regiment should of themselves constitute a board, sign the re-engagement certificate, and should, besides, furnish to the commanding officer a written statement detailing their opinion as to the man's health, muscular development, age, &c., and, in case of rejection, a full explanation of their reasons; and this statement they should all sign, and attach to the re-engagement form.

5. Boards of survey on barrack furniture, soldiers' rations, and canteen supplies, should be composed of military officers exclusively; and, if the opinion of a medical officer be required, one should be detailed to attend the board (regimentally or from the brigade office), who will give his opinion either via voce or in writing; this opinion, if in writing, to be attached to the proceedings of the board. [This modifies para. 5 of G.O.C., Sept. 9, 1865, para. 8, section 18, and para. 7, section 56, of the Military Regulations.]

6. The only exception to these rules to be in the case of cantonment committees, at which the principal medical officers of the British and Indian forces will attend as members.

7. These rules will not affect the composition of special sanitary committees appointed by Government or the Commander-in-Chief.

MEDICAL FURLONGHS—PENSION.

No. 902.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India is published:—

Military—No. 280.

India-office, London, Aug. 20, 1868.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

Sir,—I have considered in Council your letter No. 180 of May 20 last, inquiring how a deputy inspector general of hospitals, who may be compelled by ill-health to take leave to England beyond six months during his five years' tenure of office, is to become entitled to the special pension of £250.

2. In reply I have to observe that, although an active service in India of five years, including six months' leave on medical certificate, is required in that rank for the pension in question, and although on the expiration of five years' service on full pay, inclusive of all leave, as an acting or permanent deputy inspector general of hospitals, an officer vacates the appointment, such officer is, under the regulations of the service, eligible for reappointment for a second tour of duty, at the discretion of Government, if not disqualified by age.

3. If disqualified from this or any other cause, and if he has not served the full five years required for the extra pension, his claim to that pension will be forfeited.—I have, &c.,

(Signed) STAFFORD H. NORTHCOTE.

ADVANCES FOR HOUSES.

Adjutant General's Office, Head Quarters, Simla, Sept. 25.—No. 285.—In all cases of the transfer of houses in cantonments mortgaged to Government under the operation of para. 7 of G.G.O. No. 985, dated Oct. 15, 1867, the application must show clearly how much of the original advance may have been recovered; and no fresh advance should be applied for in behalf of the new purchaser unless the recoveries amount to a considerable sum.

2. Prior to the transfer, it is necessary that the new purchaser should formally acknowledge his liability for the monthly deductions from his pay in liquidation of the amount still due on account of the advance made by Government to the seller of the house; the acknowledgment being submitted in duplicate to the quartermaster-general for transmission of one copy to the controller of military accounts.

STAFF ALLOWANCES.

Financial Dept., Simla, Sept. 23.—No. 2,629.—The following extract from a letter addressed by the Government of India, in the Financial Department, to the Comptroller General of Accounts, is published for general information:—

Para. 2.—I am directed to add that, as a rule, a military officer holding a substantive appointment, civil or military, either on a staff or on a consolidated salary, and officiating in a civil appointment on a consolidated salary without being relieved of his substantive duties, is entitled to the whole of his substantive allowances in addition to deputation allowance at the usual rates (30 and 20 per cent.) on the salary of the appointment in which he is officiating, provided that his total allowances do not exceed that salary. If, however, a military officer holding a substantive appointment carrying staff allowances be acting in a civil appointment, and is relieved of his substantive duties, he will, in accordance with the rules prescribed in Resolution No. 1,490, dated July 30, lose half the staff allowances of his substantive appointment.

MESS REGULATIONS ON BOARD TRANSPORT SHIPS.—The following extract from the Regulations for her Majesty's Transport Service is published, and made applicable to all transport (Government or hired) or private steamers, where the table of 1st and 2nd class passengers is furnished by the commander:—"190. The mess for the first class is to consist of the usual meals, viz., breakfast, a light luncheon, dinner, and tea, with a suitable and well kept table, liberally and amply supplied with articles of the best description and quality, including live stock, fresh and preserved provisions, and a reputed pint of good sound bottled or draught ale or beer, with a reputed pint of good port wine, or good foreign white wine per day for each person. Ladies and children are to be supplied with such reasonable quantities of wine and beer as may be required. 191. The mess for the second class is to consist of the same number of meals, and is to include a good and respectable table supplied with fresh provisions when in port, and with preserved provisions on two days in each week when at sea, with a reputed pint of good sound bottled or draught ale or beer for each person daily, but without wine or spirit. The wives and children of second-class passengers are to be supplied with such reasonable quantities of ale or beer as may be required."

LORD SALISBURY AT MANCHESTER.

The Marquis of Salisbury received addresses on Tuesday, the 27th ult., from the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, the Council of the Cotton Supply Association, and the Cotton Spinners' Association. The addresses expressed a very high appreciation of his lordship's Indian administration. In the course of his reply to the several addresses the noble Marquis said:—"It gives one a sad and melancholy feeling to read the addresses that are issued and the speeches that are made in the numerous constituencies of this country, to remember that the fate of 180 millions of subjects, with their various interests, their enormous resources, their history and their civilisation, older than your own, are entirely in the hands of the constituencies who within the next month will pronounce their verdict, and yet that with one or two honourable exceptions these tremendous interests do not so much as attract a passing recognition from those who are entrusted with the responsibility of directing them. One constituency, at least, is free from this reproach. Manchester has never failed to maintain a constant vigilance over the interests of the people of India and the affairs of that country." With respect to the question of a gold currency, Lord Salisbury said there could be no doubt that it is desirable to substitute a gold for silver currency in India. He earnestly hoped that whenever a gold currency is substituted for a silver currency in India care will be taken that the unit of Indian currency and the unit of English currency are brought into definite arithmetical proportion. The difficulties which exist in respect to other coinages do not exist in respect to India; it is not a very ancient coinage, and within a comparatively recent date very large changes were made by Government in the coinage. More important, however, than currency was the question of cotton. Efforts had been made by Government inspection to encourage the production of a better and more cleanly cotton. Those efforts had been resisted in some cases by persons who appeared to imagine that any interference of Government for the encouragement of the interests of trade was, in some mysterious way or other, a breach of the principles of free trade. Now this was a matter in which Manchester might very much help herself. There was no place from which an authoritative voice on such a question could come so well as from Manchester; and a well-devised scheme of inspection would go very far to encourage the ryot to so improve his commodity that it might meet with better acceptance in our markets than it does at present.

The noble marquis then said, "It is the opening of navigable rivers and the opening of railways to which you must look. The Indian Government has made great progress in that respect. I think that there is very great desire, both on the part of the present Viceroy and on the part of the authorities in London, to press forward the construction of railways in India to the largest possible extent. But it would be a great fallacy if they were to limit themselves to those railways which, in our phrase, are likely to 'pay.' Though the railway will not be able to pay the guarantee which the Government gives upon the capital advanced for its construction, yet by scattering wealth all along its path, by stimulating commerce, by opening out the resources of the country, by bringing new ideas to increase the diligence and thrift of the natives of the country, it opens out to the Government new sources of revenue, it makes the people a more tax-paying people than they were before; and so, through the hands of the tax-gatherer, if not on the surface of the railway account, the Government will be reimbursed for the advances it has made. Therefore, gentlemen, do not be satisfied with the answer that a railway won't pay. Depend upon it, it is in the carrying on of the railway system in India, and, perhaps, I may be allowed to add in countries adjoining to India, that the main hope of increasing both the cultivation of cotton and the extent of the opening to the industrial products of this country are chiefly looked for." The old days when India was a mere field on which we might gather booty for the benefit of England are passed by, and now the only rivalry among us is as to the best mode in which the welfare of the natives of India, in trust for whom we hold the Government of India, shall be promoted, and how the ideas that we entertain, the conquests which our intellects have made, shall be communicated to them. The triumphs which you win by carrying trade further into the interior of India are triumphs which you may look back upon without finding them tempered by any of those reflections which attend our triumphs of another kind. Here, at least, your victory is without alloy, because wherever European goods penetrate, wherever the native learns new wants from the opportunities that European industry presents to him, you may be certain that European ideas will follow, and that your civilisation will be propagated in the most peaceful and the most harmless way." The noble marquis, having expressed his regret that the Council for India was not more largely tinged with the mercantile element, concluded thus:—"I can only express my deep feeling of the responsibility which we all in common share towards this strange people, which a most remarkable series of events have placed within our power. It is a responsibility which none of us can lightly cast off, least of all those who profit by the commerce and the industry of those peoples."

Lord Salisbury was entertained at dinner at the Queen's Hotel by the Chamber of Commerce and the Cotton Supply Association. Mr. Alderman Bennett presided. Among the speakers were Mr. Bazley, M.P., Mr. Jacob Bright, M.P., and Mr. Paterson, President of the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce. Lord Salisbury made a brief reply to the toast of his health, proposed by the chairman. He ascribed the hospitality extended to him to the interest which the commercial community of Manchester had in the welfare of India. He felt that he owed it to the circumstance of his having been charged with the affairs of that country. On this topic he would only add that the two rules that should always govern our relations with India were—first, that we should act for the benefit of its inhabitants; and, second, that we recognised that the great means of uniting England and India was to extend to the utmost their commercial intercourse. He indulged in no such illusion as that India could be prepared for self-government and independence of England. We must not attempt to import into India an exotic plant that could only wither and fade.

MR. MASSEY AT LIVERPOOL.

The Right Hon. W. N. Massey delivered an address on Indian affairs on Thursday last, in the Cotton Sales-room, at Liverpool. Mr. Massey said he was not going to defend all the acts by which the Indian empire had been built up. The great qualities of a dominating race, a strong will, supported by valour and policy, were more conspicuous in the early establishment of our Indian empire than the moderation and humanity which modern civilisation had imposed on the exercise of power. But they had to deal with India as it is. They had heard a great deal of the policy of non-annexation, and that they must not invade the rights of native princes. But if the policy of non-annexation had been carried out in its integrity we could never have had our Indian empire. The conditions of our existence in India were incompatible with abstinence from territorial acquisitions. But though the policy of non-annexation could not be enforced at all times and under all circumstances, it had always been the desire of the Indian and the British Government to respect the rights of independent native princes, and they had only intruded upon those rights when pressed by the strongest and most urgent reasons of political necessity. With regard to Indian railways, Mr. Massey said they could now travel by express from Calcutta to Delhi, 1,100 miles. The development of the railway system was not only conducive to the interests of commerce, but it had produced an astonishing effect upon the social habits of the people, and had done more to connect the natives with the British race, and to abolish the prejudices and distinctions of caste, than any measure which was ever conceived. Amongst the revolutions which were due to the institutions of railways, none was more valuable than this breaking down of caste. Mahomedans and Hindoos now thronged the third-class carriages indiscriminately. The Indian Government were now engaged in laying out railways in every part of India, so that the produce, not only the developed, but the still undeveloped produce of India should find its way to the seaboard with as great a facility as the produce of Europe did in this day. They were about to establish these railways without any regard to their cost. "Passing to a subject of even greater importance than that of railways, Mr. Massey said the question of irrigation had occupied the foremost attention of the Government in India during the whole period that he was engaged in the administration of its affairs. India had a watershed which was not exceeded by that of any country in the world; but bordering on its enormous rivers were arid plains, and if the monsoons did not take place at the proper time the whole produce of those plains was consumed and died away, and the people were left to starve, for the calamity of drought was of the same gigantic proportions in India as distinguished everything else in that country. The Government were prepared to raise millions of money in order to utilise the Indian rivers and make them channels for irrigating those arid plains, and so guard against the vicissitudes of the seasons, upon which the lives of the people of India now depended. On the subject of cotton culture Mr. Massey said, though he would be sorry to hold out any extravagant hopes, he looked forward to a large and increasing supply of cotton from India.

Miscellaneous.

LORD MAYO'S VISIT TO SHOEBURYNESS.—On the 27th ult. Lord Mayo went to Shoeburyness, and inspected the Moncrieff gun-carriage, with a view to applying the new system to the coast defences of India.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Ceylon, with the mails for the East, left Southampton on Saturday; she took out £195,549 in specie, of which £86,245 is for India, £53,041 for China and the Straits, £50,263 for Ceylon, and £6,000 for Alexandria.

APPOINTMENT.—(India-office, Oct. 27.)—The Queen has been pleased to appoint the Right Hon. Richard Southwell Bourke, Earl of Mayo, Viscount Mayo of Monycrowen, Baron Naas of Naas, LL.D., D.C., to be her Majesty's Viceroy and Governor-general of India, in succession to the Right Hon. Sir John Laird Mair Lawrence, Bart., G.M.S.I., G.C.B.

ABYSSINIAN BATTALION.—With regard to the numerous applications which have been received at the India Office for payment of the Abyssinian Donations Batta, Major-General Pears has issued a request to the various army agents, that they will forward any certificates they may have received from officers of her Majesty's Indian Staff Corps, showing that their shares have not been paid in India, with a view to the question being taken into consideration whether it will be practicable to pay their claims in this country prior to the receipt of the rolls, which have been called for from India, of those who have not been paid in that country.

LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA, on Tuesday, the 27th ult., paid a visit to Portsmouth, where he was presented with an address by the mayor on the part of the town council. His lordship, in the course of a brief reply, said it was a matter of intense gratification to him to find that the people of England were satisfied with the results of the Abyssinian expedition, and above all that due credit had been given to the officers and men engaged in it. For himself, he claimed no credit beyond that of the officer directing the efforts of those who brought about so satisfactory an end, and he was exceedingly glad to find the exertions of the officers and men recently under his command were so well appreciated at home. In the afternoon Lord Napier paid private visits to Lieutenant-general Sir George Buller and the heads of the various Government departments, and afterwards rode round the outlying fortifications on Portsdown, &c. In the evening he was entertained at a banquet given in his honour at Southsea, by the Mayor of Portsmouth.

DEPUTATION TO THE RIGHT HON. THE EARL OF MAYO.—On Saturday last a deputation from the Christian Vernacular Education Society for India had an interview with the Right Hon. the Earl of Mayo, the new Viceroy of India. The deputation brought before his lordship the great importance of the Government taking advantage of the desire upon the part of the natives of India to receive Christian instruction in their own native languages. They explained what the society and other Christian educationists had already done to promote Christian vernacular education in the fourteen principal languages of India. They urged upon his lordship the importance of the Government carrying out fully the provisions for extending vernacular education contained in the despatch of 1854, particularly those provisions for creating a vernacular educational literature. His lordship received the deputation in the most gracious manner, and promised to give the important subject they had brought before him his most earnest attention. The following gentlemen formed the deputation:—Sir Hope Grant, G.C.B.; Messrs. J. Farish and J. F. Thomas, General Clarke, Mr. H. Carre Tucker, C.B.; Mr. Robert Barrett, Mr. A. Lang, Rev. C. C. Fenn, Colonel Rowlandson, and Mr. Lockhart Gordon.

ALMOST TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE.—The army reduction which we announced some weeks ago is now beginning to assume a more tangible form. We are happy to believe that the actual number of men will probably not receive any serious decrease, the authorities having apparently come to the conclusion that a reduction of officers will better secure their object of reducing the estimates. In addition to the suppression of a large number of staff appointments and of the staff of three or four of the depot battalions, it is probable that ensigns' commissions will be abolished throughout the army. This will be about the very best means of reducing the very high proportion of officers in relation to privates in the English army as compared with continental armies, and at the same time retain the organisation of comparatively small companies, which have been found to be so much more workable than large companies as the units of formation. There will probably be a small increase to the number of lieutenants in each regiment, which will absorb some of the existing ensigns. Altogether, perhaps, the suppression of ensigncies will be an effectual reform in several points of view, and one which will be a boon rather than an injustice to the present officers of the army. These matters are however, as we have stated, now under the consideration of the authorities, but so much consideration has been given to various and conflicting interests that it is difficult to predict what phase of opinion will eventually become law.—Broad Arrow.

THE NEW PATRIOTIC SONGS.—“Mr.

J. L. Hatton has recently written two very excellent songs, each suggestive of the themes which they are intended to represent. The first of them, entitled “The Gallant Tars of England,” is a lively, rollicking air, with appropriate words, by J. E. Carpenter, a good specimen of the Dibdin school, with a salt smack about it. The other song, “The Soldiers of Our Land,” is as it ought to be, thoroughly martial and spirit-stirring, the words in this instance also being supplied by the same writer. Both of the above are easy of execution, and will no doubt become good favourites. The publishers are Messrs. Robert Cocks and Co.”—Manchester Courier.

Each Song free by post for nineteen stamps, and for a Brass Band six stamps.

Mr. W. H. CUMMINGS will Sing the New Patriotic Song, “THE SOLDIERS OF OUR LAND” (J. L. Hatton), at Plymouth, on Nov. 11. (This song produces a powerful effect.) The Song free by post for nineteen stamps, and for a Brass Band six stamps.

LIVES OF INDIAN OFFICERS,

Illustrative of the History of the Civil and Military Services of India.

BY JOHN WILLIAM KAYE,

Author of “The History of the War in Afghanistan,” &c., &c.

Contents.

THE REV. HENRY MARTYN.	SIR HENRY LAWRENCE.
SIR CHARLES METCALFE.	General JAMES NEILL.
SIR ALEXANDER BURNES.	Brig.-gen. JOHN NICHOLSON.
LORD CORNWALLIS.	Captain ARTHUR CONOLLY.
SIR JOHN MALCOLM.	Major ELDRED POTTINGER.
THE HON. MOUNTSTUART	Major D'ARCY TODD.
ELPHINSTONE.	Appendix, &c.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

“I am not without a hope that these memoirs may be regarded, in some sort, as a Biographical History of India from the days of Cornwallis to the days of Canning. * * I have not attempted, indeed, to write History; the work has grown up spontaneously out of the Lives of the great men who make history * * and, unless the ability of the execution has fallen far short of the sincerity of the design, I have done something, in these pages, to do honour to a race of public servants unsurpassed in the history of the world. * * I have striven to show how youths, from the middle-class families of our British Islands, have gone forth into the great Eastern world, and by their own unaided exertions carved their way to fame and fortune.”

“J. W. KAYE.”

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.From the ATHENÆUM.

“We say at once that more admirably-written and interesting narratives are scarcely to be found in any literature. We do not envy the man who could read without deep emotion the lives here given of Conolly, Lawrence, and Nicholson; and we doubt whether the whole range of history can show more perfect characters. Nobler subjects of biography could not have been chosen, and higher praise it is impossible to bestow on a writer than to say, as we do of this author, that he is fully equal to such a theme. * * Mr. Kaye's ‘Lives of Indian Officers’ will take a high place among the standard books of England.”

From the SPECTATOR.

“A cadet, an artillery officer, an editor, an employee of the first rank, a successful historian, Mr. Kaye unites in his own person all the qualifications requisite to the biographer of the great Indian soldiers.”

From the EXAMINER.

“Two stout volumes of biography, which, arranged chronologically, have, in addition to their biographical interest, great historical value as illustrations of the progress of political government, warlike exercise, and philanthropic effort in India during the last three generations. It is a work of remarkable interest; the interest being due not only to the stirring subjects of which it treats, but also to the admirable way in which the subjects are treated.”

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—“Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed.”

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—“I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera.”

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—“Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'”

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—“So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases.”

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use.”

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound dyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, and is in bottles, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

WHITMORE'S COMPOUND LINIMENT OF ARNICA

A SPECIFIC for the CURE of RHEUMA-
TISM, LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, SPRAINS, CON-
TUSIONS, WEAKNESS OF THE JOINTS, CHILBLAINS,
&c. It is also an excellent remedy as a stimulating application to the surface of the chest and back in bronchitis, inflammation of the lungs, pulmonary consumption, and whooping cough. When the liver is inactive, rubbed over it, its stimulating properties have a beneficial effect, and in all cases where counter irritation is desirable, it will be found invaluable.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

WILKINSON'S BRONCHIO-THORACIC LOZENGES.

Prepared from the receipt of an eminent Physician, and experience has fully justified their recommendation as the most speedy remedy in irritation of the throat, catarrhal coughs, bronchitis, incipient consumption, spitting of blood, &c., &c. To public speakers and vocalists they will be found invaluable, as they impart a clear and beautiful tone to the voice. Free from any preparation of opium, and of an agreeable taste, they are applicable to all.

In bottles of one uniform size.

WHITMORE'S STOMACHIC DINNER PILLS.

No Pill is so efficacious in promoting digestion, strengthening the stomach, correcting acidity, preventing or removing headache, giddiness, &c., arising from a costive habit, debilitated stomach, or torpid liver.

They require no change of diet, and those of the most delicate constitution may take them with safety.

Taken as an adjunct with WILKINSON'S SARSAPA-
RILLA with the greatest success.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

Prepared by THOMAS WILKINSON (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

Are decidedly the best remedy for all disorders of the stomach and bowels, the liver, and kidneys. They act with so decided an effect, and yet so gently, that people of the most delicate constitutions may take them with the utmost confidence. They do not contain a single grain of mercury or other noxious substance, being composed exclusively of rare balsams. They are, therefore, equally safe and efficacious, and as a family medicine nothing yet invented or discovered can be compared with them for a moment. With these inestimable Pills at hand, together with the printed directions affixed to each box, no other medical advice or assistance can be needed in any ordinary case of sickness.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body."
It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent
Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell.
Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. Webb's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free
by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great
Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 229, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6 postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.;
postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Postoffice, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c.
It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d.
7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

PRICE LIST, 76 PAGES.—D. N. and Co. invite the attention of their Foreign and Colonial Correspondents to their Trade List, or Price Current, gratis and post free, just published, which contains seventy-six pages of matter, comprising full particulars of every description of Silks, Woollen Goods, Muslins, Calicos, Prints, Ladies' Under-clothing, Baby Linen, Mantles, Shawls, Men's and Boys' Clothing, Linens, Blankets, Carpets, Hosiery, Gloves, Ribbons, Lace, Haberdashery, Jewellery &c., &c. Also, numbers and widths of Ribbons, Tapes, &c., and sizes in Gloves and Hosiery; in short, all necessary information for ordering this class of Goods from D. N. and Co.'s house in London.

PATTERNS BY POST.—D. NICHOLSON and Co. undertake to forward to India, post free, Packets containing upwards of 200 Patterns of Fashionable Silks. A similar assortment may be had of Muslins, Grenadines, and every kind of Dress Fabric; also Prints, Calicos, Linens, Woollen Cloths, Doeskins, &c., &c. Each Pattern is marked the width, and price per yard or dress, so that Correspondents are able to insure having the exact Goods they order, by retaining a portion of the pattern of each article they require.

OUTFITTING DEPARTMENT.—D. N. and Co. also forward an abridged List containing every requisite for Indian Outfits for both sexes, properly classified for the especial use of Correspondents, Military and Civil, who might be perplexed with some of the technical terms used in the Trade List.

CONTRACTS FOR UNIFORMS, &c.—D. N. and Co. undertake to supply Commanding Officers with every description of Regimental Clothing, Cloths, Serges, Belts, Shoes, and other details necessary for completing Uniforms at considerably less than agent's prices.

Orders addressed to D. N. and Co., accompanied by a Remittance of 50 per cent., will be forwarded on condition that the balance be paid to their Agents in Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, or Colombo, on presentation of the Bills of Lading.

AGENCY DEPARTMENT.—D. N. and Co. undertake the purchasing of Goods for Merchants and Traders in India, who have not buyers in London, for a Commission of 2½ per cent. on Indents of £250 and upwards; on smaller amounts the charge is 5 per cent. As D. N. and Co. have accounts for their own business with every house of importance in connection with the Silk and Manchester trade, they can offer their Correspondents considerable advantages beyond what could be obtained from an ordinary agent. Under arrangements of this kind the original Invoices are in all cases furnished.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, October 17; Agra, October 13; Calcutta and Madras, October 12.

The general news by this mail is far from exciting. We get some further details of the little campaign on the Hazara border, but their interest is largely reduced by the telegrams which reached us some weeks ago. Some of the correspondents assure us that the enemy, when they did stand, fought fiercely and fell like heroes. But these instances, if true, must have been exceptional, for, according to another authority, General Wilde complained that he could not get the enemy to meet him at close quarters, although he had "brought a long and effective fire from the field and mountain guns on them before advancing on their position." There is a charming incoherence in such a complaint. One would have been apt to see in the excellence of the artillery fire a sufficient reason for the enemy's objection to wait for more of the same article. It was very rude of them to run away; but an invitation to come and be knocked down is not one of the sort that people generally accept.

It is satisfactory to know that the new or rather the reinstated Ameer of Kabul desires nothing better than a good understanding with his English neighbours. His advances have been so far reciprocated that a meeting was soon to come off at Peshawar between him and Sir John Lawrence. If he can only succeed in keeping his hard-earned throne, we may yet find him a useful and trustworthy ally. His request for the removal of the ex-Ameer's refugee family and dependents from Peshawar is said to have been already granted by the Indian Government. The long-expected campaign in Turkistan against his brother and nephew has been postponed to a more favourable season, if indeed there is much likelihood of its ever being fought out. Abdurrahman Khan is still said to be getting ready for the struggle, but he may come to think better of it when the winter is over.

THE cholera season being due in Bombay, an outbreak of that epidemic is reported in the local papers. A dozen or more deaths had already occurred in the native town. The disease is said to be of the pure Asiatic type, virulent in its nature and swift in its course. By the latest accounts however it did not appear to have taken firm hold of the city, and every precaution was being taken to prevent its spreading. Bombay has for some years past been steadily reforming its sanitary arrangements, and not much alarm is felt among the European community on that score. They fear however that the Egyptian officials will resume their old vagaries at the first note of danger, and cause no end of inconvenience to travellers passing through their country.

THE Times of India fills its columns with an elaborate Appeal to the electors of Great Britain and Ireland on certain grievances connected with India. Beginning with finance, the appeal tries to convince its readers that India has, in effect, been treated as the milch-cow of England. Fifteen or sixteen millions yearly flow into this country, very little of which ever finds its way back thither. There is the dividend on East India Stock, which was unfairly doubled at India's expense. The dividend on the Debt is paid by India on account of expenses mostly incurred by the Home Government against her will. English troops sent out to India are landed at India's cost. India is crying out for public works, but forbidden to go into the market for money, like any other nation in the world. As a rule, her water system is "infinitely worse" than it was under the Moghuls. India in fact suffers financially and materially because the home authorities "cannot solve the difficulty of Imperial responsibility" for money borrowed. Hence her surplus revenue is expended on works that ought to be done by loans. The natives are further excluded from the highest posts in the Civil Service. The service itself indeed is nominally open to them, and so is the Bench, but only two native judges have yet been promoted to the latter, and the former is virtually closed to all. The Appeal ends by urging the electors to demand a Royal Commission of Inquiry into the whole case. It justly remarks that this is no party question, and it argues with some truth that "the conscience of the nation is more tender than that of its chiefs," and that usually more justice may be expected from the "Noes" for the time being, than from the "Ayes." Whatever we may think of some of the grievances alleged, we see no reason why the whole question should not be thoroughly sifted by some such process as that recommended in this "Appeal."

TIMELY rains in the Punjab and North-West Provinces have given a more cheerful turn to the prospects there. In the Central Provinces also a slight change for the better has taken place. But for Rajpootana and its neighbourhood there is little hope, and the hands of all in authority will be tasked to the utmost in attempts to alleviate the growing distress. The emigration continues from one suffering district into another little better off; and the example set by Sindhia in trying to check this new evil is strongly recommended to the imitation of our own officials.

WE are glad to see that a proposal to extend the money-order system to sums sent from India to England has been forwarded with words of approval by the Indian Government to the India-office. It is much to be hoped that no hesitation on the part of the home authorities will delay the introduction of a boon so manifest and so long desired. If the desired assent should be given, we trust that a fixed rate of exchange will be adopted, allowing, let us say, two shillings to the rupee.

CAPTAIN SLADEN has returned to Mandalay, and his fellow-travellers, Dr. Anderson, Captain Bowers, and Mr. Gordon, are reported on their way back to Rangoon. Some people will have it that the goodwill shown by the Panthays and Shans to Sladen's party thwarted the evil designs of Burmese officials, who never meant them to return safely to Bhamo. The Panthays contemplate a mission to Rangoon at the end of the year. If the Bhamo expedition is to bear fruit, we must have an agent established at Bhamo, for the protection of traders from Rangoon.

WE have received from Calcutta the first part of the first volume of what promises to be a useful and interesting work. It is called "Records of the Geological Survey of British India," and holds towards the "Memoirs" and the Palæontologia Indica the same sort of relation which the "Proceedings," "Sitzungsberichte," &c., of learned societies bear towards the larger and more important "Transactions," "Memoirs," "Denkschriften." Not till the Geological Survey had been twelve years at work in British India was it deemed possible to begin upon a series of Records devoted to the collection and diffusion of isolated facts not yet capable of systematic grouping, and yet too significant to be left, perhaps for many years, waiting the moment of complete digestion. So great is the area of India, and so slow the progress made by the small staff of surveyors employed, that after several years' labour the Geological Survey Map still shows a broad blank relieved by a few spots betokening work finished, and a few more that represent work in progress. Dr. Oldham however thinks that the time has come for making known in a series of "Records" the growing mass of minor and isolated facts hitherto banished from the more regular "Memoirs." In this first part he accordingly gives us, besides the annual report for the past year, Mr. Blanford's paper on the Coal Seams of the Tawa Valley, Mr. Medlicott's paper on Coal Prospects in the Garrow Hills, another by Mr. Mallett on Copper in Bundelkund, and a list of new works added to the library. The report and the separate papers are full of interest for the curious reader. The year 1867 was an unlucky one for the Survey. Several of the staff were absent from various causes; Mr. Blanford was required in Abyssinia, and Mr. H. Ormsby had for half the year to take an absent professor's work at the Presidency College. Hence the area actually mapped out in 1867 was comparatively small. A good deal of ground however seems to have been surveyed and partially mapped, and Dr. Oldham made use of the idle season to pursue his geological studies in Europe. The search for coal does not seem to have been very successful. The Bokaro and Ramghur coal-fields to the north of Hazaribagh are large, but not rich in coal, and the same may be said of the Karunpoora fields. The coal at Lynyan, in Sindh, proves to be merely a small patch of lignite. Some seams discovered near Chanda and Belaspoor promise little better. With regard to the coal in the Tawa Valley, Mr. Blanford speaks even more discouragingly than his predecessor. Except at Rawandee on the Tawa river he could find no seams more than three feet thick, and most of them contain coal about half as good as the English, therefore not worth the working under present circumstances. Nor have Mr. Medlicott's researches among the Garrow Hills enabled him to confirm the hopes once entertained of the prevalence of a good useful coal in that neighbourhood.

IN one of his recent speeches at Edinburgh Mr. Bright showed how easily an orator's eloquence may lead him into the regions of pure fiction. He was quoting the Government of India before the Mutiny as an example of a bad thing happily done away. He called it "the most extraordinary Government in the world." The directors were "bred in corruption and practised it during their tenure of office." They "neglected everything they ought to have done, except the collecting and expending of taxes." In course of time "to that curious Government was added a Minister of State, who was appointed to control the said directors," but who "allowed them to do everything evil that they liked to do, and added to their evils some other evils of his own." We are not going to maintain that such a picture is in every line untrue; but taken as it stands, even with a fair allowance for rhetorical necessities, it seems to us in effect considerably wide of the truth. The old Company had its faults, and the Board of Control committed some blunders; but what other Government has not done the same? If the old directors were apt to take too commercial a view of things in general, they did at any rate found an empire of which Englishmen may well be proud, and they governed it on the whole with marked success, and with a good deal of statesmanlike regard for the interests of their native subjects. Of the men whom they trained to govern in their name, a large proportion would have reflected lustre on the history of any country. If the hands of the old Company and their servants were not always of the cleanest, their improvement in that respect at least kept pace with the growth of purer morals at home. Would any other Government in their place have done much better than they did? As for the Board of Control, it certainly did not always interfere for the better; in the case, for instance, of the Afghan war. But no one can justly say that its influence or its want of influence always displayed itself for the worse.

MR. P. T. CARNEGIE, Officiating Deputy Commissioner of the Khasia and Jynteah Hills, is a warm believer in the agricultural capabilities of those districts. He is not "absolutely certain" thereupon, for want of practical experience; but his memorandum to the Commissioner of Assam shows how very little is needed to turn his faith into absolute certainty. He is firmly convinced that the ordinary crops of Europe would thrive abundantly in those hills. Potatoes only have as yet been tried, but any other crop would answer just as well. On the plateaux between Jowai and Nurtheng he has seen "miles upon miles of land almost perfectly wild which, judging from what was ploughed up, is capable of bearing the heaviest wheat crops." In fact the soil "seems almost everywhere adapted for cereals;" and, granted the means of cheap carriage, the plateaux of these hills would form a granary capable of supporting twenty times their present population. Water is "everywhere plentiful." Cattle of a good breed abound, especially in Jowai. Wood and iron for tools and buildings are easy to procure. The chief wants of the country are good drainage and sufficient food for the cattle whose manure is to enrich the soil. A great deal of first-rate land might be rescued from its present state of marsh. From December to March the cattle are half starved because during that period the dry grass is often fired. A sure way to remedy this defect would be to substitute the grasses of England or South Europe for "the coarse innutritious grasses" of those hills. Clover too, especially white clover, would certainly thrive there. Cattle-breeding would pay, and even horses for ploughing. Sheep also, if properly bred, would enable the hill people to supply Assam. Their fleece would prove as profitable as their mutton, for "the temperature of the hills must be lower than that of many of the sheep-breeding districts of Australia." Wheat is certain to be a good investment when more roads are made, and the same thing may be predicted of barley and oats; the former being also capable of conversion into whisky. Turnips, which grow there naturally, and gram might be cultivated to any amount. And why should not discharged English soldiers be encouraged to settle at places like Nurtheng in preference to the "barren rocks" of Chunar? Timber in these hills shares the fate of timber elsewhere; it is gradually disappearing through the reckless waste of the natives. A system of forest conservancy will alone give it a chance of self-recovery.

WE have been officially informed that an arrangement has been made by the directors of the East India Irrigation and Canal Company with the Secretary of State for India (subject to confirmation at a meeting of shareholders) whereby the company's undertaking in Orissa is to be surrendered to Government in consideration of a sum in cash equal to the whole paid up capital and 5 per cent. thereon, so that each shareholder will receive a clear £21 for the £20 paid by him upon each of his shares, that is £1 premium per share; and also a further sum sufficient to cover compensation to the managing body and officers, and thus to exonerate the proprietary from all liability in that respect. We are also informed that a memorial, signed and approved by the holders of 32,244 shares (out of a total of 46,000 shares) advocating a sale, had been presented to the board of directors.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, November 11, 1868.

CRUELTY NOT THE BEST POLICY.

Now that one more of our Indian frontier campaigns has come to an end, it is worth while considering how far our frontier policy tends to further the true ends of a government based on the principles of humanity, justice, and enlightened self-interest. We have probably for the moment done all we expected or desired to do. One or two tribes have had a considerable thrashing; several more have been well frightened; some pretty practice has been made with the Snider rifle; and all along the North-Western Frontier a livelier respect for the majesty of the British name has, no doubt, been established by the issue of a movement promptly organised and powerfully carried out. Our enemies, whoever they may be, in that part of the world have seen how readily a strong force of all arms could be brought together, equipped at all points with every appliance of modern warfare, and set in motion for the inflicting of signal punishment on all who had provoked or defied our interference. For the moment submission is the word among the turbulent tribes along the Upper Indus, and our troops have retired across the frontier to talk over the incidents of a campaign chiefly memorable for the burning of villages and the destruction of farmsteads.

But, after all done, we cannot help once more speculating how much of it has been done wisely. If the campaign itself was unavoidable, how about the manner of its consummation? Was there no part of the programme that might in mercy have been omitted? We for our part feel no surprise at the grave doubts expressed by a correspondent of the Homeward Mail, touching the necessity of finishing off these little wars by acts of wholesale devastation. His objection to the policy of razing villages, burning down crops, and demolishing stores of grain, seems to our minds much less astonishing than the fact that a great many people accept that policy as a thing of course. It is melancholy to think that so many years of government should end in the renewed application of so perilous a purge, with the general sanction of a civilised and Christian people. Surely the taming of these unruly peace-breakers could be accomplished by less inhuman means. In spite of our vaunted capacity for governing, are we brought to such a pass that every little foray against a police-station must be punished after the barbarous fashions of an age long bygone?

Stern measures, we may be told, are with such people the only wise measures. Be it so, if you please; but savagery and sternness are not the same thing. We cannot allow these border tribes to set us wholly at defiance, to break our laws, attack our officers, and rob or slay our subjects with impunity. If they cannot live without fighting and plundering, they must be taught to gratify their instincts outside the British pale. It would be all fair to catch and punish their leaders; it may even be necessary at times to send our troops into their country, in hopes of teaching them a lesson they will not soon forget. We might take hostages for their good behaviour. If they withstand our soldiers, we must dose them into repentance with a due measure of shot and steel. But we certainly cannot see the policy, let alone the humanity and the justice, of treating them like noxious vermin, whose very haunts must be uprooted and effaced. It was not in this fashion that the tribes on the Sindh frontier have been tamed and rendered tolerant of our rule. And what sort of taming process can that be which leaves a whole tribe houseless, destitute, starving; their fields a blackened waste; the women, children, and aged a helpless burden on men almost disabled from helping themselves? "To make a solitude and call it peace" were after all a less inhuman mode of vindicating our laws, than to cut off from a whole people the means of present and the sources of future livelihood. We have given up trying to tame beasts by excess of cruelty. Will the failures that marked that experiment on the lower organisms be converted into successes in the case of men endowed with feelings, powers, and tendencies not so very different from our own?

It is the fashion, we know, to say that mild measures are apt to be confounded with weak measures by the natives of the East. Whatever grounds there may be for such a notion, we entirely protest against turning it into an excuse for punishing these rude mountaineers in a style utterly abhorrent from the rules of Christian civilisation. For all needless cruelty there can be no excuse; and it cannot be other than needless cruelty which deliberately involves thousands of innocent people in the punishment owed to a few guilty. The same thing, we know, may be done everywhere indirectly in ordinary warfare; but only in Jamaica and British India have Englishmen been wont to do it avowedly on principle, of malice aforethought, in cold blood. It was not by means like these that Abbot, Nicholson, Edwardes, gained their ascendancy over some of the very tribes who are now deemed fit for nothing but medicines too drastic for the vilest of men. Have their successors lost the art of which they showed themselves perfect masters? The sterner treatment has signally failed even of its apparent purpose, for it has to be repeated year after year, and still our fractious pupils cannot get the lesson quite by heart. "Revenge and wrong" do still somehow manage to "bring forth their kind." And yet, in the face of all this, we go on punishing these high-spirited if lawless mountaineers in a manner disgraceful alike to our civilisation, our religious training, our moral sense, and our character for statesmanship. "Parcere subjectis, et debellare superbos" was the guiding principle of old Rome. We wage war against women, children, and the household hearth, and expect from such a sowing to reap a fine crop of grateful memories and loyal yearnings. Whatever else we attempt or leave undone, this blunder at least should be avoided in the future.

POPULAR FALLACIES REGARDING LORD DALHOUSIE.

Magna est veritas, et prevalebit—is the favourite adage of believers in the power of truth; and we for our part have no wish to be ranked among the disbelievers therein. Truth, we hope, does ultimately triumph in a world of mingled good and evil. Such a belief is the salt of all human philosophy, even in an age that seems too much given to bow down before successful wrong. But it is useless to deny that error also has immense vitality and a very wide sway over things human.

"Non Hydra secto corpore firmior Vinci dolentem crevit in Herculem,"

than some of the popular fallacies of a given period withstand the hardest cudgelling from the most persevering champions of the truth. Is it not, for instance, a part of every rightminded

Briton's creed that Lord Dalhousie's policy of annexation sprang full grown and armed from his lordship's own brain, only to bring about the most alarming crisis in the history of our Indian Empire? And has not writer after writer impressed upon our minds the belief that with the death of that policy has died out all claim on the part of its alleged author to any sort of grateful remembrance at the hands either of his own countrymen or of his Hindustani subjects?

We can hardly wonder then at seeing some of these fallacies reflected in the pages even of so grave a serial as the British Quarterly Review. In justice to the writer of the article on "India Under Three Administrations," we should perhaps acquit him of maintaining that Dalhousie's acquisitive policy had no foundation in the past. He allows at least that "the process of absorption was after all but the natural consummation of Lord Wellesley's subsidiary system." But then again we are told that "with Lord Dalhousie was inaugurated an era of conquest and spoliation," which "has since been fearfully expiated." One would almost think from this that before Dalhousie the absorbing process had been unknown, that Wellesley himself despoiled nobody and annexed nothing, that Lord Hastings had added no new domains to the Company's empire, that neither Lord William Bentinck nor Lord Hardinge had ever transferred a foot of ground from native to English ownership. It is possible however that the writer meant merely to contrast the peccadilloes of former Viceroys with the Titanic wickedness of the great Scotch Marquis; and therefore we may give him the benefit of the doubt. It may also remain with many an open question whether the Burmese war might or might not have been avoided. Nor do we greatly care to impugn the justice of the verdict which the reviewer agrees with Mr. Kaye in passing on some other passages of Dalhousie's career. It is easy for instance to understand why the great Proconsul's doctrine of the Right of Lapse came to translate itself in the eyes of many observers as "the lapse of right." On such points opinions will continue to differ according to each man's political leanings, and the sort of balance he may strike between the rights of individuals and of the State, between the sanctions of law and the claims of public necessity.

But there are other questions which ought never to have been raised, and which settle themselves on the first appeal to evidence. When we are told that "the most daring and questionable act" of Dalhousie's Government was "the forcible deposition of the King of Oudh," we are bound at once to spot the fallacy and place it under the glare of proven fact. In one sense indeed the act was Lord Dalhousie's, just as the hanging of a criminal may be called the act of the public hangman. But that is clearly not the reviewer's meaning. In the face of all recent histories of the period he revives an oft-slain but still recurring fallacy, by endorsing Mr. Edwards's statement that the Bengal Sepoys were "under the conviction that the home authorities would annul the decision of the Governor-general, and restore Oudh to the King." Why, it was not Dalhousie, but the Home Government which, in spite of Dalhousie's protest, ordered the deposition of the King of Oudh. The Viceroy's own minute, as correctly summarised by Mr. Marshman in the third volume of his able History of India, tells its own tale. He proposed "that the king should retain the sovereignty of all the territory which he possessed, that he should vest the whole of the civil and military administration in the hands of the Company; that an annual stipend should be allotted for the support of his honour and dignity, and due provision be made for all the members of the Royal Family, besides his own children." It was Dalhousie's firm opinion, as given in his own words, that "the reform of the administration may be wrought, and the prospects of the people secured, without resorting to so extreme a measure as the annexation of the territory and the abolition of the throne; and I for my part do not advocate that the province of Oudh be declared British territory."

What can be plainer than this? Sir Barnes Peacock minuted to the same effect. General Low went somewhat further, but still desired to reserve for the King of Oudh his rank and title, with all the attendant honours. Messrs. Grant and Dorin however voted for abolishing the king altogether, and the Home Government in all its branches came to the same conclusion. So the order for annexation went forth from the India-house, and the Viceroy, as in duty bound, saw at once to its execution. He was no more answerable than Sir James Outram, who directly carried out the stern but not unjust decree, for an act of simple obedience to his masters at home. Still less can we hold him answerable for the events that shortly followed the annexation, whatever credit he may justly share with Sleeman and others for having helped to "rescue five millions of people from a state of the deepest misery." His friends indeed might point with some show of reason to the subsequent outbreak, as a practical vindication of the course which Lord Dalhousie was not allowed to follow.

But anyhow the earlier fruits of the annexation had nothing to do with the justice of the pleas on which it was carried out. These are clear enough, if we care to look at them with perfect candour. On the expediency of the measure, as actually adopted, opinions may be still divided, but of its absolute justice there ought not now to be a doubt. It is certain that the King had fairly forfeited a throne held under certain conditions, though the wisdom of incorporating Oudh with British India may remain with many an open question.

And it is almost equally certain that if Lord Dalhousie's counsels had been followed on another point, Oudh would either not have risen in rebellion, or else the outbreak would have been easily quelled. And this brings us to another huge fallacy of the day, namely, the Viceroy's want of due foresight as to the chances of a Sepoy rising. His minute on the native army has been continually misquoted against him. Because he thought that the position of the native soldier left little room for improvement, he was accused of blindness to the danger of an overgrown native army. And yet his attempt to counteract the preponderance of one class in that army by the infusion of a large Sikh element into its ranks hardly goes to justify the charge. Or was it blindness to the danger that led him to indite a series of farewell minutes, in which among other things he strongly urged the reduction of the Sepoy army by 14,000 men, and the addition of at least six more regiments to the European garrison? Had that reduction and that increase been timely made, would the mutinies of 1857 have shaken our Indian Empire to its foundations? It is barely possible that Lord Dalhousie, like almost every one else, never reckoned on a general concert among the different classes of native troops; but it is simply absurd to credit a statesman of his calibre with ignoring dangers against which he was always seeking to take precautions; and it is glaringly unjust to lay upon his shoulders the mischievous effects of the policy that left his successor all but powerless to deal with a crisis unparalleled in Indian history. With the English Government of that day must rest the blame of having by their negligence opened the door to a catastrophe which the commonest precautions would probably have averted altogether. Time at any rate will show how little the policy of the greatest of Indian Viceroys had to do with the events of 1857.

INDIA IN THE BRITISH PARLIAMENT.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—With reference to the remarks contained in your leader of the 28th ult., re-echoing the oft-repeated cry that sufficient importance is not attached to Indian matters in England, perhaps you will allow me to make one or two observations.

Would not England, I would ask, awaken to something more like consciousness of the value of India if India were properly represented in the House of Commons? And is not the desirability—nay, the justice of such a representation—a question which must sooner or later arise for discussion? We live in an age of progress; old conventionalities and antique prejudices are passing away and giving place to ideas and practices founded upon reason and equity. And do not reason and equity teach us this—that the vast colonial possessions of Great Britain should no longer remain without authorised mouthpieces in the Houses of Parliament?

We have already to all intents and purposes entrusted to every portion of the people the full power of controlling the return of their representatives. Will the people, thus enfranchised, not see the injustice of a large, a rich, and an influential section of their middle classes, such as the European population of India, being left out in the cold? What though the idea is a novel one; this should be, in times like these of reform, no obstacle. But alas! Sir, in order to move the ball of British opinion, some leverage is requisite, and unlike Archimedes, we have not any to hand.

Is it treason to hint that the innovations introduced into the cherished institutions of this country by the late legislation we call the Reform Bill would never have been made but for the firm and determined attitude of the people themselves? Although shocked at the attitude of that portion of them who tore down Hyde Park railings, I cannot refrain from believing that that painful episode left its mark on the policy of the times in which we live. But how is a pressure of public opinion to be brought to bear, I ask, by the distant community of our countrymen who make India their home? How, indeed? It is plain that they have no present means even of making their wishes heard, save by mild appeals to the public press. But is their case then hopeless? No, thank goodness; there is a fund of fairness in the English character which renders it far from being so. There will be doubtless men in this forthcoming House of Commons who will disdain to refuse to help India because she is helpless, and to pass over her claims because they cannot be enforced.

Amidst the host of questions for settlement looming up before us, this will be, if I mistake not, one which must ultimately be considered. And will it not be well to settle it in these quiet times, while India is prosperous and happy? Who can tell how soon the more intimate connection between the pulsations of the two countries, implied in such a reform as I have advocated, may not be of great advantage to us? Were India hereafter to become the theatre of a mighty struggle with Russia (and some people believe this to be not improbable), we should find the benefit of having her interests properly represented, her requirements properly understood, and her rights as properly advocated, in the British Parliament.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

SPERO MELIORA.

NEW FURLOUGH RULES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The paragraph, page 1087, in your last number, headed "Decisions on the New Military Furlough Regulations," having somewhat alarmed officers in this country who, having had nearly eight years' leave, have elected the new rules, we shall feel obliged by your inserting the enclosed copy of a letter received to-day by one of our constituents, from which it appears the decision of the Commander-in-Chief is not in accordance with the interpretation given to the new rules by the home authorities.—We are, Sir, yours obediently, GEINDLAY and Co.

East India Army Agency, 55, Parliament-street, Nov. 6, 1868.

COPY.

SIR,—I am directed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, and to acquaint you in reply that leave on sick certificate, taken before the 1st of July, 1868, will not count as part of the eight years aggregate furloughs allowed by the Furlough Rules of 1868.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

T. T. PEARS, Major General,
Military Secretary.

Notices of Books.

The Cruise of H.M.S. "Galatea," in 1867-68. By the Rev. J. Milner, B.A., Chaplain, and O. W. Brierly. London: W. H. Allen and Co. 1869.

It would hardly be fair to test by a very high standard of criticism a book which, on the face of it, appeals specially to the strength of an abiding popular interest in the ways and doings of our Royal princes. The "Cruise of the Galatea" contains a pretty minute description of what was seen, done, or suffered by the Duke of Edinburgh in the course of a voyage round the world, which was brought to a premature, and very nearly brought to a tragical conclusion by the attempt made upon his life in New South Wales. His Royal Highness naturally forms the central figure in a work detailing the incidents of what may fairly be called a Royal progress through certain countries now ruled by one of the most popular of British Sovereigns. And when we remember that among those incidents are a cyclone, an elephant-hunt, in which the Prince displays all the courage and coolness of his Royal house, a descent in proper workmanlike fashion into an Australian gold mine, and a wonderfully narrow escape from assassination not far from Sydney, not to speak of numberless gay or amusing scenes elsewhere, we should guess that not many readers will discuss the fare supplied them with an over-critical eye to the merits of the cooking. Among the ladies of England it would meet with general approval, were it less palatable than it really is.

In fairness to the editors however, we must say that their part of the work has been well done. The literary workmanship is better than we had a right to expect. There is no slovenly or slangy writing, no attempt at grandiloquence, nor any symptom of vulgar flunkeyism. A thoroughly genial sense of enjoyment carries the reader pleasantly along, even through pages which repeat the oft-told tale of public gatherings in honour of the royal guest. A shrewd eye for picturesque scenes and noticeable incidents enables the editors to turn their powers of easy, clear, appropriate expression to the best account. Some indeed of the descriptive passages—the triumphal ride for instance into Capetown, the account of the hunting tour to the Knysna, the welcome given to the Prince at Adelaide, and the gay doings by the Derwent at Hobart Town—are specially remarkable for spirited and picturesque effects. Here is an average sample of the sort:—

"In a south-westerly direction there was a magnificent extent of country, varied and broken in the most picturesque manner; vast walls of cliffs rising from deep kloofs formed the boundaries of great highland tracts of country, beyond which rose higher and more distant ranges, one above another. Immediately below the hill on which we were seated lay a broad valley, intersected in the centre by a watercourse, towards which the land below us on each side swept down in broad easy slopes. There in the open, quietly standing or slowly moving at times, were the elephants, their great tusks showing out very white and distinctly as they paced slowly about in the yellow-flowering scrub in which they were half buried. It was the brightest sunshine, and they seemed to be in a state of drowsy enjoyment. Sometimes they appeared as dark spots, and then as they turned to the sun became of a light brown. A very large one continued to come across the open in advance of the rest, but always in a slow and deliberate manner, browsing as he went along, and evidently not alarmed in any way.

Presently a loud crashing among the trees on our right announced that an elephant was approaching. 'Look out!' and every gun was brought down in an instant. In another minute the huge beast dashed past within twenty yards of where we were standing. The scrub was so high that only a portion of the elephant could be seen as he passed. 'Bang! bang! bang!' went most of the guns, and the thud of the bullets could be distinctly heard, but the elephant went on. The dogs dashed in, but instead of following the elephant that had passed, they went forward into a clump of trees in front; and immediately the loud enraged trumpeting, apparently of two elephants fighting with the dogs, came from that direction."

The first day's hunt was unsuccessful, but the next attempt was rewarded by some very good sport, in which the Duke distinguished himself by his cool courage under very trying circumstances. One huge beast came tearing out of the jungle in chase of a frightened Hottentot boy on horseback. At sight of the Duke's party the elephant left his prey and charged down on the new foe. Regardless of urgent calls from several near him, the Prince reserved his fire "until he could be sure of making both barrels tell," and not until the huge beast was about twenty paces off did he attempt to stay him in his course. Luckily both barrels told, and a final shot from Sir Walter Currie's "engine," as the Duke himself calls it, laid the elephant low, at only seven paces from the party.

A second edition of the story is furnished by the Duke's own letter to his brother the Prince of Wales. And a very good, manly, modest letter it is, full of shrewd fun and racy joyousness, passing lightly over the writer's own achievements, and giving a clear yet crowded picture of the day's experiences. We can see him helping to skin the elephant he had shot, swallowing down his breakfast at half-past three P.M.—he had risen at five A.M.—and enjoying his "short clay" as he sat on the yet warm carcase. That "we spent a most jolly evening, and drank our mutton-broth out of tea-cups with more than ordinary relish," any one who reads the letter can easily imagine. And he will also find in it an unconscious filling up of the portrait suggested to us by other parts of the book. Throughout the cruise the Prince shows himself in all kinds of pleasing colours, taking everything cheerfully as it comes, equally ready with his jest and his kind word, helpful always wherever help is needed, flinching from no hardship, fearless of any danger, a boon companion among his friends, and a kindly courteous gentleman towards all with whom he comes into contact.

The Galatea sailed from Gibraltar to Rio, where the Prince exchanged visits with the Emperor of Brazil and his son-in-law, Count d'Eu, a young grandson of Louis Philippe. From Rio the ship touched at the small lonely island of Tristan d'Acunha, on her way to the Cape of Good Hope. There is an interesting account of the little colony on the island, and an amusing one of the Duke's visit to all the eleven cottages, whose female tenants were duly presented to him, and in one of which he sat down to a luncheon prepared for him by his humble hosts. The visit to the Cape was chiefly memorable for the elephant hunt at the Knysna, and the wonderful procession which attended the Royal party from Simon's Bay into Capetown. The latter is described with much geniality and picturesque force.

After battling with a cyclone on the way to Australia, and losing two men and a favourite monkey, the frigate steamed into the harbour of Glenelg in South Australia. From the day of his landing at Adelaide to the hour when a Fenian lunatic fired off his pistol right into the Prince's back, the record shows one busy round of processions, balls, addresses, public receptions, fireworks, illuminations, triumphal arches, varied by races, cricket-matches, visits to mines, kangaroo-hunts, and railway journeys. Children, adults of all kinds, including Chinese, Germans, and aborigines, are continually offering homage in large bodies to the son of their common Sovereign. Interspersed with the lighter details are a few chapters on the political and material progress of the different colonies visited. A very full account of everything connected with the attempt to assassinate the Prince closes with the Commodore's order for the Galatea's immediate return to England, an order which the Duke himself, who wanted only to complete his tour, obeyed with much reluctance, amidst the regretful salutations of all who had so lately welcomed him to their shores.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

A PLEA FOR REVISING THE PERMANENT SETTLEMENT.

The Indian Daily News thinks it is not likely that an arrangement, which was framed three-quarters of a century ago, which was grounded on facts false in history, and unrecognised by the rules of political economy, and the baneful consequences of which on the condition of the masses have been proved by experience, should be allowed to pass undisturbed simply on account of our improper settlement having once been made, and the word permanent unreflectingly introduced in an evil moment. A great historian of the period laments that an opportunity was lost to India in 1793 of creating a vigorous peasant population by making its cultivators the proprietors of the soil. But a loss is not always beyond the means of recovery, far less is it so in the legislative enactments of a country. And we humbly express our opinion that the present is a fitting time for adopting a measure for the same, when in remedying the evils of a similar though heightened description in another, but adjacent dependency of the British Empire, it has been proposed in Parliament to buy up all the large estates compulsorily from the landlords and sell them to peasant proprietors. Therefore we highly recommend it to the notice of the Government that the meditated education cess will be a mild though steady way of promoting the interests of the people en masse. Nor is it that Lord Cornwallis sealed irrevocably the fate of the ryots. In his very instrument he has left an opening to rescue them by adopting any step that might render their condition better. The 7th Section of the Act says, that the "Governor General in Council will, whenever he may deem proper, enact such regulations as he may think necessary for the protection and welfare of the dependent talookdars, ryots, and other cultivators of the soil." It would not be amiss here to consider the various objections that have been raised against it. We have had occasion to refute the futile one of the breach of faith that it would lead to; moreover it is utterly incompatible with the progressive nature of all governments. Another argument to which a great weight has been attached is this:—that the Bengalee zemindars—these sojourners in the march of civilisation—are very fond of stability, and are desirous to pay a fixed amount of revenue to Government. But a little reflection will enable us to perceive its hollowness. It is not meet that their payments should remain uniform while their incomes would increase extensively and out of all proportion to them. Nor is it equitable that they should enjoy all the benefits of an enlightened age without having to share the augment of its burdens. Many inventions of the day, offering facilities of communication and causing improvements of agriculture, go to fill to overflowing the already full chests of yore in the antique buildings of the zemindars, while they deal out at their leisure the worn out measure of their quotas of revenues to the Government.

EXAMINATION OF OFFICERS IN NATIVE LANGUAGES.

The Madras Athenæum observes that out of the whole service of regulars and Indian army in this Presidency, only four officers have passed the high proficiency test, while none have as yet obtained the degree of honour. Of the four officers alluded to, one belongs to H.M.'s 18th Hussars, another to the 2nd Cavalry, and the two others to the Staff Corps and General List. Are we to infer from these facts that the standards are so high that few officers can attain them? We think not, and the reasons for the apparent indifference of the officers generally to the inducement held out to them by these new orders can be pretty easily ascertained. One of these, doubtless, is the ten years' clause; but another lies in the fact that, whereas formerly officers who had passed the higher examinations were considered to have a preference for appointments to those who had only passed the lower ones; now-a-days we have all reduced to one common level, and all inducement to qualify by the higher standards removed. The officer who has just managed to creep through the examination and the best interpreter in the service both stand on the same ground as far as lingual qualifications go. Where army rank is the guide, the hard-working studious officers and those who are careless and indifferent are on an equality. All orders, like this one of 1864, sooner or later bring forth evil fruits, and this one is no exception to the general rule. We find in the present day officers interpreting at Courts Martial who cannot render a single easy sentence into intelligible Hindustani. We have heard of cases where Courts had to be adjourned in consequence of the incompetency of the interpreter; of others, again, where the officer conducting the proceedings, unwilling to compromise a young officer acting as interpreter for what was not so much his fault as that of those who appointed him, setting him aside, and acting as his own interpreter. Ought these things so to be? Has no such thought as this ever flashed across the minds of the authorities of late—when ordering a native prisoner to be tried by a court-martial for some serious offence—that justice might not be done to him, owing to the inefficiency of the officer appointed to interpret? We doubt whether four per cent. of the officers now passed for the higher standard can take an ordinarily easy court-martial, and correctly interpret it into Hindustani so as to be understood by a native of ordinary intelligence. And yet under this new system they are appointed interpreters to Courts Martial, Courts of Requests, &c., and in course of time the whole native army must be officered entirely by those who have passed the higher standard only. When we remember that the senior lieutenant on the General List has nearly ten years' service, we can hardly imagine that many officers of the Indian Army will be able, as matters now stand, to pass the high proficiency test before the ten years' clause bars them from obtaining any pecuniary benefits by doing so. If the higher standard is to remain practically the highest in the Madras Army nothing more is required, but, if not, surely a change is needed.

INDIA'S RELATIONS TOWARDS ENGLAND.

The Bombay Gazette, discussing the Times of India's "Appeal to the Electors of England," disputes the truth of some of its assertions. The first great grievance alleged is that we take fifteen or sixteen millions from India which never return. Without stopping to dispute the literal correctness of the statement, it may be asked how many thousands of Englishmen land in India never to return? How much of the best brain and the most robust sinew, annually expended upon India, is absolutely lost to England? Set your lakhs against our lives, and on which side will the balance fall? No doubt, it is a consequence of the peculiar circumstances of our rule, and so is the alleged flow of millions from the East to the West. If the silver waters English ground, the brains and bones of our English brothers fertilise your Indian fields, which, without them, would be the prey of petty tyrants and desolated by anarchic wars. Talk of "shifting our burdens upon the shoulders of a helpless race," it would be far less incorrect to say that the race by its very helplessness shifted its own burdens upon our stronger shoulders. Why, these fifteen or sixteen millions, according to the appeal itself, go to pay strictly for services done. Who should pay the interest on Indian Stock if not the Indian people? What would be the condition of the Indian people now, if there had been no Indian Stock? How can you separate the India of to-day from its origin? It would be as just to say that England should repudiate a large part of the National Debt because it was contracted last century, and because part, if not all, was raised in paper and is paid in gold. In like manner, and with even more reason, India pays, so far as she can, the military and civil service, the pensions, the interests on Indian debt, the cost of depots maintained at home, and the charge for transporting troops to her shores. But the writer who has undertaken to instruct the people of England, insinuates that they, and not India, should pay, if not the whole, yet a great part of these charges. In addition to the £28,000,000 which they pay interest on the National Debt, they are to be saddled, forsooth, with charges which justly fall on Indian revenue. In short, the writer desires that India should cease to be self-supporting, and that England should pay a subsidy to the Indian treasury! But the great fallacy which lies at the root of the whole disquisition is the fixed idea that "India" is something separate from the British Empire; that "England" is also something separate; India, in the writer's mind, being connected with England only by what is called a personal union, that is, both being under the same Sovereign. Such is not the fact. India is part of the British Empire. Wars undertaken in the East are intended to promote the welfare of the Empire, and not least that part of the Empire which lies in India. The very political status of India, that "blessing" which the erring English have conferred upon her, depends upon British supremacy in the East, and only want of insight could prevent anyone from seeing that there is a distinct relationship between India, the main seat of our sway, admitted to be good and a blessing, and the countries comparatively remote, Japan, China, even the Cape. To say that India has no real concern with these countries is mere cant, and arises from the confirmed habit of looking upon India and nothing else.

FEMALE EDUCATION IN THE NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES.

The Englishman thinks that the results of female education in the North-Western Provinces during the last year, as displayed in Mr. Kempson's Report, are painfully unsatisfactory. There is a considerable falling off in the number both of schools and of scholars. But this is a point of comparatively minor importance, for the inspection of the schools that have survived shows conclusively that we are not yet in a position to undertake female education on any but the smallest scale. In the face of these results, indeed, it is unfair to accuse the people of apathy for not sending their girls to school. Exceptional instances show that the children would learn if we could teach them; but the instruments are wanting. In some cases schools had been in existence a year, but the pupils had not even learned their letters; in the majority their knowledge extended very little beyond this, and disorder and want of discipline were the rule rather than the exception. We cannot expect the people to send their children to such schools as these. It is the fault of the teachers, or rather of the almost total want of competent teachers; and as we may safely say that the bad teachers do more harm than none at all, it is evident that we should concentrate our expenditure and our efforts in providing efficient means of instruction before we attempt to extend our schools; and the falling off in the number of the latter is neither to be wondered at nor regretted.

INDIA AS A COTTON FIELD.

The Indian Daily News would never expect India to produce machines to peel potatoes as is done in America. Nor would it look for Indian Cramptons to invent mules, and Arkwrights to produce spinning jennies, even though there is a sort of genius in India which often adopts very ingenious methods of accomplishing certain ends with very imperfect instruments. There is genius in India, but it has never been trained to those grand and daring conceptions which present themselves to the Western mind, and only require study to work them out to practical results. It would have been long before the Hindoo mind would have conceived the idea of throwing a bridge over the Soane, and thousands of lives would have been lost in the Hooghly before any attempts were made to bridge it. We may even have to wait for years before Western administrative courage can bring itself to sanction the conceptions of Western engineers. But there are points in which India may assert herself with advantage. India can be great in her productive powers, if they are wisely directed. She has already done something, and there is room and opportunity for more. Nor is encouragement wanting. In that splendid opportunity which the cotton famine furnished, India gathered immense wealth. And she gathered with it, or might have done, experience almost as valuable. The termination of the war in America has not restored the ancient order of things. America cannot become the sole source of supply for the raw material of our Lancashire fabrics. According to the Cotton Supply Reporter, there is need of all the cotton likely to be available from all sources of supply. There will be gambling in cotton, but that need not affect the grower. There is ample scope for him, if he will wisely use his opportunities. Something has already been done, and Mr. Rivett Carnac, the cotton commissioner, has done much to improve the staple, and to direct the growers to improved kinds. And the paper already quoted thus refers to the effects:—

The successful attempts at improvement which are made from time to time influence and encourage similar attempts by others; and the facts which are so frequently recorded in our columns show that by judicious and persevering exertions cotton cultivation can still be greatly extended. There is yet a splendid future for India as a cotton-growing country, but it can only be realised by persevering efforts to remove the difficulties which remain, and to develop the resources which are now universally admitted. With so vast a territory, and a people advancing in intelligence and wealth, beginning also to understand that the improvements urged upon them are for their own benefit, we may reasonably conclude that what has already been accomplished is only the precursor of still greater achievements. That cotton has been the means of conferring immense benefits on India cannot be doubted, but still greater benefits may yet be obtained by the same potent influence; and so much are our own interests involved, that we can never rest satisfied until India shall be made fully equal to the United States, before the American war, as a source of cotton supply. Let Government act as a wise landlord towards the country in its possession, and by a liberal and judicious expenditure on public works, contribute to the improvement of its vast estates, and there will be an ample return, both in the enhanced value and productivity of the territory, and in the contentment and prosperity of the inhabitants. Cotton is yet further to enrich and elevate India.

There, then, is an opportunity still continued to India, which many people imagined would be taken away by the restoration of peace to America. But it is evident that an industry once lost to one country and taken up in earnest by another, cannot well remain a monopoly to either. Those who thought that Indian cotton would soon pass from the market seem to have based their notions on worthless assumptions. There is still an opportunity for India, and it is to be hoped she will not unwisely neglect it or throw it away.

EXAMINATIONS.—The undermentioned candidates are reported to have passed the lower standard in Hindoostance on Oct. 7.—Lieuts. H. J. Kinsman, Royal Horse Artillery; G. W. Rogers; A. M. Pinhey, C. Crosthwaite, Royal Artillery; Private J. Sharp, 5th Lancers; Lieut. C. R. St. Quinten, Schoolmaster J. Harris, and Private J. Norton, 19th Hussars; Lieut. H. J. Beattie, 20th Hussars; Cornet A. P. Loyd and Private J. Rivers, 21st Hussars; Ensigns G. E. Guyon and C. M. Keighley, 1st Battalion 11th Foot; Ensigns T. J. O'D. Renny, 36th Foot; A. C. G. Lydiard, 38th Foot; J. N. Walker, 55th Foot; H. F. Smith, G. W. Martin, and Privates J. Murphy and J. Conroy, 88th Foot; Lieut. G. T. Beasley, 102nd Foot; Ensigns H. W. Allen, 107th Foot; C. F. Baugh and Private J. Molloy, 109th Foot; Apothecary W. Sinclair, Hospital Stewards R. Kennelly and W. Bacon, Assistant Apothecary H. C. Matthews, Hospital Apprentices J. E. Campbell, J. A. Antonio, R. B. Fanthorne, S. Raphael, T. Baptist, and R. Crabbe, Sub-Medical Department. The undermentioned officers are reported by the board of examiners at Fort William to have passed the test specified according to G.G.O. No. 734, of 1864:—Higher Standard in Persian.—Assistant-surgeon W. E. Allen, Medical Department. Higher Standard in Hindoostance.—Lieutenant A. H. Turner, 79th Foot, Probationer, Staff Corps; Lieutenant T. Price, 103rd Foot; and Lieutenant G. J. Hare, Probationer, Staff Corps, 103rd Foot.

CIVIL FURLONGS.—The following furloughs and leaves of absence of civilians are recorded in the Gazettes of September and October:—Mr. Raban, Officiating Magistrate and Collector of Pooree, for one month; Lieutenant-colonel Davies, Judicial Commissioner of Chota, Nagpore, for thirty days, preparatory to proceeding to Europe, on furlough, from November 20 next; Mr. Kirkwood, Officiating Joint Magistrate and Deputy Collector of Cuttack, for fifteen days, to enable him to present himself for examination by the Standard of High Proficiency in Bengalee to be held in Calcutta in January next; Mr. Gordon, Extra Assistant Commissioner, Mooltan to Europe, on private affairs, for six months; Mr. Jones, c.s., Deputy Commissioner, 2nd Class, availed himself on Sept. 15 of the furlough to Europe for one year; Lieutenant Graham, Officiating District Superintendent of Police, Bareilly, fifteen days' preparatory leave to enable him to reach the port of embarkation, with the view of proceeding to Europe; Mr. Goad, District Superintendent of Police at Cawnpore, twelve months, with fifteen days' preparatory leave; Mr. Short, Officiating Assistant District Superintendent of Police, Bareilly, one month; Major Boddon, District Superintendent of Police, Hoshiarpore, two months; H. Wade, Accountant Public Works Department, Punjab, three months; E. O. Tronson, Assistant District Superintendent of Police, Gugeramwalla, has two months' privilege leave from the 10th of December next; Captain Clarke, Deputy Superintendent of Bangalore, two months; Major Elliott, 1st Class, Deputy Superintendent of the Shimoga District, Nuggur Division, Mysore, one month's preparatory leave from the 22nd of October, 1868; Colonel Snow, Deputy Commissioner of Butool, in the Central Provinces, subsidiary leave for thirty days from the 1st of September, to enable him to proceed to Bombay for the purpose of obtaining leave to Europe for eighteen months, on m.c., under the furlough regulations of 1854; Lieutenant Vertue, Assistant Commissioner of Boorhanpore in Nimar, Central Provinces, is granted subsidiary leave for thirty days from the 7th of September, preparatory to his obtaining further leave to Europe; Captain Melville, Surveyor Topographical Survey of India, one month, from the 1st of October; C. O. Oldham, Deputy Superintendent of the Geological Survey, one year; T. W. Smith, c.s., to Europe, one year and ten months, from date of embarkation; six months' leave of absence on m.c. is granted to Mr. Schneider, Patrol of Arung, Raepore Division, from the date on which he may avail himself of it. Thirty days' subsidiary leave is granted to Lieutenant Taylor, Officiating District Superintendent of Police, Belaspore, from the date on which he may avail himself of it preparatory to proceeding to Madras.

Bengal.

HAZARA.

The Pioneer of the 12th October publishes the following additional telegrams in regard to the Punjab frontier force. They contain some fresh facts. The last two from Machai Peak are official messages from General Wilde:—

Oghee, Oct. 9.—There have been no further military operations. Overtures for peace were received yesterday from the Chigurzaies and the Akazies. Their jirgahs were expected to arrive in camp shortly. Nothing is known of the movements of the Hindustanees. The health of the troops is reported excellent.

Oct. 9, Afternoon.—The Chigurzaies and the Akazies have made overtures for peace. The work of demolition of the villages of the Pararee (?) Syuds has therefore been suspended. We may now consider that all the tribes will submit to our terms.

Oct. 10.—The jirgahs of the Chigurzaies and Jarawee (Pararee) Syuds have come in, and were yesterday negotiating with the Commissioner. The Akazie jirgah was shortly expected. There have been no further military operations.

Oct. 11.—The Commissioner has concluded terms of peace with the following Pathan tribes of the Black Mountain, namely, the Akazies, the Chigurzaies, the Hussunzyes, and the Pararee Syuds. Hostages from their tribes remain with the camp till the return of the troops to British territories.

From MACHAI PEAK, Oct. 6.—Rain fell last night. The road up the crest of the Black Mountain, and on the Machai Peak, is so difficult and steep, that the troops have been employed in opening up communications. The Elephant Battery was not, therefore, moved up to the front. The 2nd Goorkha Battalion occupied the Chitterbut Peak last night. H.M.'s 1st Battalion 6th Foot and mortar battery move up in support of the 1st Brigade to-morrow morning. Lieutenant Unwin, of the 5th Goorkha Battalion, was slightly wounded; also one sepoy killed and seven wounded in yesterday's engagement. We have had much difficulty about water, but I hope sufficient supply has been found. The Deyshee Jirgah have come in for terms.

According to the Pioneer of Oct. 9 the right column of the Hazara field force numbered, on the morning of the advance from Oghee, 2,476 fighting men, and the left column 2,567. In addition to the seven days' provisions which the men took with them, the commissariat at Oghee had orders to have a further supply of four days' rations ready in case of necessity.

The following memo. was issued by the Assistant Adjutant-General from Camp Oghee, Oct. 2:—"The tribes now opposed to us include the Khan Kheyls, a section of the Hussunzyes, the Akazais, the Phuryan Syud, the Daishees, and the Chigurzaies, or clans to the north of Agror. The Hussunzyes and the Swatees of the Tirkee and Mundcar valleys have sent in jirgahs, and are believed to be neutral. The immediate object is the Machai Peak on the Black Mountain, bearing about N.W. from Oghee; and it is intended to reach this point, which may be considered as the key of the Black Mountain, in three days. The camp will be parked at Oghee; the flying column moving without tents, and with seven days' provisions. 1st day (Oct. 3). The first day's operations will be directed against the Jale Gully, the pass at the head of the Agror valley. General Vaughan's brigade will ascend the Kabbul mountain and General Bright's brigade the Koond Gully spur of the Black Mountain on the left; the pass will then be occupied. 2nd day. The second day's operations will be altogether on the Black Mountain. General Vaughan will work back to the village of Bailean and ascend the Sumbulboot spur; on reaching the crest he will operate to the south against the Khan Kheyls. General Bright will follow the Koond Gully spur, striking the crest of the mountain at Chittaburt; he will then turn to the north. Between Sumbulboot and Koond Gully a spur intervenes; this will be ascended by the levies, who will then complete the chain of communication between the brigades, and preserve it during the operations on the ridge. 3rd day. On the third day General Vaughan, after dominating the Khan Kheyls, will turn to the north to join the first brigade. General Bright will be occupied in gaining the Machai Peak. Duty: The three days' operations will include the 3rd, 4th, and 5th of October. Force at Oghee: The force remaining at Oghee will number 1,500 Europeans and natives, besides the Maharajah's troops. Lieutenant Colonel Rothney, 5th Goorkhas will command. By order of Major-General Wilde, C.B."

COAL IN INDIA.—III.

There are very few coal beds in the North-West; and the only one that has been worked much is the Singrowlic field, which lies due south of Chunar and Mirzapore, and distant about eighty miles from either place. Want of roads, and the state of the country, which is hilly throughout, make it difficult to get the coal from the mines to the Ganges, and all that has been brought as yet has been carried by bullocks. The coal is spoken of very highly, and an analysis given of two samples would make it superior to Raneegunge and Palamow, as the following is its composition:—

But the coal that was supplied to the river steamers did not bear out this assertion by any means, as it was invariably a small, dull slaty-looking fuel, and very dirty in consumption, fouling the boiler tubes to a great extent, and it was much disliked by the engineers of the steamers. Nothing is being done yet with this coal to any extent, owing to the distance of the mines, but it is possible the East Indian Railway Company may attempt something in it hereafter.

The Nerbudda Valley is the nearest coal source to Bombay, as it is within about 350 miles, and Lieut.-col. Ouseley mentions that there are three beds of coal of very superior quality, and he gives the thicknesses as 20 feet, 25½ feet, and 40 feet, merely covered with 10 or 12 feet of sandstone and clay slate. The most important beds are situated in the Gurrawarra districts on the Seetah Dewah river, about seventy miles from Hosungabad, and it is at this place where the large beds abovementioned are met with, and Lieut.-col. Ouseley asserts that a portion tried by him was proved to be 83 per cent. better than the Scotch coal used on board the Indus steamer at Bombay.

The Baitool district is situated at a distance of from thirty to forty miles from the Nerbudda river at Hosungabad; the intermediate country is rough and hilly, and there is no water carriage; but the beds of coal are numerous, large, and near the surface, and the mineral itself is said to be of superior quality. There is then the Jubbulpore district, and Lieut.-col. Ouseley, in his report of this, mentions that coal is found in the vicinity of Jubbulpore, or within nine miles; its composition is given as follows:—

Volatile matter	50	0
Earthy and feruginous matter	2	9
							100 0

Some samples of very superior coal, said to be from the Nerbudda, nearly correspond in composition to the Scotch Cannel coal. Coal has been found in the station of Jubbulpore, at a depth of seventy feet, thus proving the existence of extensive coal formations in this vicinity. One bed is mentioned on the Nerbudda as being 12 feet and another of 6 feet in thickness.

There is mention of some thin seams in the Cutch district near Bhooj, but the beds are not more than twenty inches thick, although a depth of 190 feet was gone in attempts to trace the formation to something more valuable.

It is astonishing that no signs of coal are met with on the north side of the Ganges and Berhampooter, or the immense tract of country included in the boundaries of these two streams. To the south of the Berhampooter coal extends from the Garrow Hills in 90 deg. E. to the Naga Hills, in Upper Assam in 96 deg. E. longitude. All the beds met with in the ranges of hills that extend along the Berhampooter bank is of superior quality, and one specimen is eulogised as being superior to any sample of Indian coal. The description that has been worked most extensively is the Sylhet and Jynteeah coal, both are excellent; the latter of these two is a very bright bituminous mineral, easily broken, and igniting readily if held to a candle; this coal would be very valuable for gas purposes, but is not so fit for steam power as others inferior to it, as it breaks up rapidly, and is liable to fall through the bars. The Sylhet coal in 1852 was used by the Ganges Navigation steamers, and being much superior to Raneegunge, was in great demand, but the contractor was either unable to supply it, or found himself not in a position to cope with the Raneegunge Mines, and was obliged to give it up in 1854 or 1855, since which little has been mined. The Sylhet beds are various, and range from 1½ feet up to 28 feet thick; and the surveys give a total thickness of 85 feet of coal in this one district. To the east of Sylhet, or more strictly speaking the north-east, there is the Jumoona bed, in Lower Assam, about 90 miles from Gowhaty. This coal is spoken of more highly than any others, but the beds are only 2½ feet, and would not be worth working. But the finest coal that has yet been found is undoubtedly the Terap beds in Upper Assam. This coal is spoken very highly of by Mr. Medlicott, who surveyed them in 1865. It is equal to the very best English coal, as the following composition will show:—

Carbon	61	8
Volatile matter	36	5

Unfortunately this fine coal is situated at a distance of sixty miles from the Berhampooter. It has the benefit of water carriage six months in the year, but labour is so scarce, and the site is so sickly, that the task of digging the coal is more arduous than profitable. It happens also that this very locality is out of British territory, and the Nagas, in whose country it is, have the sense to know that it is of value, and would oppose any speculator who wished to go to work on a large scale, and they are obstinate, pigheaded people, and not very captivated in a business way, as the ideas of meum and tuum are very unsophisticated in their dominions. Attempts have been made to supply coal from these mines for the steamers running on the Berhampooter. Owing to the distance from Calcutta to the stations in Upper Assam, 800 miles, the price of coal is much increased, and it is worth from Rs. 20 to Rs. 22 per ton. But even at this high rate the contract to supply steamers did not prove a paying one. The Terap coal crops out on the banks of a small stream, and it is only necessary to dig it from the out-crop and tumble it at once into the boats, which can ascend the stream. This process may be very well while it lasts, but as soon as the mineral is expended any ways near the bank, and increased labour and care will be requisite, the difficulties thus presented will be quite sufficient to deter any native from meddling with it, with the labour and appliances held at command there. The boats are mere "dug outs," and will not at the outside carry more than three or four tons. The inhabitants of the district are mere savages, whose time is mostly spent in a desultory warfare waged with some opposite faction; they are fine, powerful men, and capable of doing a fair share of work, but their tool is the "dow" or "daw," a cutting implement of barbarous construction, which they use equally for fighting or cutting jungle, and if they could not get other tools they would dig coal with the same weapon. But their delight is to keep their "hand in" at a cutting and slashing exercise, which jungle cutting affords them, consequently they are averse to "hoeing," or any employment that they consider derogatory.

Petroleum is met with in many places in both Sylhet and Northern Assam. In the latter place it is much used medicinally by the natives and as a preventive against the ravages of white ants, which are very prolific in those parts. The oil is obtained from shallow wells; it is of a dark, tarry nature, but limpid as water. Its odour is very powerful of naphtha. It is used as a specific for itch, and has the credit of being valuable in a great many instances where its efficacy is doubtful. A company was established to sink wells for the purpose of working petroleum commercially; they went to a great expense in boring wells in several places, and were successful in striking oil. They had one of Mather and Platt's patent steam boring machines, which answered remarkably well, when the locality it was tried in is considered; but for some reason or other the company abandoned the project, and, after spending upwards of two lacs of rupees, gave up the idea of the oil altogether. Crude petroleum can be obtained in small quantities in Jeypore, in Upper Assam, at Rs. 4 a maund of 80 lbs.

There are several coal beds nearer the Berhampooter than the Terap, but the coal is not so good, and the seams are not so easily got at. But as a rule, all the Assam coals are better than Ranee-gunge, and in most cases equal to good ordinary English Newcastle. But when we attempt to compare the outturn of coal in India with that of the United Kingdom, the former will appear very contemptible, for while the whole of the coal mined in India annually falls short of a million of tons, the supply of the United Kingdom now exceeds eighty millions of tons per year. But considering the limited use that coal is put to in this country, we must acknowledge that even the small quantity that is produced is a sign that Indian coal is appreciated. Natives have no objection to use coal as fuel to cook with. Where they can get it for nothing, as in the neighbourhood of the mines of Ranee-gunge, all the miners use coal in their huts, and may be seen going home in the evening with a huge lump on their heads, but then it costs them nothing, and makes them an excellent fire all night without much trouble and looking after.

STATION TALK.

LUCKNOW, Oct. 7.—We, as usual, are about to have a number of official changes. Colonel Hutchinson, Chief Engineer, goes home and will be succeeded by Colonel Newmarch, from Allahabad. Captain Lang, Assistant Secretary to the Chief Commissioner in the D.P.W., takes two years' furlough from the beginning of January; his successor is to be Mr. Penny, late of Fyzabad. There is also some talk of a new municipal engineer, as the drainage of the city is to be set upon. In the Commissariat Department we also hear of coming changes. Colonel Macbean, Deputy Commissary General, returns to Kussowlie, whence he came, and Major Jenkins, Assistant Commissary, gets Darjeeling. These two officers will probably be succeeded by Colonels Christopher and Roberts, both on their way out from home. It is also rumoured that there are doubts whether Major-general Taylor will return to the command of the Oudh division. Two of our three European regiments leave us this cold weather. The 5th Lancers on the 16th November move off to Campbellpore, and her Majesty's 55th Regiment is to be ready to proceed towards Pokri about the end of the same month. The women and children of the 55th go to Seetapoor until accommodation is provided in the new hill station. Both these regiments have a capital name in Lucknow, and their officers are great and general favourites.

ABBOTTABAD, Oct. 3.—As regards the enemy, "there can be little doubt," writes a friend at Oghi, "that the Hindostanees (Wahabee fanatics) have really crossed over to this side of the Indus, and will therefore join the enemy. They have been turned out of their old settlement trans-Indus by the Akhoond of Swat, and to gain a new and permanent footing among the tribes on this side they must conciliate them by making common cause against us." They fight well, and with the Hussunzais, Chizzulzais, and Akazais, some 8,000 fighting men are opposed to us already. But our force was reviewed the other day at Oghi, and it is said to number more than that. Probably with the Hazara levies and the Cashmere contingent we have nearly 10,000 men in Hazara. If they are not a match for double the number of barbarous mountaineers it is a pity. Little opposition is expected after the first day or two, and by the time we reach the crest of the Black Mountain (which we ought to do the second day) no enemy ought to be in sight. It was a mistake about the 77th being ordered to Kohat, as mentioned in my last. They are merely to hold themselves in readiness at Nowshera. I believe the 38th (Queen's), 31st N.I., and wing of 9th Bengal Cavalry are gone to Durbund to stop retreating across the Indus. The 16th Bengal Cavalry, and a company or two of the 6th Royals, to their great disgust I fear, remain at Oghi to guard the camp. We have here in Abbottabad two nine-pounders, and two companies of the 77th under Captain Leggett. Major Urmston is here, officiating for Major Pollock here and at Peshawur during the absence of the latter with the force. Major Urmston was with the expedition to the Black Mountain in 1852, and has drawn up a very useful little map of Upper Hazara, which gives a good idea of the country. The now famous mountain seems to be a short isolated range, some fifteen or twenty miles in length, and averaging ten thousand feet in height. At this end of the range, but quite distinct from it, is a bold looking mountain apparently about the same height, called "Bahingra," which many mistake for the Black Mountain. The Indus flows close by these mountains, westward of them. It would seem to be easy and natural to make the Indus our boundary, as far as Hazara is concerned, and to annex the whole mountain region between it and Cashmere. Let Shere Ali Khan, Amir of Cabul, have the expensive and pestilential Peshawur valley, and let us keep ourselves snugly and securely east of Indus, with a new and healthy military station in Upper Hazara. This would be better than extending our frontier to Jellalabad as some recommend.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

ABBOTTABAD, HAZARA, Oct. 6.—Letters from officers of the advance column inform us that the enemy have fought most fiercely, and that their expression is fierce even in death; they carry off our wounded whenever they can, it is supposed to mutilate and torture them. This campaign has been conducted throughout on the admirable principle of avoiding to the utmost loss or hurt to our side, which seems the surest method of disarming and entirely defeating the fierce hostility and bitter hatred of those fanatical hill people, whose spirit of religious animosity and resentment will no longer be gratified, while we bring into successful practice against them our mortars and rockets and most formidable appliances for ousting them from their strongholds, and holding them at a safe distance. We owe it to the invention of our improved military weapons that our triumphs thus far in this campaign have been "tearless victories," and we may trust that the Pathans and Affghans on our frontier will most effectually be persuaded before the conclusion of this campaign that their opportunities and means of inflicting disaster on us are gone, and that we shall never repeat the rash follies of the Umbeyla campaign. We seem now to appreciate most the services of those generals who value human life and best provide for the protection and preservation of the stores of their soldiers. The Abyssinian Expedition has proved that as much good may be gained from a campaign like this, cautiously and prudently conducted, and perhaps greater rewards than from disastrous victories. Both brigades marched with seven days' provisions, and they have sent in for rations for seven days more, with a view perhaps to stay on the mountain and fortify and secure the heights they have gained. The Lieut.-Governor of the Punjab is to visit Abbottabad on the 15th, and will go on to Agror. There are now about sixty ladies in this station, wives of officers who are with the force. I will keep you informed of whatever may be of interest.

PESHAWUR, Oct. 5.—The Ameer Shere Ali Khan, through the British vakeel at Cabul, has requested the British authorities to send away from this place the relatives and dependents of the ex-Ameer who have taken up their residence here, representing that these persons may be dangerous both to the British and to the Cabul Government. The authorities here have ordered these refugees to leave Peshawur, giving them the alternative of either going to Rawul Pindie or back to their own country. The news from the Hazara frontier is favourable. The force advanced on the 4th, and the First Brigade occupied Chittabut after a slight engagement with the enemy. This post is on the crest of the Black Mountain. Reports differ as to the conduct of the Akhoond of Swat. We hear that he is making preparations to give the British a warm reception should they attack him, and many people hope that the frontier force will continue to occupy the enemy's posts, and having chased the Hussunzais will advance and chastise the old fanatic the Akhoond.

SWAT, Sept. 24.—It having been reported to the Akhoond that some tradesmen have exported a quantity of oil and rice for Peshawur, in the British territory, he ordered that no article of trade should go to that country for the future, and that any person acting contrary to this order should be severely punished. The Khaleefah, eldest son of the Akhoond, has appointed men to watch the passes and see that no communication is held between the Mussulman territory of the Akhoond and the British possessions. Prince Feroze Shah has left Swat for Cabul, in search of some suitable employment under Ameer Sher Ali Khan, the Cabul ruler. The Akhoond has armed thirty thousand of his subjects and provided them with military flags, known at Swat by the appellation of Nishan or Alum. A general inspection of these levies having been made by the Akhoond, they have been divided into sections, and put under the command of the various Khans and Chiefs of his territory. All these, though dispersed to several posts, can assemble under one banner at the slightest signal, perfectly prepared for any emergency. They are besides to go through a course of drill every morning in their respective localities. The whole of these preparations are made by the Akhoond, in apprehension of an attack which he expects to be made upon him by the English. He is perfectly alive to the necessity of collecting all the military strength he possibly can, as he is assured the British will resist him sooner or later.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

ARRIVALS FROM EUROPE.—The following officer returned from furlough on the date specified:—Lieut. Perreau on 14th September last.

MAJOR PLAYFAIR.—We regret to hear from Jubbulpore that Major Playfair is obliged to proceed at once to England, his health having suddenly given way.

MILITARY.—We hear it stated that a committee of officers is to be appointed at all horse fairs in the Punjab, to select horses fit for service with the Artillery.—Englishman.

APPOINTMENT TO THE SUPREME COUNCIL.—Maharajah Sir Birg Bejai Sing, of Bulrampur, in Oudh, has been appointed a member of the Supreme Council.

CENTRAL PROVINCES.—The Gazette notifies that Messrs. H. W. Steel and F. Venning have been appointed Assistant Commissioners in the Central Provinces.

HYDERABAD RESIDENCY.—The Viceroy and Governor-general in Council has been pleased to re-appoint Lieutenant G. H. Trevor to officiate as 2nd Assistant to the Resident at Hyderabad.

EXCHANGES.—Under instructions from the Horse Guards, it is notified that the undermentioned officers are permitted to exchange into the battalions specified opposite their names:—19th Foot.—Lieut. C. Barton, 2nd Battalion; Lieut. L. R. H. D. Campbell, 1st Battalion.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL STEWART.—From the Delhi Gazette we learn that Brigadier-General Stewart, C.B., has received orders direct from Army Head-quarters to hold himself in readiness to assume command of the brigade under orders for service in the Peshawur Division.

A GOOD MOVE.—We hear it stated that an officer is to be deputed to make such arrangements as shall ensure an adequate supply of water along the roads in the Punjab traversed by British troops. It is in contemplation also to erect inns or caravanserais at each stage.—Englishman.

THE SUBATHOO COURT-MARTIAL.—The Subathoo court-martial is now, says the Pioneer, fast drawing to a close. Paymaster Lawes has read his defence, which, it is said, covered no less than ninety-four closely-written pages of foolscap. The reply to the defence has also been read by Colonel Fullerton, the prosecutor.

FUTTEGHURH.—The wing of the 101st Regiment was to leave Futteghurh this month to rejoin head-quarters at Cawnpore, and thence, via Bombay, to England. It is not known what corps relieves them at Futteghurh. The detachment 41st N.I. is under orders for Buxa in December, their place to be taken by some companies of the 40th from Agra.

COMMUTATION OF MONEY PAYMENTS FOR RELIGIOUS PURPOSES.—With a view (says the Englishman) to disconnect the Government from the direct support of all the remaining religious institutions in India to which the State contributes, the Home Government have, we understand, directed the commutation of all money payments into grants of land.

SUPPOSED MURDERER OF CAPT. DOUGLAS.—Indian Public Opinion says that "a seal engraver" of Lahore has been charged with the murder of the late Captain Douglas, Commandant of Palace Guards, in Delhi, on the 11th of May, 1857, and has been identified by a person sent from Delhi for the purpose. Captain Douglas was one of the first victims of the mutiny.

A COMPLAINT.—By degrees every little privilege once accorded to military officers is being taken away. A short time ago they were allowed to remit by transfer receipts the amount of their pay, all except staff. Now we hear an order from the Controller-general of Military Accounts has directed paymasters not to issue remittance transfer receipts to any officer, except on account of family remittances.—Delhi Gazette.

CONSULAR APPOINTMENT.—His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-general in Council is pleased to recognise Mr. Johann Smidt as Consul for the North German Confederation at Calcutta. Subject to the confirmation of Her Majesty's Government, his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-general in Council is pleased to recognise Mr. Johannes Schroder as acting Consul for the North German Confederation at Calcutta during the absence in Europe of Mr. Johann Smidt.

CAPTAIN SLADEN.—A Rangoon paper of the 29th September informs us that Captain Sladen had been expected to leave Bhamo on the 17th of that month, and that the King of Burmah had sent his steamer up the river to meet him.

LEAVES CANCELLED.—The fifteen months' leave to England, on private affairs, granted to the undermentioned officers, is hereby cancelled:—Lieutenant H. Latham, R.A., Major C. H. E. Greame, 104th Foot.

MUNICIPAL.—The election of the undermentioned gentlemen to be members of the Municipal Committee for Mussoorie is confirmed:—Messrs. George Taylor, Herbert Grant Scott, and William Hobson, will hold office until 30th June, 1870. Messrs. Owen Snow, Colonel Barlow, and Mr. George Ludlam, will hold office until 30th June, 1869. Mr. John Mackinnon and Thomas MacEvoy will hold office until 30th June, 1870. Colonel Walker and Mr. J. Hurst will hold office until 30th June, 1869.

YAKOUB KOOSH BEGHI.—The Pioneer says it "has good reason to believe that Yakoob Koosh Beghi is still in the neighbourhood of Kashgar, at the head of a large but heterogeneous force, composed of levies from the garrisons of the neighbouring towns. His position is said to be one stage in advance of Kashgar. The advanced camp of the Russians is reported to be in the Koosh Beghi's immediate neighbourhood, at the distance of only three or four marches. Yakoob Koosh Beghi's rule continues as vigorous as ever, but in strict accordance with established law and custom."

PESHAWUR BRIGADE ORDERS.—Peshawur brigade order, dated the 18th June last, directing Lieutenant G. B. P. Alcock, 28th N.I., to assume command of Fort Shubkudder, in addition to his other duties, as a temporary arrangement, in the room of Major W. C. Hamilton, 28th N.I., proceeded on leave. Ditto, dated the 7th July last, directing Lieutenant H. C. Marsh, 18th Bengal Cavalry, to assume command of Fort Shubkudder, in addition to his other duties, in the room of Lieutenant G. B. P. Alcock, 28th N.I., about to rejoin regimental head quarters. Ditto, dated the 19th Sept., directing Captain F. M. Armstrong, 45th N.I., to assume command of Fort Shubkudder, as a temporary measure.

THE LATE ASSISTANT-SURGEON WHITE.—The remains of Assistant-Surgeon J. H. White, who died suddenly at Barrackpore on the 1st October—the day before that which was fixed for his trial by court martial—were interred with full military honours on the evening of the 2nd. "Owing to the suddenness of his death," observes the Indian Daily News, "there were not found wanting men with little enough Christian charity to assert openly and positively their belief that he had committed suicide by taking poison, but the post-mortem examination of his body proved that he died from natural causes. He had been suffering from a complication of disorders."

THE SHINDOOS.—We learn from the Englishman that on the revision of the facts at the disposal of the Government of Bengal, the Lieutenant-Governor has recorded a minute against the adoption of immediate measures for the punishment of the Shindoos on the eastern confines of the Chittagong district. Mr. Grey considers that in the present state of our information on the subject of the strength of these tribes, and the character of the localities they inhabit, it would be premature to venture on an expedition. He has, therefore, directed the officers who are most frequently brought into contact with the Shindoos, Kookies, and neighbouring tribes to collect and submit as early as possible all the information they can acquire on this subject. Meanwhile the police posts on the frontier will be strengthened.

PROBABLE SUCCESSOR TO MR. MAINE.—A report, which was current in London last summer, that Mr. FitzJames Stephen will succeed Mr. Maine as Law Member of the Supreme Council, we now find referred to in the following terms in the Friend of India:—"We believe it has been almost decided that the successor of Mr. Maine next April will be the ablest criminal jurist in England, Mr. FitzJames Stephen. India will be fortunate if it secures as Law Member of Council a lawyer and a scholar so worthy of the distinguished men who have filled that office for the third of a century. Mr. FitzJames Stephen is the son of the well-known Sir James Stephen. He was long the ablest writer in the Saturday Review and the Cornhill Magazine; his treatise on Criminal Law and Procedure is of the highest authority; and his management, as the leading counsel of the Colenso and Ritualist trials in the ecclesiastical courts, stamps him as a speaker of great readiness and ability."

THE INDIAN PRESS.—A contemporary, which ought to know, hears "that the foolish rule, prohibiting officers of Government to edit newspapers is about to be withdrawn. All that will in future be insisted upon is the thorough fulfilment of official duties, but no interference will take place in the manner in which an officer chooses to employ his leisure hours. The rumour is almost too good to be true, and it would be strange if the Government had at once grown wise on this point; with the notorious fact staring in the face that all officials of merit write for the papers, it still shelters itself under the pretence that they do not edit any. Whatever mistake the Government may occasionally commit, it is undeniable that the official is the class in this country which is, on the whole, the most intelligent and the most educated, and which can afford to be the most liberal and honest. It is, therefore, inexplicable why Government should prefer to see its best measures misconstrued, rather than avail itself of the press as a means of enlightening, or asking for the support and the suggestions of the public. We hear, in connection with this subject, that it is seriously contemplated to start an official journal."

EXPECTED MEETING BETWEEN THE VICEROY AND SHERE ALI KHAN AT PESHAWUR.—The following telegram, dated the 15th Oct., was received at Bombay from Lahore:—"The Governor-General and the Commander-in-Chief in India are to go to Peshawur. Shere Ali Khan, the Ameer of Afghanistan, is to come down to meet the Viceroy." The Pioneer says:—"Not only has the new Ameer, Shere Ali, treated our agent at Cabul with extreme politeness and expressed to him an anxious desire to be on terms of close friendship with, but he has himself written to the Viceroy in a tone of the utmost deference and cordiality. He first announces with courtly formality his return to Cabul, and then proceeds to make overtures which show conclusively how anxious he is to please us. We are glad to learn that these overtures have been received by the Governor-General in the most friendly manner. Shere Ali has been warmly congratulated on his victorious return. He has been reminded of the intimate alliance which so long existed with mutual advantage between his father, Dost Mahomed, and the British. The Viceroy also, we are told, urged on the Ameer the expediency and glory of showing leniency to the sirdars and chiefs who had been driven by the force of circumstances to oppose him."

AN ANECDOTE OF SHERE ALI KHAN.—Many years ago, when Sir Herbert Edwardes was the Commissioner of the Peshawur Division, that eminent soldier and statesman wished to learn some facts regarding that land of mystery Kafiristan; he also wished, if he could, to induce its people, sworn enemies of the Afghans, to enter into the British service. But the difficulty was to communicate with them. So Sir Herbert chose two not able Sikh Fakcer converts (those who had previously belonged to the Fakcer class), and having given them the necessary instructions sent them out to find their way into Kafiristan by way of Cabul, there being no other road available. These emissaries were compelled on their way to pay their respects at the residence of the late Ameer Dost Mahomed Khan. Here, not only did they meet with the Ameer, but his three sons likewise—Afzul Khan, Azim Khan, and Shere Ali Khan. The converts would not, when questioned on the point, deny that they were Christians, but they expressed their faith in that dangerous place in an unobtruding and deprecating way; and it was well that it was so done, for humble as they were, the youngest, Azim Khan (the father had retired), the same man who is now a fugitive in Central Asia, and who was once a fugitive in our own territories, showed himself the true Moslem and the fanatic, by proposing to decapitate them. He is described to have shown himself at this interview as a hasty, hot-headed fanatic, and merciless character, and Afzul Khan as an easy-going, weak-minded man; for he agreed to Azim Khan's proposal. The emissaries had seen a great deal more benevolence and sense in Shere Ali's countenance, and at this most critical juncture of their lives appealed to him to save them. He had remained perfectly quiet while Azim Khan had been urging their death, and now, on his being appealed to, he told them that he would not allow their lives to be sacrificed, called his brothers ungenerous and hasty, and finally told the men, as their lives would not be safe elsewhere to go to his camp, where they would be unmolested till their departure. Shere Ali shows himself in this (authentic) account to have been a man worthy to succeed his late father, and from his subsequent violation of his oath on the Koran it is possible that he is a Moslem of that rare order of free thinking and tolerant minds to which the great Akbar of India belonged.

THE ANTICIPATED FAMINE.—It is stated that owing to the drought and scarcity at Deoli and its neighbourhood, and the consequent difficulty of procuring agricultural employment, the inhabitants are most eager to enlist themselves into the Deoli Irregular Force. There is, it is said, an overwhelming number of volunteers ready to fill vacancies in the ranks as they occur. From Mhow it is reported that the rains have been general all over Holkar's territory, and good crops of grain are expected. Our latest accounts from Rajpootana continue most unfavourable. The weather is extraordinarily hot and oppressive and rain holds off. The khureef crop, except on irrigated land, is dried up. Rain in time to admit of the autumnal sowings is fast being despaired of. Should rain be delayed another fortnight, nothing, we believe, can save the country from a lamentable famine. Scarcely less serious than the want of cereals is the absence of grass and forage for cattle. Already at this season of the year, when pasturage should be most abundant, cattle are being driven away in vast numbers towards Bundelkund and Malwa. From Marwar a stream of emigration flows uninterruptedly. Strings of carts with men, women, and children are to be met with on all sides fleeing from their ill-fated country. Nor do the unhappy fugitives know where to go, but they push onwards and onwards trusting to reach some land of plenty and bearing their misfortunes meanwhile with remarkable fortitude and self-restraint. The stock of grain in Rajpootana cannot be very large, for already extensive purchases of wheat and other cereals are being made in the Agra market, and prices continue steadily to rise. People with means are laying in stores of grain so as to be prepared for the worst. There is no chance of Orissa being repeated, though there will be much distress. Public works of relief have been commenced in the Ajmere district on a considerable scale. Friend of India, Oct. 8.—The Mofussilite has been informed that there is more grain in the Kharee Bowly market (Delhi) than has been known for many years. It is described as "piled up higher than the doors" and yet it is at "famine prices!"—The Englishman hears from Jeypore that the failure of the crops has been total. Water was excessively scarce, and was procurable only with the utmost difficulty. It was selling at four annas per ghurrah. Bands of robbers had arrived in various directions, and appeared to pursue their calling with the utmost boldness. The people were in despair at the prospect before them.—According to the Pioneer of October 9 the official reports from the Central Provinces for the week ending 20th September speak hopefully—some of them, indeed, cheerfully—of the prospects of the crops. Rain had fallen plentifully in almost every district during that week, and with the best results everywhere. Cholera, too, had disappeared from many of the districts, though it was still prevalent in Saugor, where twenty-three cases out of fifty-one proved fatal. Smallpox had made its appearance in one or two places, but on the whole the general health of the province was reported good.

MILITARY FURLONGS AND LEAVES OF ABSENCE.—The following officers obtained furlough and leaves of absence on medical certificate in September:—Veterinary Surgeon Moir (A brigade R.A.), to England via the Cape, from date of embarkation, to appear before a medical board; 2nd Captain Studdy (F battery, 16th brigade, Royal Artillery), to remain in England, from the 13th February to the 13th May, 1869, on private affairs; Veterinary Surgeon Percivall, 11th Hussars, to Nynee Tal, from date of departure, for sixty days, on m.c.; Lieutenant Tibbs, 11th Foot, to remain in England, from the 8th January to the 8th July, 1869, on urgent private affairs; Ensign Gubbins (2nd Wing Subaltern 37th Native Infantry), to Calcutta, from the 1st October to the 15th November, to study the native languages, as a special case; Major Allan, 41st Foot, to England, for fifteen months, from the 4th November; Quartermaster Lawrence, 88th Foot, to England, for six months, from date of embarkation, doing duty with troops on the voyage, should his services be required (in modification of G.O. dated 8th August, 1868); Captain Laurie, 108th Foot, to England, from the 10th October, 1868, to the 9th January, 1870, on private affair; Major Taylor, Staff Corps (2nd in Command and Wing Officer 8th Native Infantry), to Bombay, from the 1st October to the 1st November, preparatory to applying for furlough to Europe; Major Campbell (doing general duty at Deyrah), to Mussoorie, on medical certificate, from the 1st September to the 1st November; Captain Baker (2nd Squadron Officer 6th Bengal Cavalry), to Bombay, for one month, from date of availing himself of it preparatory to applying for furlough to Europe; Lieutenant Constable (attached to the 22nd Native Infantry), to Bombay, from the 10th September to the 10th October, on medical certificate; Surgeon Lowdell, Medical Department (4th Bengal Cavalry), to Calcutta, from the 1st to the 30th November, preparatory to applying for furlough to Europe, under the old rules; Quartermaster Smith, 10th Foot, to remain in England for three months, from date of expiration of present leave, on private affairs; Capt. Poddie, 41st Foot, from the 14th to the 17th August, in extension, to enable him to rejoin; Lieut. Kelly, to England, for fifteen months, from date of embarkation, doing duty with troops on the voyage, should his services be required; Lieut. Hodges, 76th Foot, to England overland, from date of embarkation, on m.c.; Lieut. Pearse, to England overland, from date of embarkation, on m.c.; Surgeon Holton, M.B., 77th Foot, to remain at Murree, from the 14th August to the 31st October, on very urgent private affairs, as a special case, in extension; Capt. Mostyn, 96th Foot, to England, from date of embarkation, for twelve months, on urgent private affairs; Brevet Lieut. Colonel Gough, v.c., late 5th European Light Cavalry, to Bombay, from 9th Oct to 8th November, preparatory to applying for furlough to Europe (this cancels the leave granted in August); Col. Watson, Bengal Infantry (commanding 11th Native Infantry), to Calcutta, for one month, from the 8th November, preparatory to applying for furlough to Europe, on private affairs; Major Haslewood, Invalid Establishment, to Pondicherry and the Neilgherries, on private affairs, for six months, from the 2nd June (in cancellation of the leave granted 8th April last); Surgeon Thornton, M.B. (44th Native Infantry), to Calcutta, for one month, from date of availing himself of it, preparatory to applying for furlough to Europe; Assistant Surgeon Reid (attached to the 35th Native Infantry), to Calcutta, from the 10th September to the 10th October, on m.c.; Major Taylor, Bengal Staff Corps, two years; Captain Baker, 6th Bengal Cavalry, two years; Surgeon Thornton, Medical Department, two years; Surgeon Lowdel, three years, under old rules; Major Hyndman, two years.

STATION TALK.

SECUNDERABAD, Oct. 7.—This station has to regret the sudden death of Colonel Nightingale, commanding the 3rd Irregular Cavalry of the Hyderabad Contingent. Colonel Nightingale expired at Bolarum on the evening of the 5th instant, and his funeral took place at Bolarum yesterday evening, where he was buried with military honours, 300 men of the 21st Fusiliers forming the firing party. The deceased officer was a fine sportsman, and his name has become so associated for many years with the Deccan and Deccan sports, that there are few "shikarries" throughout India who will not hear of his sudden death with deep regret. It was only last week that he took part in the Rifle Association Meeting at Trimulgherry, when he appeared in his usual health and spirits. He was about to take furlough to England, doubtless to the joy of the tigers in this part of India, many of whose kindred have from time to time bitten the dust before his trusty rifle. A splendid rider, and a crack shot, a magnificent leader of Irregular Cavalry, and an officer of extraordinary talent, it will be long before the Contingent look upon his like again. Colonel Nightingale died of a sudden apoplectic attack while out shooting. We have been suffering from intense heat here the last few days; the disagreeable "muggy" weather, which should have annoyed us in September, we have not experienced this year, but in its place we are tortured with a blazing sun, and little or no air—most unusual atmospheric phenomena in October. The public health, however, is tolerably good, all things considered. It is said that the 2nd Battalion 21st Fusiliers will not march from this station until next year, in consequence of the chronic ill-health of the regiment. The Fusiliers, however, are still under orders for Burmah, to relieve the 24th Regiment. The native corps at Secunderabad are anxiously waiting to hear what regiments of native infantry will be sent to Saugor. It is said that Saugor is to be given over to Madras as a military station, and it is supposed that one or more regiments may be sent there from Secunderabad. The horse epidemic still continues, but in a less virulent form than distinguished its first appearance. Your correspondent is informed that it is as bad at Bangalore as we have lately experienced it, and that many horses have died from its attacks. Bangalore has copied our Rifle Association, and in return we have taken a wrinkle from Bangalore in the matter of horticultural exhibitions. We are to have a flower and vegetable show in the cold weather, under the patronage of General De Saumarez, who is always ready to promote public recreation as far as possible, and the entries are numerous. Some budmashes in the city have spread a silly report that the British raj is excessively shaky. Said budmashes give us little uneasiness.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

MILITARY FURLONGHS.—The following furloughs have been granted on medical certificate under new rules:—Major-general Marshall, Secretary to Government Military Department, is granted privilege leave of absence for sixty days from Oct. 5. The undermentioned officer is permitted to proceed to Europe:—Lieut. Pirrie, of the 17th Regt. N.L., 2nd Wing Subaltern 29th Regt. N.L., on furlough for eighteen months, to embark from Hong Kong.

CIVIL LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following civilians obtained leave of absence (on m.c. new rules) early in October:—Mr. Foster, Sub-Collector and Joint Magistrate of Bareilly, three months' cumulative privilege leave; Mr. Grigg, Acting Junior Assistant to the Collector and Magistrate and Agent in Ganjam, two months' privilege leave; Capt. Law, of the Staff Corps, Executive Engineer of the fourth grade, two months' cumulative privilege leave; and Mr. Cresswell, South Arcot, for forty-five days.

ARRIVALS FROM ENGLAND AND RETURNED TO DUTY.—The undermentioned officer has reported his return from England:—Captain Fryer, of the Madras Staff Corps, Assistant Commissioner, British Burmah, 2nd September. The undermentioned officers have returned to their duty, by permission of the Home Government, without prejudice to their rank:—Major Keyes, 17th Regiment N.L., Executive Engineer, Central Provinces, arrived at Bombay on the 25th September; Lieut.-colonel Pace, Staff Corps, arrived at Madras on the 2nd October.

DEATH OF MR. MONCRIEFF.—The Madras Athenaeum regrets to announce the death of Mr. Moncrieff, of the Public Works Department, of apoplexy. Mr. Moncrieff had been ailing for some little time past, but his death was quite unexpected. On the day of his funeral all the Public Works workshops and offices were closed as a mark of respect to this gentleman. For some time it was thought that a military officer would be appointed to succeed Mr. Moncrieff, but we understand that the appointment has been given to a mechanical engineer now stationed at Dowlishweram.

MADRAS IN DISTRESS.—Without the use of a pier Madras is sadly behind the age. A miserable makeshift has been adopted for landing cargo. The Madras Times says that on a representation of the captains of vessels in the roads to the marine authorities, the Superintendent of the Pier has been directed to construct another "Sadler's" cradle of large dimensions, to convey bales of cotton over the gap, so as to prevent them from getting wet and damaged while being conveyed in masula boats from the shore to the shipping in the roads.

CINCHONA IN OOTACAMUND.—The returns of the Ootacamund Cinchona Plantations for July last are before us. The number of plants permanently planted out in the plantations is 117,100, making the total 858,012. All the species of Cinchona still maintain their usual luxuriance; the older plants of Cinchona, Succirubra, Micrantha, and Officialis have this year again produced a large quantity of seeds. The increase by propagation is 143,400, the monthly average being 23,900, making the total 2,396,770. The total number of plants distributed to the public is 170,740. Sixty-seven ounces of seed have also been gratuitously distributed, making the total quantity 139 ounces.—Madras Times.

DISCOVERY OF CROMLECHS.—It was only a few months ago that Lieutenant Mackenzie accidentally discovered some ancient cromlechs in Southern Coorg, one of which contained some glazed pottery, some charcoal, and the fragments of a bangle. About the same time Mr. Mulheran, while conducting survey operations, discovered, in the wild tract of country at the base of the Puchmurree range, overgrown with dense jungle and tangled brushwood, some monolith pillars, rude traces of broken stone crosses, and excavations which bore a resemblance to ill-defined cromlechs. At Katarapur Mr. Mulheran found a number of temples which clearly indicated the existence of a race of natives far more civilised than the Gonds. He believes the cromlechs to be in some way connected with the Buddhist temples in their vicinity, and not of Celtic or Scythian origin, as some have supposed.—Pioneer, Sept. 28.

THE MADRAS BREAKWATER.—The committee appointed by Government to consider the question of a breakwater for this place, in all its bearings, and to prepare plans and estimates, are doing something; but there does not seem half enough energy displayed in such an all-important affair. If Madras has to continue to exist as a business port, something must be done; we must have a breakwater or harbour or something that will give us the mastery of our troublesome surf. There seems a very strong idea amongst many people that it will be impossible to construct a breakwater which will stand, and others say if we have a harbour we should never be able to keep the mouth of it open, as the sand would silt up in a very short time, so altogether it seems that the business of Madras will have to go somewhere else, where it is more thought about than it is here, and this place will just subside into a quiet cathedral town without life, and will then thoroughly merit the term "benighted."—Madras Athenæum.

THE MYSORE ACCOUNTS.—We (Athenæum) have now to remark on the statements made by the Simla correspondent of the Times of India that, if the accounts which he has seen extend no further back than 1866, the item is a fabrication. We have taken advantage of the date merely that we may speak from personal knowledge. No sum whatever has been paid by the late Maharajah to the editor of this journal directly or indirectly, nor has any communication of any kind whatever passed between the editor and any agent, as such, of the Maharajah of Mysore during the time said to be covered by the accounts so often referred to. Nor do we restrict our statement in its application either to honourable or dishonourable transactions, or to transactions between the Maharajah and the editor in his private or public capacity. Nor yet do we restrict our denial of the accuracy of the item in question as regards the editor only. We apply it also to repudiate any surmise that any payments have been made by, or on account of, his late Highness, to the proprietors of this journal for anything beyond an ordinary subscription for one copy of the Athenæum.

A ROAD CESS ORDERED FOR WYNAAD.—The Local Government while directing the introduction of the Road Cess Act of 1866 in Malabar, made an exception in favour of Wynaad in anticipation of the passing of an Act to enable landholders themselves to levy a cess for the construction and maintenance of cross-roads. But since such a measure has been abandoned, for the present, Mr. Ballard, the collector of the district, has requested that the Act may be extended to Wynaad also. The Board of Revenue has concurred with him in considering that no good reason exists why the landholders of Wynaad should continue to enjoy immunity from local taxation for purely local roads. The Government have determined on completing the three chief ghauts and the main lines on the plateau at the public expense. But there will still be a large number of cross roads, the construction of which is necessary to convey traffic to and from the main lines, and provision must also be made for the maintenance of these lines when constructed. The public expenditure on roads in and for Wynaad is far in excess both of the revenue derived from the talook and grants made to other tracts of the like area, revenue, and population, as the rest of the district has been brought under the operation of the Road Cess Act, there is no reason now for not extending that law to Wynaad also.

STATION TALK.

AHMEDABAD, Oct. 10.—The destruction of house and property is something incredible. Without giving elasticity to one's imagination it may be said that more than 10,000 houses have been totally destroyed, to say nothing of those that have been damaged. If there have been a few deaths only from "crushing," it is because such as knew they were not protected by brick and lime looked to the bare canopy of heaven in time to keep body and soul together. From the districts I hear many villages have been destroyed, some totally, others partially. It is naughty of Government to come down upon our Acting Collector as they have down in their late resolution on the Kaira report. Even up to this time, if the Ahmedabad report has not approached completion, it would be unfair to hold the Collector responsible. Information of the kind Government would wish for—in other words, complete information of the effects of so widespread a disaster, cannot be gathered in a few days, not even in a few weeks. Business to be done in a business-like way requires time. Instead, of a sheet or two in higgledy-piggledy style, if Government gets a complete record, though late, of what Guzerat has felt in 1868 they ought, I think, to be better satisfied. We require something decent to hand down to posterity. Government would, therefore do well to send the various reports they receive to the "Education Society's Press," to be moulded in pamphlet form for the benefit of all libraries. Of the Municipality I have nothing favourable to mention; everything has a sluggish appearance. No secretary has been appointed, and it seems a question for the folks within the fort walls of Ahmedabad to solve whether it is intended to have such an officer at all. The effect of the late rain has proved favourable to the improvement of the town. A few rupees wisely laid out in the way of compensation will enable the Municipality to widen streets in very many localities where such a desideratum is felt. People are growing sad over the approaching harvest. The earlier sown crops suffered considerably from submersion, while those later sown are suffering from drought, if not altogether destroyed, not more than a few cents of rain having fallen since the middle of August. The prices of cereals are running up fast, and distress has begun to show itself among cultivators by numbers of cattle being brought to the market from all parts of the collectorate. Claims to remissions should, I think, be liberally met by Government this year, and a special inquiry immediately set on foot as to how far cultivation has suffered. This will be the means also of placing facts before the Relief Fund Committee for their guidance in distributing the funds at their disposal. From the latest data I glean that a famine is impending in the Marwar States. Cattle are being sold off there for nominal sums, and unusual numbers of Marwarees, in impoverished circumstances, are visiting us. I hope their visit will not be of a protracted nature, for we can ill spare any of our curry and rice for them just now, I do assure you.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

FURLOUGHS.—CIVIL AND MILITARY.—Lieutenant Nichol, Invalid Establishment, is allowed furlough to Europe for the purpose of appearing before a Medical Board there, under the Furlough Regulations of 1799; Captain Ker, Cadre H. M.'s 6th Regiment N.I., two years, under the Furlough Regulations of 1796; Major Niocheletts, 29th Regiment N.I., from October 4 to October 10, to Bombay, preparatory to proceeding on furlough; Lieutenant Hughes will proceed to England to rejoin his corps by the Indian troop ship leaving Bombay on the 12th of October, and will report himself to the brigade authorities, Bombay, in view to his services being made available for duty with invalids, &c., if required; Mr. Stewart, Acting First Assistant Collector of Kaira, is allowed subsidiary leave for fourteen days, under New Civil Service Absentee Rules, to enable him to proceed to Bombay for the purpose of obtaining a final m.c. to Europe; Mr. Oliphant, Acting Collector of Poona, is allowed, under the new rules a furlough for fifteen months, from the 10th of October, and preparatory leave from the date of quitting his station; the furlough to Europe for six months granted to Captain Fenwick, by G. O. dated the 23rd of September last, is cancelled at that officer's request; Lieutenant McKae, Bombay Staff Corps, twenty months on m.c.

THE RAO OF CATCH.—We are informed that a dispute has arisen between his Highness the Rao of Catch and his Bhayats, who are large proprietors there, regarding their claim to administer the affairs of their own villages. The matter has come to such a pass that lately the Political Agent of Catch, Major Shortt, called upon his Highness to ratify certain conditions whereby power should be given to the owners of villages to try civil and criminal cases, within certain limits. His Highness was warned that in case he failed to comply with the requisition, the Government might take the charge of the administration of the affairs of Catch into its own hands. The Rao replied that he would not accede to such a request until he received a reply from the Secretary of State, to whom the whole matter, we believe, has been referred by the local Government.

MOVEMENTS OF SIR S. FITZGERALD.—The Governor's Kattywar tour is a suspended project at present. He left Poona for Mahableshwar on the 13th, but we are glad to find that he does not intend to prolong his sojourn on the Ghauts, and that he has formed the laudable resolve of seeing for himself the promising port of Carwar. Though he is not likely to tempt the perils of the jungles in surveying for a new route, on his return from the now lively port he will be in a better position to judge the proposals of others in favour of connecting Carwar with the broad plains and black soil of Dharwar. We have already stated that Sir Seymour Fitzgerald, on his return from the Malabar Coast, will remain in Bombay until it is decided whether Mr. Disraeli's selection of a Viceroy will be endured by the new Parliament.—Bombay Gazette, Oct. 17.

BOMBAY MARINE APPOINTMENTS.—The following officers were appointed to the vessels shown against their respective names from the 19th September, 1868:—Lieutenant Carpendale, late L.N., in command, Mr. Butler, 1st officer, Lord Elphinstone; Mr. Dawes, late L.N., in command, Mr. Tolpatt, 1st officer, Mr. Edwards, 2nd officer, Earl Canning; Mr. Campbell, in command, Mr. Eusa, 1st officer, Sir John Lawrence. The following temporary appointments are confirmed:—Mr. Monnet was appointed clerk of H.M.'s steamer Earl Canning, from the 19th September; Mr. Luscombe was appointed clerk of H.M.'s steamer Sir John Lawrence, from the 19th September; Mr. Bowen was appointed 3rd officer of H.M.'s steamer Earl Canning, from the 23rd September; Mr. Bean was appointed 1st officer of H.M.'s steamer Dalhousie, from the 22nd September; Mr. Child, 1st officer of H.M.'s hulk Semiramis, was appointed to the temporary command of that vessel from the 13th September inclusive, vice Shapcott, deceased; Mr. Child, in temporary command of H.M.'s hulk Semiramis, was appointed store accountant of the vessel from the 13th September inclusive; Mr. Buckmaster was appointed 2nd officer of H.M.'s steamer Lord Elphinstone, from the 19th September; Mr. Gee was appointed clerk of H.M.'s steamer Lord Elphinstone, from the 19th September; Mr. Colyer was appointed 2nd officer of H.M.'s steamer Sir John Lawrence, from 25th September.

SUBORDINATE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.—The following transfers are ordered in the Subordinate Medical Department, British troops' branch:—Apothecary M. F. Lobo (No. 54), from 46th Foot to 82nd Foot; Hospital Apprentice T. R. McIlroy (No. 805) and Hospital Apprentice J. B. A. De Cruz (No. 806), from 46th Foot to 49th Foot; Assistant Apothecary C. F. Lewis (No. 87), from 14th Brigade Royal Artillery, to B Battery 18th Brigade R.A.; Acting Assistant Apothecary Hurrie Sinda Essoo (No. 250), to 14th Brigade R.A.; Acting Assistant Apothecary Swance Churumia (No. 350), to 95th Foot. The following transfers are cancelled:—Acting Assistant Apothecary L. D'Almeida (No. 233), to the 95th Foot; Apothecary J. H. Underwood (No. 48), to the 82nd Foot, as per G.O.C. No. 753 of 1868. With reference to G.O.C. No. 392, dated 17th June, 1868, para. 42, the undermentioned Hospital Apprentices having completed two years' service, and been favourably reported on, are directed to rejoin the 82nd Foot, so as to arrive there on or about the 31st October, in view to joining the Grant Medical College:—F. Wright (No. 183), J. Hutchins (No. 558), B. Macedo (No. 594), W. Jarman (No. 597), J. Easton (No. 623), J. Whelan (No. 634), G. Lester (No. 635), V. X. Lobo (No. 637), W. Coffee (No. 638), J. Webb (No. 639), H. Burbridge (No. 661), D. J. Frank (No. 663), J. Huntley (No. 664), P. C. Pais (No. 665), B. Hutchins (No. 667), W. Timmins (No. 668), E. Sherd (No. 670), R. Rozario (No. 671), R. Butler (No. 672), P. Roano (No. 677), E. Loane (No. 718), C. F. de Souza (No. 722).

AN INTERESTING PARSEE INSTITUTION.—An institution of considerable utility to the Parsee community was publicly opened on Tuesday in the presence of a large and influential gathering of the Parsees. Mr. Eduljee Framjee, a wealthy Parsee merchant, died about two years ago, and by his will directed his sons to erect a suitable building for the use of the Zoroastrian community on occasions of marriages, and similar other occasions, as great inconvenience was felt by the poorer classes of the community, and such a building had always been a great desideratum. This laudable intention of the deceased gentleman has been carried out by his four sons, at the cost of a lac and thirty-five thousand rupees. The building is erected at Girgaum in the form of a quadrangle, with a large compound in the centre. It is named Abless Bung, from the surname of the deceased. On occasions of marriage and other festivities the building will easily contain three thousand people. The ceremony of opening the institution was short, but imposing. A Jasun or religious ceremony was performed by about fifty Parsee priests, headed by the Dastoor or bishops. This was commenced at nine A.M. and lasted till half-past ten. A paper signed by the four sons of deceased was then read, by which the building was handed over in trust, and in which it was stated that Rs. 15,000 have been additionally invested in five per cent. Government securities, from the interest of which the expenses incidental to the building will be defrayed.—Bombay Gazette, Oct. 17.

APPEARANCE OF CHOLERA IN BOMBAY.—For a week past the heat has been most oppressive, and the absence of any breeze has rendered it more unbearable; and on Friday last cholera appeared in the Funniswady district, native town. This case occurred in a place the owner of which had been summoned for the filthy state in which it had been kept. When it was reported to Dr. Lumsdaine, acting Health Officer, that cholera had broken out in that waddy, he at once had the place whitewashed, the drains cleaned out, and the whole place plentifully besprinkled with disinfecting powder under his own superintendence. The disease, however, again appeared next day, when two persons were seized in the same district of the town; and since then six or seven cases have occurred daily. The Health Department have acted promptly in the matter, and cholera mixture and disinfecting powder has been supplied to the police at every chowkey. The police have also been supplied with small measures for gauging the doses, and have been instructed to apply a dose of the mixture to any one who may be seized, and then to report the case immediately to the registrar of his district. Dr. Lumsdaine has caused notice to be given by buttakee, or drum-beating, through all the districts of the town, that the mixture and powder can be had at the chowkeys whenever required. The disease is of the true Asiatic type, and some of the cases were of a very virulent character. Up to yesterday at three o'clock forty-seven persons had been attacked, and of these seventeen died. The disease has appeared in every district of the town except the Fort and Colaba, but so far as we have ascertained, no European has yet been seized. There is, we believe, no reason to suppose that the disease has been brought into Bombay from any place up-country; and we may hope that the very complete arrangements for having every case promptly attended to may have the effect of keeping the disease under.—Bombay Gazette, Oct. 17.

REVISED RULES FOR THE EXAMINATION OF JUNIOR OFFICERS EMPLOYED IN THE LOWER PROVINCES OF BENGAL.

Sept. 18.—The following Revised Rules for the Examination of Junior Officers employed in the Lower Provinces of Bengal are published for general information:—

1. Half-yearly examinations shall be held, generally in the months of April and October of each year.
2. The examinations shall be held in the Regulation Provinces, at the stations which are the head quarters of the several divisional commissioners, and also at every other station where there is a zillah judge.
3. In the Non-Regulation Provinces the examinations shall be held at the following stations, and at any other stations where the commissioners may, in communication with the Central Examination Committee, think it necessary to hold committees for examination:—
 In Assam, at Gowhaty, for the officers in the districts of Kamroop and the Cossyah and Jynteah Hills; at Tezpor, for the officers in Durrung, Nowgong, and the Naga Hills; and at Debrooghur, for the officers in Luckimpore and Sebsaugor.
 In Chota Nagpore, at Ranchee.
 In Cooch Behar, at Darjeeling or Julpigoree.
4. The officers in the Sonthal Pergunnahs shall be examined at Bhaugulpore, those in the Chittagong Hill Tracts at Chittagong, and those in Cachar at Sylhet.
5. The Central Examination Committee are authorised to sanction, on sufficient cause being shown, the appearance of an officer for examination at a station other than that at which he is required to present himself under ordinary circumstances.
6. All assistant magistrates, assistant, extra assistant, and sub-assistant commissioners, deputy magistrates and deputy collectors, police officers, and others to whom these rules may be made applicable, who may have been more than six months at their stations, shall be subjected to half-yearly examinations, and required to pass according to the first or lower standard of qualification as hereafter described. And all officers shall present themselves for examination by the test for the second or higher standard at each half-yearly examination after they have passed by the lower standard. An officer must pass completely by the lower standard in every subject of examination before he will be allowed to present himself for examination by the second standard in any subject.
7. These half-yearly examinations shall be conducted by local committees at the several stations, under the instructions of the Central Committee of Departmental Examinations, with whom they will correspond on all matters relating to these examinations.
8. The local committee at each station, which is the head quarters of a commissioner, shall consist of the commissioner, the collector (or deputy commissioner), and a native civil officer to be selected by the commissioner. In the absence of the commissioner, or collector, the judge (or judicial commissioner) shall take his place on the committee. At the other stations the committee shall consist of the judge, the collector, and any native officer to be selected by the judge. At the stations in the Non-Regulation Provinces, which are not the head quarters of the commissioner, and at which there is no judicial commissioner, the deputy commissioner shall form a committee with one or two other officers to be selected by him in communication, if necessary, with the commissioner of the division.

9. The central committee shall, on every occasion, subject to the sanction of Government, fix the days for the half-yearly examinations, which shall be the same for every district. It shall be the duty of the central committee to prepare beforehand, for each examination, sets of questions to be put to the examinees, to forward a sufficient number of copies of each of such sets to the president of each local committee in a sealed packet, which shall not be opened until the moment of examination, to determine the order in which the examinations in each paper and subject shall be held, and to arrange all other details for the conduct of the examinations. The central committee, from time to time, shall lay down such rules as may appear to them best for the guidance of the local committees, in order to insure a fair and uniform method of fixing the degree of attainment upon each point of examination which the several officers examined may reach.

10. The local committees shall superintend the written examinations of the examinees only so far as may be necessary to ensure the conduct of them with proper strictness. They shall not examine the written answers, but shall forward them to the central committee, with a report, which shall be furnished by the district officer and commissioner under whom the examinee has been employed, as to his official character, qualifications, and the work done by him during the preceding six months, as well as a paper of marks which they shall assign to candidates for conversation and reading, in which branches their decision shall be final. The central committee, after taking all the reports into consideration, and perusing all the examination papers, shall report to Government the names of such officers as, in their opinion, have come up to the requirements according to one or other of the standards in force, noticing especially, in the order of their merit, those who may have passed with distinction. They shall also report the names of those who, in their opinion, have succeeded in passing in one or more of the subjects, as well as of those who have failed altogether.

11. The principal object of the first or lower standard of examination shall be to test the proficiency, for practical purposes, of the examinee in the vernacular language of his district. For this purpose lithographed copies of at least two documents, written in different running hands, shall be forwarded by the central committee to each local committee; and the examinees shall be required, within a limited time, to be fixed by the central committee, to transcribe the papers set into Roman character, and also to give an intelligible written translation thereof in English. The local committees shall forward these transcripts and translations for the final decision of the central committee as to the number of marks to be awarded. An English judgment, or other official paper, to be furnished by the central committee, must be translated by the examinee into the vernacular without assistance. The translation must be substantially correct in meaning, and intelligible to a native, tolerably correct in grammar and spelling, and free from any very bad errors of idiom. The examinee must also dictate off-hand, with some fluency, the translation into the vernacular of an English report, or other official paper, also to be furnished by the central committee, whereof the translation shall be written down exactly as dictated. The dictated paper must in like manner be intelligible and substantially correct. He must then be tested in conversation with two or three natives, in such manner and to such extent as shall suffice to satisfy the committee as to the degree of his power of understanding natives of different classes, and of making himself understood by them, both in common conversation and in the usual course of office business. An examinee must pass successfully through every step of this branch of the examination, in order to qualify himself according to the first standard.

12. A native officer will not be subjected to examination in any of the tests in his own vernacular. This rule applies to the examinations for both standards.

13. The next object of the first standard of qualification shall be to test the examinee's general acquaintance with the leading principles of the system of revenue administration and criminal justice, and especially with so much of the laws and rules of procedure as it is necessary for an officer to know, in order to exercise properly the powers of a subordinate magistrate of the first class, and to perform ordinary revenue duties. For this purpose a set of revenue and a set of judicial questions shall be furnished by the central committee. It is particularly necessary that these questions should be so framed as not to involve points of difficulty or rare occurrence, and to show rather the possession or the want of a general and intelligent acquaintance with the subjects of examination, and the fundamental laws applicable thereto, than of a knowledge of a string of points of detail and dates of orders, which may be soon learned for the occasion, and are generally as soon forgotten again.

14. The second or higher standard of examination shall be similar in its nature to the first, but more difficult in degree. In the vernacular portion of it the papers selected as tests should be of a more difficult description of office papers; the translation, dictation, and conversation should be fluent, generally correct, and readily intelligible; and the examinee should be tested in his power of explaining himself clearly, and with sufficient propriety, in the vernacular, in an argument or topic of some difficulty, such as may occur in official business.

15. In the examination by the higher standard it shall be necessary for the examinee to pass in both the required vernacular languages—ordinarily Bengalee and Urdu. The questions of law and practice should be selected from the whole field of the duties of a magistrate and collector.

A list of the laws and rules of procedure, which should be studied by those preparing for the first and second standards of examination, is given in the Appendix to these Rules.

16. Officers who pass in one or more of the three subjects specified below, by either of the standards of examination, shall not be required again to pass in those subjects, but shall be liable to pass by the same standard in the subjects in which they have failed:—1. Law; 2. Vernacular of the district; 3. The second vernacular.

17. All officers employed in the districts of Bengal Proper are required to pass according to the first standard in the language of the district in which they are employed, and according to the second standard in both the Bengalee and Urdu languages.

18. An officer of the judicial service who has passed according to the first standard of examination, and who has been six months at a station, shall usually be vested with the powers of a subordinate magistrate of the first class, described in Section 22 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act XXV. of 1861). Assistant magistrates and assistant commissioners will also then be vested with the powers of a deputy collector. And an officer who has passed according to the second standard shall be eligible to be vested with the powers of a magistrate, but not until he shall have been at least one year exercising the powers of a subordinate magistrate of the first class.

19. Assistant magistrates and assistant commissioners shall on first appointment draw only Rs. 400 a-month. On passing the lower standard of examination they shall be allowed an increase of Rs. 50 a-month, and on being vested with full powers, provided they have passed fully by the higher standard a second increase of Rs. 50.

20. An officer of the judicial service who has passed in law and in the language of his district according to the second standard, shall also be vested with the powers of a magistrate, subject to the condition of his having exercised the powers of a subordinate magistrate of the first class for one year, but he shall not be entitled to any promotion or increase of pay until he has passed fully by the second standard. He shall exercise the powers of a magistrate so long only as he is employed in a district where the language in which he has passed is the vernacular.

21. All appointments to the subordinate executive service shall, as a general rule, be made on probation, that is, the confirmation of officers appointed to that service shall depend on their passing the first standard of examination under the above rules, or under any other rules which may hereafter be passed by the Government.

22. Every officer examined under these rules shall draw travelling allowance at the rate of eight annas a mile by road, or three annas a mile by rail, to and from his station for attending each of the first three examinations by the lower standard, which are held after the expiration of six months from the date of his joining the service. He shall draw travelling allowance at the same rate for attending each of the three examinations for the second standard, which are held after he has passed by the lower standard. In no case shall an officer draw travelling allowance for attending more than three examinations by each standard.

SPECIAL RULES.

1. Officers in Orissa may pass according to either standard, either in Bengalee or in the cognate Orya language, at their option.

2. It shall be optional with the officers in Assam to pass by the first standard either in Bengalee, which is the language of the Courts and of business, or in Assamese, the language of the people. By the second standard they must pass both in Assamese and Bengalee. They shall not be required to pass in Urdu at all either by the first or second standard of these departmental examinations.

3. Military officers in civil employ under this Government, who would ordinarily be subject to examination in Urdu, shall not be required to pass in that language by either the first or the second standard of the departmental examinations, if they have previously passed by the higher standard, according to the tests for the examination of military officers in that language, laid down in the G.G.O. No. 734, dated Sept. 9, 1861, and G.G.O. No. 294, dated March 24, 1866.

4. Subject to the condition of having exercised the powers of a subordinate magistrate of the first class for a year, officers in Assam may be vested with the powers of a magistrate on passing by the higher standard in law and in one vernacular language, either Assamese or Bengalee. On being so vested assistant commissioners shall draw a salary of Rs. 500, and shall be eligible for promotion to the second grade of assistant commissioners, on the understanding that they shall be liable to be reduced again to the third grade, if they fail to pass in the remaining language at the first examination, which is held after the expiration of one year from the date of their promotion to the second grade.

5. For police officers the examination for the lower standard shall consist of the language of the district in which they are employed, and of a paper of questions on the Police Act, the Code of Criminal Procedure, so far as it relates to the police and the prosecution of offences, and the Salt and Opium Laws. The examination for the higher standard shall be in both the Bengalee and Urdu languages, and in the judicial paper in which assistant magistrates are required to pass by the lower standard of qualification.

6. The assistants attached to the Behar and Benares Opium Agencies shall be examined in the Opium Laws and Urdu, but they may pass separately in these branches. They shall, as a general rule, be examined before the local committee at Patna. The assistants of the Behar agency will be examined at both the half-yearly examinations in April and October. The assistants attached to the Benares agency shall be examined only once in the year, namely, in April, or in any subsequent month when, in the opinion of the agent, they can be spared for the purpose. Such of the Benares assistants as may wish to be examined in October, and can be spared, may attend the examination committee held in that month at Patna.

THE NEW KNIGHT OF ST. PATRICK.—The Earl of Mayo, the new Governor-General of India, has been created an extra Knight of the Order of St. Patrick. The usual number of knights was filled some weeks ago by the appointment of the Marquis of Waterford and the Earl of Erne to the stalls vacant by the deaths of the Marquis of Downshire and Lord Farnham.

FAREWELL BREAKFAST TO LORD MAYO.—Last Friday morning Sir Stafford Northcote gave a farewell banquet to the Earl of Mayo at the India Office. Amongst the company who had been invited to meet the new Governor-General were Lord Napier of Magdala, Mr. E. Ashworth, Sir E. Ryan, Sir H. Durand, Sir James Weir Hogg, Sir F. Halliday, Sir Bartle Frere, and Sir Henry Rawlinson.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for bills on India took place on Wednesday, the 4th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta £171,100, and to Madras £28,900. The minimum price was fixed at 1s. 10½d. as before. Tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 11½d. will receive about 72 per cent. The result shows a further increase in the demand for remittance.

PUBLIC WORKS IN INDIA.—The following gentlemen have recently been selected from among 250 candidates for temporary service in the Public Works Department in India in the undermentioned grades:—Executive Engineers, Fourth Grade.—Messrs. C. C. Adley, W. J. B. Clerke, T. P. S. Crosthwait, W. J. W. Heath, W. Henderson, G. F. J. Hood, G. H. Howe, H. M. Mathews, R. Reynolds, and T. T. Ryan. Assistant Engineers, First Grade.—Messrs. J. P. Bell, J. A. Coghlan, H. W. Clift, C. H. Crudace, R. Foley, A. D. Fox, C. E. Gael, H. S. Hallett, R. M. Henderson, E. J. Jones, G. N. R. Lambert, J. C. Ledger, G. W. Macgeorge, T. B. Morris, J. Ramsay, S. A. Reade, H. S. Ridings, H. T. Tanner, W. B. Taylor, R. Winder. Assistant Engineers, Second Grade.—Messrs. C. C. F. Barnards, J. W. Brassington, E. Bullock, P. B. Cunningham, R. H. Denny, R. Fogerty, A. B. George, W. C. Hosking, J. E. Hilton, R. B. Joyner, T. W. Miles, R. D. Morgan, E. E. Oliver, W. C. Owen, P. Reynolds, W. P. Richardson, H. Rigge, F. Robertson, C. B. Target, A. Valentine.

THE BANK OF BOMBAY.—On Monday the commissioners appointed to inquire into the failure of the Bank of Bombay commenced their sittings at the India-office. Sir Charles Jackson acted as chief commissioner, and the other commissioners were Major M'Leod Innes and Mr. M. Melville. The failure of the bank created much interest when it occurred, and the object of the commission was to inquire into the causes which led to its failure. The commissioners had taken evidence in India, and in the late session an Act of Parliament was obtained for them to act in the United Kingdom, and they now began their investigation into the circumstances which led to the failure. Mr. Newmarch, barrister, formerly of the Calcutta bar, appeared for a body of English shareholders, and applied to cross-examine the witnesses. The chief commissioner said the application would be considered. Mr. Birch, who held an official appointment at the bank, was called, and had not concluded his evidence when the court rose.

MADRAS RAILWAY.—The half-yearly meeting of the shareholders was held on Friday last, at the London Tavern; Mr. James Walker in the chair. The Chairman congratulated the meeting on the favourable nature of the report. The net receipts showed an increase of nearly 25 per cent. over those of the corresponding half of last year, the increase extending over all parts of the line. The company had carried 14,000,000 passengers without having killed or injured any of them. The south-west line exhibited a steady progress, and the working expenses had been reduced to 43 per cent., notwithstanding the difficulties of the gradients. The north-west line was in a satisfactory position, and on that part of the system the working expenses were only 24½ per cent. Taking the whole system together, they had arrived at a revenue of 4½ per cent. The average cost of construction was £12,000 a mile, and considering the solid character of the line, that was a very favourable result. As yet the traffic had only reached £17 per mile per week. He saw no reason why it should stop there.

THE TEXTILE MANUFACTURES AND THE COSTUMES OF THE PEOPLE OF INDIA

Prepared under the Authority of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

By J. FORBES WATSON, Reporter on the Products of India.

Imperial quarto, morocco back, cloth, with numerous coloured Photographs. £3. 5s.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

THE TIMES.—"On no point, perhaps, in regard to India, has greater ignorance prevailed in England than in respect to the clothing of her vast population. Late as it is, and for the first time within the last hundred years of our Indian domination, the work just completed by Dr. Forbes Watson supplies this great and almost unaccountable want of information, and supplies it, too, in a most complete and intelligible manner. It would be impossible to follow Dr. Watson's work in detail; but, whether to the manufacturer or to the general reader, the interest throughout will continue unbroken. His book is written in a clear and thoroughly intelligible style throughout; it is handsomely got up, and embellished by numerous coloured photographs, from which the various styles of costumes and portions of clothing, male and female, will be more readily understood than from mere descriptions."

THE ATHENÆUM.—"We may safely say that a more important work on the manufactures of India has never been given to the public, than the Industrial Museum, and this Commentary by Dr. Forbes Watson. Advantages are sometimes slow to follow, even when the channel for them has been skilfully made and clearly marked out, but we certainly do anticipate very great results from this work, and that before long its author will be acknowledged to deserve a place amongst the real benefactors of India."

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW.—"It is a matter of national importance to study and ascertain what the traditions of India in respect to dress really are. This task has been most ably performed by Dr. Forbes Watson in the volume before us. We call attention to the work and to the subject, not as a matter of mere curiosity, but as an inquiry of direct interest to the manufacturing industry of Europe. Dr. Watson has evidently brought his personal Indian experience to bear upon a mass of materials which, in less skilled hands, would most likely have proved wearisome and unintelligible. As he has arranged his details, they are as entertaining to the general reader as they are full of information and instruction to the manufacturer."

THE MORNING POST.—"The conception of this splendid work reflects the highest credit upon the wisdom of the department to which we are indebted for its publication; and the manner in which it has been executed by its author. No one can fully appreciate the value of this work without seeing it, because neither analysis nor extracts can give any idea of the immense mass of minute facts which it contains, and the admirable manner in which they are grouped and made subservient to the practical requirements of the manufacturer and the merchant, and the cravings of the student of ornamental art. The illustrations are as magnificent as they are appropriate. In fact, as mere productions of beauty and taste, they give the work the air of a book of art luxury, and we have no doubt that from this feature it will find many admirers and purchasers beyond the ranks of trade and commerce."

THE ART JOURNAL.—"The work, indeed, is as well fitted, as far as embellishment is concerned, for the drawing-room table as it is for the study; and its contents will be found far more interesting to the general reader than its mere designation would lead to a supposition that it might be. The motive and purpose of its publication is highly creditable to the present Home Government of India."

CURES OF ASTHMA AND COUGHS by DR. LOCOCK'S PULMONIC WAFERS.

From Mr. C. Collins, Chemist, Brettell-lane, Stourbridge:

"I am much pleased to say that your PULMONIC WAFERS give general satisfaction. Several of my customers have taken them for asthma, coughs, &c., and in every case they have had the desired effect. In my opinion they surpass anything that has been offered to the public."

They give instant relief to ASTHMA, CONSUMPTION, COUGHS, COLDS, and all DISORDERS of the BREATH and LUNGS.

To singers and public speakers they are invaluable.

Price 1s. 1jd. and 2s. 9d. per box. Sold by all Druggists.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

Any dyspeptic sufferer aware of the purifying, regulating, and gently aperient powers of these Pills, should permit no one to cloud his judgment or to warp his course. With a box of Holloway's Pills, and attention to its accompanying directions, he may feel thoroughly satisfied that he can safely and effectually release himself from his miseries, without impairing his appetite or distressing his digestion. By aiding natural nutrition, this excellent medicine raises the bodily strength to its extreme limits, and banishes a thousand annoying forms of nervous complaints. An occasional resort to Holloway's remedy will prove highly salutary to all persons, whether well or ill, whose digestion is slow or imperfect, usually evidenced by weariness, listlessness, and despondency.

CAUTION.—Many spurious, worthless, and injurious
preparations are offered to the public. See that both bottle and label have the name and address.

QUINTESENCE OF JAMAICA GINGER AND CAMOMILE.

WILKINSON'S PREPARATION OF GINGER and
CAMOMILE has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine. It is a most efficient stomachic tonic, and the best remedy for flatulency and disorders arising from impaired digestion.

It is not affected by climate.
No European in India or tropical countries should be without it.

Sold in one-eighth, quarter, and half-pint bottles.

AROMATIC TINCTURE OF QUINOIDINE.

For the Prevention of Fever, Ague, and effects of

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body.
It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation
of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent
Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guarantee not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR
ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft
and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection
impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell.
Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. Webb's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free
by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKEW, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL
LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great
Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite
resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228,
Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Postoffice, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic
and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness
and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c.
It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d.,

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, October 24; Agra, October 20; Calcutta and Madras, October 19.

According to the latest accounts from the seat of war all fighting was virtually over on the 10th October, when Major Pollock had concluded peace with the Hussunzais, Akazais, Chuggurzais, and Pararie Syuds, taking hostages for their good conduct. Some of the Pararie Syuds however treacherously attacked the British rear-guard two days after, on the march to Munnaki Dunna, but were beaten off with the loss of several killed and wounded, and the Syud villages which had been spared before were burnt by the General's order. Not a shot has since been fired on the British camp. General Wilde was marching through the Tikree Valley to settle accounts with the "independent Swatties," who seem loth however to oppose his progress. Sickness was slightly increasing, and so was the grumbling of men and officers at having undergone so much trouble and discomfort for so little apparent purpose. The whole loss during the campaign is set down at five killed and thirty wounded. The troops in the Tikree Valley consist of the 6th and 19th Foot, Horse Artillery troops D and F, a mortar battery, two mountain batteries, 16th Bengal Cavalry, 2nd and 4th Ghorkas, and 24th Punjab Infantry. The Derbund force stands fast.

It seems to be generally understood that Sir John Lawrence will after all take the Punjab and Peshawar on his way back from the Hills. A meeting between him and Shere Ali would doubtless clinch the good understanding already visible in their correspondence. And, as the Times of India argues, in view of the present juncture in Central Asia and of the early arrival of a "new and inexperienced" viceroy, it may be well that Sir John should take some decided course in this matter, from which his successor could not lightly deviate. It is better to make a friend, so far as we prudently can, of the present Ameer than to drive him by our persistent coldness into the arms of Russia. And if each party can do the other a service, the question of motives need not be considered, especially as we should have no right to throw stones at our new ally. Meanwhile Shere Ali is still bent, it seems, on pressing Abdurrahman Khan in Balkh, or else that prince is bent on trying one more chance for Kabul on his own account, for we hear that both sides are preparing for another campaign. As for Azim Khan, the ex-Ameer, he is said to be begging help from his father-in-law, the Meer of Badakshan, whose help can hardly be worth much.

ANOTHER potentate, Syud Selim, late Imam of Muscat, has just been thrown over by the Indian Government. His capital already in the hands of his insurgent subjects, and himself reduced to the last pinch, he implored help from Colonel Pelly, who, as we know, had sailed off to the scene of disturbance. But a telegram from India forbade the Colonel from interfering, and Selim had to betake himself to Bunder Abbas, leaving his brother-in-law Syud Azan-bin-Ghes master of the position. The latter however is said to be little more popular than his ousted rival, and it is believed, at least in Bombay, that Selim's uncle, Syud Thoorkee, now living in Bombay, may yet replace his nephew at Muscat. If he can make good his claim, the Indian Government will not say him nay.

THE threatened famine, which timely rains have averted or mitigated in the North-West Provinces and Central India, seems to be hopelessly raging in Rajpootana, part of the Punjab, and Oudh. There is also widespread distress in the Twenty-four Pergunnahs, owing not to drought, but to its opposite. The natives employed in the Relief Works in that district have to stand "waist-deep in water by the edge of the road." The great rice-tracts are covered with three feet of water. From the drought-wasted provinces emigrants are pouring out by hundreds a-day in quest of kindlier regions. So great is the scarcity that the annual relief of troops has in many places been suspended. The want of roads, no uncommon want in India, has debarred the suffering districts from profiting by the abundance of grain in Kandeish and the valley of the Nerbuddah. It is sad to think that with all our talk about "developing the resources of India," good roads are still for the most part a dream of the future.

CAPTAIN SLADEN's mission seems to have been a real success so far as it went. Both from the Shans and Panthays it met with the friendliest reception; indeed, it was not always easy for the Captain's party to get away from his friends. On their way home each tribe was anxious to secure the trade with Burmah for itself. Burmese jealousy, so obstructive to Sladen's advance, is said to have been somewhat softened by his successful return. The question of a road to Western China has almost settled itself. Surveys have been taken of all the three roads over the Kakhien Hills, and it is not unlikely that the line followed by Captain Sladen on his homeward journey will once more become what it used to be, the highway from Burmah to China. It is supposed that Mr. Cooper, the adventurous traveller from Shanghai to India, will reach his destination by the same road, having failed to make his way through Thibet.

THE cholera, which at first took so virulent a form in Bombay, seems to be already dying out, thanks to the prompt measures taken by the local authorities. Not more than twelve deaths were reported in the week before the departure of the last mail, which is only half the average loss of the same week in five years.

THE Englishman ridicules a highly alarming account given by the Friend of India as to the state of the Koles of Chota Nagpore. According to the Friend, the zemindars of that province are goading the Kōle Christians into insurrection by oppressive demands. According to the other paper, it is only in the Lohardugga district that any sort of irritation exists. It seems that a body of so-called Christian Koles took advantage of an alleged High Court decree to advance untenable claims on village lands, and levy contributions from the different villages. The ringleaders however are now in jail on a charge of cheating, and the people have begun to find out the futility of seeking for the enforcement of old land tenures which have long since practically been repealed. The registering of the old Blumiar lands is very soon to be completed, and when that is done, no reasonable cause of quarrel will remain.

DR. MOUAT'S Report on Prisons for 1867 shows as many as 27,697 sick out of 75,500 prisoners. The death-rate had fallen however to 5.88 per cent., a figure which we hope some day to see considerably reduced. Dr. Mouat is an ardent champion of the cellular system, not only for sanitary reasons, but because in such a system he finds a deterrent peculiarly adapted to India. Separate confinement is just now a dead letter for want of proper cells; fetters are lightly regarded, and flogging is the only mode left of keeping order and enforcing discipline—a state of things which Dr. Mouat calls disgraceful. He again declares that the “construction of cellular prisons alone will remove this blot from the prison system of Bengal. Never mind the expense, he argues, even if you have to pay twelve millions sterling for an improvement which will reduce the death-rate—as it has already done in Calcutta and Hazaribagh—do away with the corrupting effects of intercourse between old and young criminals, and enable sentences to be reduced by one-half.

LORD MAYO'S reply to the address and speeches of the deputation from the East India Association speaks well, if not altogether for his own statesmanship, which is still an unknown quantity, at any rate for the policy henceforth to be pursued by the rulers of India. In expressing his “heartly concurrence” in the sentiments of those around him, and in “fully recognising the extreme importance of a comprehensive system of irrigation throughout India,” he probably meant something more than a conventional figure of speech, or even the genuine expression of his own opinions. Taken along with Mr. Massey's speech at Liverpool, his lordship's avowal seems to point to a large extension of irrigation works in India, covered by a loan of more than ordinary dimensions. His next remarks about applying to India the principles on which land has been improved in England need some explanation as they stand in the report. But in going on to denounce the “enormous mass” of public correspondence in India, and promising, as far as he could, to “substitute action for writing,” Lord Mayo preached a crusade in which he will find many to help him against an evil which grows more and more rampant year by year. The writing of minutes and reports on all sorts of subjects and occasions has in India been carried to such perfection, that the need for consequent action becomes quite a secondary affair. Everybody writes and writes, and meanwhile nothing gets properly done. If Lord Mayo will really apply his axe to this tree, he will be rendering a conspicuous service to India at large, and earning the warm thanks of a great many overworked officials. His lordship further declared himself in favour of local organisation for local purposes, and ended by complimenting his hearers on their way of discharging a great public duty. Nothing, he said, would so strengthen the hands of Government in its efforts for the public weal, as “free, unreserved, and public discussion.” The deputation seem to have been greatly struck by the “evident earnestness” of his straightforward remarks.

THE Bombay Bank Commission, at its second sitting in London on Tuesday week, continued the examination of Mr. Birch, one of the Government directors from 1862 to February, 1865. His evidence during the two days simply showed that beyond getting himself presented—as Sir C. Jackson put it—with the whole premium on a large number of shares, Mr. Birch either knew nothing or could remember nothing of the many loan transactions for which he was partly responsible. Once indeed, on being hard pressed, he allowed that Premchand Roychand “might have managed” all those large loans about which he could say nothing. But in general “I don't remember” was varied only by perfect silence. On Friday several other Government directors were examined, including Mr. A. D. Robertson, who admitted among other things that the bye-laws which ought to have regulated the management of the bank were “unfortunately never made.” All the directors got allotments of shares in public companies in 1864, and all alike had no idea that loans were being granted on personal security.

It is settled, we believe, that the field artillery in India is henceforth to consist of bronze muzzle-loading rifled guns, which, with the requisite shot and shell, are to be manufactured out there. The latter arrangement, which is merely an old one revived, is condemned as unwise in many quarters. It is objected that by having these guns cast in India we put a dangerous weapon into native hands. Native workmen, it is said, will betray our secrets to native princes, and in time of trouble we shall find ourselves opposed with guns of a pattern and workmanship equal to our own. All this may be true, but the advantage of having gun factories on the spot in times of danger or of foreign war outweighs a drawback of which after all too much has been made. It is quite possible, we conceive, for the Indian Government to forbid or control, according to circumstances, the making or importing of artillery for any native State within our borders. Besides, the manufacture of rifled guns is necessarily distributed between so many sets of workmen, each skilled only in their own branch of work, that the danger feared by some of our contemporaries becomes practically infinitesimal.

SIR STAFFORD NORTHCOTE kindly and properly allowed the whole of his staff in the India-office leave of absence on Monday and Tuesday, to attend the nominations and record their votes.

SIR CHARLES MILL'S Baronetcy was only gazetted on the 10th November, after our paper had gone to press.

THE death of Lord Hastings has extinguished a marquise of some renown in Anglo-Indian history. The first wearer of the title was Lord Moira, whose services in India gained him a distinction which has died out with the third generation.

LORD MAYO by this time is well on his way to Suez, whence the Feroze—Lord Dalhousie's favourite steamer—will take him on to Bombay.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, November 18, 1868.

GRIEVANCES OF INDIAN OFFICERS.

It is now ten years since the transfer of India to the Crown, and the officers of the old Service are still grumbling. Acts of Parliament, Royal Commissions, despatches from the India Office, orders and warrants from the War Department, general orders of the Indian Government, have been issued to any amount; and still the grumbling continues. One grievance after another has got itself discussed, abated, to all appearance finally healed; but still the old sores seem to rankle, and fresh murmurs fill the air. Nobody seems satisfied. The home departments and the old Company's officers alike repent them of their bargains. There is a new outcry touching that compensation for lost bonuses, which Lord Cranborne's letter of August, 1866, was too readily supposed to have finally yielded to demands reiterated for many years before. There was the warrant of 1866, which aimed at redressing the grievances of 1861 in the matter of entrance into the Staff Corps; and behold from either country swells a wail of angry assurance that those grievances are still unredressed. A late Royal warrant holds out certain advantages to officers serving in India. But its provisions have been repeatedly set at naught, and the injured are clamouring for their just dues.

Let us look for the present at one particular class of complaints. A letter which first appeared in an Indian journal and has since been published with certain variations in a weekly contemporary, affirms on the joint attestation of several signatures the truth of the following statements.

Many Indian artillery officers have actually been transferred to the Royal Artillery without their own consent, sometimes even in spite of formal protests. Many of the new line officers were in 1861 denied admission to the Staff Corps, and from various causes were placed at a cruel disadvantage in respect of their professional prospects. A gleam of hope was shed on both classes by Lord Cranborne's promise, given in August, 1866, that "all who were in the Indian army prior to the amalgamation should enter the Staff Corps without test or condition." Parliament had already decided that the warrant of 1861 was an infringement of the guarantees contained in the Act of 1858. Officers who had entered the new line regiments or the Royal Artillery were thus to all appearance free to reconsider their choice, and exchange into the local service or the Staff Corps. But the ruling powers willed otherwise. The claims of these sufferers were rejected on the plea that, having "volunteered" in 1861 for general service, they had ceased to be Indian officers.

In other words, having been lured by misleading promises into doing what they never meant to do, the officers in question were afterwards denied the power of correcting their mistake on the pretence of their having made it with their eyes open. The result is that most of these victims of official casuistry are liable to serve at home on English pay; thus incurring a ruinous penalty for a choice they never dreamed of making. They had been tempted into the British service in 1861 by a warrant which distinctly promised them the right of afterwards exchanging into the staff. Five years later they were invited to reconsider their choice, but forbidden to act upon the invitation, in spite of the penalties attached to their former decision.

But it was still possible at a certain sacrifice, it seems, to gain admission into the Staff Corps. This side-door however was barred against all the old officers of the new line regiments by a general order of last year, which limited the right of entering the Staff Corps to officers of not more than seven years' service. And, as if to leave no sting wanting to the unjust procedure, we are assured that the seven years' limit is being continually overstept in favour of the Brahmins of the service, men who have great local interest, or belong to the purchase regiments. While these happy mortals, some of whose names are now before us, have thus crept into comfortable berths, the veteran officers of the old European Infantry and Artillery are left outside the gates of their proper paradise, although many of them have passed the highest tests for staff employ, and can count more years of field service than their luckier rivals can show months.

If all this be true, the case of the complainants certainly seems a hard one, and no time should be lost in granting them all reasonable redress. Many difficulties and much misunderstanding have no doubt sprung from the successive attempts to build up a new system out of mainly old materials, piecemeal, without regard to any broad principles of fitness or fair compromise. But these symptoms of a widespread chronic discontent call for a thorough and swift reconsideration of all matters therewith connected. If the Act of 1858 is not to remain a dead letter, it is high time to ascertain once for all how far the "rights, privileges, and expectations" of the old Services have been disregarded in subsequent orders issued whether from England or in India. All that these particular sufferers ask for is leave either to enter the Staff Corps or to return to their old paper regiments "as their sole resource against destitution." To one or the other of these alternatives are they not in common fairness entitled?

With regard to a grievance yet wider and more self-evident, the withholding of compensation for lost bonuses, another letter from "A Struggler for Redress" confirms all that has from time to time appeared in these columns. It would be only waste of time to point out once more the utter miscarriage of justice, which has at length driven a large number of aggrieved officers to appeal from the heads of the Indian Government to the collective wisdom and impartiality of the British Parliament. How far the appeal will serve its purpose, time alone can show. That virtue of patience which has already been so long and sorely tried, may have still to wait a little longer for its full reward. But of the justice of the appeal there cannot be a question. According to a certain statute of Queen Victoria, all the "rights, privileges, and expectations"—mark that last word—were expressly guaranteed to the officers transferred from the Company to the Crown. If that does not include full compensation for retiring bonuses, we must allow that two and two do not make four. Anyhow the sham compensation hitherto granted amounts in many cases to absolutely nothing, in many more to an infinitesimal fraction of the sum really due.

A NEW ARMENIAN NATIONALITY.

PEOPLE who are apt to alarm themselves and their neighbours overmuch regarding Russian progress in Asia may find, if they choose, some grains of comfort in Mr. Palgrave's suggestive article on "The Tribes of the North-East Turkish Frontier," as published in the Cornhill for November. We do not say that they will be altogether comforted, because the writer himself speaks far from positively on the future of a movement full of outward promise in the present. He cannot undertake to assure them that the new nation now forming on the North-East Frontier of Turkey will certainly stand forth an insurmountable barrier against Russian encroachments. "Russia does advance in Asia"—he says—"and means to advance; that she covets, earnestly covets, the very lands over which we have now been travelling is, in spite of all esoteric and official denials, a certain fact; whether she will be allowed to attempt their incorporation into her vast dead territories, and whether, if allowed, she will have strength to do it, were hard to say." Her resources are "practically unknown." Her success in such an enterprise would redound, he thinks, to the damage not of Asia only, but perhaps of other countries as well. But the stamping out of this new Armenian nation under the heel of Russian despotism is, at least in Mr. Palgrave's opinion, "hardly probable." And it is but one, and that the least likely, of three possibilities. Of the other two one depends on the energy and foresight of the Turkish Government. A sham centrality, we are told, is the bane of Turkish policy. Let the rulers of Constantinople but act fairly and in good faith by the nobles and landowners of this particular region, let them organise for local defence a militia commanded by its natural leaders, and all the circumstances of the moment will help the State to throw out "new growth and vigorous shoots on the East" in full reparation for its eventual losses in the West. But this, Mr. Palgrave fears, is exactly what they will fail to do. What with the weakness of Ottoman counsels, with the multitude of self-offered, but unsafe counsellors, and with the Turkish "habit of concentrating all serious attention on those parts of the empire" most exposed to European influences not always of the best kind, "the Ottoman rulers will let the great chance go by," only to regret their error too late. In that case "the third nor the more unlikely possibility," the foundation, namely, of a new, independent Turkoman dynasty, would be turned into a fact.

But what is and where dwells this new nation of which we are invited to make so hopeful an account? The scene of this new birth is "the great Asiatic highland placed south-east of the Black Sea and south-west of the Caspian," bounded on the west by the Kizil-Irmak, the classic Halys, on the south by the Tigro-Euphrates Valley and its adjuncts, on the east by the Persian deserts, with Russian Georgia fronting it on the north. Of "this Anti-Caucasus, this Asiatic Switzerland," which comprises Eastern Anatolia, the northern part of Kurdistan, both Turkish, with the Russian provinces of Erivan and Karabagh, and the Persian province of Azerbaijan, the central point, conspicuous alike in story as in nature, shows itself in the "double cone of Arrarat and its never-melting snows." Fitter cradle for a young nation could not well be found elsewhere.

The soil, everywhere fertile, is, up to a height of 6,000 feet and more above sea-level, rich to superabundance in all kinds of cereals—corn, rye, barley, oats, and the like; higher up are summer pasture lands, or "yailas," to give them their local name, of vast extent, clothed with excellent grass; in the valleys below ripen all the products of our own South-European climate—vines, fruit-trees, maize, rice, tobacco, and varied cultivation, alternating with forests unexceptionally the noblest that has ever been my chance to see; ash, walnut, boxwood, elm, beech, oak, fir, and pine.

Rich also is the land in iron and copper, "with not unfrequent silver and lead," and the seeming likelihood of much coal. The climate, pure and healthy, has the average temperature of South Germany. Perennial snows cap the hills, and the well-watered valleys are fed by abundant rains. Altogether, a desirable dwelling-place for the sons of men, the Armenians, Kurds, Turkomans, and Circassians, who now form its chief population.

It is but lately indeed that the dwellers in these highlands have numbered more than fifteen to the square mile. New agencies however are fast working a remarkable change. Russian pressure is driving the Turkomans of the Russian dominion, at the rate of a thousand families a year, into a land comparatively free, where kindred races of their own creed welcome them with open arms and ready gifts of land to build and settle upon. And, strange to tell, these proverbial nomads are rapidly learning the arts of agriculture, and surrounding their new abodes with wide belts of harvest; as if to show that their nomad condition in Central Asia "is more the result of circumstance than of an innate and irrepressible bent." The kindred race of Kurds indeed is still on the whole "pertinaciously pastoral," but their numbers are comparatively small, and the richer sort among them have already exchanged the tent for a fixed dwelling.

Another element in the new nationality consists of the Georgian and Circassian tribes, who are flocking by thousands into a land where Russian drill-sergeants and policemen cannot yet follow them. These tall, handsome, blue-eyed, brown-haired emigrants from the Caucasus soon adapt themselves to their new conditions, becoming active citizens or industrious peasants, and intermarrying freely with their Turkoman neighbours. Other immigrants again, chiefly Turkoman, make their way yearly across the Persian frontier in quest of the peace and good order they missed at home. All these streams keep flowing into a country nominally ruled by some officer sent from Stamboul, but really for the most part free to follow its own customs and pay obedience to its own chiefs. "Pressure from without, common hatred, and well-grounded fear," combine with the possession of a common creed and the weakness of the Turkish Government, to "weld these varied materials into one, and to give the new whole a fixed direction." Already does the region traversed, in person as well as on paper, by Mr. Palgrave contain 700,000 actual settlers, or thirty-five to the square mile, besides half a million nomads not taken into account. Not a little to his own surprise the writer, who had expected to see mostly "waste lands and a diminishing population," found on every height, in every valley, one or more villages, each containing from thirty to two hundred or more houses, "ringed by an inner belt of gardens and an outer one of widely cultivated cornlands."

Of these possible elements of a great nation to be, the Turkoman fills the largest place. Three-fourths or so of the whole population are Turkomans, descendants of a race once famed in history, short, thickset, heavy-featured men of the Turanian type, bold riders, fond of fighting, but capable of hard and sustained work. Surpassed in fire and dash by the Semitic Kurds, in beauty and intelligence by the Aryan immigrants from the Caucasus, the Turkoman element seems destined by mere force of numbers and counterbalancing traits to absorb the rest, although in the offspring of mixed marriages Mr. Palgrave found the Georgian type to predominate. Be that as it may however, one sure base of political and social union is supplied by the Islamism which all these races profess in common, and profess all the more earnestly for their common fear of Russia, and their antagonism to the West in general. A kind of Mohammedan revival, fruitful in "new schools, new mosques, new teachers," and perhaps in new fanaticisms of the Wahabee type, is spreading over this new centre of national life, for results which, however uncertain, can hardly tend to the furtherance of Russian aims.

And it is from this point of view that the questions raised by Mr. Palgrave bear most directly on the interests of British India. If we are ever to have our long-needed railway from Seleucia or Alexandretta to the Persian Gulf, does it not behove us to lend all our moral influence towards the setting up of a powerful barrier against Russian progress into the valley of the Euphrates? The key to that valley now lies in possession of these very Turkoman-Kurdish tribes. If Mr. Palgrave's conclusions spring from anything like trustworthy data, the nation that is now forming itself out of these tribes will effectually bar the march of the Russian Eagles to the Persian Gulf, and so leave virtually in our own hands the best and safest railway route from England to India. But we are not quite sure of the soundness of the data. Does Russia really hanker after dominion on the Persian Gulf? Is it not rather probable that her feet are deliberately set towards Central and Eastern Asia? If

Mr. Palgrave's estimates of character be not those of a too partial friend, the rise of a new Turkoman nationality may prove a real good not only for the people who compose it, but for England also. Those estimates certainly tally with the opinions of Mr. Vambéry regarding the Turkoman tribes of Central Asia, opinions however not always in keeping with known facts. At the best we imagine there is not much to choose between Russian despotism and Turkoman lawlessness, between the exclusiveness of Russian trade and the strength of Turkoman fanaticism. Still, so far as England is concerned, a strong independent nation on the Armenian highlands would seem to offer a more promising programme than the spread of Russian influence along the Euphrates.

BONUS COMPENSATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—As numerous petitions from officers of the late Indian army (regarding the loss of their regimental bonus) are already in the hands of "A. B. C.," care of Smith, Elder, and Co., 45, Pall-mall, for presenting to Parliament, other sufferers are invited to write to the same address for any information or assistance they may require.

In the last letter you were good enough to insert for me, I stated that I had not heard of any officer receiving compensation. Since making that statement I have been in communication with several officers, and amongst them have met with such remarkable instances of munificence on the part of the committee, that it would be extremely unfair to that august body, and the rules on which they acted, not to give them publicity. In one instance an officer claiming £950 was awarded £22. To others the sums of £22. 10s. ! £22. 16s. 9d. ! and £12. 14s. 9d. ! respectively. One of these officers, resenting the offer of such a paltry sum, refused to take it.

Surely a large-minded statesman like the Marquis of Salisbury never contemplated such an issue to his scheme. Is it surprising that in the face of the unprecedented deductions, exclusions, and narrow interpretations to which we have been subjected, a spirit of intense dissatisfaction should prevail among us? Can it be asserted that the faith which the honour of a great nation demands should be preserved unbroken with its meanest subject has been kept with us? For however facts may be garnished to suit the purposes of those who build their fortunes on our failure (our greatest foes being those of our own household, gaily feathered birds who delight in plucking their less favoured brethren), the inevitable truth remains, that we have a real and undressed grievance in the loss of those sums which we should have received from our juniors on retirement had it not been for the amalgamation, and any unbiassed person would assuredly decide that any officer suffering loss by that change in the Government of the Indian army ought to be indemnified without restriction as to the precise state of his retirement, provided his ruined prospects could be traced clearly to that source.

This bonus formed not only the "expectations" guaranteed to us by Act of Parliament with our "rights and privileges," but our certainly; and the bitterest sting is, that it formed in many instances the only possible provision an officer had made for his family.

We might have been quieted by the "half loaf" of Lord Salisbury, but when that has turned to ashes on our lips—and for a loss of hundreds, nay thousands, either compensation is utterly withheld, or such miserable pittance as detailed above are doled forth—long fettered indignation must burst its bounds. How have a body of loyal gentlemen who have passed through troublous times—upholding the British name, and securing the Eastern revenues—deserved and earned such mockery? I have suffered losses by "flood and field," acknowledging in them the fortunes of war; but I cannot—and I trust my brother officers will not—quietly submit to such crying injustice, for they may rest assured it is not the will of our Queen or her Parliament that we suffer such heavy and unmerited injury; fair representation, and clear explanations alone are needed, and I am confident that when our "round, unvarnished tale" is told to the true-hearted gentlemen who compose our Parliament, their good sense, keen honour and uprightness will rend the subtle veil thrown so skilfully over our wrongs by official zeal, and rallying round our cause, they will insist that we have "no more shams," but the realities of justice.—Armed with the knowledge that right is on our side, and believing in the old proverb that "God helps those who help themselves," let each do his utmost, and prove with me an energetic but loyal

MOFUSSIL JUSTICE.

The Grambharta Prakashika declares that the laws for the administration of justice in the Mofussil are so discoloured by the "mire" of "self-will" and "impulse" that their true appearance is not to be perceived through this muddy encasement. Those uninitiated in the ways of the world are deceived by this dissemblance, and supposing themselves to be viewing justice in her natural garb, blame the Government for having thus abused it whereas it is the fault of the local officials. However just a legislation might be, it is rendered hateful if it is not acted upon. The time has come for the Government to inquire whether the letter of the law is attended to, in the administration of justice in the Mofussil, when it will be found to what extent "self-will" holds court, and the opinions of the subjects with regard to the same will be known. The present means employed for such investigation is totally without fruit, owing to those who are entrusted with its control being guilty of it themselves, wherefore they find it extremely convenient to evade a disclosure of their own faults. It must be confessed that this fault is not so very vividly perceptible in the Courts of the Commissioner, Judge, and other leading authorities, owing to the constant attendance of two very zealous agents named "Flattery" and "Complaisance," who take the greatest pains to hide all the defects of their masters. Besides, there are to be found many among the subordinate officials who take the precaution of placing all particulars before their superiors regarding their intended course with reference to a victim; after which they make the fatal spring. In fact, to sum up the matter, it is plainly evident that oppression rules the Mofussil with a hand of iron, having for its assistants "Flattery" and "Complaisance," who are at present officiating for "Bribery." To suppress such malpractices we would advise Government to appoint spies to report on all the good and bad qualities which may predominate in the local officials of the various districts. It is also necessary that the names of these spies should be kept very secret. Each of the police outposts is a den of iniquity. These representatives of the law punish the innocent, trespass on the chastity of females, and, for the sake of gold, release the thief, the debauchee, and the swindler. These and many other charges could be brought against them if proper inquiry were instituted.

CAPTAIN SLADEN'S MISSION.

The Friend of India thinks that the return journey through the Shan States was more than simply satisfactory, it was triumphant. Captain Sladen's attempt to return by a new route across the Kakhyen hills was almost frustrated by the very laudable attempt on the part of the Shands of the Sanda Valley to keep him to themselves, and prevent the exploration of other routes, which might supersede the one taken on the march to Momein and exclude them from the benefits of trade. He managed, however, to cross over from Manwyne to Botha, and returned thence over the Kakhyen hills by the principal route, which has always been the one taken by Royal embassies between Burmah and China. He moreover sent a competent surveyor by the Sawuddy route, of which a complete survey was made. All three routes leading across these hills have thus been so far explored and surveyed as to enable Government to form an opinion as to the selection of one which shall constitute the through route to China. The Kakhyens are our true friends and servants, if we like to make them so. There is no necessity to subsidise them. They want us to make use of their roads and country more than we do ourselves. Our agent brought more than thirty chiefs with him to Bhamo, and they took an oath of fidelity to him Kakhyen fashion, much to the jealous disgust of the Burmans, from whom they are at present utterly estranged. What are to be the immediate results of Captain Sladen's success? We trust he will be sent back next season, and go as far as Talifoo, with an escort and presents worthy of the Viceroy. A British agent must also be established at Bhamo. The treaty provides for this, and no other means will check Burmese rapacity or keep the route open. Thence the navigation of the Irrawaddy to Rangoon is not more difficult than that of the Ganges from Allahabad to Calcutta. And Captain Sladen has supplied a new argument for the construction of that railway from Rangoon to Prome, towards the frontier and Bhamo, which has been so urgently recommended to the Government of India by the Chief Commissioner. The valley of the Irrawaddy has a great future before it. The Americans, through that astute person, Mr. Burlingame, are doing their utmost to divert the trade of China to their own country. With the vast territories of the West filled up, their mineral wealth developed, and the hunting grounds of the Indians penetrated by railways, the diversion of the trade of the China seaboard by way of the Pacific is inevitable. It is for India to tap the great producing provinces of South and Western China, while covering the slopes of its own hills with the tea plant. The exploration of Indo-China will enable it to do both, by opening up trade routes to the Bay of Bengal and attracting labour to its eastern districts.

VERNACULAR EDUCATION IN BENGAL.

The Madras Times holds that we may wait long enough if we wait for a spontaneous movement on the part of the degraded and down-trodden towards enlightenment and self-elevation, or for a general desire on their part to obtain the instruction we have to give them. Now, as of old, it is only in vision that the men of Macedonia cry, "Come over and help us." The appetite must be excited before the demand can be created. "We are not merchants or pundits; what is the use of learning to us?" Such is the language of the ryots, and it is just what might be expected. It should be the part of a benevolent Government to overcome this repugnance, and to supply its ignorant subjects, as far as possible, with an education suited to their needs and circumstances, and of which they will in a short time sensibly feel the advantage. How thoroughly the Calcutta sages were deceived in their expectation that education, once imparted to the higher classes, would filter down and down, as by a law of gravitation, till it reached the lowest, is shown by the estimate made by Mr. Woodrow, Inspector of Schools, a most competent judge on this point. In 1861—twenty-two years after the rejection of Mr. Adam's proposals for the education of the masses, during all which time that of the upper classes of the Bengal community had been progressing—Mr. Woodrow estimated, "that including every variety of schools—Government, missionary, and indigenous, in the richest and most populous portion of Bengal—there are about three persons in every hundred under education. While the proportion under instruction in England is one in 7½, in all India it is one in 400. Something, however, has since been done. In 1863 the plan of establishing Normal Training Schools to provide village schoolmasters was begun to be tried. Three such schools had been established, and in 1864 the opening of patsholas, or village schools, under these trained teachers, first commenced. By the beginning of the present year 1,125 such patsholas had been established, with 33,831 pupils; while the Government Normal Vernacular Schools have increased to 23, containing (in March, 1867) 1,224 students, besides 3 private normal schools under inspection, containing 129 pupils. This we hail as an earnest of better things; but the main difficulty in Bengal is now a pecuniary one. Not fewer than 40,000 village schools are needed in Bengal, and not less than £480,000 a-year will ultimately be requisite for their maintenance. The present expenditure, mainly for high education, is about £160,000. The Grant-in-Aid Rules are not applicable to the masses in Bengal, who have neither the ability nor the willingness to contribute money for educational objects. Mr. Hodgson Pratt, Inspector of Schools in South Bengal, observes—"It appears to me that the Grant-in-Aid Rules are out of place in a country where the value of education is utterly unfelt by the mass of the people; for the rules presume the highest appreciation of the value of education, based as they are on the supposition that the people of this country are so desirous of an improved description of instruction that they will actually pay, not only schooling fees, but contributions from their private resources. Why, this would be too much to expect in scores of places in England, with a civilisation which has been ever steadily growing for centuries, and where the people are blessed with all the advantages that race and religion can confer." Assuredly it would; and how much more so in India! As we observed before, in education, as in religion, the supply must precede and create the demand.

ORDNANCE APPOINTMENT.—The following promotions in the Ordnance Department are made:—Sub-Conductor (Acting Conductor) J. Gregory to be Conductor, and Magazine Sergeant (Acting Sub-Conductor) R. Barton to be Sub-Conductor from Aug. 30, 1868, in succession to Fitzgerald, pensioned.

LIMITED SERVICE IN THE INDIAN ARMY.—His Excellency the Governor General in Council is pleased to direct that paragraph 10 of Government General Order No. 695, of the 17th November, 1863, be altered, and made to read as follows:—Para. 10. Men of limited service who have full six years to serve will be allowed a bounty of sixty (60) rupees. Those who have five years to serve, a bounty of fifty (50) rupees. Those who have four years to serve, a bounty of forty (40) rupees. Those who have three years to serve, a bounty of thirty (30) rupees. Men who have less than three years of their first term of service unexpired may volunteer, if they re-engage at the same time, when they will receive the bounty on re-engagement in addition to the full bounty on volunteering. Men who have any period less than three years to serve of their first period of service, but do not declare for re-engagement, will not be permitted to volunteer. Men who have any period less than two years of the second period of service to perform will not be permitted to volunteer.

HAZARA.

The following are the latest telegrams from the front, as published in the Bombay papers:—

Oct. 8, Evening.—The destruction of the Purralee Syuds' villages has been stayed, as the Chiggarzaies and Akazaies have been making overtures of peace. The Jirgahs had not yet come into camp, but were hourly expected. Health good; weather fine, occasional showers. The troops have made huts from the boughs of trees as a shelter against the cold. No more news of the Hindustanees. All quiet at Derbund.

Oct. 9, Evening.—The latest intelligence from General Wilde's camp at Machai Peak announces that peace overtures are being made by the Pathan tribes, therefore no military operations have taken place against them, and there seems little probability of the Hindustanees ascending the Black Mountain to oppose our troops. A Jirgah from the Chiggarzai and a syud on the part of the Purralee syuds are negotiating with the Commissioner. The night pickets suffer occasional casualties from isolated shots by some of the more determined or malignant of the enemy.

From MACHAI PEAK, through KOONDGULLEE, Oct. 10, Night.—The Commissioner has concluded terms of peace between the British Government and the following Pathan tribes of the Black Mountain, viz., with the Hussunzaies, the Akazaies, the Chiggarzaies, and the Purralee syuds. Hostages of the above tribes remain with the camp till the return of the troops to British territories. A Royal salute is to be fired from the 1st Brigade camp on the Machai Peak. Arrangements will now be made to commence military operations in the valleys against the independent Swattees.

From MUNNA KI DUNNA, through KOONGULLY, Oct. 12, Night.—The Hazara field force left the Machai and Chittabut Peaks this morning and marched to this place, accompanied by the friendly Jirgahs of the Pathan tribes of the Black Mountain. Not a shot was fired, or any insult offered to our troops, within the lands of the above tribes. As the rear guard approached this encampment some of the recalcitrant Purralee Syuds' followers attacked the rear guard of the column without loss to our men, who inflicted some punishment on the enemy, one of whom was left dead in our hands, another killed, and several wounded. I am now organising the columns for entering the valleys of the independent Swattees, but cannot say if I shall be ready to proceed to-morrow or not.

From MUNNA KI DUNNA, Oct. 13, Noon.—The camp was unmolested last night, not a shot being fired. I have halted here to-day to enable me to send the sick and wounded to the camp at Oghee. Four regiments of Native Infantry, under Lieutenant-colonel C. Brownlow's command, now occupy the Julgully Pass, and the men are employed in improving the road through it. To-day the Sappers and Miners are employed in making a road down the Bilankot spur into the Tikree plain, which will be ready for to-morrow's march to that valley. Sickness amongst the troops slightly on the increase, owing to the late hard work and exposure.

From CHEERMUNG, TIKREE, Oct. 14, Evening.—In concurrence with the Commissioner, I detached a strong column of troops this morning at daybreak under Brigadier-general Vaughan's command to burn the villages of the Purralee Syuds, who had broken their agreement made with the Commissioner, and had allowed their followers to attack the rear guard on the 12th. At the same time I marched the head-quarters of the force to the place at the head of the Purralee Glen. I have not heard the result of Gen. Vaughan's punitive march, but a number of villages are from my camp to be seen in flames. My line of communication is now the Julgully Pass, which is held by Lieut.-colonel Brownlow with four native regiments. Not a shot has been fired at my camp, or any camp followers injured since the force marched on the 12th from the crest of the Mountain to Camp Dunna.

A letter from Black Mountain of October 14 to the Delhi Gazette gives the following latest details:—"Peace was made on the 10th, and a Royal salute fired. This was done late in the evening, and the troops who were in support thought that a vigorous attack was being made by the enemy, and were very much disgusted when they heard what was the real state of affairs. Although peace has been made the enemy continue to shoot stragglers, a commissariat baker and some camp followers having been shot. The rear guard of a Ghoorka Regiment was fired into, but here the enemy got more than they bargained for, as the Ghoorkas pitched into them, killing two of them and wounding two more. This is about the only piece of satisfaction our troops have had, as although the enemy say they have lost about sixty men, only one dead man, besides the two killed by the Ghoorkas, has been found, and it is not certain whether he was killed or fell over a khud. Our loss has been between thirty and forty killed and wounded. The wounded have had a miserable time of it, as they were kept out in the open on the top of the mountain for two nights. The mules also have suffered for want of food; although there were heaps of muccai crops all about the mountain sides, no one was allowed to make use of it, and the mules went without food; but they are long-suffering animals. Between two and three hundred have just arrived from Abyssinia, and considering the long journey they have had, are in very good condition. The villages all about here are deserted; a great many have been burnt. Various rumours are afloat regarding the reasons for making peace, and allowing the enemy to get off unpunished. Some say it was the fault of Sir John Lawrence, and that he is anxious to get home, leaving all quiet behind him, others that the civil authorities over-persuaded the military, and declared 'that the enemy would fight if we went any further, and that we should lose fifteen officers and a number of men if we tried to take the peak beyond Muchchai.' Whichever it was, it is a fact that our troops retired instead of going on, and left the enemy dancing with their standards on an adjoining peak. The tents of the Hindoostanee fanatics were seen from Muchchai. It is reported that they have been turned out of Swat by the Akhoond, and that instead of fighting them we are going to try and bribe them to return quietly to their homes near Patna, and to give up the disgraceful life they have been leading for the last ten years on the frontier. We are now to make a triumphal procession through the Tikree Valley, visiting Tarkote, and if they do not fight we are to return to Oghee, where the Lieutenant-Governor's camp is to be pitched, and the whole performance will most likely wind up with a grand parade for his Honour. It is a pity this absurd performance could not have been gone through without marching English regiments long distances in the hot weather, as lives might have been saved. The Deobund Force remains there for the present; the following troops go into the Tikree Valley, viz.:—H.M.'s 6th Foot, 19th Foot, D-F, R.H.A., a mortar battery, two mountain batteries, 16th Bengal Cavalry, 2nd Goorkhas, 4th Goorkhas, and 24th P.I., the 20th P.I. keeping the road at the foot of the Black Mountain, and the 1st Goorkhas, 5th Goorkhas, 2nd Punjab Infantry, and Guide Cavalry remaining at Diboora, at the foot of the Koonggully Pass. There is also a force at Oghee of detachments of regiments, with artillery. The telegraph wire will, I fancy, be cut down unless the Simla people wish to keep open communications with their 'Black Mountain' friends. It has caused more bad language amongst the force than anything else, as every one believes that it is owing to the wire that our troops were disappointed. The expense of the expedition will be something fearful, provisions having been purchased by Government at ruinous prices, and sold to the troops for less than cost price, and an allowance for dearness of provisions made them as well. It will also come very hard upon officers who have been out in camp for months, and have had to go on paying house rent as well as keeping up carriage at very high rates. Civilians, who are much better paid than military men, get a marching allowance of five rupees a day. Why should not military men have an allowance made them or their carriage paid for when ordered on service?"

A correspondent of the Daily News writes thus from Camp Muchai Peak, Oct. 9:—Would that I had the pen of a ready writer, so that I might present to the public the true state of affairs in the Black Mountain. Our worthy General, in a "memo." addressed to the force previous to our advance, informed us "that the advance of British troops, unincumbered with baggage, cannot long be checked by the enemy;" also "that the halt of a force on a hill side is never to be permitted, as it is attributed by the enemy to fear, and imbues them with fresh courage." Yet this officer (why or wherefore no one can imagine) has halted us now for five days on the hill side, and has found out that 30 elephants, carrying 6 guns, are infinitely more troublesome than the whole equipage of an army 7,000 strong. They drink upwards of 150 mussels of water a-day, and eat, as may be imagined, whole fields of "mukhaie." So, since we arrived here, our mules daily have been sent five miles to bring forage for the 1st brigade, and the unfortunate 2nd P.I. have had the pleasing duty of furnishing an escort under a British officer for the foraging party. Water is by no means found in profusion up on the peak; the road also is very bad; and it will be a matter of great astonishment to us all if the D-F Royal Horse Artillery, recently converted into an elephant battery, ever arrives at the summit of this mountain. These monsters make an attempt to advance to-day, and expect to get as far as the "Pond Plateau," about a mile below us. There they will get their first taste of short rations, and drink their first draught of "reduced water supply." I fancy the bones of many will be left on this mountain. The 2nd Punjab Infantry down below on the "Pond Plateau" had another sentry shot last night. This fine regiment has already lost two killed and one wounded—all of them stalked when on sentry duty at night by a sporting Chuggurzaie. They have had all the dirty work of the Brigade, and I do not think any of us would mind if the cheerful "Pathans" got a chance of slating our cowardly enemies. The 24th Native Infantry have this morning marched up to the "Pond Plateau," the 6th Foot being at Doda, a mile in rear, 2nd Goorkhas at Chitterbut, half a mile in rear of Doda on the "Knolls;" a mile from Chitterbut are the 3rd Sikhs, and on Moonake Dhuma the 4th "Ghoorkas and Elephant Battery," whilst Jackson's mortar battery is in Doda with the 6th. Major Bainbridge, an officer who got one of the cheap Abyssinian brevets, has been made Assistant Commissary-general to the 1st Brigade, and Lieutenant Wells, 10th Cavalry, to the 2nd. Here we are well into the seventh day of our seven days' expedition, and only two miles outside our own country. Another week's provisions are coming out, and then we expect another and another, and shall consider ourselves lucky in getting out of this in a month. The weather is bitterly cold. The 19th and 6th, in drill clothes with only one thin blanket and a great coat, feel the weather tremendously. More blankets have been indented for. The Jirghas from Daishee, Chuggurzaie, and the Nusrut Kheyl are still treating with Major Pollock; but I trust that now no terms will be accepted, though all expect the tribes will be bribed, the feud patched up, and the politicals get all the kudos.

From the frontier, under date the 9th October, the Delhi Gazette hears that the troops halted on the ground they may be said to have won on the 5th, up to date of advice, and as the men have been told to hut themselves it would appear as if they were intended to remain in their present position some time. The reason of this is supposed to be that the tribes are anxious to come to terms; deputations from them were arriving in camp every day, and with several of them peace has been agreed upon. The inhabitants of the Tikree Valley have been let off for 9,000 rupees, of which 6,000, our informant believes, have been paid. Notwithstanding this apparent submission, however, General Wilde was fired at on the 4th, and a man of the 2nd P.I. killed on the same night and another wounded on the 5th. The report was, that on leaving their present position the brigade would march either to Thakote or back to Oghee via the Tikree Valley.

About noon on the 5th the 1st Brigade, under Brigadier-general Bright, began to move forward from Chutta towards the Muchai Peak in the following order:—20th P.I., 1st Goorkhas, 5th Goorkhas, 1-19th Foot, Sappers and Miners, De Bude's Mountain Battery, 2nd P.I. The troops were almost immediately engaged with the enemy, and a brisk fire was kept up as they advanced. The enemy, after a brief resistance, retired as usual, maintaining a dropping fire, but took up fresh positions in rear, from which they were successively driven by our troops as they continued to advance. As the troops began to near the Muchai Peak, which was held by the enemy in some force, and was their strongest point, De Bude's battery was put in position, and opened fire with shot and shell. About this time a number of the enemy that had been routed by the troops in front, and had escaped down the slopes of the hill, began to fire into and annoy the main body. To dispose of these, two companies of the 9th Foot were detached to each flank, and the remainder of the battalion was moved up rapidly close to the leading corps to support the assault on the Muchai Peak, which was then carried in gallant style by the brigade, the "Fighting 20th" leading, as usual. The two companies of the 19th Foot detached to the right continued to move on rapidly, clearing the flank, and ultimately turned up on the right of the 20th. Those detached to the left were detained some time in dislodging some of the enemy that had taken cover on that flank. After the capture of the Muchai Peak the force was halted, and the 5th and 1st Goorkhas ordered to occupy positions in front, the 5th furnishing the advance picquets. The conduct of all the troops concerned was admirable, and gave great satisfaction to our gallant brigadier, whose talents have small scope with such an insignificant enemy to deal with. General Wilde was pleased to express his gratification in a division order at the success of the operations and the conduct of the troops, also to order the issue of an extra ration of rum to the whole of the men. The casualties up to the 9th amount to five men killed and thirty wounded.

Miscellaneous.

TRANSFER OF STATIONS.—The stations of Mymensing and Jamal-pore are transferred from the Sylhet to the Dacca Division.

LEAVES CANCELLED.—The fifteen months' leave to England on private affairs, granted to the undermentioned officers, is hereby cancelled:—Lieut. H. Latham, Royal Artillery; Major C. H. E. Greame, 104th Foot.

ARRIVALS FROM ENGLAND.—The undermentioned officer has reported his return from England:—Major G. J. D. Hay, Bengal Staff Corps, Paymaster, Trans-Ravee Circle, Rawul Pindce, date of arrival at Bombay Sept. 11, 1868.

	Chests.	Average.	Proceeds.
Behar ...	2,300	Rs. 1,390.8.84	Rs. 32,02,850
Benares ...	1,700	1,367.11.9	23,25,150

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.—The rumour that the Governor General and the Commander-in-Chief go to Peshawur this season gains credence; and likewise the report that the Ameer Shere Ali Khan is to come down to meet the Viceroy.

NEW MEMBER OF COUNCIL.—The Governor-general is pleased to nominate Maharajah Sir Dirg Bejye Sing Bahadoor, K.C.S.I., of Bulrampore, in Oudh, to be an Additional Member of the Council of the Governor-general, for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations only.

NAGPORE MUNICIPAL COMMITTEE.—The Officiating Chief Commissioner is pleased to approve of the election of the following gentlemen as members of the Nagpore Municipal Committee, in addition to those published in Notification No. 1,973, dated June 24, 1868:—8th Division.—Mr. T. Smith and Mr. G. Law.

EDUCATIONAL.—The Rev. R. Hoskins, of the American Methodist Mission, is appointed to be a member of the Local Educational Committee for the district of Bijour.

21ST NATIVE INFANTRY.—The undermentioned officers are appointed to do duty with the 21st Native Infantry, and directed to join:—Lieutenant Wallace, Staff Corps, attached to the 14th Native Infantry; Lieutenant Reid, General List, Infantry, late Assistant District Superintendent of Police, Kirwee.

PROGRESS OF CIVILISATION.—Civilisation is certainly making progress in India. We positively saw a respectable native the other day smoking a clay pipe—this is an advance on the hubble-bubble, and no mistake! The next thing we expect to hear of is, that every native female of any position has started a croquet ground.—Indian Public Opinion.

LIBERALITY OF MAHARAJAH SINDIAH.—The Maharajah Sindiah, before leaving Gwalior for the Punjab, set aside Rs. 300,000 for the employment and relief of those of his tenantry who might be suffering from dearth. Two great tanks are to be undertaken at once in the neighbourhood of the capital, so that labour may be ready for all who choose to work.—Friend of India.

BENGAL SUBORDINATE EXECUTIVE SERVICE.—The following officers of the Subordinate Executive Service are promoted from the fifth to the fourth grade, with effect from Oct. 1, viz.:—Mr. Sevestre, vice Baboo Rannarain Samcodar, retired. The following officer of the Subordinate Executive Service is promoted, with effect from Oct. 2, vice Mr. Ross, deceased:—To the second grade: Mr. Tweedie.

RATHER TOO VINDICTIVE.—The widow of one Ahmed Saheb, a rebel, who was hanged in Oudh during the mutiny, and whose property was confiscated, lately petitioned Government for some pecuniary assistance, as she was in a destitute condition. The Government replied that it did not feel at all bound to support the widow of a rebel whose death had been caused by his own traitorous conduct.

CENTRAL PROVINCES.—The following orders in the Central Provinces have been published, dated October 9:—Messrs. Venning and Steel, appointed to be Assistant Commissioners in the Central Provinces by Government of India Notification No. 1,689, dated Oct. 2, 1868, are posted to the Jubbulpore and Narsinghpore districts respectively.

CIVIL ENGINEER DEPARTMENT.—The undermentioned gentlemen, who have been appointed Probationary Civil Engineers by the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for India, having reported their arrival at Madras, are posted at follows:—Mr. Turner, Godavery District; Mr. Grant, Madras District; Mr. Hughes, Tinnevely District.

FEROZE SHAH.—We are assured that Feroze Shah actually found his way as far as Cabul, but that Sher Ali Khan refused him permission to remain there. The Ameer capitulated with the duties of hospitality by presenting him with money and horses, and then packed him off to Beloochistan by way of Candahar.—Pioneer, Oct. 19.

LORD MAYO.—The Feroze steamer left Calcutta for Suez on the 10th October, to be in readiness for the Right Hon. the Earl of Mayo, the Viceroy elect. It may be mentioned that the Bourke family, to which his lordship belongs, is a branch of the house of Clanricarde, springing from David Bourke, of Monycrower, co. Mayo, whose son was a captain of horse in Ireland in 1641.

ASSAM.—We are glad to learn that the results of the past season in Assam are of the most satisfactory character, as far as the crops are concerned. The heavy rains have caused some slight disasters, and the rice plants have suffered from the ravages of an insect, but the whole of the aus had been cut and stored, and there were prospects of an excellent shulce crop. The sugarcane was good in all the districts.

STAFF CORPS EXAMINATION COMMITTEE, PUNJAB.—The following Punjab notification is published:—Mr. Baden Powell, Judge of the Small Cause Court, Lahore, is nominated President of the Committee appointed to conduct the half-yearly examination of officers seeking admission to the Staff Corps, vice Mr. C. W. W. Alexander, proceeded on leave; and Lieutenant L. Conway-Gordon is appointed an additional member of the said committee.

THE SONTAL PERGUNNAHS.—The following Sub-Assistant Commissioners in the Sontal Pergunnahs are posted to the places mentioned, viz.:—Messrs. Fraser to Nulla, in Deoghur; Rattray to Deoghur; and White to Pakour. Mr. Rattray to be an Assistant to the Deputy Commissioner of the Chittagong Hill Tracts, and to have charge of the sub-division of Sungoo. Mr. Rattray is vested with the powers of a Magistrate, Deputy-Collector, and Moonsiff, and the power of an Assistant Superintendent of Police in the Chittagong Hill Tracts.

PENSION.—The undermentioned non-commissioned officers and men of the European Artillery and Infantry Invalid Battalion, having been pronounced by a Medical Committee to be unfit for further duty, are disposed of as follows:—To be sent to Europe recommended for pension:—Bombardier Higgins, Gunners Clarke, Boulton and Gleeson, Artillery; and Privates Power and Goggan, Infantry. To remain in India recommended for pension:—Corporal Preston, Infantry. Hospital Apprentice Adams, of the Subordinate Medical Department, is dismissed the service for misconduct.

EX-KING OF OUDH.—In consequence of the continual claims that are set up by the ex-King of Oudh for increased allowances and compensation, it has been finally decided that such claims cannot be allowed, as it was owing to his conduct that the revenues of Oudh were not collected during the mutiny.—Englishman.

CHARCOAL CAGES.—As a sanitary precaution the following military order has been issued from the Quartermaster General's Department. The following extracts of a letter from the Government of India in the Military Department, to the Quartermaster General, No. 204, dated the 11th of September, 1868, is published for general information and guidance:—"The Right Honourable the Governor General in Council approves of the discontinuance of the use of charcoal 'cages' in the upper stories of the new pattern barracks of European troops, as proposed by the Inspector General of Hospitals her Majesty's British Forces."

AN INDIAN MEDICAL BLUE BOOK.—The circumstance has frequently been noticed that although the Indian Medical Service consists of nine hundred members, it publishes no Blue-book of medical practice similar to that which annually records the energy and zeal of army surgeons serving with the British forces throughout the world. The Inspector-General of Hospitals in Bengal has now, however, the Friend tells us, done a duty to the public as well as to his service in the announcement that, on and after next New Year's day, his office will publish a Blue-book containing all the valuable portions of the periodical documents submitted to it, under three heads, to be termed "Indian Army Medical Department, Statistical Sanitary and Medical Reports."

THE CUSTOMS DEPARTMENT.—We are glad to hear that the recommendation forwarded last year by Mr. Campbell, when Chief Commissioner, to the Supreme Government for an increase of pay of the lower grades of the customs department in these provinces, has been backed by Mr. Hume, and that Government consider it desirable that this measure should not be restricted to one locality, and have therefore suggested that the revision of salaries in the customs department, with a view to such general increase to the pay of each grade as the increase of the cost of necessaries of life may have rendered necessary, be entrusted to some officer whom the Government may select for this important duty, and in the meantime the opinion of the North-West and the Punjab Governments has been asked as to the necessity for a general increase of salaries in their division of the line.—Central India Times.

BRIDGING THE HOOGHLY.—The Government of Bengal has published a mass of correspondence on the subject of bridging the Hooghly. The conclusion is this, that the Secretary of State has been recommended by the Government of India to carry out its former plan of a railway bridge near Armenian Ghat by means of a new company, with a low-level railway along the river to Chitpore for a goods station, Sealdah being the united passenger station. Failing that the Government of India makes the extraordinary suggestion of a railway bridge at or near Chogda on the Hooghly to join the Eastern Bengal Railway with the East India near Pundooa. Meanwhile Messrs. Bradford, Leslie and Granville are encouraged to try the tentative plan of a floating bridge at Armenian Ghat, to cost about £150,000. This was broached years ago by Captain Dicey, who is about to return to India.—Friend of India.

PAY OF A SOLDIER ON RE-ENGAGEMENT.—In directing attention to Clause 10, Section 49, of War Office Circular, No. 8, of 1st September, 1867, published in G.G.O., No. 1,081, of 21st November last, and in which it was prescribed that the additional penny a day granted to men who have re-engaged for a second period of service since 1st April, 1867, or who shall hereafter so re-engage, is issuable from the date on which they severally have engaged or shall engage to complete a total period of twenty-one years' service, the Right Honourable the Governor General in Council is pleased to declare that, under the operation of that order, the additional penny a day is admissible to any British soldier of her Majesty's service from date of re-engagement to complete twenty-one years' service whether under the Army Enlistment Act of 1847, on completing the first term of service, or under the Army Enlistment Act of 1867, on the completion of at least two-thirds of the first term of his enlistment.

THE PRESERVATION OF FISH.—A correspondence has been going on in reference to the preservation of fish in inland rivers between the Officiating Secretary to the Government of Bengal and Assistant Surgeon J. A. Purefoy Colles, M.D., H.C.S., Natural History Secretary to the Asiatic Society of Bengal. Dr. Colles expresses an opinion that the probable effect of anicuts on weirs, in connection with irrigation works, across large weir heads, will be a rapid destruction of many kinds of fish, leading eventually to total extermination, by interfering with their spawning in the accustomed localities, and driving them to accumulate in large numbers below the weirs, where they are not only captured by man, but are exposed to the attacks of crocodiles and predacious fish. The council of the society also suggest the appointment of a qualified naturalist to visit the mouths of the rivers in question, and to report on the subject, or that information be called for from the local authorities. The council further express an opinion that the inquiry suggested would disclose such a wanton destruction of fish as to justify legislation on the subject.—Englishman.

THE COLES.—On the 10th September last, at the earnest request of readers interested in the civilisation of the Coles of Chota Nagpore, we brought their condition as described by the last Missionary Report before the public. We quoted from an authority on the spot a confirmation of the statements of that report, written a few days before, and containing this remark:—"I fear they will emigrate en masse, or there will be an insurrection if the injury is not soon to have an end." We blamed nobody, but asked, "What are the real facts of the case?" Having ascertained them in the course of the next fortnight, we showed from official documents, on 24th September, that the serious character of the discontent had attracted the attention of Mr. Grey and the Government of India, and announced that an Act was to be passed to enable the former to stop oppression. The Englishman to-day, more than a month after the publication of our first remarks, which dates the 10th instant, and ignoring the subsequent explanation, pronounces the fear expressed by the missionaries as quoted by us from their report and letter, "the myth of an overheated imagination." It is not so considered by Government, and a less wrong caused the Sonthal war.—Friend of India.

CIVIL FURLOUGHS.—The following civil servants were granted furloughs in October on m.c. under new rules:—Lieut.-Colonel Davies, Judicial Commissioner of Chota Nagpore thirty days' leave, preparatory to Europe; Mr. Purser, Assistant Commissioner, will carry on the business of Deputy Commissioner of Kurnaul during the absence of Captain Parsons; furlough to Europe, with the usual subsidiary leave to enable him to reach the port of embarkation, is granted to Mr. Forbes, Magistrate and Collector of Meerut, from the 19th ultimo; Mr. Hamilton, Officiating District Superintendent of Police, Belaspore, is allowed one year's leave of absence under the Uncovenanted Service leave of absence rules; Mr. W. Le F. Robinson, Officiating Commissioner of Rajshahye Division, is allowed the usual subsidiary leave preparatory to proceeding to Europe; Mr. Dodgson, q.s., reported his departure from India per steamship Surat, which was left at sea by the pilot on the 28th Sept.; Mr. W. Le F. Robinson, Officiating Commissioner of Rajshahye, is allowed a furlough for two years, under section 8, clause a, of the revised Covenanted Service Absentee Rules.

THE DISTRESS IN SOUTHERN BENGAL.—Mr. Chapman's treatment of the distress in the districts to the south of Calcutta, as stated by himself in papers published in the Calcutta Gazette, savours somewhat of the Orissa mistakes. On the 4th August he preferred to trust the representations of Zemindars who declared the distress trifling to the "decided opinion" of the Church of England and dissenting missionaries, that "immediate and considerable measures of relief in the way of providing artificial labour should be taken." Heavy rain fell, and the result was that no provision had been made for relief when, on 1st September, Mr. Chaplain was led to write thus:—"There seems no doubt at all that, on the whole, a great calamity has now overtaken the population, and this at a time when, weakened by former troubles, they are but little able to resist it. The area of distress I must now estimate at some 700 square miles, and the population at about 200,000." There was the same vacillation as to the conduct and the duties of the Zemindars, but even Mr. Chapman is at last driven to this conclusion—"It is a simple fact, and a fact which does not certainly redound to the credit of the landlords as a class, that the ryots as a body show little or no confidence in their forbearance or generosity; and it is a fact too that these feelings of the ryots have been communicated to other classes, both European and native, not connected with the land."

ECCLESIASTICAL FEES.—The following order issued by the Government of India, in the Home Department, is published:—His Excellency the Governor General in Council has been pleased to make the following rules in regard to the levy of Ecclesiastical fees throughout India, and they are published for general information:—I. No fee will be charged for the performance of the rite of baptism or burial, or for the registration of the performance of these offices. II. In addition to the fee for the Surrogate's license, a fee of Rs. 10 shall be charged on all marriages by license, except the marriages of officers and others in the Military or Naval Service of her Majesty. III. The fee for the Surrogate's license shall be Rs. 50 both at the Presidency towns and in the interior. No fee will be charged on marriages by banns. IV. When registers are searched, and copy of any entry given, a fee of one rupee shall be charged for the first year [the first year shall be taken to mean any one year indicated by the applicant] and four annas for every additional year over which the search may extend, as well as a fee of one rupee for the certificate: soldiers, sailors, and non-commissioned and petty officers being exempted from payment. V. A fee of one rupee for every square foot of ground occupied shall be charged for the construction of any masonry grave in burial grounds under the charge of Government, and these fees shall form a fund for keeping the burial ground in order, except in Calcutta and Bombay, where they will be credited to Government. VI. A fee of double the amount imposed on a masonry grave shall be levied on the erection of a monument (other than a simple headstone, for which no fee will be taken) in the burial ground, and a fee of Rupees 75 on a faculty for the erection of a monument in any church.

CIVIL LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following leave of absence to civil servants were granted in October, on medical certificate, under new rules:—Mr. Raban, Officiating Magistrate and Collector of Pooree, for one month, Section XVIII. of the Covenanted Service Absentee Rules, from 25th October; Mr. Platts, District Superintendent of Police, Dacca, for two months, from the 15th October; Mr. Carnegie, late Officiating Deputy Commissioner of the Cossyah and Jynteah Hills, for two months from 8th November; Mr. Grant, Assistant Superintendent of Police, 24-Pergunnahs, for two months, from the 11th September; Mr. Bamber, District Superintendent of Police, Bograh, for one month, from 3rd October; Mr. Ellis, Officiating Extra Assistant Commissioner, Nowgong, for one month; Mr. Bainbridge, Magistrate and Collector of Bardwan, for one month; Major Sherer, Deputy Commissioner of Kaurroop, for one month from 1st October, or any other date from which he has availed himself of the leave; Mr. Peppe, Sub-Deputy Opium Agent of Tehta, for one month, from 15th October (Mr. Peppe will make over charge of his office to the Sub-Deputy Opium Agent of Gya; privilege leave of absence for three months to Captain Rose, Assistant Engineer, attached to the Meerut Division, Public Works. Captain Rose availed himself of the leave on the 31st August last. Lieutenant-Colonel Snow, Deputy Commissioner, Baitool, availed himself of the subsidiary leave granted to him, dated 11th September, on 1st October, making over charge of his office to Captain Lugard, Officiating Deputy Commissioner; one month's privilege leave is granted to Dr. Cutcliffe, Officiating Superintendent, Government Press, N.W. Provinces, from the 14th September; one month's privilege leave to Mr. Pemberton, Civil Assistant, 4th grade, 3rd division, Revenue Survey, Central Provinces; Lieutenant Boileau, R.E., Assistant Engineer, 1st grade, Rajpootana, is allowed leave of absence on medical certificate till the 30th November, 1868, in extension; Mr. Adam, Assistant Engineer, 1st grade, attached to the 1st Presidency Division, for five weeks; Mr. Godfrey, Deputy Magistrate and Deputy Collector of Howrah, for one and a half months, from the 1st November; the portion of the two month's privilege leave of absence granted to Mr. Palmer, Magistrate and Collector of Bijour, remaining to be taken on the date on which he rejoins his appointment, is cancelled; three months special leave of absence on urgent private affairs is granted to Mr. Palmer, Magistrate of Bijour, together with thirty days subsidiary leave; Mr. King, Sub-Deputy Opium Agent of Shahabad, for one month, from any date not later than the 15th October.

MILITARY FURLOUGHS, &c.—The following officers obtained furlough to Europe, &c., under the new rules:—Lieut.-colonel Green, Bengal Infantry, doing duty at Umballa, to Simla, Lucknow, and Calcutta, from November 23, 1868, to January 23, 1869, in extension, preparatory to retiring from the service; Major Jenkins, Officiating Commandant 1st Bengal Cavalry, to Calcutta, for one month; Lieut. Bax, Officiating 3rd Squadron Officer 11th Bengal Cavalry, to Bombay, from October 11 to November 10; Captain (Brevet Major) Harrison, R.A., to remain in England, on urgent private affairs, in extension, from December 3, 1868, to March 3, 1869; 2nd Captain Battiscombe, R.A., via Egypt, from date of embarkation; Veterinary Surgeon Cheesman, R.A., overland, from date of embarkation; Lieutenant Bogue, 49th Foot, twelve months, from November 1; Major Palmer, 90th Foot, overland, from date of embarkation; Captain Perryn, 90th Foot, for fifteen months, from date of embarkation; Captain Coote, 26th Foot, overland, from date of embarkation; the nomination of Captain Haynes, 93rd Foot, to proceed to England, for depot duty, is cancelled, and Captain Wood will proceed home for depot duty instead; Captain Impey, Political Agent, Marwar, for two years, from Bombay; Major Taylor, 8th N.I., to Calcutta, instead of Bombay, on the leave granted him September 28 last, from October 1 to November 1; Major Cox, Sub-Assistant Commissary-general, from October 15, 1868; Quartermaster Gurnsey, 45th Foot, to England, overland, from date of embarkation; Sub-Conductor Busher, Overseer, Stud Department, for one month; Major Wheeler, 35th N.I., to remain at Simla until December 31; Mr. Gordon, Superintendent of Telegraphs, Sindh Division, for three months, in extension of the twelve months' leave granted him Aug. 27 last. The undermentioned officers have reported their departure on the dates specified opposite to their names (October 9):—Lieutenant Jones, General List, Infantry, September 14; Major Hyndman, Bengal Staff Corps, September 28; Lieut.-colonel Watson, Commandant 11th Regiment N.I., for two years.

DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS WITH KABUL.—The explanation of the telegram we published a few days ago to the effect that the Viceroy, in reply to Shere Ali, had expressed himself favourable to the establishment of full diplomatic relations with Afghanistan, is as follows. Very recently, and just about the time a north-west contemporary had been informed that Shere Ali had, in open durbar, expressed himself to the purport that British alliance was worth nothing, as the British would help nobody but themselves, there arrived at the Head Quarters of the Government of India a letter from the Ameer such as the Viceroy of Hindustan might receive, and even regard as complimentary, expressive of the writer's (the Ameer's) wish to stand on good terms with the powerful Government of India, and for the establishment of full diplomatic relations between Afghanistan and the Empire of India. The Viceroy's reply, penned by himself and translated into Persian, has been of a very favourable character. It has always been the wish of the Government of India to see a strong Government established in Afghanistan, and to be on cordial terms of friendship with that Government. Such an alliance is not undesired by the Government of India, and could not work otherwise than to the material and political advantages of Afghanistan. The Amcer Shere Ali, the purport of the Viceroy's letter is understood to have run, is now ruler of Afghanistan, and his opponents are prostrate before him, or fugitive. Mercy towards them would, in the British Viceroy's opinion, conduce to the repute of the Amcer Shere Ali's career and reign. The inference is—we now speak for ourselves—that if Shere Ali can show himself capable of permanently retaining his present position and power in Afghanistan, he may reckon on having accorded him by the Government of India all that valuable and material support, short of actual military interposition, which a great power may with dignity afford to an humble neighbour. Were, however, that neighbour menaced by other European power, the probability is the menace to him would be at once regarded as menace to England, and—but there is no occasion to tell our readers how England would act if menaced, especially in the East. There is, however, not the slightest real ground for assuming that any such menace is, or has been, contemplated. The mis-called policy of "masterly inactivity" therefore continues—at least such is our impression—the policy of the Government of India. That policy is, however, instead of really being one of "inactivity," neither more nor less than the policy most becoming a powerful empire, which, confident in its own strength, and ever watchful and ready, can afford to decline to recognise canards as truth, or to exhibit agitation or fluster when there is not the slightest occasion for either.—Indian Daily News.

MADRAS CIVIL SERVICE.—The undermentioned members of the Madras Covenanted Civil Service attained the rank of fourth class, Oct. 7:—Messrs. Walker, Burnell, Grose, Wilson and Foster.

TRANSFERS OF ROYAL ARTILLERY OFFICERS.—H.E. the C. in C. in India has sanctioned the following transfers of officers of Royal Artillery, pending the approval of H.R.H. the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief:—Second Capt. Hoyes, from No. 5, about to become No. 7 (officers) battery, to No. 7, about to become No. 5 battery, 23rd brigade Royal Artillery; Second Captain Hastings, from the latter to the former battery; Lieut. Twynam, from A to No. 5 battery, about to become No. 7 battery, 23rd brigade, Royal Artillery; and Lieut. Palmer, from the latter to the former battery.

EXAMINATIONS.—The following officers have passed examinations:—Lieut. Lockhart, Royal Artillery, Madras, has passed the elementary test in Telooogo; Ensign Porteus, 21st Fusiliers, passed ditto in Tamil; Lieut. MacClaverty, Royal Artillery, Bangalore, has passed the elementary test in Canarese (October). The undermentioned officers have passed the elementary test in the Telooogo language:—Captain Swiney, Staff Corps, Kamptee; Lieut. Bradshaw, Staff Corps, Kamptee; Lieut. Stainforth, general list, Kamptee; Assistant Surgeon Stewart, Bengal Establishment, has passed the lower standard examination in the Hindustanee language.

THE MYSORE COMMISSION.—The Bangalore Herald publishes a list of the men of different castes and religions employed in the Mysore Commission. It seems there are twenty-three Europeans, from chief commissioner to magistrate, three East Indians, one a sub-magistrate, the other two amildars, one native Christian, an assistant superintendent, eighty-two Hindoos, ranging from assistant superintendents to amildars, and eighteen Mussulmans, making a total in all of one hundred and twenty-seven. Hindoos are by far the most largely employed. There are only five more Europeans than Mahomedans; East Indians and native Christians are at a discount, there only being four of them in the Commission.

THE COMMISSARIAT.—The following promotions are made in the Commissariat Department:—Lieutenant-colonel A. J. P. Ewart, Deputy Assistant Commissary-general, 1st Class, to act as Assistant Commissary-general, 2nd Class; Major B. F. Heysham, Deputy Assistant Commissary-general, 2nd Class, to act as Deputy Assistant Commissary-general, 1st Class; Major R. Q. Mainwaring, Sub-assistant Commissary-general, 1st Class, to act as Deputy Assistant Commissary-general, 2nd Class; and Lieut. E. A. Bruce, Sub-assistant Commissary-general, acting 2nd Class, to act as Sub-assistant Commissary-general, 1st Class—during the absence on sick certificate of Major H. P. Hawkes, acting Assistant Commissary-general, 2nd Class, from 17th September, 1868.

THE DHOBBIE'S COMPLAINT.—To "MADRAS TIMES."—Honored Sir, —Master please putting favour on me poor Madras Dobbie man, cause I plenty poor man and much trouble got since ladies done stop crinoline. Dress now got plenty long behind, and when Missis walk catching too much dirt, and so poor Dobbie man having plenty trouble making clean. Soap werry dear now not like before. I making Mootama (my first missis now plenty old woman, got nother) beat plenty hard on stone but never coming proper clean. When I taking home missis say, Dobbie, you plenty bad lazy man: look this dress—I buy new Madame Leggett shop one year ago; plenty hole now got and much dirty. What I can say? I poor man large family man; long dress fashion not stop; how I get rice for belly? Missis ayah my relation only she telling that Missis saying that reason dress too much dirty cause when walking with Gentleman's beach band stand Cupid's Bow that road never clean. Colonel Dennison—Master very big gentleman please writing one chit to Honorable Colonel Dennison, &c., &c., telling please make that road little good than now. Few coolie mans soon make proper same like what my brother, who got service in big gentleman's house Calcutta, say band stand road got that country. Please master dont forget—CUNDASAWMY, his + mark.—If master do this, I wash for master.

OOTACAMUND.—The Ootacamund water project and reclamation schemes have been already taken in hand by the Commissioner of the Neigherry Hills. With regard to the former, we learn that the general direction of the line of the works for the water project north of the lake is as follows:—Starting from the reservoir on the north-western slope of the Chub Hill, the line runs easterly towards North Downs' Saddle, thence due south towards St. Stephen's Church, thence due west towards Syk's Hotel. The average breadth of land required will be about sixteen feet. The water project, south of the lake, is as follows:—Starting from the reservoir on Dodabetta, the line of the channel will run due west to the Elk Hill Aqueduct, thence in a westerly direction to the end of the lake. The average breadth of land required will be about sixteen feet. The general direction of the reclamation project works will extend on one side of the market bridge, in a south-westerly direction, towards the head of the lake, where the average breadth of the land required will be about 500 feet. From the head of the lake, still in a south-westerly direction, up the Willow Bund, a strip of land on each side of the lake, about 150 feet in width, will be required. Then again on the other side of the market bridge, in a north-easterly direction, as far as the back yard of the Carrying Company's premises, a strip of land of an average width of sixty feet on both sides of the water supply channel will be required. The Government have declared the said lands to be lands required for public purposes, and have directed the Commissioner to take the necessary measures for the acquisition of the said lands.—Madras Times.

MILITARY FURLOUGHS.—Assistant Surgeon White, 1st Foot, proceeding to England on medical certificate, will take charge from Madras of the invalids from presidency, Mysore, and Burmah circles to Bombay, per overland route; Assistant Surgeon Walker, 19th Foot, is directed to accompany the invalids from Bangalore and join the party from Madras at Jollapett doing duty under Assistant Surgeon White, from thence to Bombay (this cancels so much of G.O. as refers to Assistant Surgeon Walker); Lieutenant Fletcher, Royal Artillery, to England, via the Cape, fit to do duty with troops; Lieutenant-Colonel Cuming, Staff Corps, has leave from September 22 to March 22, 1869, to Bangalore and Nilgcherries, furlough regulations of 1868 (this cancels that officer's appointment of September 18 as officiating 2nd in command and wing officer 11th N.I.); Lieut. Huddart, Royal Artillery, has leave from August 14 to February 14, 1869. The undermentioned officers are permitted to proceed to Europe:—Major Ramsay, Staff Corps, Military Assistant to the Commissioner of Mysore, on furlough for two years, under the regulations of 1868, and to embark from Madras; Lieutenant Mackenzie, Staff Corps, Additional Assistant Superintendent in the Province of Coorg, Mysore Commission, on furlough for two years, and to embark from Madras; the leave granted to the Rev. R. Firth, M.A., Chaplain of Aurangabad, to proceed to Europe on furlough, and notified in the Gazette of the 1st September, will commence from the 19th December next, or date of his embarkation from Bombay.

THE RAILWAY FROM COIMBATORE TO THE FOOT OF THE GHATS.—The crisis is past; Ootacamund is looking up; we have been unjustly written down as unhealthy; our shortcomings have been magnified, and our downfall predicted; still, we believe that Ootacamund will always be the most popular sanitarium in India. We have now a commissioner, laborious, earnest and popular. The reclamation scheme is to be at once carried out; the Municipal Committee, reorganised and taught by past failures, is beginning to do its duty; an Agri-Horticultural Society is in course of formation; the new library hastens to completion; the Philharmonic Society has just shown us how completely it has established itself. We have good schools; a flourishing club; a bank, and an abundance of shops; and we cannot see any reason to doubt the truth of this assertion, that during the last seven years the progress of the town has been real and rapid. Coffee planting, though it has disappointed those who expected to make large fortunes without experience or effort, is extending itself on sound principles, and with ever increasing probabilities of substantial and enduring success. We really want but one thing, and that is that the access to the hills should be made as easy as possible. We think it desirable, on public grounds, that the heads of many departments in Madras should be able to make this their residence for some months, at least, in every year. Energy of mind is closely connected with bodily strength and vigour. The men upon the healthy action of whose brains the good conduct of affairs depends, ought to live in the climate most favourable to the full exercise of all their powers. That climate is not the climate of Madras during a large portion of the year. It is bad economy to waste our public men. The military establishment at Wellington renders a speedy access to the hills a matter of economy and necessity. This railway would render troops at Wellington almost as effective as if they were in Madras. Those who visit Ootacamund are often in weak health, and the real hardships of the present journey from the Pothanur Station at Ootacamund materially lessen the chances of their recovery. Lives, we verily believe, are lost every year in consequence of the most trying transit from the Coimbatore Station to this place. This railway is essential to the Nilagiris as a sanitarium. The able and instructive report we publish from Major Shaw Stewart demonstrates:—(1) The ease with which the line can be constructed; (2) the certainty of a fair amount of traffic; (3) and the economical advantages of the scheme. The immediate effect would be to give an immense impulse to the trade of the districts lying at the foot of the hills. Supplies would pour into the hill stations. Provisions would become cheaper. The military establishments at Wellington, and that most important institution, the Lawrence Asylum, would gain immensely, and thus the Government would effect a large annual saving. Of course the railway to the foot of the hills will lead to better arrangements for ascending the hills, a matter which the splendid new Coonoor Ghat renders easy. Twenty hours of easy transit ought to bring a traveller from Madras to the door of Mr. Syk's hotel. There are matters of great imperial importance; but for this presidency the two works of the greatest immediate necessity are the Madras Breakwater and the railway from Coimbatore to the foot of the Nilagiri Hills.—South of India Observer.

MUSCAT.

On the return of H.M.S. Vigilant to Kurrachee, after demolishing the fort of Bahrein and restoring quiet among the hoary-headed pirates in that neighbourhood, she found a telegram awaiting her, to the effect that nothing but her presence could save Muscat from falling into the hands of a horde of rebels from the interior. These rebels, all of them Wahabees, were led by one Azau-bin-Ghes, a brother-in-law of the Sultan, who has never ceased since the murder of old Syud Thoweyne to agitate and fight for the overthrow of Syud Selim, the murderer and parricide. Colonel Pelly, therefore, seeing that the revolt was a serious one, and demanded his immediate presence, requested Captain Brown to return with him to the Gulf. Uninviting as the voyage was to either officers or men, Captain Brown gave orders to get steam up, and sailed for Muscat. On rounding the group of rocks known as the Fisherman's, on the 3rd October, they could see that all was bustle and excitement in the bay. Thither, in boats and buggalows of all sorts and sizes, had fled the greater part of the population, till the storm of war should blow over the town. The Sind and Sir Hugh Rose were there, watching the course of events, and glad were they to see the Vigilant, for matters had now been in a desperate state for three days, and the Sultan had lost all except two forts, from which the flag of Oman drooped despondingly. So cordially hated was Syud Selim, that Muscat fell without a struggle, although a few trusty soldiers might have held the approaches against fearful odds. Selim had barely time to flee to the nearest fort for safety; the news that his capital had fallen was about the first intimation he received of the insurrection. After long waiting, at last he saw the Vigilant arrive, and lost no time in getting on board, as soon as he could do so safely. Having, therefore, been let over the wall in a basket after dark, his Highness went on board and told Colonel Pelly his story. The relation concluded, the Colonel asked him what he expected the British to do for him. "Why, of course," he answered, "drive out my enemies and establish me once more on my throne." Colonel Pelly reviewed the story of his reign with him, with the object of showing him that he deserved no assistance of any kind, and concluded by saying that he would not use force to reinstate him, unless expressly ordered by the Government of India to do so. The Sind was despatched to Gwadar with a telegram asking for instructions, and in the meantime efforts were made to procure a suspension of hostilities till an answer should arrive;

but Azan-bin-Ghes had come there to fight, not to parley, and fight he would. Two guns, mounted 18-pounder siege pieces, presented by the English to Muscat, were what excited his immediate cupidity, and every effort was made by him to secure them. Syud Selim naturally desired to save these guns, and both Colonel Pelly and Captain Brown hoped he might be able to do so, else Muscat, if unsupported, must fall before the will of either the Bombay Government or the Government of India could be known. Desperate as the situation looked for the Sultan, his Highness had not yet lost heart, or, perhaps, we should rather say, had not given up bragadocio; he still intended "to recover the town by force of arms," or, more probably, tried to make himself appear brave by saying so. Consequently, he gave Colonel Pelly to understand that the sooner British subjects betook themselves on board ship the safer they would be, as "the ball was just about to begin." Thus warned, British subjects were removed, the rebel chiefs being informed that they could be regarded merely as rebels so long as Syud Selim was Sultan, and that if in their attempt to depose him they caused loss of life or property to any one under British protection, the British would hold them responsible, and would exact the fullest reparation. To show that Colonel Pelly meant what he said, the Vigilant steamed closer in shore, so as the better to protect the shipping, and command the town and the approaches to the forts.

On the 5th, Colonel Pelly and Captain Brown went ashore to the Residency, and succeeded in inducing Azan-bin-Ghes to come to an interview. Azan is a man of most forbidding aspect, and all that we know of him strengthens the belief that his face is a fair index of his character—cruel, unscrupulous, and cunning, yet manifesting a strange blindness to his true interests; just the sort of man who never adopts a straight course if a crooked one is open to him. Coarse and cruel as his features are, his heart is even more so. The probability is he looked upon this interview as a gigantic farce, and came prepared to get all he could, but give nothing. Be that as it may, he went away impressed with the conviction that, whatever there might be about himself, there was no humbug about Colonel Pelly, and that his warning regarding British traders had better be respected. There was, therefore, no more firing that day. In the matter of the 18-pounders, however, he evidently did not admit the right of Colonel Pelly, Captain Brown, or any one else to interfere; so, though he promised to return an answer after consultation with his co-rebels, before attempting to seize these guns, he sent no answer whatever, but got possession of one of them in the dark, and before morning had it in position to batter the fort in which the Sultan had taken refuge.

It was, however, determined by the British authorities that Azan should not be allowed to do altogether as he liked, and that, promise or no promise, the fort should be safe till receipt of instructions from Simla. The guns of the Hugh Rose and the Vigilant were loaded and pointed at the approaches to the forts, and, all the traders having now evacuated the town, a rocket party, consisting of twenty men from the Vigilant, under Lieutenant Bainbridge, was sent into the fort, provided with Hales' rockets. The tubes having been got well into position, Lieutenant Bainbridge commenced to show the Wahabees such a pyrotechnic display as effectually prevented their approaching the fort, or attempting to carry off the gun under its walls. Every rocket fell exactly in front of the gun, injuring no one, but showing the rebels how futile would be any attempt to "crown the work" that night. The object for which the marines went ashore having been accomplished, they returned on board ship in the morning; and by-and-by the Sind appeared, bringing from Gwadur the Bombay Government's answer to Colonel Pelly's reference for instructions. This answer was to the effect that no more force was to be wasted in support of Syud Selim, but that for the future he must make his own arrangements for the maintenance of his power. This he tried to do, and for a few hours almost believed he had succeeded; but a few hours more convinced him of his mistake, and he was again compelled to take refuge on board the Vigilant. While he was there relating how nearly success had been his, and how villainously the cut-throats from the interior had treated him, the booming of guns from the fort announced his formal deposition, and that Azan-bin-Ghes reigned in his stead. Hereupon his Highness burst into an immoderate fit of laughter, declaring that the rebel chiefs would soon appreciate the absurdity of their present proceedings as fully as he did, though to them it would be no laughing matter. He knew well what it was to rule in Oman; he knew too that there were dissensions already in their camp, and he by no means envied their positions. Resign he would not; he would pay an official visit to Bunder Abbas, and the more remote of his possessions, till the rebels had exterminated each other, as they must of necessity do, sooner or later. So he sailed on the 10th, in the Prince of Wales, for Bunder Abbas; and letters having been received from the Wahabee chiefs, assuring the British traders of every protection, as also a telegram from the Government of India confirming that of the Bombay Government, the Vigilant, with Colonel Pelly on board, sailed for Kurrachee. What will be the immediate future of Muscat it is impossible to say; but things cannot long remain as they are. The eyes of the people are all turned towards Bombay, to Syud Thoorkee, and he will restore peace to Oman, if any one can. The attachment of the people to him is not of yesterday's growth; and the Bombay Government would do well to remember this.—Condensed from the Times of India.

Miscellaneous.

H.M.'s 96TH FOOT.—We hear that the 96th Regiment has received the warning for embarkation at Bombay for Fort William on Monday, the 4th January next.—Deccan Herald, Oct. 19.

ARRIVALS FROM ENGLAND.—The undermentioned officers returned to duty, by permission of the Secretary of State for India, on the 10th October, 1868:—Major W. Y. H. Shortt, Staff Corps; Surgeon R. Dick, Bombay Medical Establishment.

H.M.'s 2ND GRENADIERS N.I.—This regiment, under the command of Lieut.-colonel McLeod, was to march from Sattara on the 20th October, en route for Poona, and would arrive there on Sunday, the 25th, to occupy the Royal Horse Artillery lines at Wanowrie, to be vacated by the 3rd Regiment N.I., on their departure by rail on the 28th and 29th inst., for Khundwah and Mhow.

H.M.'s 29TH REGIMENT N.I.—The following temporary arrangements are confirmed, with effect from the 10th October:—Captain Tanner to officiate as commandant, vice Major Nichollets, proceeding on furlough; Lieutenant Hogg to officiate as second in command, in addition to his own duties as quartermaster, vice Captain Tanner; Lieutenant Browne to officiate as wing officer, in addition to his own duties as adjutant, vice Lieutenant Hogg.

HORSE-PLAGUE AT POONA.—We have received accounts from Poona of the appearance at that station of a kind of fever among the horses there. Eighty-five horses of the 1st Madras Cavalry were attacked in a few days, and were at once separated from the rest. A large number of the horses of the 3rd Bombay Light Cavalry have been similarly attacked, and the disease has also made its appearance among those of the Artillery at Kirkee. The fever is not of a dangerous type, and appears to be of the same order as that from which the horses at Secunderabad have been suffering, which has apparently travelled steadily from east to west.—Times of India.

INVALIDS.—The invalids, time-expired men, &c., from General Depot, Poona, and Kurrachee Depot, with their families, embarked for England on board the troopship Euphrates on the 30th Sept. The following officers were appointed to do duty with the different detachments:—To command: Captain Kirkwood, 96th Foot. To do duty: Captain Thorburn, 2nd Battalion 21st Foot; Captain Deane, 1st Royals; Captain Cardew, 82nd Foot; Captain Hooke, 45th Foot; 2nd Captain Sturt, Royal Engineers; Lieutenant Gillespie, 96th Foot; Lieutenant Reeve, 45th Foot; Lieutenant Lindsay, 60th Rifles; Lieutenant Stradling, 60th Rifles. In medical charge: Surgeon-Major Leitch, M.D., 46th Regiment.

KATTIAWAR.—Two Kattiawar States, the Rajpoot dominion of Megnee and the Mussulman State of Umrapore, have been attached for terms of four and seven years respectively and fined Rs. 5,000 on account of aiding and abetting the outlaw Wagheers. The petty talookas of Lodheeka, Kherusra, and Kotaria have, for like offences, been reduced from fifth-class jurisdiction, and fined. The Karbharee of Wankaneer, for dereliction of duty on a similar occasion, was fined in the sum of Rs. 3,000. We hope in justice to the subjects of the attached States that they will be placed under Government management on the expiry of the term of attachment, for their former rulers will recoup themselves for the confiscated revenue.

PRESENTATION.—At the meeting of the Bombay Harbour and Pilotage Board, October 23, Mr. L. Reid, the president, on behalf of the board, presented a case of mathematical instruments to Mr. Jamsetjee Dhunjeebhoy Wadia, master-builder of her Majesty's Bombay Dockyard, in recognition of the services rendered to the board by him in supervising the repairs of the light vessels, pilot boats, schooners, &c. Mr. Reid in making the presentation referred in eulogistic terms to the services rendered by Mr. Jamsetjee. The instruments, which are of silver, and of the finest workmanship, were procured from Elliot, of London. On the case containing them there is the following inscription:—"Presented to Jamsetjee Dhunjeebhoy Wadia, Esq., Master-builder, her Majesty's Dockyard; in recognition of the valuable services he has rendered to the Bombay Harbour Pilotage Board. Bombay, 28th May, 1868."

THE DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.—Mr. J. B. Peile, Director of Public Instruction, will, we hear, probably not return to Bombay before the end of April next. His leave expires at the end of January, but he has asked for an extension of three months, which will no doubt be granted. Mr. Peile was educated at Oriel College, Oxford, where he gained an open scholarship. He took a first class in Moderations, a first class in Literæ Humaniores, and B.A. degree in December, 1855. In the summer of that year the first open competitive examination for the India Civil Service was held, twenty appointments being offered for competition. Among the candidates Mr. Peile stood tenth, and chose Bombay in preference to Bengal. In India he settled the claims of the Thakoor of Bhowmuggur in 1859; went to inquire into the state of the talookdars in 1860; was Under Secretary to Government in 1862; took up the administration of (Bombay) Act VI. of 1862 in 1863-4-5; and was appointed Registrar-general, and Commissioner for Revising Subordinate Establishments in May, 1866.—Times of India.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The undermentioned officers will appear before the General Examination Committee, to be assembled at the Town Hall, Bombay, on the 10th of October, for examination in the native languages as follows:—Urdu.—Lieutenant Mant, Royal Engineers. Hindoostanee.—Lieutenant Walter, 25th Regiment, N.L.I.; Lieutenant Smith, 49th Regiment; Ensign Chick, Officiating First Squadron Subaltern, M.S.C.; Lieutenant Owen, 3rd Light Cavalry. Persian.—Lieutenant Hogg, Poona Horse. Hindee.—Major Stuart, 1st Madras Light Cavalry. The undermentioned officer is reported to have passed an examination of the Hindee portion of the Hindustani test according to the higher standard:—Major Stuart, 1st Madras Light Cavalry. The undermentioned officers are reported to have passed the required examination in Hindustani, according to the lower standard:—Assistant-surgeon De Tatham, 26th Regiment N.I.; Assistant-surgeon Robinson, Royal Artillery; Barrack-serjeant King, Barrack Department; Serjeant Birley, 1st Foot; Private Goodings, 1st Foot; Quartermaster-serjeant Rowbottom, 2nd Foot; Lieut. Watson, 108th Foot.

ACCIDENT TO THE P. AND O. STEAMSHIP "BEHAR."—We regret to state that a serious accident happened on Oct. 15 to the P. and O. Co.'s steamship Behar. She had had new boilers placed in her in the P. and O. dock, at Mazagon, and was being towed to the mud bed at the north end of the yard, when owing to a cross tide or other cause, her head swerved round to the southward, and she ran upon a sharp rock which stove in the plating of her keelson amidship. Every effort was made to get her off, but unsuccessfully, and for three days she remained firmly fixed on the rock, which is situated at a distance of about two hundred yards from the shore. The ship lay on her starboard quarter with a heavy list, and as each tide rose, the water was deep in her hold,—so much so that her boilers were covered. The Behar was being taken to the mud for the purpose of having a new deck put in, and for repairs. She is a fine screw ship of 1,603 tons register, and 300 horse power. On the 18th the efforts made to plug her were successful. Plates were fastened over the hole made by the rock, so as to exclude the water, and after a good deal of trouble the ship was buoyed and moved from her dangerous position. The Behar was afterwards taken into the old P. and O. dock, where a survey had been commenced for the purpose of ascertaining the full extent for her injuries.

FURLONGS AND LEAVES OF ABSENCE.—The undermentioned officers have obtained leave of absence, subject to confirmation by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India:—Captain Huyshe, 49th Foot, to proceed to Europe on m.c.; Surgeon Major Fowler, 82nd Foot, to proceed to England by the overland route on m.c. These officers will, on arrival, report themselves to the Adjutant-General, Horse Guards. Surgeon-Major Fowler is available for duty with troops. Lieut.-Colonel James, Staff Corps, from September 26, 1868, to October 25, 1868, and Major Fairlie, 1st Regiment Madras Cavalry, from November 1, 1868, to November 30, 1868, on private affairs, preparatory to embarkation on furlough; Lieutenant Nicolson, General List, four months, from date of departure, on private affairs; Lieut.-Colonel Bivar, 1st Regiment Madras Light Cavalry, thirty days from date of departure, on private affairs, preparatory to embarkation on furlough; Assistant-Surgeon Robinson, 19th Brigade Royal Artillery, to England, via the Cape route, at the recommendation of the Standing Medical Committee, for the purpose of appearing before a medical board. This officer is available for duty with troops, and will, on arrival, report himself to the Adjutant-General, Horse Guards. Lieutenant Seton, 21st Brigade Royal Artillery, from September 15, 1868, to January 15, 1869, on the recommendation of a medical board. The furlough to Europe for two years, m.c., granted to Lieut.-Colonel Taylor, Madras Staff Corps, Inspector General of Police, Central Provinces, by G. O. No. 523, dated August 11, 1868, is under rule 15 of the Regulations of 1868. Lieut.-Colonel Walker, Superintendent of his Highness the Guicowar's Contingent, is allowed a furlough to Europe for two years, from the date of departure of the last mail steamer leaving Bombay in March, 1869, under rule 9 of the Regulations of 1868. The leave of absence on private affairs granted to Surgeon Major Mahaffy, M.D. and C.B., is extended for two months.

H.M.S. "VIGILANT."—We give elsewhere an account of the services of H.M.S. Vigilant among the pirates of Bahrein, and before Muscat. All will admit that great credit is due to Captain Brown, and his officers and men, for the efficient manner in which they performed the duty entrusted to them. But no one who has not been in the Gulf, in August and September, can appreciate the difficulties against which all had to contend. They one day found themselves cruising under a sun which "rains fire," in a ship which was never constructed for service in Eastern waters; and the next, out in open boats, demolishing some piratical stronghold. So trying is the climate of the Gulf to European constitutions during August and September, that the standing orders of the Admiralty prohibit ships of the Royal Navy from going there during those months. Besides this, the Vigilant had to encounter the full force of the monsoon on her voyage from Bombay to Kurrachee, a test which Captain Brown might easily have spared her, had he wished to shirk an unpleasant cruise, seeing that a committee appointed by Government to examine his vessel had pronounced her unseaworthy. In fact, so completely had white ants asserted their sway over the vessel, that there was hardly found a sound plank in her. Yet, with a certificate to that effect in his locker, Captain Brown got up steam, and was off to Kurrachee. Government told him there was pressing need for his services in the Persian Gulf, and rotten ship, heavy sea, and standing orders were alike ineffectual to retain him in harbour. The manner, too, in which he has performed the responsible duty entrusted to him, shows that he has executed his mission judiciously as well as zealously. We have all along entertained the opinion that a special service is required for these waters; but, special service or not, Colonel Pelly may consider himself lucky if he can always secure such a coadjutor as the Vigilant.—Times of India.

MILITARY ITEMS.—We (Times of India) learn from Malligum that the 10th and 12th Bengal Cavalry, now at that station, have received orders to march by squadrons, on alternate days, to Munmar, on or about the 2nd of November. From Munmar they will take rail to Nagpore, and thence march to Jubbulpore, en route for Sealkote and Umballa. These corps will probably unite at Nagpore, and march towards Jubbulpore at intervals of four days. It was originally intended that they should march to their destinations by the Grand Trunk Road, via Indore, Sippree, Gwalior, Agra, &c., but, in consequence of the famine of grass, grain, and water, in Central India, this plan has been abandoned.—Captain the Hon. Ralph Hare, now stationed at Kirkee, in command of the 5th Battery, 5th Brigade R.A. has been appointed second captain, A Brigade, Royal Horse Artillery vice Warren promoted. An exchange of brigades between Captain J. B. Hardy, 21st Brigade, and Captain W. Brown, 19th Brigade, has been sanctioned by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India, subject to the approval of H.R.H. the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief.—We hear from Mhow that the troops that were ordered to move in relief this cold season, in that division, now stand fast, owing to the scarcity prevailing in Rajpootana. The 2nd Battalion Royal Regiment stands last at Nusseerabad until next year, as do also the D Troop E Brigade R.H.A. at Mhow, ordered in relief to Nusseerabad. Major-general Adams, C.B., has been holding inspections of the Bays, 95th Regiment, and other corps, prior to his leaving on a tour of inspection to Neemuch, and other outstations under his command. The Maharajah Holkar is making preparations to give a grand entertainment to Col. Melville, C.S.I., on the occasion of his leaving Indore on leave to England.—We hear that the order directing the 93rd Highlanders to march from Jhansi for Indore, on the 26th of December, en route to Poona, has been countermanded, in consequence of the scarcity of grass, grain, and water between Indore and Sippree. The 1st Battalion, 3rd (King's Own) Regiment, now on its way from Malta, and expected to arrive here on the 1st proximo, on board H.M.'s Indian troopship Junna, will proceed at once to Poona, there to be quartered, sending probably three companies to Sattara.—We learn from Kirkee that a company of Sappers, consisting of an officer and one hundred rank and file, have been under orders to move to Nagpore by rail, at a moment's notice, with tools and camp equipage complete, for the purpose of sinking thirty American wells at the halting-places for troops, between that city and Jubbulpore. This step may be necessary, in consequence of the scarcity of water along the line of bullock transit; but it is not yet certain that the company will be moved.—We hear from Sholapore that the 25th N.L.I., under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Little, has received orders to take rail on the 29th Oct., for Poona, en route for Bombay, where the regiment will embark for Kattiawar, on the 1st proximo, to relieve the 23rd N.L.I. The headquarters of the 25th will be at Dwarka, and detachments will be stationed at Burdah Chowkey, and in the Porebunder districts. It was originally intended that the 25th should leave Sholapore on the 20th of November. In consequence of their early move, the 23rd will be relieved about the 5th of November, and on arrival at Bombay will be sent by wings by rail to Challisgaum, where a camp, with carriage and marching equipment, will be in readiness for them to proceed to Dhoolia, to relieve the 9th N.L.I., under orders for Poona. Two companies of the 23rd will be sent from Challisgaum to Asseerghur, to relieve a like detachment of the 9th.—It has been finally decided not to march the two squadrons of Poona Horse now at Jacobabad, and the squadrons of Sind Horse which have been stationed at Seroor since their return from Abyssinia, across country, via Surat, Deesa, and Sukkur, in relief of each other, in consequence of the impending famine between Deesa and Hyderabad, in Sind. It is now determined that the Poona Horse shall come down via Kurrachee, returning from that port in the vessels that convey the C-E Royal Horse Artillery there, about the 25th of November, en route to Hyderabad, and that the Sind Horse shall be sent from Bombay to Kurrachee in the same vessels that convey the B-18th R.A., about the 3rd of December next.

LEAVE: UNCOVENANTED OFFICERS, MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

Sept. 30.—No. 2,773.—Read, a communication from the public works department on the subject of applications for leave on medical certificate by uncovenanted officers, No. 291, dated Sept. 2, 1868, in reference to the case of Mr. Adamson, deputy conservator of forests in British Burmah.

Read again rule 6 of the uncovenanted service leave rules, dated April 13, 1864.

Observations.—The Gov. gen. in Council observes that the above-quoted rule does not require that applicants for leave on medical certificate beyond sea should appear personally before the principal inspector-general of the medical department. The final words of that rule only require that the certificate be submitted, with a statement of the case, for the countersignature of that officer.

It has been assumed in the communication of the public works department from the Calcutta practice, that, although no mention is made in the rules of appearance before a medical board at the presidency, yet that the principal inspector general may impose this condition, if he thinks proper, before countersigning the certificate.

The Gov. gen. in Council is of opinion that this assumption is not warranted, and that the objection to the present rule so far as it is founded on that assumption is groundless.

But even the necessity of sending by post the certificate from Rangoon to Madras for counter-signature would be productive of delay, which in cases of severe illness might be fatal.

Resolution.—The Gov. gen. in Council is therefore pleased to rule that, in modification of the provision in the sixth rule above quoted, which requires the counter-signature of the principal inspector general of the medical department to the medical certificate in cases of leave beyond sea, leave may be granted on the medical certificate being countersigned by the local deputy inspector general of hospitals.

CIVIL SURGEONCY OF DHURMSALA, PUNJAB.

Sept. 25.—No. 2,639.—The arrangement made by the Deputy Commissioner of Kangra, whereby the civil surgeon of Dhurmsala has been placed, on the requisition of the commanding officer, in charge of the depot and hospital of the regiment that will remain in the station after the march of 1st Goorkha regiment to the frontier, is confirmed.

UNCOVENANTED OFFICERS, POLICE DEPARTMENT, PUNJAB.

No. 2,640.—It is hereby notified under the authority of para. 10 of the resolution of the Government of India, in the Home Department, No. 2,715, dated July 21, 1867, that uncovenanted officers of the police department, of and above the rank of assistant district superintendent, on passing in Punjabi agreeably to the prescribed conditions, will be entitled to a donation to the extent of Rs. 500.

POSTAGE STAMPS.

Simla, Oct. 9.—No. 2,904.—With reference to the notification by the Government of India, financial department, No. 2,124, dated Aug. 27 last, the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to suspend for the present the orders regarding the use of the new blue and black bi-colour stamps in the districts of Balaghat and Upper Godavery.

NEW CIRCLE OF IRRIGATION WORKS.

No. 261.—The Gov. gen. in Council has sanctioned the creation of a third circle of irrigation works in the N.W. Provinces, which will, for the present, comprise the Rohilcund Canal division and the Ramgunga Canal survey.

POSTAGE IN INDIA.

Simla, Oct. 7.—No. 2,868.—Under the provisions of section 21 of the Post-office Act of 1868, the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct the following modifications of postage rates chargeable in India on correspondence sent to or received from countries or ports in Asia, viz.:—

1. The scale of progression of postage rates on letters forwarded by British or French mail packets to any of the countries or ports above referred to shall be by half-ounces throughout, i.e., a letter not exceeding half an ounce in weight shall be chargeable with a single rate of postage; a letter exceeding half an ounce in weight, but not exceeding one ounce, shall be chargeable with two rates of postage; a letter exceeding one ounce in weight, but not exceeding one ounce and a-half, shall be chargeable with three rates; and so on—an additional postage rate being added for every additional half-ounce.

2. The scale of progression of postage rates on packets of books and patterns forwarded by British or French mail packets to any of the countries or ports above referred to, shall be by four ounces throughout.

3. Newspapers forwarded by British or French mail packets to any of the countries or ports above referred to shall be charged at the same rates as book packets; and no inland postage shall be chargeable on paid newspapers, or packets of newspapers, books, or patterns, received by British or French mail packets for delivery in India from those countries or ports.

4. Correspondence sent to or received from the Straits Settlement by British Indian mail packets via Moulmein, or by private vessels, shall be subject in India to the same rates and conditions of charge as correspondence sent or received by British mail packets, except that the prepayment of letters sent by private vessels to the Straits Settlement shall be compulsory.

RETURN TO DUTY.

Simla, Oct. 7.—No. 301.—With reference to section 45, article 42, page 339, of the military regulations, and circular No. 33c of 1863, H.E. the C. in C. desires that the report therein referred to may be prepared in duplicate, and forwarded to the office of the adjutant general of the army, Simla, for transmission to Government.

42. To obviate the necessity for cancelling general orders unexpired portions of leave of absence granted to officers by the C. in C., or by the Government, and of which they may not avail themselves to the full extent, a report is to be made to the assistant adjutant general of the army at the Presidency by the officers concerned, through the prescribed channel, specifying the precise date on which they resumed their duties.

THE BANK OF BOMBAY.

On Tuesday morning, the 10th, the inquiry was resumed. On the Commissioners taking their seats,

The Chairman gave their decision respecting the application made the previous day by Mr. Newmarch, to allow him to appear as counsel for certain shareholders. He referred to the circulars sent by him immediately after his appointment as president, to the shareholders and directors, and to a resolution passed at a meeting of the former, on the 1st May last, regretting that the Secretary of State for India had given the shareholders so little time to substantiate the charges made in their memorial, but they thought it unnecessary to take any further steps to do so, as the Blue-book published subsequent to the issuing of the memorial not only confirmed the same in every particular, but proved beyond doubt that the failure of the bank was caused by the misconduct of the directors, and that the Government directors could have prevented the same had they honestly discharged the duties imposed upon them. The Commissioners had not only wished, but expected the several parties interested to appear before them, but they considered that to allow this application would be very unjust to the directors and to the Government, who are not represented before the Commissioners. It might also be objected to by the shareholders in India, who, judging from their conduct there, would probably dissent from the proposed application of the shareholders. If it were to be allowed the Commissioners might be obliged to stop further proceedings, and serve all the directors in England and India, as well as the Government, with notices in order that they might be represented also, and reopen the whole inquiry, practically de novo in India, to be conducted in the same manner. This inquiry here is only a continuation of that which commenced in India, and must be conducted in the same manner. For these reasons the Commissioners decline to allow the application.

Mr. Birch was then recalled, and his examination was proceeded with. He was first asked about branches, the questions having reference principally to the Calbadaury branch. He said it was intended that there should be cash credits opened at them and loans advanced, but his understanding was that they were to be referred to the head office. It did not strike him that the directors had no power under the forty-first section to establish a branch in Bombay. Was not aware that a legal opinion was taken upon that point, nor that it was suggested that they might evade the provisions of that section. Mr. Bullock was appointed manager of it. Presumed he was appointed by the board. Mr. Bullock had previously been in the service of Messrs. Smith and Elder. Did not know what instructions were given to Mr. Bullock, or whether any were given. Believed it was an understanding that he was always to consult the head office. Was not aware that he was always to consult Premchand Roychund. Believed that all the applications for loans were to go through Mr. Blair. Remembered nothing about the relations existing between Mr. Blair and Premchand Roychund, nor about the instructions given to agents generally. Could not tell who managed the branches. The agent was not to discount exceeding the amount; that was left to Mr. Blair, without his obtaining the sanction of the head office. Did not remember that the agents acting at these branches cashed and discounted bills to the amount of five lacs. There would not seem to be, but there must have been, some limit. Did not remember what returns came from those offices, but believed there were returns. Did not know that he ever studied them. It was the secretary's duty to do so. The witness was next examined as to a number of loans advanced to different persons. One was an advance of five lacs to Burjoja Rustonjee, at the Calbadaury branch on the 1st of February, 1865, on shares, but he said he was not aware of it, nor was he aware that on the 16th of December previously, the same person, with Atmarau Mathrijee, had an advance of two lacs 50, and that on the 3rd of February there was another advance, making seven lacs 50. He was not aware, he said, of any of these transactions. Could not tell who Burjoja Rustonjee was. Never inspected the Calbadaury branch, nor ever examined their accounts or went through the securities. Was aware that Mr. Blair was in the habit of consulting Premchand Roychund as to what position persons were in. The witness further stated that he was an advocate for lending money upon personal security. He saw no objection to advancing money to persons on bond. The secretary, in granting discounts, used to be guided by the opinion book; but he did not think that that book was written up for a long time. The witness was also questioned as to various other loans—one person getting twelve lacs at various times, and others lesser sums; but his invariable reply was, that he did not remember them. Being pressed as to whether Premchand Roychund did not manage these large loans, he said he might have done so. Being questioned as to a loan of ten lacs on the 1st September, 1864, to the Eastern Association, on the promissory note of Mr. Ryan, the secretary, he said he did not recollect it; and he gave a similar reply to questions respecting other loans.

Mr. F. L. Brown, formerly a broker in Bombay, was also examined as to a loan obtained by him, and on other matters. He spoke of two or three loans being advanced to him alone, and to him jointly with other persons, one being for 30,000 rupees, and for 2 lacs 50, and he was not asked for any security. He afterwards, however, deposited some shares. He subsequently failed, and executed a deed of assignment. He denied that he was treated with favour by the managers of the various banks because he had been employed by them to traffic in shares. He was also examined as to Mr. Tracey, one of the directors, being interested with him in a speculation in Port Canning shares, and it appeared that Mr. Tracey did lend him a lac and a-half, but he repaid him.

The Commissioners met again at the India-house on Friday last; Sir C. Jackson presided. Mr. A. D. Robertson, Mr. H. E. Jacomb, Mr. C. W. Ravenscroft, and Mr. H. A. Mangles, all formerly Government directors of the bank, were severally examined.

The first called was Mr. A. D. Robertson, who was questioned principally as to the views of the Government in reference to the new Act for the government of the bank which was passed. It was the intention of all parties that the new Act should be less restrictive than the old one. The policy of the Government was that the bank should be restricted in its business operations except as to foreign bills of exchange. The wording of the English Joint-Stock Companies Act was adopted. Schedule B of the Bill, which laid down certain rules for the government of the bank, was left out, because it was thought it would be better that those rules should be carried out by bye-laws; but the bye-laws, unfortunately, were never made.

The evidence of the other directors related principally to the mode of conducting the business of the bank. They one and all stated that they were not aware that the manager was granting loans on personal security, and that the secretary acted without authority. All the directors who were examined got allotments of shares in public companies in 1864. Mr. A. D. Robertson got nine Back Bay shares, which he sold at a premium of 192,000 rupees, but he said those shares were all allotted to him before he became a director.

The inquiry was then adjourned.

Miscellaneous.

LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA.—Lord Napier of Magdala has arrived at Florence, on his way to India, to resume his command. His lordship intends embarking at Brindisi.

MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA, LONDON, AND CHINA.—The report of the directors of the Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China has been issued. The accounts show a net profit of £80,631. 7s. 3d. for the half-year, and an interim dividend of 3 per cent. for the six months ending the 30th of June last, has been paid.

THE CONTRACT BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENT AND THE EAST INDIA IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.—With reference to the statement that the terms of the proposed purchase of the East India Irrigation and Canal Company's works by the Secretary of State for India include "a further sum sufficient to cover compensation to the managing body and officers, and thus to exonerate the proprietary from all liability in that respect," it may be mentioned, on authority, that the terms provisionally agreed to by the Secretary of State in regard to that sum are, "to give £50,000 as a bonus, to be appropriated at the discretion of the shareholders, with a stipulation that no claims for compensation on the part of the company's officers or others engaged on the works shall be made on the Secretary of State."—Times.

JHANSI PRIZE MONEY.—It is announced in the Gazette that with reference to the notification issued from the Secretary's office, Royal Hospital, Chelsea, in March last, respecting payment of shares of Jhansi prize money to officers and men of her Majesty's 88th Regt. who served in the detachment which crossed the River Jumna and aided in the taking of Calpee, in the month of May, 1858, notice, dated the 5th of November inst., is now given that the Indian Government has, on re-consideration, allowed the claims made on behalf of the remaining part of the 88th Regiment, which assisted in the operations, though not on the same side of the river. Application for such shares as have not been already claimed in India may be made at the office referred to, personally, on any day between the hours of eleven and two o'clock, or by letter addressed to the secretary.

CENTRAL ASIA.—The Royal Geographical Society held the first meeting for the session of 1868-9 on the evening of the 9th November. In his opening address, the President, Sir Roderick L. Murchison, first alluded to his expectation of Dr. Livingstone's early return from Africa; and then passed on to a topic full of interest for our political and military leaders. "The attention of the society," he said, "had been strongly drawn of late towards Central Asia, and particularly to the vast regions which bordered the north-eastern and north-western frontiers of British India. The principal region in the north-east embraced the country lying between Assam and Szechuen, the most westerly portion of China. A warm desire was expressed by a committee of the British Association, as well as by their own Council, that the intervening space of about 250 miles only should be explored, in order to ascertain if there be practicable passes through the high mountains and wild tracts which separate the upper waters of the Yangtse-kiang from the Brahmaputra at its great bend near Sudiya. Although as yet no positive effort has been made to solve the important problem, endeavours were being carried on by the Indian authorities to open up a route of traffic along a more southerly line between British Burmah and the great Chinese province of Yunnan, now essentially independent of Chinese rule and most desirous of establishing a trade with our settlements on the Irrawaddy. Of still more pressing importance, however, than an acquaintance with the regions just alluded to was an exploration of the vast and unexamined tracts on the north-west, far beyond the tributaries of the Upper Indus, or between Peshawur and Jellabad on the south, and the centres of trade and population at Yarkand and Kashgar. The main object was to define the physical character of the vast elevated plateau called Pamir, or 'Roof of the World,' from which the Oxus and Zarafshan take their rise, and from which the lofty chains, the Kuen-Lun, the Himalaya, and Hindoo Koesh, radiate. In a former address he (Sir Roderick Murchison) had dwelt upon the essential importance of such knowledge, to be acquired equally by the Russian Government and by our own; and he then said that this great table-land or water-shed ought to be constituted the neutral ground between the two empires, and to be considered as a broad zone to be for ever interposed between Eastern Turkestan—towards which Russia has now advanced—and the northern limits of our Indian possessions. With a view to taking a first step in this desirable exploration, the Council of the society sent out last spring a practised traveller, Lieutenant Hayward, to traverse this region from Peshawur."

CLAYTON, SHUTTLEWORTH, & Co.

At the Triennial Trials of THE ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY of ENGLAND, held at Bury St. Edmunds, July, 1867, received the following Awards:—

- For Single Cylinder Portable Steam Engine, THE FIRST PRIZE OF £25.
- For Double Cylinder Portable Steam Engine, THE FIRST PRIZE OF £25.
- For Horizontal Cylinder Fixed Engine, THE FIRST PRIZE OF £20.
- For Double Blast Finishing Threshing Machine, THE PRIZE OF £15.

ALSO
The SOCIETY'S SILVER MEDAL for ADJUSTING BLOCKS for MACHINES.

The duty performed by all C. S. and Co.'s Engines on this occasion considerably exceeded that of any others. C. S. and Co. refer with pleasure to the fact that the duty of their "Commercial" or single valve Engine at Chester, so long ago as 1853, was not equalled by any "ordinary" Engine at Bury.

LIVES OF INDIAN OFFICERS,

Illustrative of the History of the Civil and Military Services of India.

BY JOHN WILLIAM KAYE,

Author of "The History of the War in Afghanistan," &c., &c.

Contents.

The Rev. HENRY MARTIN.	Sir HENRY LAWRENCE.
Sir CHARLES METCALFE.	General JAMES NEILL.
Sir ALEXANDER BURNES.	Brig.-gen. JOHN NICHOLSON.
LORD CORNWALLIS.	Captain ARTHUR CONOLLY.
Sir JOHN MALCOLM.	Major EDWARD POTTINGER.
The Hon. MOUSTUAZ ELPHINSTONE.	Major D'ARCY TORD.
	Appendix, &c.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"I am not without a hope that these memoirs may be regarded, in some sort, as a Biographical History of India from the days of Cornwallis to the days of Cannington. * * I have not attempted, indeed, to write History; the work has grown up spontaneously out of the Lives of the great men who make history * * and, unless the ability of the execution has fallen far short of the sincerity of the design, I have done something, in these pages, to do honour to a race of public servants unsurpassed in the history of the world. * * I have striven to show how youths, from the middle-class families of our British Islands, have gone forth into the great Eastern world, and by their own unaided exertions carved their way to fame and fortune.

"J. W. KAYE."

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

From the ATHENÆUM.

"We say at once that more admirably-written and interesting narratives are scarcely to be found in any literature. We do not envy the man who could read without deep emotion the lives here given of Conolly, Lawrence, and Nicholson; and we doubt whether the whole range of history can show more perfect characters. Nobler subjects of biography could not have been chosen, and higher praise it is impossible to bestow on a writer than to say, as we do of this author, that he is fully equal to such a theme. * * Mr. Kaye's 'Lives of Indian Officers' will take a high place among the standard books of England."

From the SPECTATOR.

"A cadet, an artillery officer, an editor, an employee of the first rank, a successful historian, Mr. Kaye unites in his own person all the qualifications requisite to the biographer of the great Indian soldiers."

From the EXAMINER.

"Two stout volumes of biography, which, arranged chronologically, have, in addition to their biographical interest, great historical value as illustrations of the progress of political government, warlike exercise, and philanthropic effort in India during the last three generations. It is a work of remarkable interest; the interest being due not only to the stirring subjects of which it treats, but also to the admirable way in which the subjects are treated."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colic, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay:—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris:—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866:—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not 'supply a want and fill a place.'"

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera:—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 21th, that "108 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

A large and important class of society suffers year after year, and has life robbed of half its pleasures through subjection to some cutaneous complaint, readily remediable by Holloway's treatment. His wonderful productions have now become so appreciated in every part of the world that they form a complete household treasure. The worst cases of ulcers, wounds, and every variety of skin diseases, for which so many remedies have been tried without effect, readily succumb to their power. They act so miraculously on the system as to be considered a complete phenomenon in the healing art. For this reason they are advocated by many modern practitioners after everything else has proved unsuccessful.

WHITMORE'S COMPOUND LINIMENT OF ARNICA.

A SPECIFIC for the CURE of RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, SPRAINS, CONTUSIONS, WEAKNESS OF THE JOINTS, CHILBLAINS, &c. It is also an excellent remedy as a stimulating application to the surface of the chest and back in bronchitis, inflammation of the lungs, pulmonary consumption, and whooping cough. When the liver is inactive, rubbed over it, its stimulating properties have a beneficial effect, and in all cases where counter irritation is desirable, it will be found invaluable.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

WILKINSON'S BRONCHIO-THORACIC LOZENGES.

Prepared from the receipt of an eminent Physician, and experience has fully justified their recommendation as the most speedy remedy in irritation of the throat, catarrhal coughs, bronchitis, incipient consumption, spitting of blood, &c., &c. To public speakers and vocalists they will be found invaluable, as they impart a clear and beautiful tone to the voice. Free from any preparation of opium, and of an agreeable taste, they are applicable to all.

In bottles of one uniform size.

WHITMORE'S STOMACHIC DINNER PILLS.

No Pill is so efficacious in promoting digestion, strengthening the stomach, correcting acidity, preventing or removing headache, giddiness, &c., arising from a costive habit, debilitated stomach, or torpid liver.

They require no change of diet, and those of the most delicate constitution may take them with safety.

Taken as an adjunct with WILKINSON'S SARSAPARILLA with the greatest success.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

Prepared by THOMAS WILKINSON (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

JOHN GOSNELL and Co.'s OTTO OF ROSE SCENTED COLD CREAM, in pots or tubes.

JOHN GOSNELL and Co.'s AMBROSIAL SHAVING CREAM. In pots or tubes.

JOHN GOSNELL and Co.'s REAL OLD BROWN WINDSOR SOAP. A toilet soap of the finest quality and very superior fragrance. It differs so widely in composition from the ordinary alkaline soaps, that its frequent use is highly beneficial in removing all harshness and redness of the skin.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body."

It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guarantee not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. Webb's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS. Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 6d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.—UPWARDS OF FIFTY YEARS' experience has fully confirmed the superior reputation of these Lozenges in the cure of ASTHMA, WINTER COUGH, HOARSENESS, SHORTNESS OF BREATH, and other PULMONARY MALADIES.

RECENT TESTIMONIAL.

Dear Sir,—Having tried your Cough Lozenges in India, I have much pleasure in testifying to their beneficial effects in cases of incipient consumption, asthma, and bronchial affections; so good a medicine ought to be known to be appreciated. I have prescribed it largely with the best results.

PRICE LIST, 76 PAGES.—D. N. and Co. invite the attention of their Foreign and Colonial Correspondents to their Trade List, or Price Current, gratis and post free, just published, which contains seventy-six pages of matter, comprising full particulars of every description of Silks, Woollen Goods, Muslins, Calicos, Prints, Ladies' Under-clothing, Baby Linen, Mantles, Shawls, Men's and Boys' Clothing, Linens, Blankets, Carpets, Hosiery, Gloves, Ribbons, Lace, Haberdashery, Jewellery &c., &c. Also, numbers and widths of Ribbons, Tapes, &c., and sizes in Gloves and Hosiery; in short, all necessary information for ordering this class of Goods from D. N. and Co.'s house in London.

PATTERNS BY POST.—D. NICHOLSON and Co. undertake to forward to India, post free, Packets containing upwards of 200 Patterns of Fashionable Silks. A similar assortment may be had of Muslins, Grenadines, and every kind of Dress Fabric; also Prints, Calicos, Linens, Woollen Cloths, Doeskins, &c., &c. Each Pattern is marked the width, and price per yard or dress, so that Correspondents are able to insure having the exact Goods they order, by retaining a portion of the pattern of each article they require.

OUTFITTING DEPARTMENT.—D. N. and Co. also forward an abridged List containing every requisite for Indian Outfits for both sexes, properly classified for the especial use of Correspondents, Military and Civil, who might be perplexed with some of the technical terms used in the Trade List.

CONTRACTS FOR UNIFORMS, &c.—D. N. and Co. undertake to supply Commanding Officers with every description of Regimental Clothing, Cloths, Serges, Belts, Shoes, and other details necessary for completing Uniforms at considerably less than agent's prices.

Orders addressed to D. N. and Co., accompanied by a Remittance of 50 per cent., will be forwarded on condition that the balance be paid to their Agents in Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, or Colombo, on presentation of the Bills of Lading.

AGENCY DEPARTMENT.—D. N. and Co. undertake the purchasing of Goods for Merchants and Traders in India, who have not buyers in London, for a Commission of 2½ per cent. on Indents of £250 and upwards; on smaller amounts the charge is 5 per cent. As D. N. and Co. have accounts for their own business with every house of importance in connection with the Silk and Manchester trade, they can offer their Correspondents considerable advantages beyond what could be obtained from an ordinary agent. Under arrangements of this kind the original Invoices are in all cases furnished.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, October 31; Agra, October 27; Calcutta and Madras, October 26.

No details of any particular interest have come in from General Wilde's force. The march through the Tikree valley proved to be a bloodless demonstration, ending in the return of the whole force to Oghee and other posts within our frontier. General Wilde and Major Pollock have secured their hostages and retired unmolested from the scene of strife. The former's arrangements seem to have been thoroughly successful, if they aimed at nothing more than reading a lesson of good behaviour to a few refractory tribes. The most dissatisfied are some of our own officers, who grumble at the contrast between their own warlike expectations and the comparatively peaceful issues. Their military ardour has been aroused for a mere nothing. No one out of the two or three leading regiments had a chance of showing what he could do in the fighting way, as a compensation for the discomforts he had to undergo. The disappointment is easy to understand, but we may be thankful for the cause of it, if the campaign has really succeeded in overawing the ill-disposed along the Punjab frontier. Another complaint, less easy to answer, is that the great preparations for this small campaign have spread abroad in Asia a belief in some wider purpose than the taking of a few small posts on the Black Mountain.

It seems finally settled that Sir John Lawrence is to meet the Ameer of Afghanistan at Peshawur. The viceregal durbar will probably be signalled by a grand gathering of chiefs and dignitaries from the whole Punjab, and an imposing array of British-Indian troops. The Ameer for his part will most likely enhance the spectacle by a goodly show of his own armed followers. If Sir John can bring him to satisfactory terms, his own reign will have a brilliant ending, both in outward circumstance and in political result.

LATEST tidings from Afghanistan report an attempt of Abdurrahman Khan's to advance on Bamian. He had got as far as Kara Kotul, when he learned that the Kohistanies were blocking up the road, with a view to drive him out of Turkistan. Thereupon he retreated to Balkh with most of his troops, leaving a small force to guard the frontier. Another report has it that a party of Russians had come to survey the province of Badakshan. But in those regions every stranger is set down as a Russian emissary. Not long ago two such gentlemen left Kabul. Of course one of them was a Russian envoy, who has since turned out to be a vakeel from the Meer of Maimanah to the new sovereign of Kabul.

THE Gazette of India announces the establishment of a monthly mail from India to the United States. From Hong Kong, whither it will be forwarded by the usual China steamer, the American packets will carry it on by Yokohama to San Francisco. What time will be saved by the new arrangement, we do not know, but the saving in postage will be great, as half an ounce by this route will be carried for six annas eight pie, instead of twelve annas by Marseilles.

THE embassy which the Bombay papers describe as being on its way to England from Zanzibar has already arrived. The Sultan of Zanzibar is anxious to be let off the payment of his subsidy to the Imam of Muscat. If the English Government will help him to save some eight thousand pounds for his own treasury, he will make some corresponding concession of his privileges in regard to the slave trade. Whether the bargain is worth considering or would entail no injustice on Muscat, remains to be seen.

THE envoys had a warm reception on Monday evening from Sir R. Murchison and other members of the Royal Geographical Society. General Rigby, sometime resident at Zanzibar, acted as interpreter on the occasion. Both Sir Roderick and the General enlarged on the Sultan's kindness to Dr. Livingstone, and the latter speaker had much to say of that monarch's overflowing hospitality to Speke and Grant, and also of the material progress which Zanzibar has been making under his "enlightened" rule. Still, all that is no reason for letting him off his tribute to Muscat.

THE Friend of India congratulates Sir S. Fitzgerald on his selection of Dr. Wilson, the great missionary, and a very good scholar, to fill the post of Vice-Chancellor to the University of Bombay. The native papers of that Presidency are equally pleased.

THE claims of regimental paymasters serving in India seem to have been fairly met by a General Order of the Indian Government, just issued in accordance with instructions received from the India-office. Those instructions authorised the concession to paymasters in India of the advantages offered them by the Royal Warrant of February, 1866, in respect of increased pay after a certain term of service. Accordingly the Indian Government has now issued a scale of pay rising with every five years of service, from the pay and allowances of captain at the outset to those of a major after ten years, with a smaller rate of increase afterwards. The grievance therefore on which we commented a few weeks back must now, we presume, have found a happy ending; for the paymaster of ten years' service will henceforth be entitled to the full Indian wages, if even he should still be denied the official rank of major in the army.

ACCORDING to a Madras paper something is at length about to be done towards easing the Staff Corps of its excess of old officers. We are assured that officers of twenty-five to thirty years' service will be induced to retire by the offer of five hundred a-year and a bonus of fourteen hundred to two thousand pounds in cash. As this tallies pretty closely with our own suggestions on the subject, we can only congratulate the home authorities on their somewhat tardy acceptance of conclusions long since self-evident to the outside public. After this we may even hope to have good news ere long for the claimants of compensation for their lost retiring-bonuses. There is no use in doing a liberal thing by halves.

CAPTAIN TOYNBEE's efforts in behalf of the merchant seamen of Calcutta seem likely soon to bear good fruit. In an appeal to Sir S. Northcote against the ruinous temptations to which English sailors in Calcutta are exposed from the crimps and brothel-keepers of Flag-street, he suggested the forming of seamen's clubs in some of the chief Indian ports under the supervision of competent men. His proposals were referred to India—not in vain, if it be true that the Master Attendant has been asked to report on the possibility of establishing a Sailors' Club or Institute in Calcutta, and to ascertain from the Chamber of Commerce how much pecuniary aid Calcutta would be likely to give should Government also contribute its share.

SEVERAL of our native feudatories have followed the good example set by Sindia, with regard to the impending famine. The Maharajah of Jeypore has been already thanked by Government for abolishing all duties on grain. The ruler of Rewah has by way of experiment remitted all transit dues. And now the Nawab of Rampore has been showing quite a royal disregard for political economy, by forcing the grain-dealers to lower their prices, and withhold no stores from the market, and by forbidding every one from buying more grain at once than he may need for his daily or weekly consumption. The latter measure, if it could anyhow be enforced, might help to counteract the evil effects of the former. Both however equally betoken the Nawab's desire to help his subjects. One good thing he has done, in sending out agents to buy up grain from all parts of the country, and selling it again at low prices to the poor. There at least the most rigid economist will surely hold him blameless.

MR. GIRDLESTONE's Report on past famines in the North-West Provinces can pretend to compete neither with Mr. W. Hunter's "Annals" in descriptive power, nor with Mr. Dalrymple's Report on the Madras famine in mastery of economic ideas. Nor has he gone at all deep into the history of the great famines of the old Moghul period. But of those which have happened under British rule he gives a carefully detailed account, and his remarks by the way are generally just and pertinent. He gives at less or greater length the history of seventeen great famines in Hindustan Proper. That of 1315, in the days of Mohammed Toghluq, was aggravated by the cruel oppressions of that fierce conqueror's reign. The Doab was drained by forced migrations, and men ate each other even in Delhi. Yet more widely spread was the famine of 1631 under Shah Jehan. The next instance, in 1661, is memorable for the measures of relief enforced, then seemingly for the first time, by Aurungzeb in the midst of his struggle with Sivajee. By postponing or remitting rents and taxes, importing corn from neighbouring provinces and giving it away or selling it cheap, and by distributing money from his treasury with a free hand, he is said to have saved millions of lives. Nadir Shah's invasion drained the wealth of the country and so enhanced the misery caused by the dearth of 1739. The famine of 1770, which raged worst in Bengal north of the Ganges, was followed by the tremendous calamity of 1783-4, which still lives in the memory of the people as prominently as the Mutiny does in ours. In Rajpootana and Central India the suffering was specially great. In Meywar and Marwar grain was selling at six pounds the shilling—then twice its present value. All these may be said to date before the establishment of our rule. The dearths of 1803, 1812, and 1819 were comparatively limited, albeit severe. That of 1837-38 had a wider range, and the efforts of our Government were sorely taxed to make any head against the consequent suffering. Much of what was done, was done either timidly or too late. The amount of the remissions afterwards granted was not made known in time to save thousands of ryots from a forced emigration owing to the greed of their landlords. It was during this period that "Mr. John Lawrence" did so much to abate the suffering in Goorgaon by urging the suspension of the enhanced revenue rates and the granting of loans for wells and irrigation. The lessons of former famines were happily brought to bear with good effect on the next great disaster, the famine of 1860-61. Had the same experience been applied as readily to the wants of famine-stricken Orissa in 1865, how large a deduction might have been made from the number of victims to official blundering in that woful year! One chief moral of Mr. Girdlestone's narrative is the duty of making irrigation compensate for the defects of nature. Let India be covered with artificial waterworks, and the era of great famines will indeed be over.

PATNA and Dacca, old centres of Mussulman conspiracy, are said to be once more heaving with plots against British rule. According to the Englishman, at any rate, the Wahabees in Bengal and Upper India need looking after at this particular juncture. Preachers in Delhi, placards in Lucknow, and printed papers of all kinds in Agra, Benares, and Cawnpore have been stirring up the faithful to acts of sympathy with their exiled brethren on the North-West Frontier. In many districts of Bengal Proper preachers have been trying hard to get up a crescentade against the Kafir; and so far as the drawing of money out of Mohammedan pockets is concerned, their attempts have been successful. With regard to any graver result, we trust that the Englishman has raised a false alarm.

WE hear by telegram that Sir John Lawrence opened the Delhi and Umballa Railway on November 14.

THE telegraph keeps us acquainted with the movements of Lords Mayo and Napier. The latter embarked at Brindisi on board the Endymion for Alexandria on November 19, just two days before the new Viceroy left Brindisi for the same place on board the Psyche. Mr. Disraeli's recent reference to his having selected Lord Mayo "for his sagacity, his judgment, fine temper, and knowledge of men," and his prophecy of a career for him "which will equal that of the most eminent Governor-general who has preceded him," will reassure all who are slow to believe in Lord Mayo's appointment as a mere sop to party claims.

WE observe that Colonel the Hon. F. A. Thesiger, of the 95th Regiment, late Deputy-adjutant-general of the Abyssinian Expedition, has been appointed Adjutant-general of the Indian Army, in place of Colonel H. E. Longden, C.B., compelled by failing health to resign that post.

THE half-yearly report of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company shows a decrease on receipts of £107,012. 18s., and a net increase of £42,786. 2s. 2d. in the expenditure. The decrease is mainly owing to the lowered rates for carriage of cotton. To the excellence of the arrangements for carrying cotton Mr. R. Carnac has borne hearty witness. The failure in the masonry works of the line is ascribed to want of precision in the contracts, want of supervision in the progress of the works, and a too great regard for economy. Two millions more capital is required for further proceedings.

LIEUT. COLE, R.E.—We believe that Lieut. Cole, of the Engineers, has been entrusted with the special duty of taking casts from ancient architectural buildings in Cashmere.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, November 25, 1868.

CRYING BEFORE WE ARE OUT OF THE WOOD.

THE Indian newspapers say that the Hazara campaign is over. Upon General Wilde's approach, the Hussunzaies, they inform us, in American argot, absquotulated. Small blame to them we cannot but think. What else could a few hundreds, or possibly thousands, of Highland peasants armed with swords and some antiquated matchlocks, do in presence of so overpowering a force—a force which numbers upwards of seven thousand picked troops of the English and Anglo-Indian army, armed partially with Sniders, and accompanied by artillery carried on elephants, and mortars and rockets slung upon mules; supported, too, by a corps of feudal auxiliaries, probably as numerous as the enemy itself?

Why, in the name of goodness, asks the astonished English reader, as he peruses these particulars, bring together so imposing a force, at so serious an expense to the State, merely to coerce so despicable a foe? And a portion of the Indian public echoes the inquiry.

Oh, but say the apologists for everybody, and that large section of persons who find everything right—until it is proved to be wrong—"it was to overawe the tribes."

In the first place—Is this the Government explanation of a measure which certainly requires an explanation? Let us assume that it is, as no other one at present seems forthcoming, and let us inquire if success in the end desired is likely to justify the means used.

If the assemblage of General Wilde's army was rendered necessary to "overawe the tribes," other than the Hussunzaies and their adherents, it follows that there are certain tribes hostilely disposed at this moment to the British Government, whom it is desirable to intimidate by a display of physical strength. To specify the tribes in question must be mere guess-work to anyone unconnected just now with the private councils of the Government of India, but whichever they may be, it is matter of opinion as to whether a result with respect to them is likely to be attained in the way desired by means of the course pursued.

We cannot but think that the self-gratulations of the Indian press are at present somewhat premature on this point; and that we must wait for some mails yet to see whether the fate of the Hussunzaies has struck sufficient terror into the more powerful clans, to induce them to lay aside all designs inimical to our rule. For our part, we think the Pathan character is often misunderstood; for, whilst its bravery is admitted, what may be called its patriotic feelings appear to be underrated.

However individually fickle and treacherous these Highlanders may be, as a class they are the reverse. However individually they may worship gold above everything, as a nation they prize their religion and their native soil more than any other consideration. Would any amount of money induce them to part with their hills? We believe not. Do bribes succeed in making them betray their chief or clansmen? But seldom, very seldom, we conceive. Is it so certain then that the spectacle of the burning villages upon the Black Mountain, and the news that their kinsmen with their women and children are starving wanderers, will operate as a sedative to any hostile feelings they entertain? If it do not do so, the congratulations upon the successful issue of the present expedition are, we repeat, premature, and the splendid army under the command of General Wilde may yet find further work cut out for it.

It remains to be seen, for instance, whether the Salarzai clan of Bonair, who gave us such terrible trouble in 1863, will be frightened into submission by the news of our Cis-Indus proceedings; it is yet to be proved whether old Abdul Ghafur, the Pope of Swat, has decided on remaining an inactive spectator of them; and we have yet authoritatively to learn whether the nest of fanatics on the Mahabun Mount will, in consequence of them, be finally expelled from their present habitation.

Many considerations may, we conceive, be at work to influence the settlement of these questions, and we cannot refrain from advertg to one piece of news brought by the last mail, which may possibly be one of them. The Russian army has—we are informed—taken the city of Shehr i Subz, which is situated on the high road between Bulk and Samarkand, and is the capital of a province inhabited by a mixed population—a part of it of cognate blood with the Pathans themselves. If this be true, the troops of his Majesty the Czar have advanced to a position, at no great distance from the Afghan border, into a district which carries on a continual close intercourse with Cabul itself, and which consequently is more or less well-known to the clansmen of whom we are now speaking.

Is not such intelligence likely to stir up in the breasts of an ignorant, excitable population, bitterly hostile to English interests, hopes and ideas, which may indispose them to accept the lesson we have learnt their less fortunate brethren? Is it not, in short, possible that in already uttering our Io Pains of triumph, "we are crying before we are out of the wood?"

THE NIZAM'S DOMINIONS.

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE'S Report on the Administration of the Nizam's Dominions contains a very full description of general progress in that country before and during the narrator's connection with it. As its general accuracy has been endorsed by the Nizam's able minister, Sir Salar Jung, we may be thankful that the writing of it fell to the pen of one whose literary talent is equal to his local experience. In nine readable chapters we are treated to an instructive survey of all matters bearing on the recent political growth of a state which twenty years ago was little better governed than Oudh in the days of its last sovereign. A useful introductory chapter describes the physical characteristics of the Nizam's country, its agriculture, trade, products, inhabitants, live stock, and mode of government. Its three great linguistic divisions, the Mahratta, the Canarese, and the Telugu, represent an infinite variety of races and castes. The Hindoo type comprehends a large sprinkling of Brahmins, who here, as elsewhere, take the lead in all intellectual industries, a few Rajpoots of rank and birth, a number of Sikhs who mainly settled here during the rule of a late minister, Chundoo Lall, who belonged to their order, Hindoos from Marwar, who form the bulk of the banking and trading community, a large number of low-caste Hindoos employed in handicraft and menial service, and the many branches of Koombies who make up nearly all the agricultural population. As for the Mohammedan division, it embraces almost every kind of believer in Islam. "There are the real Deccanese, the Moghuls, the Pathans, the Syuds, who have been connected with this part of India for centuries." Then come the later immigrants of the last half-century, Arabs, Rohillas, Hubshies, and Sindhies. Parsees of course have found their way to cities like Hyderabad. In the wilder tracts about Hingolee and along the Pyngunga River dwell aboriginal tribes, resembling those of Central India.

To the North and West a blackish trap below a dark heavy soil prevails. Here is grown the wheat and cotton. With the reddish granite and laterite of the East is found a lighter soil, which with the help of irrigation yields good crops of rice. Of natural products fit for anything, Sir R. Temple names but two, iron and timber. Coal has indeed been heard of in one or two places; but its value has not yet been precisely ascertained. Nor has he much to say about the manufactures, although the cloths of Hyderabad, Nandair, and Paitan are in good repute, while the metal-ware of Beder and the embroideries in some of the chief towns are "worthy of notice." Deccanie ponies still keep their old renown, but the fine old breed of horses seems to have greatly fallen off. The trade of the Deccan is reckoned at about ten millions a-year, the imports consisting chiefly of salt, European piece-goods, and hardware.

As head of the State, the Nizam retains the sole command of his own particular troops, for whose payment certain districts, called the "Surf-i-Khas Talookas," are assigned to chiefs of his own selection, responsible to himself alone. The command of his body-guard has become hereditary in the family of Shums-ool-oomrah, his near kinsmen, who hold for the payment of this force a jagheer worth thirteen lakhs of rupees a-year. The Nizam's ordinary army, as managed by the Dewan, is a motley body of Arabs, Sikhs, Sindhies, Beloochies, Rohillas, besides many thousand Sepoys of the "line" and Burkundaizes, numbering in all about 29,000 men. To these may be added nearly 2,000 munsudars or retainers, who are only embodied in time of need. Of this total about 5,000 are cavalry. The Surf-i-Khas troops consist of 424 horse and 7,939 artillery and infantry. These and the Paigah, or body-guard, numbering 1,306 horse, and 2,903 artillery and infantry, with nine guns, are almost all natives of the Deccan. The soldiers are mostly better, if less regularly, paid than our own sepoy; the Arab infantry, most of whom are true Arabs by descent, receiving fourteen rupees a month, the Sikhs from ten to eleven, and the Sindhies from eight to ten rupees. Of the Line sepoy, who are equipped in imitation of English models half a century old, the best are the Finglass corps, and a body of 3,000 men whose predecessors entered the Nizam's own service on the disbanding of M. Raymond's contingent. This entire force of 43,000 men, not reckoning the Nizam's contingent, is still to our thinking far too large for a State surrounded on all sides by British territory; and the cost of maintaining it, nearly a million a year, must be a heavy drain on the Nizam's resources. No wonder that in former days, when its strength was much greater, the added burden of a British contingent proved too much for the Nizam's ablest financiers. For that item the present governors of Berar are now of course responsible, and already Berar, as we know, does more than pay its own expenses.

In former days the payment of the troops was a matter frequently enforced by mutinies and riotous demonstrations, when the arrears of pay had swollen beyond endurance. Nowadays, things are better managed. The amendment in the finances of the State has become very marked within the last few years. From 1820 to 1853 matters went on from bad to worse; mismanagement and peculation made ducks and drakes of the public revenues; loans at ruinous interest, sometimes even at 24 and 30 per cent. per annum, were continually obtained from native bankers, military chiefs, or great officials. Want of ready money prevented all reductions in an overgrown army. Time after time were the State jewels placed in pawn, so hard was it found to raise fresh loans at any price on the State credit. In 1853 the public debt still stood at three crores of rupees, not a very formidable sum for a well-ordered State, a sum indeed equal to only two years of the Nizam's income. But creditors were pressing, and the Indian Government would wait no longer for its money. It took possession of certain districts ceded to it by the Nizam for the maintenance of the Hyderabad Contingent. From that time the finances of the country began to mend, at first slowly, afterwards at a quickened pace. Several thousand troops were discharged. New loans at 8 to 12 per cent. have resulted already in clearing off nearly 158 lakhs of the old debt. A committee is now at work preparing a regular balance-sheet. The credit of the Nizam's Government now stands wonderfully high; and the accounts for the year 1865-6 show a balance of eight lakhs and a-half to the right side. Finally, great reforms have been carried out in the coinage and the currency by the introduction of a new coinage and the abolition of all the old district mints, whence base money was continually issued for the private gain of their superintendents.

There has of late years been a steady increase in the land-revenues, owing partly to increased cultivation, partly to the great rise in prices, which has given the ryot, who for the most part pays the rent himself, a larger return for his labour. In the way of fiscal reforms much has lately been done. The transit-duties have been finally abolished; import duties on grain have ceased to be, and the export-duty has been lowered to eight annas a bullock-load. At the same time the Custom-house receipts have risen from Rs. 16,04,921 in 1861-2 to Rs. 38,78,701 in 1865-6. After all deductions the net revenue for the latter year shows an advance of nearly fifty lakhs on that for the former.

In respect of civil administration a great step forward has at length been made in the resumption of the talookas or fiscal districts from the hands of the old Talookdars or farmers of revenue, whose evil influence was denounced in 1820 by Sir C. Metcalfe. The talookas are now distributed into zillahs, each under a salaried district officer, with a "mujlis" or central board to look after the whole. A coincident reform has been applied to the police of the country, whose duties were formerly divided between the army, the village watchmen, and the Kotwals of towns. The Kotwal of Hyderabad is still responsible to the Nizam himself, who also reigns supreme over the Surf-i-Khas police, while the Paigah jagheer is managed entirely by its own ruler. But the rest of the police are now organised under a departmental head, subordinate to the Dewan.

Some of the judicial reforms date from 1846, when civil and criminal courts were first set up in Hyderabad. All sorts of independent jurisdictions still kept their place elsewhere, until in 1865 the foundations of a regular judicial system were laid in all the districts directly ruled by the Dewan himself. The judges of the Hyderabad courts are mostly Mohammedan Moolvies, well educated and generally upright men. Of 6,800 cases that came up for settlement within the year, one-third remained over at the end, a large proportion. The appeals however were comparatively few, but seem to be falling yearly deeper in arrears, more than half being left unsettled at the end of 1866-7. The same remark may be applied to other courts, especially the Small Cause Courts, where out of more than 7,000 cases pending only 345 were decided during the year. The judge however was dismissed for "grave mismanagement," and further inquiry cut down the arrears to 143. With regard to crime, the Returns, if they may be trusted, speak favourably for the general behaviour.

An interesting chapter on public works records progress in that direction also. Some years ago a department was organised for the repairing of tanks, and later still its scope was extended to other matters with good results. Many old tanks and canals have been thoroughly repaired, new ones constructed, and of late years the Nizam's Government has spent half a lakh yearly on roads. Municipal works are still in their rude infancy. On education the Nizam's Government has hitherto spent very little—only Rs. 43,000 in 1866-7. The medical schools however seem to turn out graduates in no way inferior to the Sub-Assistant Surgeons of our own provinces.

THE NEW MILITARY FURLOUGH RULES.—PARAGRAPH XIV.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—With reference to the liberal interpretation of Para. XVI. of the New Furlough Rules by the Home authorities, which appeared in your last number, I am rejoiced to perceive the Secretary of State disposed to deal so liberally in the matter. I wish to make use of the liberality of this measure as a vehicle for drawing the Secretary of State's attention through the medium of your columns to another para. in the Furlough Rules, which cries out for a liberal construction to be put on its meaning. Now Para. XVI. is so plainly worded (limiting the amount of leave with pay, whether on private affairs or medical certificate to eight years) that no words could make it plainer, and the para. cannot convey to the most sanguine the ghost of a chance of a hope of anything more being made out of it; yet I rejoice to perceive that Sir S. Northcote has ruled that medical certificate taken before 1st July, 1868, will not count as part of the eight years' aggregate furlough allowed under Para. XVI. And now for the application; such being the case, my hope is that my venture may catch the eye of one who has the power to redress the grievances of unfortunate Para. XIV., which, I understand, is construed contrary not only to the editorial explanation given in the Times as the meaning thereof, but contrary to the liberal meaning of it, viz., construing it to mean (which it does not) as not to give, under any circumstances, more than three years with pay to an officer with medical certificate; so that, as formerly, an officer who having lost his health from service in India, must, after the expiration of the three years, if not declared sufficiently recovered to return to India, either have an extension without pay, or retire.

Disposed to liberal measures as the present Secretary of State is, it is to be hoped that Para. XIV. may receive his favourable consideration, and that he may put a liberal construction on its meaning, which I should say he would do if it were only brought before him. And further, I may observe that it would be to the interest of Government to allow all officers who may not be wanted in India to remain in England on the allowance of half the regimental pay they would draw in India.—Hoping you will give this insertion in your columns, yours truly,

AN OFFICER.

[It is intended that leave of absence from India for a longer period than three years at one time shall not as a rule be given.—ED. A. I. M.]

REGIMENTAL INTERPRETERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—With reference to your article on "Examinations in the Native Languages," extracted from the Madras Athenæum, remarking on the paucity of officers who have passed in the higher standards, and the consequent detriment to the public service by appointing unqualified officers to act as interpreters, and asking whether it has ever flashed across the minds of the authorities of late, when ordering some native prisoner to be tried by a Court-martial for some serious offence, that justice might not be done him owing to the inefficiency of the officer appointed to interpret, as an officer of standing, who has had much experience of the subject, I cannot resist the opportunity of speaking ex cathedra on this subject.

I need scarcely say that for several years past the appointment of inefficient officers as interpreters (I speak of the presidency I know, Bengal) has been so notorious a fact that it seems almost stupid to repeat it. Even during the mutinies, when good interpreters were especially wanted, there was a great abundance of unqualified officers.

Such a state of things would nowhere be tolerated in the case of Europeans; but as native prisoners have in all these years been principally affected by bad interpreters, the thing has been allowed to jog on. The officers are not to be blamed for studying their own interest and coming to the sound conclusion that there is no inducement for them to rack their brains for years in a depressing climate to qualify themselves for the interpreter's examination. I passed that examination in Persian, Oordoo, and Hindee, and know that it requires two or three years' hard study. Now, what inducement is there now-a-days to qualify one's self? Positively none! Formerly there was some inducement, for an officer who passed the interpreter's examination could get the interpreter and quartermastership of his regiment, which was a good appointment for a subaltern, especially as he might hold a company besides. The Mutiny abolished these appointments, after which we had station interpreters on a salary of Rs. 100 a-month; and, lastly, regimental interpreters on Rs. 70 a-month!

Now would this have happened if the Indian Government had really cared about having efficient interpreters? Seventy rupees a month for high qualifications and occasionally very hard work, as those know who, like myself, have translated at a general court-martial for at least four hours at a day's sitting! The Commander-in-Chief himself considered the seventy rupees quite inadequate, and provided for it, as he conceived, by issuing in 1865 a circular, in which he allowed interpreters to teach their brother officers at thirty rupees per head!

This measure, being generally laughed at, was productive of no good effect. If Government really want court-martial proceedings, &c., to be properly translated, they must give the quid pro quo, and nothing less than Rs. 150 or 200 monthly would meet the case; there can be doubt of this. Nor would the case be met by having native interpreters, for Hindoos and Mussulmans are such notorious bribe-takers that we should have wilful mistranslations instead of erroneous ones; and as the sentence of a native court-martial cannot be carried into effect without the signature of the interpreter, that official need only be firm to have it his own way. Besides, it would never do to depend on natives (especially our religious and political foes—the Mussulmans) for the proper translation of Government orders to the native soldiers, or to depend on them for the faithful discharge of interpreting and translating work in times of public disturbance.—Yours,

EX CATHEDRA.

THE NEW VICEROY AND HIS WORK.

The Friend of India remarks that the conflict between English civilisation and worse than Middle Ages feudalism cannot be soothed by platitudes nor averted by good advice to the combatants. Not only, if left much longer alone, will it set more than one State in political conflagration, but the fire will spread to the provinces which we rule directly; and then it will be seen, as it was in the days of Lord Hastings, that we cannot with impunity shirk the duty which has been laid upon us. The new Viceroy will probably be inclined to be more inactive, to interfere less than his predecessor till he unlearns his English prejudices. But his abstinence and timidity will only hasten the inevitable crisis, and then men will wonder at the apathy of the past as they do at the back-sliding of the dying Cornwallis and the incompetent Barlow. The mistake has lain of late in a belief that a firm foreign and feudatory policy is incompatible with financial prosperity and administrative success within our own border. Never was a greater fallacy. The omission to do duty, the postponement of the right, is always more expensive in the end; a nation despised abroad is never truly prosperous or contented at home. These are truisms in Europe, and they are no less true of India. England has learned that lesson in every great war from Pitt to Palmerston. India has learned it in every step of every progress in the East from Clive, Warren Hastings, and Wellesley, to Lord Hastings, Dalhousie, and Canning. But for the first three where would the Court of Directors have placed our imperial interests—the interests of civilization—in the East? How dear the Barlows, and even Bentincks, cost us in the long run! It is because of the difficulty of striking the mean between a healthy policy and one of aggressive bluster that men of mediocre powers or one-sided ability take refuge in inaction. All the English rulers India has had may be classified according as, like Clive, Hastings, Wellesley, Lord Hastings, Dalhousie, and even Canning in his later days, they have instinctively struck that mean; or, like Cornwallis in his first administration, Bentinck, Ellenborough, and Sir John Lawrence, they have narrowed themselves to one department of their duty in which they have shone; or, like Amherst, Auckland, and Elgin, they have shown themselves great in nothing. It will not be difficult to predict to which of the three classes the new Viceroy will belong, if he does not learn how, as in a healthy man all the physical functions are in perfect and energetic exercise, so in a well-ordered Government there cannot be conflict between a firm foreign and a successful internal policy. The new Viceroy will probably do well if he carries out with unshrinking firmness the principles which have actuated Sir John Lawrence in the latter. In finance the land must be relieved—except, of course, in Bengal—while increasing capital must be made to contribute its fair share to the growing requirements of the State.

Sir John has been unfortunate in this respect through no fault of his own. The financiers sent to him from England first abolished the income-tax instead of improving its machinery, then violated all the principles of justice by the license-tax, and finally, while attempting to be more just, failed to help the Treasury by the certificate-tax. The questions of direct taxation, of combining financial control over the local governments with local taxation, of securing a gold currency and improving the paper circulation, and of making savings banks popular among the peasantry, will be left by Sir John Lawrence to his successor, along with a finance minister who is sound on them all at present, but has hitherto shown himself apt to be moulded by the policy of the hour. To the new Viceroy, also, will fall the duty of carrying out the orders of a Radical House of Commons regarding the reorganisation of the Government of Bengal, if not of the other Presidencies. That reorganisation will involve many detailed administrative changes which will keenly affect the whole body of officials and the mass of the people. The same is true of the reform of the Native Army, and the adaptation of our military system both to our altered position in Asia and to new discoveries in Europe. In one sense the officering, arming, and organising of our army, and keeping it up at a proper effective strength, is the most pressing of all reforms. Then there are certain great questions in which Sir John Lawrence has adopted a wise and vigorous policy, but so late in the day that others will reap the fruit. Such are the education of forty millions in Bengal, the spread of works of irrigation, the extension of railways, and the concession of fixity of tenure in the highly cultivated districts of Hindoostan. There is work for the new Viceroy to do compared with which the duties and responsibilities of the Premier of England in ordinary times are small. How will he do it?

FRONTIER POLICY—A FALSE ALARM.

The Bombay Gazette, in answer to the new alarm caused by the discovery of a new road to India through Eastern Turkistan, affirms that the obvious and patently easy route which would link a Russian army with its resources does not lie through Turkistan, but over the waters of the Caspian. No doubt it has been found practicable to sustain the small army which has crossed the Jaxartes, occupied Samarcand, and pushed forward towards Bokhara, from the depots in Orenburg and the lower course of the river. But it is one thing to work through a barbarous country with 16,000 men, and another to invade India. The discovery of an easy road from Bokhara to Peshawur would not enable Russia to launch an army upon the Punjab; but it would be far less difficult as a military operation than a movement from Yarkand by the Pankong Lake and the Changchenmoo valley upon Leh and Srinagar, because there must be some sort of base on the Jaxartes, and there is none on the Thian Shan mountains. That, if she resolved upon the serious step of invading India, Russia might create a diversion by sending a column upon Leh is conceivable, but a very long time must elapse before she could be in a position to do even that. One of her objects would certainly be to foster a belief that she could perform the feat, and one of our objects should be to avoid any misconceptions of her ability to fulfil the threat. When we are told that the danger of an advance through Eastern Turkistan is "immediate," we must confess astonishment; because no one has heard of a Russian army in that quarter, still less of the immense establishments required to give it impetus and vitality as a military machine. The danger from Russia on any side is remote, not immediate, and our success in meeting it when it comes will depend upon a proper estimate of the character of the danger and an insight into the geographical conditions which will govern its direction. Nature has pointed out the line which is certain to be adopted. There is a clear water way from Moscow to Astrabad, and Persia being overcome, no matter in what way, there is a safe line of march as far as Herat, or Herat may be turned on either hand. Depend on it no Russian army adequate to an attempt on India will ever concentrate except from the side of the Caspian. The encroachments on the Jaxartes and towards the Oxus, and the tentative movements further eastward, are undertaken, not only to acquire territory and glory and a population which may furnish recruits, but to work by a flank up to the great practicable line of operations which is directly and cheaply connected with Moscow. We do not doubt for a moment that the ultimate aim of Russia includes an attempt to be our successor in India; but her cherished dream is the possession of the Lower Danube and Constantinople, and while she may make a show of invading India as a diversion, she will never sacrifice any chance of seating herself on the Dardanelles, and, by consequence in the Mediterranean, to far reaching schemes which look beyond the Hindoo Koosh and the Himalayas.

RESULTS OF THE HAZARA CAMPAIGN.

The Pioneer remarks that the respects in which the result of the Hazara expedition differs from that of the famous French king, who, at the head of 40,000 men, first marched up a hill and then marched down again, are distinct and considerable. In the first place, the only garrison of the hill which the French monarch successfully ascended was, so Rabelais tells us, "an old ram." General Wilde found plenty of Hussunzais, Akazais, Chiggurzais, and Pararee Syuds on the Black Mountain. Moreover, in attempting to coerce an enemy known beforehand to be almost intangible, it is a great thing to have extorted submission. It might have happened to us, after burning villages and wasting crops, to find ourselves in face of a waste with no enemy in sight (but plenty out of it), and with no more villages to burn. We might have made a solitude and called it victory, but could hardly have hoped that we had secured peace. As it is, General Wilde has received hostages from all the tribes, even from the at first impracticable Pararee Syuds.

"... what the repining enemy commends That breath fame follows."

The co federate tribes seem to be convinced that we have achieved a substantive triumph; it will be curious if the English public is harder to persuade. What specific terms of peace have been imposed we know not; but since General Wilde and the Commissioner, i.e., the military and civil commanders on the spot think them adequate, they may safely be assumed to be so. We know, to begin with, that the refugee relations of the deported Khans of Agor have submitted to mercy. It is a pleasing variety, in our retirement on this occasion from the enemy's country, that our troops have not been hooted and pelted at directly they turned their backs. There have been no bonfires, no shots fired in bravado; in short, the enemy makes no pretence of having got the best of the quarrel. It is, however, rather a bore that no satisfactory account has been given of the Hindoostanee fanatics. Viewing it altogether, it may be said that an expedition, of which it would have been very easy to make an infinite mess, has been conducted without a single mistake; and that if little positive profit has been made, it is because no more was possible or aimed at.

The Delhi Gazette remarks that if the object of the campaign was to capture certain strongholds on the Black Mountain, Koon Gullee and Machaj and Munna-ki Dunna, then no one can deny that it has been most successful. The disgust and disappointment then which our troops are said to be suffering, has no real foundation unless they had some reason to believe that they were ever intended to do more than they have done. What they had to do they had done splendidly, and the agility and the pluck displayed in carrying the heights of Munna-ki Dunna and Koon Gullee would have enabled them equally successfully to carry the heights all the way to Cabul, had they been required to do so. . . . To the Bengal civilians at the head of the Government about the Viceroy may we suggest, that while the excessive reticence and reserve peculiar to Anglo-Indian politics may add to the dignity of a few individuals, it is calculated occasionally to be exceedingly mischievous? It is little that it has in this occasion awakened throughout the army a feeling of deep disgust and dissatisfaction, but it has served to spread throughout the neighbouring States, and among border tribes, first distrust, then suspicion, then alarm, and finally contempt, when it is seen, after all, that a grand army assembled with much eclat and show has accomplished but a tithe of what it was said to be going to do. From the banks of the Indus right away to Kashgar, to Badakshan, to Cabul, to Balkh, and to Candahar, we may be sure the news had spread that the British had assembled a large army for some mighty undertaking. Of course it will be connected with the Russian policy. And when the intelligence flies over the country that this mighty force, after a brush with a few weak tribes, had retired from the Black Mountain, what will be the feelings with regard to us? That such reports have been spread far and wide there cannot be the slightest doubt; and the inhabitants of the whole country between Peshawur and Bokhara will believe that we have been worsted in the first attack.

CHRONICLES OF THE BENGAL ARMY.—With the sanction of Government, the Commander-in-Chief directs that an historical account of the services of each regiment be kept in every corps of Bengal Cavalry and Bengal Infantry. The book is to be styled "Digest of Services of the Regiment." The entries to be made in it are to show the period and circumstances of the original formation of the regiment; the means by which it has from time to time been recruited; the stations at which it has been employed, and the period of its arrival at and departure from such stations. This account is to specify the battles, sieges, or other military operations in which the regiment has been engaged, and to record any achievement it may have performed. It is to contain the names of all officers, British and native, killed or wounded by the enemy, and the name of any officer, non-commissioned officer, or private soldier, who may have specially distinguished himself in action. The badges and devices which the regiment has been permitted to bear, and the causes on account of which such badges and devices, or any other marks of distinction, were granted, are to be stated; also the dates of such permission being granted. The equipment in the clothing, &c., is to be shown, and any particular alteration in the clothing, arms, accoutrements, colours, horse furniture, &c., are to be recorded, and a reference made to the dates of the orders under which such equipment was sanctioned, or subsequent alterations made. The constitution and regulations made, either by augmentation or reduction, to be stated, with a quotation of the orders relating thereto. With a view of ensuring regularity and accuracy, the entries in this book are to be made by the commanding officer himself, or under his immediate inspection.

HAZARA.

RETURN OF THE FORCE.—The following telegrams from Oghee appear in Indian Public Opinion:—Oct. 19, Noon.—General Wilde's force was still in Nundihar yesterday. The road over the Dabrai Pass into Ullaice was being made passable, in case it should be deemed advisable to move troops into that valley to-day. A road towards Kaush was also being made. No collision with the tribes nor any casualty since the 14th.

Oct. 20, Morning.—Shal Khan of Tyhkote, with his adherents, fled across the Indus, on the approach of the force to the Dabrai Pass. The force will not now go to Tahkote, nor into Ullai, but moves to-day toward Kouch.

Oct. 22.—The whole of General Wilde's force is now marching into Oghee. All well. The Lieutenant-Governor's camp will be here on the 24th instant.

The Pioneer tells us that General Wilde has received hostages from all the tribes, even from the at first impracticable Pararee Syuds. The confederate tribes seem to be convinced that we have achieved a substantive triumph; it will be curious if the English public is harder to persuade. What specific terms of peace have been imposed we know not; but since General Wilde and the Commissioner, i.e., the military and civil commander on the spot, think them adequate, they may safely be assumed to be so. We know, to begin with, that the refugee relations of the deported Khans of Agror have submitted to mercy. It is a pleasing variety, in our retirement on this occasion from the enemy's country, that our troops have not been hooted and pelted at directly they turned their backs. There have been no bonfires, no shots fired in bravado; in short, the enemy makes no pretence of having got the best of the quarrel. It is, however, rather a bore that no satisfactory account has been given of the Hindustani fanatics. Viewing it altogether, it may be said that an expedition, of which it would have been very easy to make an infinite mess, has been conducted without a single mistake; and that if little positive profit has been made, it is because no more was possible, or aimed at.

A letter from Camp Dilboorie, Oct. 18, informs us that Major Tytler, v.c., commanding the 4th Goorkhas, Lieut. Palmer, of the 20th N.I., and Major Close, of the 5th Goorkhas, have all gone in ill, and we hear that Major Fane and General Wilde are both down with dysentery. It is very wonderful that more are not ill with the same complaint, for the water on the Muchai Peak was dreadful, very thick, and a deposit of the greatest filth imaginable.

A correspondent of the Indian Daily News thus grumbles from Munna-ki-dunna, Oct. 12:—"A native officer of the 2nd Punjab Infantry, a fine, strapping Pathan, with the order of merit and military medals on his breast, said to me yesterday, showing me his dog, 'This animal would come with me to see the war, and he is going back very disappointed, and I can't make out what the Sirkar meant by collecting such a large army just to march to the top of the Muchai Peak. Why, the 5th Goorkhas and ourselves, with the Mule Batteries, would have done that;' and this worthy opinion is re-echoed from Muchai to Oghee. Brownlow's Pathans are fully as disgusted as their gallant leader; the little Goorkhas make no secret of their thoughts of frontier diplomacy. The Punjab regiments talk of Chamberlain Sahib, Umbeyia, and Wuzeree, and officers and men of British regiments laugh at the route march to the Muchai Peak. The 6th complain that they have had no chance of trying their 'Sniders' on the Chiggerzais; the 19th that their Enfields have never been near enough to touch up the brutes who dragged them up the hill. Jackson, after all his labour, finds his rockets useless, and his mortars never to be tried. One and all growl and grumble, and none stayeth them. Even Sir William Maunsfield's pets can scarcely claim a brevet, though after Abyssinia, Heaven knows who may get one (if any are given). I think I shall be safe in naming C. C. Johnson and Fane to be Lieutenant-Colonels, Captains Ellis and Buller to be Majors."

STATION TALK.

KUSSOWLIE, Oct. 9.—The people of this station, with those in its neighbourhood, had a day of meeting on Wednesday last at the Lawrence Asylum. It was an appointment in commemoration of the founder of the institution, and held this year on the 7th of October in place of the heretofore recognised 28th of June. The change from the one day to the other was made, it seems, on account of the weather, which in these parts during June is disagreeably wet. The fanciful dame, in spite of such a change, showed a rainless 28th of June this year, and closed the 7th of October with a shower and most angry looks of what it could or may do. However, regardless of the shower, the high winds, and ruffled brow of the heavens, the day was well begun and ended well. The routine of the day seems to have been carried on to the letter. By a reference to last year's programme I find the boys drilling, the service in the school chapel, the distribution of prizes, concert by the girls and then by the boys, the tiffin for the visitors and the children, the sports, and lastly the bon-fire on an adjoining mountain top, to be the regular order for the day. The gathering of visitors was large. The Commissioner of Umballa, General Harris, the Commandants of Kussowlie and Dugshai, the Chaplains of the adjoining stations and of Simla, Dr. Bradshaw, of Kussowlie, Mr. Willmot, D. P. I. Inspector of Umballa, were the more prominent of the people assembled; their wives, and very many more with their wives, witnessed the doings of the day. The service in the chapel was read by the Rev. J. Baly, of Simla, and the sermon was preached by the Rev. C. T. Toussaint, of Kussowlie. The text selected for the occasion by Mr. Toussaint was very appropriate, "Son, give me thy heart." After service the distribution of prizes was effected. This was done in the girls' school-room. I hope I shall here be excused for digressing. The girls' school-room is a part of their dormitories, and not, as that of the boys, a separate building. From what I could pick up at the institution the other day, it appears that the girls are to have a special building for their school. The boys' school-room is a good one, but its situation I should think is a convenient one for the girls' department, but most objectionable for the boys. It forms quite the nucleus of the girls' department. The sleeping-rooms are commanded by it. The teachers' houses surround it. Why, then, not give this building over to the girls, and build one more conveniently for the boys? The present building is a long way off from the boys' play-ground and dormitories and close to the girls'. The boys should have another building, and it could, as far as my observation goes, be erected on one of the flanks of their play-ground. This would be convenient for very many reasons. The locality of the present building struck me as absurd for the boys and well fitted for the girls. Can the teachers of the boys' school prevent communications and sly looks being passed on to the girls below? I shall not say more here than ask the authorities to look and see. Think well before building the new school. Back to the distribution of prizes. The boys and girls here gave us some songs, which were, of course, very well done. Colonel R. G. Taylor addressed a few but suitable words to the children, as General Harris had done on the drill ground to the boys. This pleasant part of the day was succeeded by a more pleasant one at the tiffin table, and then all adjourned to the play-ground. During several parts of the day's doings H.M.'s 104th band had done their share in enlivening a day set apart for so noble a commemoration as the military asylum and its founder. The institution band, which I must say plays remarkably well, assisted them. This forms the twenty-first commemoration of an asylum which has in that period not only sent out very many healthy and happy children who have grown into useful members of society, but thrown out three powerful wide-spreading branches, each of which is likely, through God's blessing, to be as strong, as powerful, as useful, as the parent stock.

DINAPORE, Oct. 10.—The Department Public Works is proverbially slow all over India, but here especially so. The state of the road between the military cantonments and the Railway station has been undergoing repair for at least two years, and is now in a disgraceful state; heaps of kunkur on both sides and working parties in the middle, who seem to make no progress at all. This road is a raised embankment about ten feet high and not thirty feet wide, and you may imagine there is little room left when a line of kunkur runs along each side. Several accidents have already taken place, but it wants a Commissioner or some big swell to go over it before the Executive Engineer will hurry himself. I hear a resting camp will soon be pitched at the Railway station for troops moving up and down. Sonopore fair is beginning to cast its shadows before it. Long strings of horses are arriving here. This is likely to be the best race meeting Sonopore has seen for a long time; all the crack horses on this side of India are to be there, but I fear the attendance of the old friends, indeed, the originators of the meeting, will be poor; I mean the Tirhoot planters. They have not seen prosperous days lately, and their attendance at Sonopore is getting less and less every year. One of them there two years ago had been at the first meeting, thirty-three years before, and had ridden races every year from that time; then he rode a race, when over sixty years of age, and well he did it too. But the good old sporting gentleman is fast disappearing out of India. Now it is home, home. The gentlemen of the civil and military services are too poor now. Money is not of its former value, and the interlopers (right good fellows they are too) make money and hook it, and can still keep their business and property by having another of the firm out. There will be charming weather for Sonopore. I may say the cold weather has fairly set in; the nights and mornings are delightful, and the military have already begun cricket. The number of robberies taking place here now is extraordinary; the police do not appear to be of much use, and as to tracing property it is quite beyond them. Whatever the police do, I must say the Cantonment Magistrate does not spare the thieves when he catches them.

HILLS NORTH OF DEYRAH, Oct. 21.—I am afraid there will soon be nothing to chronicle from this part of the world, at least in the shape of news. All the world and his wife are bidding us adieu. No one left to write about, not even "the girls of the period!" Pic-nics seem to be the rage. No less than four sometimes in one day. Season of 1868 will soon be a thing of the past. The band of H.M.'s 79th took their departure on Monday. I am told on reliable authority that the Commissioner of the Division, Mr. Williams, will meet the Lieutenant Governor of the North-West Provinces at Sowree, a station in the hills, and march in from thence along with him to Mussoorie. Probably Colonel Ramsay, C.B., will be of the party. The hill men from every village in the surrounding district have been ordered to be in waiting with supplies, and to furnish coolies for the big wigs, a great hardship at this time, when the puharees are cutting their crops and storing their harvest. The new, or Almorah road, as it has been called, is a very creditable affair, and a great improvement upon the old one. There is a rumour that the Rev. Mr. Richards, at present in charge of Bareilly, will be posted to Landour. I can confidently say he would be welcomed by all the community at this place. A heavy storm from the north-west, accompanied with thunder and lightning and heavy rain, passed over the station on Saturday night. Rain is not wanted, nor does it generally fall at this season, but as a part of the whole, this is the most unusual season on record. An old hill man, upwards of ninety, assured me he had never seen such a season as the present. Grain is not falling in price. The poor in consequence will be the sufferers. The cold weather is fast setting in. A very perceptible difference already in the temperature. The Major-General commanding the division has left. The people moving down are obliged to secure their dawk carriages days before, there is such a demand. Houses at Deyrah in great request for the winter. Building there would be a capital spec.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

RAILWAY FROM MEERUT TO UMBALLA.—The Delhi Gazette announces the completion of the railway between Meerut and Umballa.

REWARD FOR SERVICE.—We believe that the Viceroy has sanctioned the grant of a special pensionary allowance to Rajah Maun Sing, of Parou, as a reward for the capture of the rebel Tantia Topce.—Indian Daily News.

THE RELIEFS OF 1868-9.—The reliefs of the season commence next month. The 1st Regiment N.I., now at Dum-Dum, the 17th Native Cavalry at Barrackpore, and the 18th (late Militia) Regiment N.I., now at Bhaugulpore, ordered to the North-Western Provinces, leave the Presidency early in November.—Indian Daily News, Oct. 24.

OFFICIAL ITEM.—It is probable that Dr. Green, Inspector-General of the Medical Department, Lower Provinces, will proceed to England in March next, and that Dr. Murray, Inspector-General of the North-Western Provinces, is to succeed him. It has been also decided that the post of the latter officer is to be abolished, and the Inspector-Generalship of the Upper Provinces is to be amalgamated with that of the Lower Provinces.—Indian Daily News.

ARRACAN.—The Arracan News of Oct. 15 says that the hill tribes of North Arracan are anxious to enter into better relations with the British Government. Some of the chiefs of the more distant class have of their own accord sought to establish a more friendly policy with the Superintendent. The Government have sanctioned the building of a town at the foot of the hills, to which it is expected the tribes will come down for the purpose of trade.—Englishman.

A THIN-SKINNED NATIVE CHIEF.—An error occurred in a Khureeta recently addressed to one of the Rajpootana chiefs, by which one of his titles was omitted. The chief chose to imagine the omission did not arise from a mistake, and accordingly sent an officer to the political agent, with a request that the letter might be sent back to the Viceroy, and the omission supplied. This led to his Highness being snubbed. The story is illustrative of the store native chiefs set by the smallest punctilio which concerns their rank.—Ibid.

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE.—Sir John Lawrence is not to leave without a key to his policy, and reasons for the principal measures enacted by him as Viceroy. He is, the Friend of India understands, "engaged in the preparation of an elaborate minute on the policy and the principal acts of his administration during his five years' tenure of office. The document, which will not be published till his Excellency has resigned his office, promises to be one of great historical importance as well as present political interest. It will be based, we believe, on narratives prepared by each of the secretariat offices and departments. As these narratives are in themselves likely to be of interest, we trust his Excellency will order their publication as an appendix to his own State paper."

EXPECTED MEETING OF THE VICEROY AND THE AMEER OF AFGHANISTAN AT PESHAWUR.—The following telegram from Lahore appears in the Bombay Gazette for Oct. 31.—H. E. the Viceroy, with H. E. the Commander-in-Chief, will be at Peshawur in December next. Not less than twenty thousand troops are to assemble at Peshawur on the occasion, from all parts of the Punjab. The object of the Governor-General's visit, as reported by telegrams which have been received, will be to have an interview with the Cabul Ameer, Shere Ali Khan, whose troops are to assemble near the Khattak Hills in the neighbourhood of Peshawur. The British troops are to be located on the Chamkannee Plains. His Honour, the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab will join the Durbar, and all the Mallicks, Khans, and Khyles of the Peshawur divisions, and probably the Seekh and Mussulman chiefs, rajahs, and Sirdars of the Punjab, will be invited to it.

ACCIDENT TO MAJOR COBBE.—We are sorry to hear that Major F. H. Cobbe, Superintending Engineer, Rajpootana Circle, has met with a severe accident on his way from Aboo to join Colonel Keatinge's camp at Ajmere. Driving over a bad bit of road (there are numerous bad bits in Rajpootana), his dog-cart turned over and he was thrown out with considerable violence, unfortunately breaking his arm in the fall and being otherwise a good deal shaken. It is satisfactory to know, however, that he is progressing favourably.—Delhi Gazette, Oct. 24.

MR. W. HUNTER.—On the return of Mr. W. W. Hunter to India in a few weeks, we understand that he is likely to be posted to an appointment in Calcutta which will give him considerable leisure for the compilation of a Gazetteer of Bengal, Behar and Orissa. The rich and as yet hardly explored mine of statistics in the cellars of the Board of Revenue will be opened to him, and we may expect to have the truth told, in the accurate and agreeable style of the author of the annals of "Rural Bengal," regarding the origin, history and effects on all classes of the Perpetual Settlement. The sum of Rs. 12,000 and the period of 18 months have been assigned by the Government of India for the preparation and publication of the Gazetteer. For a vast and varied province like Bengal proper, covering one-fourth of the area and containing one-fifth of the population of all India, that sum and that period are manifestly insufficient, but Mr. Hunter will doubtless be left practically uncontrolled as to both.—Friend of India.

HOW THE MONEY GOES.—The third sale of the old mats from Government House was held at the Sailors' Home, in Lall Bazaar, on Tuesday last, by order of Captain Tucker, of the Royal Engineers. The only information given to the public of this important sale was by pasting a bit of paper on the door of the Sailors' Home, and another on the "Public Works Department" an hour before the sale took place, consequently the Captain and his Baboo were likely to have the game entirely to themselves. But they were greatly mistaken; for some of the Bircewallahs, who could read and write, found out what was going on, and, to the consternation of all present, made a few spirited bids, and carried off the old mats in triumph. There are four more auctions in Cossitollah, but this new one beats them all. What will Mackenzie, Lyall and Co. say to this? Will it be believed that those fine premises, the old Sailors' Home, which have been nearly twelve months vacant, are now converted into a receiving depot for Government House rubbish? A few months ago there was an auction of broken venetians, now a lot of old beams have come in which will require another. Government are paying Rs. 500 a month for offices in many parts of the town, not a bit better than this fine old Home, which is now turned into an occasional auction room. It has been spoken of as a police court when the auctions are over.—Indian Daily News.

CAPTAIN LAWES.—We hear from Subathoo that Captain Lawes was, on the 10th October, removed from his house into close arrest under a sentry day and night, and that since the 12th he has been placed on soldier's rations, while all his property has been seized. These severe measures naturally lead to the belief in the neighbourhood that the sentence of the court-martial has been adverse to the accused. But, so far as we know, the sentence has not been promulgated or confirmed, and is not, therefore, whatever its tenor, yet in force. To put it, therefore, in any degree into force at present must be premature, and, we should think, illegal. Unless these harsh steps would have been proper in the case of the Court's finding having been favourable to the prisoner, they are not the more justifiable (as yet) in consequence of its finding being unfavourable. Of course, if there were grounds for apprehending an attempt at escape, as in the case of Captain Cunningham, any measures necessary to frustrate it would be excusable, and indeed bounden. Possibly this may be the explanation of the rigorous arrest described by our correspondent; but there should, in this case, be solid grounds for apprehending an attempt at evasion; the wish to make it impossible will hardly suffice. In every country the problem, how to reconcile the safe custody of prisoners with the absence of all but the legally awarded severity, is a troublesome and costly one, but it is one which authority must not shirk nevertheless. As to Captain Lawes's reduction to "soldier's rations," we altogether fail to perceive its utility or sense.—Pioneer.

MILITARY.—We hear that Lieutenant-colonel C. H. Byers, doing duty at Barrackpore, is to obtain the officiating command of the 11th Regiment N.I. on Colonel E. D. Watson's proceeding on furlough. The 11th N.I., formerly the 70th N.I., was the regiment in which Lieutenant-colonel Byers rose.—Englishman.—The 3rd Bengal Cavalry and the 45th N.I. of the Peshawur garrison, under orders to march towards Saugor and Mooltan respectively on the 20th instant, have been ordered to "stand fast." Both regiments had vacated their lines and moved into camp. Carriage had been collected. On the 19th October it pleased the Quarter-master-general, Army Head-quarters, to intimate to the Major-general Commanding the Peshawur Division that no movement was to be made for the present.—Three companies of H.M.'s 41st (The Welch) Regiment, numbering 8 officers and 204 rank and file, under command of Captain G. Peddie, left Agra on the morning of the 21st October, to relieve the detachment of H.M.'s 101st Royal Bengal Fusiliers at Futtehghurb, the latter regiment being at present under orders for home. The camp equipage of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has been returned to the Agra Magazine from Delhi, where it was stopped on its way from Agra to Umballa, on indication of a change in the Chief's intended movements during the cold season. The prevailing scarcity of food and the inconvenience which might be caused by the assemblage of large camps is no doubt one cause of this change of purpose. Another is not improbably the sudden termination of hostilities on the frontier.—Delhi Gazette.

SPECIFICATIONS OF INVENTIONS.—The undermentioned Specifications of Inventions have been filed, under the provisions of Act XV. of 1859, in the Office of the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department. Copies have been sent to one of the Secretaries to each of the Governments of Bengal, Fort St. George, Bombay, and the North-Western Provinces. A copy of every Specification is open, at all reasonable hours, at the office of the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department at the Presidency, to public inspection, upon payment of a fee of one rupee. A certified copy of any Specification will be given to any person requiring the same, on payment of the expense of copying:—
Mr. William Graham McIvor, Superintendent of the Madras Botanical Gardens and Ootacamund Cinchona plantations, for removing or destroying the momentum or overcoming the inertia of heavy bodies, so as to prevent injury and damage from concussion, applicable to ship cables, ship and fort armour, railway trains, fenders to pier heads and floating piers, gangways, breakwaters, and other similar structures, and for storing and applying motive and locomotive powers. Mr. William Graham McIvor, Superintendent of the Madras Botanical Gardens and Ootacamund Cinchona plantations, for forming bunds, embankments, levellings, &c., also clearing canals, channels, reservoirs, &c., of silt. Captain Francis Weldon, Madras Staff Corps, Local Fund Engineer of the Oomraotee District, for pressing cotton. Mr. James Davidson, of Woolwich, in the county of Kent, England, for improved machinery for manufacturing bullets. Mr. James Davidson, of Woolwich, in the county of Kent, for improved machinery for manufacturing central fire cartridges. Mr. F. A. Calvert, of the county of Manchester, for improvement in machinery and apparatus for clearing and preparing fibrous substances, and for opening twisted yarns and woven fabrics. Mr. Robinson Newton, Mechanical Engineer and Agent, of 7, Hummum Street, Bombay, for improvements in the manufacture of bricks, tiles, architectural blocks, terra cotta, &c. Henry James and Edward Drewett, of Weybridge, in the county of Surrey, England, for improvements in water closes. Walter Burrows, of Malvern, for an improved rack for carrying or containing bottles of soda or other mineral or aerated waters, or other liquids.

THE BISHOP OF MADRAS.—Owing to an attack of fever the Bishop of Madras has been strongly urged by his medical advisers to abandon for the present his proposed tour of visitation and to proceed to the Neigherry Hills. His Lordship has therefore consented to do so, and requested the clergy to address him at Conoor until further notice. He hopes to be at Calicut to-morrow. We fear that the Bishop is overtaxing his strength. He has now been seven years in the country, and has allowed himself but little rest.—Madras Times, Oct. 24.

OFFICIAL CHANGES.—Mr. Newell, the British Resident of Travancore and Cochin, who is about to take leave, preparatory, it is supposed, to retiring from the service, will, we hear, be succeeded at Trevandrum by Mr. Ballard, the collector of Malabar. The appointment of resident was, it is believed, offered by Lord Napier to Mr. Hunter Blair, in further recognition of that gentleman's services as collector of sea customs and protector of emigrants, but Mr. Blair is understood to have elected to remain in the Presidency, during at least the remainder of the present regime.—Madras Times.

RECONSTRUCTION OF DIOCESES.—The three Anglo-Indian dioceses are to be reconstituted, and four new archdeacons are to be appointed to Lahore, Allahabad, Nagpore, and Rangoon, on a salary of Rs. 250 per mensem, in addition to the usual pay of Senior Chaplains. Burmah, the Andamans, Penang, and Singapore are to be added to the Madras diocese, and will form our new archdeaconry. A curtailment of this diocese to the north will also be effected. The scheme now sanctioned was proposed some years ago by Bishop Cotton, and shelved; but Sir John Lawrence revived the matter and determined to put it into execution at once.—Madras Times, Oct. 24.

MADRAS RAILWAY.—The traffic receipts of this company's south-west line for the quarter ending the 30th of September last amounted to £97,243, against £88,796 for the corresponding period of last year. On the north-west line the receipts for the three months have been £34,204, or £210 per mile on an average of 163 miles open, against £22,327, or £146 per mile on 153 miles open for the same period of the previous year. The receipts for both lines together have been £131,447, against £111,123, showing an increase of £20,324, or 18½ per cent. on the quarter; the length of line worked over on the north-west line having been at the same time increased by ten miles.

RELIEF FOR THE STAFF CORPS.—We hear that many of the senior officers of the old Indian Army now in this country will shortly retire. The propositions for a pension and bonus which were sent from Simla to the India-office at first received but small encouragement. It is even said that the Indian Council were extremely wrath at the liberality of the proposals. A rumour, however, is now current in military circles that the Secretary of State for India has had his eyes opened by a simple statement of figures, and that several of the Council have endorsed his opinion that it is a more politic measure to offer good terms to the senior officers for whom there is no employment than to allow them to remain on to form a serious burden to the State. We understand that the terms likely to be offered to an officer of from twenty-five to thirty years' standing are £500 per annum, and a bonus of £1,400 to £2,000 down. Doubtless many will still hold on for the off- reckonings, but the wise will well consider before deciding. Our own opinion is that the married men will hold on for the off- reckonings, though all cannot expect to live to see them. The bachelors will probably elect to secure a comfortable independence at once in Old England, and the State will thus be relieved in a measure from the financial absurdity of an army of general officers.—Madras Times.

A CURIOUS BLUNDER.—Lord Napier, the Governor of Madras, finding the Indian Government opposed to the establishment of separate reformatories for juvenile prisoners, addressed the Secretary of State on the subject, and in his letter quoted an observation of a Madras police official, Major Driver, that "when a boy is flogged he is branded for years, if not for life." The remark alluded to the social disgrace attaching among the higher castes of natives to flogging, but the Secretary of State's reply was that "such indelibility of punishment was never contemplated in the case of juvenile offenders," and that the "branding for life" should be made the subject for some inquiry!—Indian Daily News.

CAROLINA RICE.—We gather from an interesting letter of March last from the Sub-Collector of North Arcot, which is before Government, that the ryots of that district who have made experiments in the cultivation of Carolina paddy express themselves satisfied with the quality of the seed, and the superior flavour of the rice which it produces; and notwithstanding the untoward character of the season, they are inclined to look upon this seed as capable of producing a more abundant crop than any kind of paddy in ordinary use amongst them. Again in July Mr. Comyn stated that, according to the Tahsildar of Vellore, the ryots have represented that there is no more trouble or expense in cultivating the seed in question than the country seed, and that, in good seasons, they expect a large outturn, and better quality of produce. They are stated to be very anxious to pursue the cultivation of this new seed, and some ryots have applied to the Tahsildar for seed. On the other hand, the Acting Head Assistant Collector of the same district reported in June that the experiments conducted under his observation were not successful. A Tahsildar distributed the seventy pounds he got amongst ryots in ten villages, at the rate of seven pounds to each person. The cultivation succeeded partially only in the villages of Kaveripauk, Uriur, Muddar, Punji, but the total outturn was only thirty seers. In the other villages the crop became shabby after growing up to the heights of from half a yard to one yard. The Acting Collector, while admitting that "in all quarters the result was a failure," considers it "satisfactory to note that the general failure of the experiments is not held to be condemnatory of the cultivation of this paddy, but is properly attributed, on all hands, to the extreme unfavourableness of the season. Many of those who failed have expressed confidence in eventual success, and anxiety to repeat the experiment; and opportunity will be afforded them of doing so, it is to be hoped, under better auspices. At Chittoor the flavour of the cooked rice was highly approved of by a committee of competent native judges, who further considered that it would be improved by keeping."—Madras Times.

STATION TALK.

SHOLAPOOR, Oct. 28.—To-day H.M.'s 25th N.L.I. have for the third time received counter-orders as to their move from this, and their destination. The regiment was held in readiness to leave by special trains for Bombay on the 30th, but this order has again been cancelled, and now it has been decreed that head quarters, with six companies, shall relieve the 9th N.I. at Dhoolia, sending a detachment of two companies to Burdah Chowkey. Such orders and counter-orders harass the men and put the officers to great inconvenience. The change is this time caused by the intention of General Gordon, the Provincial Commander-in-Chief, to withdraw the wing of Native Infantry from Dwarka. The policy of this is very questionable, seeing that the country around that station is noted for its disaffection, and troops should always be on the spot ready to act in case of necessity. The move of the 3rd N.L.I., from Kattiawar to Dhoolia and Asseerghur, is also consequently countermanded, and this corps will proceed with the head-quarters and six companies to replace the 2nd Grenadiers at Sattara, and two companies to relieve the 9th N.I. at Asseerghur.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MUSCAT.—The Government of India has authorised that of Bombay to establish a treasury at Muscat.

JACOBABAD.—We learn from Jacobabad that several courts of inquiry have been lately held at that station, under the orders of Colonel Phayre, commandant in chief, Frontier Field Force.

POONAH.—We regret to hear from Ahmednuggur that the horse fever, which had made its appearance at Poonah, has broken out among the horses of the B Battery E Brigade Royal Horse Artillery; and G Battery 14th Brigade Royal Artillery, though not in a very dangerous form.

THE HILL TRIBES ON THE SINDH FRONTIER.—A "kossid," who arrived from Khan Bahadoor Moorad Khan's estate last evening, brought us news to the effect that there has been a skirmish among the hill tribes on the banks of the River Hubb, in which several have been wounded and killed. The intelligence has, we hear, thrown some of the silly residents of the Suddar Bazar into a state of trepidation; they appear to think that the refractory tribes contemplate committing a raid into Kurrachee.—Our Paper, Oct. 20.

MILITARY RELIEFS.—The head quarters of the 2nd N.I. (Grenadiers) have arrived at Poona and are encamped on the race course. On the departure of the 12th Madras N.I. the Grenadiers will move into the right flank lines now occupied by that corps. The 3rd N.I., now stationed at Poona, has been directed to hold itself in readiness to proceed by special trains at 6.35 p.m. on the 28th and 29th inst. to Khundwa, en route to Mhow, by wings. The wings will rest at Callian, Egutpoora, and Khundwa. The detachment 15th N.I., now at Bombay, consisting of one officer and 170 rank and file, has received orders to proceed by the 9.30 A.M. train on the 30th inst., to join the right wing 3rd N.I., at Khundwa, and proceed with it to join the head quarters 15th N.I., at Mhow.—Times of India, Oct. 31.

THE LATE MRS. OLIPHANT.—We have learned that the educated portion of Ahmedabad who appreciated the kind endeavours of the lamented Mrs. Oliphant to encourage female education in the city and open social intercourse between the natives and their rulers, have not only addressed a letter of hearty condolence to her bereaved husband, but raised a subscription to commemorate her name at the scene of her angelic mission. It is proposed to hang her portrait in the principal girls' school of the place, which she patronised with extreme tenderness while she was allowed to grace this mortal world, and if the subscriptions leave a good surplus, as is expected, after defraying this expense, annual prizes will be given from its interest in her name to the best pupils of the school. While noting this occurrence we cannot but say that Ahmedabad has only paid a just debt due to the memory of the good lady whose name deserves to be cherished with all respect by every Guzeratee who can appreciate the nature of her kind services.—Gujarat Mitra.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

WIVES AND FAMILIES OF CHAPLAINS.

Simla, Oct. 8.—No. 2,902.—Read again, the following resolution granting passage expenses to the wives and families of chaplains when travelling in course of relief or on duty of a permanent nature.

No. 2,748, dated Sept. 30, 1868.—Read, an endorsement from the Home Department, No. 549, dated Sept. 19, 1868, on a letter from the Government of Bombay, soliciting sanction to the Rev. Mr. Wolford being reimbursed the expense on account of his wife's passage to Kurrachee, and to the provisions of Bombay G.O. No. 690, dated Dec. 17, 1866, being made applicable to the wives and families of chaplains when travelling in course of relief, or on duty of a permanent nature.

Resolution.—The Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to sanction the application.

Ordered.—That a copy of the above resolution be sent to the several local governments and administrations, and to the several accountants-general and deputy accountants-general in independent charge for information and guidance, and that a copy be published in the Gazette of India for general information.

SERVICE FOR STAFF CORPS.

Simla, Oct. 6.—No. 940.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India is published:—

Military—No. 301.

India-office, London, Aug. 31, 1868.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

Sir,—Some difficulty has been found in ascertaining the course adopted by the several Governments in India, with respect to the date from which the period of three (now reduced to two) years is reckoned, which an officer is required to have served with a regiment before entering the staff corps; and it does not appear whether, in the certificate of the commanding officer, the commencement of this period is taken from the date of the first commission, from that of joining the depot, from the date of embarkation for the country in which the regiment may be serving, or from that of the officer's doing duty with his regiment.

2. It is obviously desirable that the same rule should be applied to all such cases in future; and it seems advisable, for the sake of uniformity, to fix the date of first commission for this purpose.

3. I have, therefore, to request that the necessary instructions may be issued to ensure the adoption of this course for the future.—I have, &c.,

(Signed) STAFFORD H. NORTHCOTE.

ARMY MEDICAL SCHOOL.

Simla, Oct. 7.—No. 943.—The following paragraphs of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 302, dated Aug. 31, are published:—

"Para. 1.—I have to inform you that the following candidates having completed the course of instruction at the army medical school, and having been reported qualified, have been appointed assistant surgeons on the Bengal establishment, their commissions as such bearing date April 1, 1868, viz.:—

D. D. Cunningham, M.B., H. Whitwell, A. Cameron, M.D., B. Evers, J. C. G. Carmichael, M.D., W. Harvey, A. G. Grant, M.B., W. Jackson, G. G. M'Laren, M.B., J. J. Monteath, M.D., and R. H. Stevens, M.B.

2. They have received instructions, with one exception, to proceed to Calcutta within two months from August 1.

3. They will be entitled to count as service for full-pay pension the period of their residence at Netley from April 1 to Aug. 1.

THE NEW CIVIL SERVICE RULES.

Simla, Oct. 6.—No. 2,865.—Read again: Sections 7 and 8 b and c of the new rules regarding leave of absence to covenanted civil servants.

Resolution.—The Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to rule that, in any case where the subsistence allowance under Section 8 b and c exceeds the furlough allowance under Section 7, the latter amount only shall be drawn under Section 8 b and c.

Ordered.—That the foregoing ruling be communicated to the several departments, local governments and administrations, and officers of account.

Ordered also.—That the above be published in the Gazette of India for general information.

PAYMASTERS' PAY AND ALLOWANCES.

Simla, Oct. 13.—No. 968.—In publishing the following despatch from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 291, dated Aug. 26, authorising the grant to regimental paymasters serving in India of the allowances of their relative rank and of the rate of pay allowed at home, H.E. the Governor general in Council is pleased to lay down a scale of pay and allowances which will be issued from Oct. 1:—

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor gen. of India in Council.

Sir,—I have received and considered in Council your Military Despatch No. 122, dated March 23, in which you state that you are in favour of granting to regimental paymasters the Indian allowances of their relative rank, without, however, recognising any necessity for further modifications in accordance with every change in the British service.

Concurring in these views, her Majesty's Government authorise the grant to these officers serving in India of the advantages in respect to pay conferred on them by the Royal Warrant of Feb. 3, 1866. The extra pay should be calculated in accordance with the decision in my Financial Despatch No. 427, Dec. 9, 1867.—I have, &c.,

(Sd.) STAFFORD H. NORTHCOTE.

NOTE.—Horse allowance at Rs. 90 per mensem will be passed in addition to the above rates of pay and allowances to paymasters of cavalry regiments, when in receipt of either the lowest or second rate of pay and allowances; at Rs. 120 to paymasters of cavalry regiments, and at Rs. 30 to paymasters of infantry regiments, when in receipt of the third or higher rates of pay and allowances.

Paymasters will also be entitled to office allowance at present, viz., Rs. 65-5-5 and Rs. 78-10-8 per mensem respectively with cavalry and infantry regiments.

Paymasters, if not holding the rank of captain when appointed, will also be entitled to the higher rates of pay and allowances for length of service as given in the second division of the above Table, under the following alternative conditions:—

(a.) After five years' service as paymaster, or after fifteen years' service as commissioned and non-commissioned officer, of which at least ten years shall have been as a commissioned officer on full pay.

(b.) After ten years' service as paymaster, or after twenty years' service as commissioned and non-commissioned officer, of which at least ten years shall have been as a commissioned officer on full pay, including not less than five years as paymaster in receipt of the pay, whether in or out of India.

(c.) After fifteen years' service as paymaster, or after twenty years' service as commissioned and non-commissioned officer on full pay, including not less than ten years as paymaster, or after twenty-five years' service as a commissioned and non-commissioned officer, of which at least fifteen years shall have been as a commissioned officer on full pay, including not less than ten years as paymaster.

(d.) After twenty years' service as paymaster, or after twenty-five years' service as commissioned officer on full pay, including not less than fifteen years as paymaster, or after thirty years' service as a commissioned and non-commissioned officer, of which at least twenty years shall have been as commissioned officer on full pay, including not less than fifteen years as paymaster.

EXAMINATION OF CHAPLAINS.

Sept. 24.—No. 572.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to extend to chaplains on the Madras, Bombay, and Bengal ecclesiastical establishments the rules for the examination of military officers in native languages promulgated in the following notifications:—

Military Department Notification No. 734, dated Sept. 9, 1864, published in the Gazette of India of 10th idem.

Military Department Notification No. 690, dated July 13, 1865, published in the Gazette of India of 15th idem.

Military Department Notification No. 294, dated March 24, 1866, published in the Gazette of India of 31st idem.

The examination of chaplains will be conducted in the same manner and by the same agency as the examination of military officers, except that, in the case of chaplains, the reports of the examinations, instead of being sent to the adjt. gen. of the army, will be submitted to the local government or administration under which the chaplain may be serving.

E. C. BAILEY, Secy. to the Govt. of India.

REMOVAL OF RESTRICTIONS BY THE MAHARAJAH OF JEYPORE.

Oct. 16.—No. 1,798.—H.E. the Viceroy and G.G. in Council has much pleasure in publishing for general information a proclamation issued by the Maharajah of Jeypore, in which H.H. announces that he has removed all restrictions on the traffic of grain in his territory, and has abandoned the collection of every description of tax on grain.

H.E. in Council trusts that the enlightened and humane example set by the Maharajah of Jeypore may be followed by other chiefs throughout India.

PROMOTION OF SURGEONS.

Simla, Oct. 6.—No. 941.—The following military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India is published for general information :—

Military.—No. 305.

India-office, London, Aug. 31, 1868.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

Sir,—In the Royal Warrant of 1866, regulating the pay and promotion of officers and soldiers of H.M.'s British service elsewhere than in India, it is ruled, by clause 287, that "a surgeon of less than twenty years' full-pay service may be promoted to the rank of surgeon-major for distinguished service."

2. H.M.'s Govt. have determined that this regulation shall be held applicable to the Indian medical service. It is to be remembered that this promotion is not brevet, but substantive, and that it will carry with it the advantages of increased pay, &c., which appertain to the rank of surgeon-major.

3. You will observe that, by the enclosed extract of the Royal Warrant above mentioned [clause 287], it is necessary that "the recommendation detailing the services for which the officer is proposed for promotion for distinguished services shall be published in the G.O. of the army, and in the Gazette in which such promotion shall appear."—I have, &c.,

(Signed) STAFFORD H. NORTHCOTE.

Extract from the Royal Warrant, 1866, Part I.—Pay.

Clause 287.—A surgeon after twenty years' service in any rank shall be styled surgeon-major, but a surgeon of less than twenty years' full-pay service may be promoted to the rank of surgeon-major for distinguished service. The recommendation detailing the service for which the officer is proposed for promotion for distinguished service shall be published in the G.O. of the army, and in the Gazette in which such promotion shall appear.

HOSPITAL ASSISTANTS.

Simla, Oct. 7.—No. 945.—The Right Hon. the Gov. gen. in Council has been pleased to determine that the qualification in the English language which will entitle hospital assistants and passed medical pupils to the increased rates of pay sanctioned in paragraph 36 of G.G.O. No. 550, 1868, shall be as follows :—

1. The ability to read fluently and intelligently ordinary English prose; for instance, a page of any standard History of England or India.
 2. A fair knowledge of orthography, and the ability to write from dictation with a reasonable amount of correctness.
 3. A competent knowledge of simple arithmetic as far as the Rule of Three.
 4. The ability to read and write English prescriptions intelligently.
- The qualification of unpassed pupils must be judged of by the medical officers under whom they are placed, and should be such as to afford the prospect of their being qualified as above on passing their professional examination.

H.E. in Council is further pleased to direct that the admission to an hospital assistant of the increased rate of pay (Rs. 40) after seven years' service, and again to a first class assistant of that (Rs. 60) after fourteen years' service, can only be sanctioned on the certificate of the medical officer under whom the candidate may be serving that he has not only maintained his previous knowledge, but also made fair progress in his acquaintance with the English language.

The allowance will be passed to native doctors now in the service (after they have been appointed to the grades mentioned in the order) whenever they shall be duly certified to be qualified as above required.

HAZARA FIELD FORCE.—FIELD HOSPITALS.

Head Qrs., Simla, Oct. 8.—The following Hazara field force orders are, with the sanction of Government, confirmed :—

Dated Aug. 27 last, appointing Private John Holdship, 77th Foot, to officiate as hospital sergeant to the field hospital at Abbottabad, as a temporary measure.

2. Establishing a field hospital for British troops at Abbottabad, with an establishment of one surgeon and two assistant surgeons permanently.
3. All assistant surgeons, British service, not otherwise employed, to be attached temporarily to the field hospital, at the discretion of the deputy inspector general of hospitals.
4. The subordinate medical establishment and hospital establishment will be on the scale authorised for a British regiment.
5. Establishing a field officer for native troops at Abbottabad, with an establishment of one surgeon, one assistant surgeon (her Majesty's Indian service), and two native doctors.
6. All assistant surgeons, not otherwise employed, will be attached temporarily to the field hospital.

Dated Sept. 1, establishing a field hospital for British troops at Ogie, with an establishment of one surgeon and two assistant surgeons (British service), with medical subordinates and hospital establishment on the scale sanctioned for a British regiment.

CHAPLAINS OF THE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND.

Simla, Oct. 13.—No. 3,075.—Read the following despatch from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India :—

Financial, No. 377.

India Office, London, Sept. 9, 1868.

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor General of India in Council.

Sir,—I have considered in council your financial letter, dated July 6 last, No. 156, recommending, with reference to the concessions recently granted to chaplains of the Church of England.

"1st. That such chaplains of the Church of Scotland in India as now receive Rs. 700 per mensem, viz., one in each Presidency, should be allowed Rs. 800 per mensem from the date on which salaries at that rate were allowed to senior chaplains of the Church of England in Madras and Bombay.

"2nd. That on the occurrence of vacancies the salaries of the three senior chaplains of the Church of Scotland in the three Presidencies, who now receive more than Rs. 800 per mensem, should be reduced to that rate.

"3rd. That the rates of pension allowed to chaplains of the Church of England in India should be sanctioned for chaplains of the Church of Scotland also.

"4th. That a special allowance of Rs. 200 per mensem should be granted to the senior chaplain of the Church of Scotland in Bengal, and special allowances of Rs. 150 per mensem each to the senior chaplains of the Church of Scotland in Madras and Bombay."

2. These propositions are sanctioned.—I have, &c.,

(Signed) STAFFORD H. NORTHCOTE.

SALE OF PROPERTY TO NATIVES BY BRITISH OFFICERS.

1. Resolution.—H.E. the Viceroy and Governor General in Council observes that these references originated with a case which occurred at Allahabad, where an officer wished to part with his house to a native under circumstances not open to any suspicion, and with a remark from the Home Department, to the effect that some change or relaxation of the rule which prohibits the sale of property to natives by public servants under any circumstances seemed desirable. At present, under the notification of Dec. 3, 1858, drawn up in consequence of the orders of the late Court of Directors, sales of property to natives are strictly prohibited, and officers are thereby directed to refer all transactions in regard to which they have any doubts, for the orders of superior authority.

2. H.E. in Council observes that the weight of authority on the part of the various administrations and departments which have lately been consulted on this subject is decidedly in favour of some modification of the existing rule, or, at least, of more clearly and accurately defining the course to be pursued in such cases. There can be no doubt that the restrictions imposed hitherto on such transactions have been, to a certain extent, beneficial, and that the Government of India, though it can place a full reliance on the fair dealing, honour, and integrity of its civil and military services, has a right to expect not only that all such transactions shall be correct and unimpeachable in themselves, but that they shall not run any risk of misconstruction at the hands of designing, ignorant, or credulous persons.

3. The Government of India is also well aware, as pointed out by some of the high authorities consulted, that many officials who, on joining their stations, have become the owners of houses either under an absolute necessity or from laudable motives of convenience and comfort, may, on quitting the district or province to which they have been for some time attached, literally find no purchasers for their property, except natives of wealth or substance. When such transactions openly and avowedly take place, no evil consequences, H.E. in Council thinks, need ever ensue under proper precautions.

4. The following rules have therefore been drawn up in supersession of the existing rule, and are hereby published for general information. They must be considered applicable to European public servants of all descriptions, civil, military, and uncovenanted.

5. I.—Whenever a public servant wishes to dispose of a house, bungalow, elephant, horse, or carriage, or other valuable property to any native within his jurisdiction, or within the limits of the district in which he is employed, on the public service, and from which he is not about to remove, he must report his intention to the local government to which he is subordinate, stating the facts and circumstances, and the price offered for the article to be sold. The local government will then pass such orders on the reference as may seem fit and proper.

II.—Whenever a public servant is about to quit his station or district permanently, or for a considerable period, and wishes to dispose of his house, bungalow, elephant, carriages, and horses, and the like property of value, to native purchasers, he shall report his intention to the commissioner or the head local to which he may be immediately subordinate, and that authority will use its discretion in allowing the transaction, or in reporting the circumstance to the local government for further orders.

III.—Whenever a public servant, on quitting his station or district, wishes to dispose of his furniture, household goods, live stock, &c., he is at full liberty to do so either by circulating lists of such property amongst the community generally, or by having the same put up to public auction, without reference to any authority whatever. All that is necessary is that the transaction should be open and patent to everybody on the spot.

IV.—Rule No. 1 is to be considered applicable to purchases equally with sales.

6. The observance of the above rules will, H.E. in Council thinks, fully meet the inconveniences and exigencies to which gentlemen of acknowledged honour and probity would be put on many occasions, if debarred from such transactions, while at the same time they will be a sufficient safeguard against any abuse, any imputation of unfair or interested dealings, or any possibility of misconception on the part of the non-official community.

THE SOVEREIGN AT TEN RUPEES IN INDIA.

[Communicated by J. Bridgnell, Esq., Chief Accountant of the Calcutta Royal Mint, and Assistant-commissioner for Paper Currency.]

Throughout India there is a desire for a gold coinage as a legal circulating medium. The Indian Government attempted to introduce the sovereigns by declaring its willingness to receive them at the rate of Rs. 10 each, when their market value was above that rate, and they could not be imported except at a rate higher than Rs. 10. The consequence was, as might have been anticipated, that the measure was futile, and ever will be so unless other measures be adopted to disturb the rate of value between sovereigns and rupees. The only true solution of the problem for introducing the sovereign into India at Rs. 10 was given by Colonel Hyde, the Master of the Mint at Calcutta, in his evidence before the Currency Commission; and if the Commission had paid that attention to it which it merited, and not passed it over silently by pinning their faith to the preconceived opinion of their president, Lieut.-General Mansfield, in recommending the old East India Company's gold mohur, the sovereign as a legal coin in India would have been ere now un fait accompli. In this paper we will review the reasons given by Colonel Hyde for his recommendation. They are chiefly stated by him to be as follows:—

Why do you prefer a sovereign to any Indian coin? I look to the Australian sovereign being made identical with the English sovereign, in which case it would be the most economical arrangement, as saving the country the cost of recoining a gold currency. It would enable merchants, in time of emergency and large influxes of bullion, to lay down their money in India quicker and with certainty. A sovereign worth Rs. 10 gives a decimal valuation which is easier in accounts than that of 1 to 15 in the mohur. If the English sovereign be made a legal tender at Rs. 10, the cost of the rupee could be adjusted to that rate by an increase of mint charges on silver, and until, by reaction of foreign markets, the effect of those charges was nullified, the sovereign would pass current at Rs. 10. The present rate of Rs. 10-132 per sovereign would seem to show that an increase in mint charges on silver by 2 per cent., or up to 4-1 per cent. total charges, would effect the object. A slight alteration in the copper coinage changed to bronze would make a very good decimal currency, that would, when the time arrived to change the standard to gold, require only the depreciation of the rupee or two-shilling piece to assimilate it to the currency of the mother country.

Finding that the average price of the sovereign in the Indian markets ranged at about 2 per cent. above Rs. 10, Colonel Hyde proposed to lay an additional seignorage on silver in the Indian Mint, so as to give a trifling advantage to the import of gold over silver. So long as there is a balance of trade between England and India to be adjusted, in consequence of the imports from India and the East exceeding the exports to it, that balance must be adjusted by bullion remittances; and the fact of the remittances during the last five years, amounting to £23,320,000* sterling, having been made in silver, only shows that it was a far more profitable mode of adjusting accounts than sending gold, which, even when laid down from Australia, could not be imported into India under Rs. 10-4-6 or Rs. 10-28 $\frac{1}{2}$ per sovereign—a rate that, allowing 2 per cent. for freight, insurance, brokerage, &c., would give an arbitrated par of exchange of 23-91 pence per rupee, or a rate which is higher than the mean average rates paid for bills in India by the India Council.

In proposing an additional seignorage of 2 per cent. on silver, the average price of sovereigns in India was taken into account, which average price was regulated by the average price for silver in India, and this latter was dependent on the price for silver in London. Now it will be observed, by an examination of the table below, that the average London price has been 61 $\frac{1}{2}$ d. per oz., the lowest or cheapest price being 60 $\frac{1}{2}$ d., or 6-8ths of a penny below the average, equal to 1-23 per cent.; and, consequently, that the additional seignorage on silver in the Indian Mints should also protect this extreme deviation from the average by being 1-2 per cent., plus 2 per cent., or, say, 3-3 per cent.:—

		RATE OF BAR SILVER.				Difference.	Percentage.
		Highest.	Lowest.
1863	...	61 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.	61d.	...	$\frac{1}{2}$ d.	...	1-230
1864	...	62 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.	60 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.	...	1 $\frac{1}{2}$ d.	...	2-460

Colonel J. T. Smith, in his "Remarks on a Gold Currency for India" (page 33), also makes the average price, on a comparison of the prices of fourteen years, 61 $\frac{1}{2}$; so that, if an additional seignorage is the only remedy for introducing the sovereign at Rs. 10, that seignorage should be fixed at a maximum of 3-3 per cent., plus the present seignorage of 2-1 per cent., or a total of, say 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., and regulated from time to time to suit the London market price of silver.

Possibly the rate of 5½ per cent. may be considered high, but the seignorage in England on shillings at 66d. per oz., and bullion at 61½d. per oz. is fully equal to 7·5 per cent. The alteration of the seignorage from time to time may also be objected to on the ground that it would un hinge the arbitrated exchange between India and England dependent on silver. Practically, however, by a careful consideration of the rate which the Indian Government may fix, it would scarcely be necessary to alter the rates except after long intervals of years, and the rates of exchange would be far more stable than they are at present. By these proposals a definite and practically fixed arbitrated rate of exchange between India, England, and Australia is obtained, based on gold only, whereas now the arbitrated exchange is a duality—the one, based on gold, fluctuating daily with the Indian market price for gold; the other, based on silver, fluctuating daily with the London market price for silver.

The question has now to be considered as to the practical carrying out of the suggestion. It has been proposed* to prohibit the coinage of silver on behalf of individuals, and to restrict† its coinage by purchasing silver bullion to the extent required "by public auction" at the most advantageous offers above the Mint rates. Now, as only twenty or thirty lacs of rupees are actually required by India for the replenishment of the country‡, it is absolutely necessary that Government should coin rupees to that extent to avoid a scarcity of silver coins. There appears to be no necessity for prohibiting the coinage of silver, and the only way of discouraging importation and giving the preference to gold is, as shown already, simply to put a prohibitory rate of seignorage on silver.

With the sovereign a legal tender in India, it would obviously be objectionable to coin any other gold coin than the sovereign and its half; but whether a duty should be charged or not in coining gold has to be decided. In all the mints in the world there is a seignorage on gold; and even in the London Mint, though nominally gold is coined free of charge, the practice of restricting the tenders of gold to £10,000 tends to fix a duty of 1½d. per oz.—that is, the difference between coin gold, £3. 17s. 10½d. per oz., and the price paid by the Bank of England for gold bullion, £3. 17s. 9d., which is equal to 0·16 per cent. In the Paris Mint the seignorage is 2 per cent.; in the Australian Mint it is 7·5 per cent. on large parcels and 10 per cent. on small parcels; and in the Indian Mints it is 1 per cent.§ Colonel Smith proposes to exempt gold from duty,|| for the singular reason that it would encourage the importation of Australian coins instead of bullion,¶ which, on the contrary, seems to us a valid reason for imposing a duty, for thereby India would get its gold coinage imported and ready for use without any expense for coining. Even if there was no seignorage on gold in India, it would not tend to export gold bullion instead of gold coins, for the Australian Government levies a Customs' export duty on gold bullion fully equal to the seignorage at the Mints there, and, in so far as the exporter is concerned, his remittance of £1,000 in sovereigns or in gold bullion would be intrinsically of the same value, but he would obtain an advantage in sovereigns in getting a ready market for it at the par of Rs. 10. Considering, therefore, that the only country from which gold bullion will be imported into India will be China, in payment for the balance of trade, and that hitherto China has adjusted the Indian demands partly by bills on England, partly by silver, and partly by gold to a very limited extent—further, that the additional seignorage of duty on silver will check its importation from England, and even from China, and thus reduce the profit the Indian Government would derive from the seignorage on silver—it would not be advisable that the Indian Government should get rid of the seignorage, but should fix it at the maximum of 1 per cent.

If, therefore, Colonel Hyde's suggestions were adopted, all that would be necessary for the Indian Government to do in order to introduce the British sovereign as a legal coin in India would be—

1. To declare the sovereign a legal tender in India at the equivalent of Rs. 10, the option of paying either being with the payer.
2. To obtain imperial authority to coin gold bullion in the Indian Mints into sovereigns and halves.
3. To raise the seignorage of silver to a maximum of 5½ per cent.
4. To fix a maximum seignorage on gold bullion of 1 per cent.
5. To empower the Governor-General in Council to fix the seignorage from time to time within the maximum, the alteration to take place six months after notification of change.
6. If the sovereign be declared legal tender at Rs. 10, an arbitrated par of exchange between India and England will be established that will not fluctuate with the rise and fall of silver bullion in the London market, and thereby the intricacies of commercial exchange between the two countries, created by bankers and bullion dealers only for their manifest advantage, will be avoided; for the par of exchange will mainly depend upon freight, insurance, and brokerage, which, being once settled, will continue fixed for long periods, at a rate between 3 and 2 per cent., or less, according as England or Australia may export the sovereign to India.
7. The following table shows the net arbitrated par of exchange that will thus be established if the sovereign be made a legal tender at Rs. 10 in India, and, instead of the exchange with India being quoted at the unintelligible rates of so many shillings, pence, and eighths per rupee, bills on India could be sold at a discount varying from 2 to 3 per cent., which is easily understood by all, and could be readily calculated without the aid of cumbersome tables of exchange:—

Charges at per Cent.	Arbitrated par of Exchange per Rupee.	Arbitrated par of Exchange at Discount of

THE BOMBAY BANK COMMISSION.

On Monday, November 16th, the sitting was resumed at No. 90, Richmond-road, Bayswater, the private residence of Mr. Blair.

Mr. Blair was sworn, and at first refused to be examined, because the chairman said a written statement he had sent in had not been recorded on the minutes; but, on the chairman's promising that it should be recorded, he said he would answer the questions. He stated that he entered the bank as chief accountant in 1853; he became secretary in 1856, and secretary in 1860. Knew the system of discounts under the old Act. Two names of independent firms were always required. A private list was kept. The time was limited to three months, and the amount to three lacs, except to Government, seven lacs. The new Act authorised them to advance upon a promissory note with a single name. Began to do this in 1863. They could get little or no business unless by this system when the branches were to be commenced. The Hindoo system was entirely in one name. The natives would not generally trust other people to give their notes. Began the system under the authority of the directors; it was not authorised in the minutes, but was tacitly given. Never applied for it. Circulars had been returned to him from the directors, and minutes made on the matter in the minute-book, "I do not know the applicant; ask native doctor, and be guided by his opinion;" so that, involuntarily on his part, and with the knowledge of the European directors, all applications for advances by natives were only submitted to a native director. Until June, 1864, Cowasjee Jehangeer was consulted; and, after him, Premchund Roychund. Could not recollect the name of a single director who authorised him to make discounts upon one name. Under the old system cash credits were granted on the security of Government paper, railway guaranteed shares, shares guaranteed by Government, or bullion. The application book should contain all the applications for loans or cash credits. Commenced the system of granting cash credits upon the simple promissory notes of the borrowers soon after the new Act passed. The first two were Roychund Deepchund and Premchund Roychund. They each got a lac. Did not remember a number of others for a lac and two lacs each, and Premchund Roychund himself for two lacs more down to June, 1864. A suggestion was made to the board at the meeting in June to adopt the Scotch system of granting credits on a bond signed by the party requiring the accommodation, with two good names as security. He altered that so as to make it run "signed by the party requiring the accommodation with or without good names as security, according to the credit of the party." Made that alteration by direction of the directors. Was not aware that it was the practice to grant cash credits on personal security previous to June, 1864. Could not account for it that none of these cash credits on personal security appeared in the application book until after that resolution of June, 1864. It was an omission which he never authorised.

[Being shown his own initials to certain cash credits on personal security, and asked if he must not have known of the fact of these cash credits being granted on personal security, before June, 1864, he said it must have been so; but it was on the authority of some of the directors.]

They also began to lend money on promissory notes soon after the new Act passed [a form of bond was exhibited, in which the interest charged was fourteen per cent., but if default were made, then at twelve per cent.]. The solicitor drew up that form. Considered these proper documents, if the names were regarded as a perfect security. No fixed period was mentioned for these loans. The directors had power to call them up on demand. Was not aware that Kursondas Wadhowdas, who had the great loan of twenty-one lacs, got it in August, 1864, to be repaid on the 1st of July, 1865. [Two notes were shown him, the period named in each of which was six months; but he said he did not remember all these transactions.]

The Chairman said he had gone through all the loans granted from the 1st of June, 1864, to the 1st of May, 1865, and he found that there are still 101 loans outstanding. He asked the witness if he would not be surprised to find that of these 82 were granted originally without any security whatever, except a promissory note or bond?

The witness said he was not at all surprised; they had no other than the native business to fall back upon. Considered the advancing of money on one name or firm a proper system of banking, if the person or firm were wealthy enough. There was no money advanced on shares in his time, but the system began with Cama's loan of shares being deposited in the bank for safe custody when a loan was made. Did not recollect Kursondas Wadhowdas getting 21 lacs. He was in Poona at the time. Was not aware that shares were openly advanced at the Calcutta branch on or before April, 1865. It was Premchund's suggestion. A resolution was passed in April, 1865, limiting the amount. There was no limit previously. That resolution authorised him to advance on the premium on shares of the value. It was to be on Premchund's judgment. Never knew of money being advanced on the promise of shares being deposited when bought. He disputed the statement of Taylor, Diver, and Al-maram's loan of 5 lacs, 50 being advanced on that understanding. If such a practice had prevailed, it would have tended to encourage the wildest speculations. Was in the habit of resorting to Corvajee Jehangeer down to his retirement in June, 1864, and after he retired he took the advice of Premchund Roychund, being recommended to do so by Corvajee Jehangeer, and Premchund brought so much good business to the bank that when he resigned he was requested by the directors to reconsider it. Acted upon his advice from the latter part of 1864 to the time he left India, and the directors agreed that he should do so. There was no limit to his power of making advances. It was discretionary. Had bought lacs and lacs of bills on Calcutta on Premchund's advice, and never lost a rupee from that class of business. Did not recollect having ever consulted the chairman, or any other European director. The directors very seldom visited the bank except on board days. The practical working of the system was to vest the management of the bank in the secretary and one consulting native director. The directors knew of the large loans granted, for he remembered bringing the subject to the notice of the president when the board was discussing the dividend. Besides the abstract book, which contained all these transactions, was sent for their initials in the morning. Moreover, he had a large book made up in the directors' room, in which was entered the name of every individual who had had money from the bank.

The Chairman remarked that they had made inquiry and had never been able to find that book.—Mr. Blair said it was in existence, and the directors ought to have referred to it. Until he came to England he did not know that the applications were not all recorded in the application book; there was no intention of secrecy. The largeness of the amounts in the abstract book might have put the directors on enquiring. There was nothing in the abstracts to show that the loans were on personal security. Had great confidence in Premchund Roychund, who with his father had been brokers to the bank from the commencement, and the bank had never lost anything by these transactions. He was a large shareholder in the bank, and was reputed to be enormously wealthy. The witness was here questioned as to the branches, and he said there were printed forms of instruction. At one time the amount was fixed, but he did not know that it was put in the printed forms. They were advised never to advance more than two lacs to one person. Corvajee or Premchund revised the discount lists at the branches. A circular from the directors, in 1863, mentioned three lacs as the limit, except in special cases. The supervision of the branches was left to the inspector of branches, and the accountant's department. It was very likely that the branches at Kurrachee and Hyderabad were never visited by the inspectors. It was very expensive to send inspectors through India. There had been a loss at most of the branches. The witness was also examined as to the allotments of shares that he received. Some of them were at a high premium when he got them, but he did not sell. He held them as an investment. Applied for some to the promoters, and others were sent to him without application. Saw nothing wrong in it.

Mr. Blair was further examined by the Commissioners on Thursday, the 17th, as to his transactions in shares with various persons, and to granting loans, as virtual manager of the bank, to individuals of amounts in excess of those they were reported to be good for.

The inquiry was resumed at the India-office on Friday. The witnesses examined were Mr. M'Ilwraith, a member of the firm of Nicol and Co., formerly a commercial director of the bank; Mr. W. Cassels, also at one time a commercial director; and Mr. J. H. Ryland, at one time deputy-secretary of the bank. The principal point to which the evidence related was the increase of the capital of the bank, and Mr. M'Ilwraith and Mr. Cassels both expressed their approval of this measure. All the witnesses declared their ignorance of the practice of granting cash credits on the mere promissory note of the borrower; but they spoke of the great reputed wealth of some of the native Bombay merchants at that time as showing that they were persons to whom large credit might be safely given. As an instance of this, Mr. M'Ilwraith stated that he was entrusted by one of them with a commission to purchase diamonds in this country of the value of £80,000, and that he had no hesitation in executing the commission.

Miscellaneous.

H.M.S. "GALATEA."—The Galatea reached Madeira on the 14th November; all well on board.

ESTATE OF PALMER AND CO., EAST INDIA MERCHANTS.—Notice has been given of a dividend in the estate of Messrs. Palmer and Co., East India merchants, who suspended payment in 1864; and that all claims are to be sent in to the accountants, Messrs. James, Edwards and Cash, before the 31st January.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for £200,000 in bills on India took place on Wednesday, the 18th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta £83,000, and to Madras £117,000. The minimum price was, as before, 1s. 10½d. on Calcutta and Madras. Tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 11½d. will receive about 85 per cent. The result shows a slight falling off in the demand for remittance to the East.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—To Bombay, per P. and O. steamers of the 7th-14th Nov., from Southampton—gold, £78,200; silver, £50,280. Per P. and O. steamer, 8th Nov., from Marseilles—gold, £59,600; silver, £10,000. To Madras, from Southampton—gold, £11,704. To Calcutta, from Southampton—gold, £20,000. To Singapore, from Southampton—silver, £14,500. To Hong Kong, from Southampton—silver, £12,529. To Shanghai, from Marseilles—silver, £197. From Marseilles, per Messageries Imperiales steamer Moeris, 8th Nov.:—To Alexandria, gold, £178,760; to Svelles, gold, £480; Reunion, gold, £12,800; Mauritius, gold, £2,050.

LONDON, BOMBAY, AND MEDITERRANEAN BANK.—The committee of creditors of the London, Bombay, and Mediterranean Bank (limited) have issued a report to the creditors wherein they remark that "the three banks are now in effect, save as to the important question of expense, being wound up on the basis of one liquidation, although still under separate liquidators." They also say, "out of the sum in hand, with the addition of the dividend received from the London and Mediterranean Bank, the liquidators propose to pay the first dividend of 2s. in the pound before the close of the year." A call upon the contributories is necessary, but cannot be made until the end of February next. This report alleges that the whole uncalled liability of £6 per share will be required.

EASTERN RAILWAY COMPANY.—The twenty-first report of the directors of the Eastern Bengal Railway states that the gross receipts from the traffic of the first quarter of the current half-year show an increase of £9,467 over those of the corresponding period of last year; the receipts from the company's flotilla also show an increase over those of the corresponding period. At the extraordinary meeting of the company, held in July last, the directors were authorised to borrow a further sum of £200,000, and at the same time powers were given them to raise that sum and all other sums which the company were previously authorised to borrow, as well as the sums requisite for paying off existing debentures, by the issue of Four per Cent. Debenture Stock on such terms as the Secretary of State might think fit. Those terms, however, were not such as to enable the directors to raise the sums required. The directors, therefore, have given notice that they will apply to the shareholders at the present half-yearly meeting for powers to raise, if necessary, all or any part of the above mentioned sums of money by the issue of ordinary share capital bearing the guarantee of the Secretary of State for India. The directors mention the resignation and consequent loss of the services of their late colleague, Sir Frederick James Halliday, K.C.B., who vacated his seat at the board in consequence of his being appointed a member of the Council of India. In his place the directors elected Sir Henry Byng Harington, K.C.S.I., late a member of the Council of the Governor General of India.

THE NEW PARLIAMENT.—The following is a list of those candidates for election to serve in the new Parliament who have held official appointments in India:—

Buller, Sir A. W. (L.), Liskeard, was for some years a puisne judge of the Calcutta Supreme Court.

Denison, Mr. C. B. (C.), South-East Division of West Riding of Yorkshire, formerly in the Bengal Civil Service, was for some years Magistrate and Collector of Mirzapore in the N.W.P.

Eastwick, Mr. E. B., C.B. (C.), Falmouth, was in the Bombay army, and held a political appointment in Persia.

Edwardes, Sir H. B., K.C.B., K.C.S.I. (L.), South Shropshire, is in the Bengal army, and well known for his military and political services in the Punjab.

Hamilton, Sir R. N. C., Bart., K.C.B. (L.), South Warwickshire, was in the Bengal Civil Service, and held several high appointments under the Government of India.

Hay, Lord W. M. (L.), Haddingtonshire, was in the Bengal Civil Service, and for some years Deputy Commissioner of Simla.

Laing, Mr. S. (L.), Wick District, was financial member of the Council of the Governor-general of India in 1861-62.

Lees, Major W. N. (C.), Gloucester, is in the Bengal army, and holds the appointment of Principal of the Calcutta Government College.

Massey, Right Hon. W. N. (L.), Liverpool, was financial member of the Council of the Governor-general of India, from 1865 to 1867.

Riddell, Mr. H. P. A. B., C.S.I. (C.), Orkney and Shetland, late of the Bengal Civil Service, for many years Director-general of the Post-offices in India.

Sykes, Colonel W. H. (L.), Aberdeen, late of the Bombay army, for many years a Director of the East India Company.

Wingfield, Sir C. J., C.B., K.C.S.I. (L.), Gravesend, late of the Bengal Civil Service, Chief Commissioner of Oude, from 1859 to 1866.

Wyllie, Mr. J. W. S. (L.), Hereford, of the Bombay Civil Service, lately Under Secretary to the Government of India in the Foreign Department.

Yardley, Sir W. (L.), Ludlow, for some years Chief Justice of the Bombay Supreme Court.

THE BANDA AND KIRWEE PRIZE.—The Banda and Kirwee Prize is still the subject of litigation. It is stated that although the Government of India has been called upon, under the advice of the law officers of the Crown, to refund the Rs. 5,23,253 which it had appropriated from the prize chest as compensation for its fiscal losses, the amount which has been credited to the troops by the public officer in Calcutta still falls short by a large figure of the sum which was originally declared by her Majesty to be distributable. Seventy lakhs of rupees, or thereabouts, were declared by the Queen to be the amount of the prize, which, through its own enormity, occasioned disputes and actions at law in 1864. Great has been the concourse of claims. Many the indignant protests at the "law's delay" in distributing the money. The law has now taken ten years in allocating the shares of the Banda and Kirwee prize, and yet there remain important claims unsettled. The prize money having been thrown into Chancery, or something like it, has come out of it, after some years' ordeal, stripped of its fair proportions by some seventeen lakhs of rupees! This, naturally enough, occasions disappointment to the troops, and their representatives in England are still actively endeavouring to obtain redress. They have recently taken a further opinion from some of the most eminent jurists as to the law and equity of the case; for in one aspect of the matter it is a consideration of law, while in another point of view it depends on the grace and liberality of the Crown, which latter, however, is ordinarily governed by usage and precedent. There is one large claim emanating from Madras—namely, a very considerable sum in the shape of impounded promissory notes, belonging to the ex-Chiefs of Kirwee—which the Madras troops engaged at Kirwee consider should be added to their shares. A committee to inquire into this claim has been appointed by the Indian Council.—Broad Arrow.

THE NEW BREECH-LOADER.—The announcement that the Martini-Henry breech-loader is to be the future arm of the service is premature; although, judging by the course which the competition has taken, it is not unlikely to be justified by the result. As far back as August last it was announced that the main elements of the new arm had been decided upon—the calibre (450 sec.), length (35 sec.), and material (steel) of barrel, the weight (4 lb. 6 oz.), the cartridge (Boxer), probable weight of bullet (480 grains), and material (hardened lead), probable charge (85 grains), lubricant (pure beeswax). It was announced at the same time that the choice of breech-action (which, of course, should always be considered separately from the barrel or shooting part of the arm) appeared to lie between the Henry, Kerr, Carter-Edwards, and Martini systems, of which a preference for the Martini was expressed, as appearing to combine all the first elements of a military breech-loader, safety, rapidity, simplicity, &c., with an advanced type of construction in which the side-hammer and lock are dispensed with. Since this time the bolt action, of which the Kerr and Carter-Edwards guns are representatives, has fallen into disfavour on account of the apparent want of safety of such actions taken as a class—an objection upon which we have always insisted, and which has now been established in some cases by actual experiment. The choice thus becomes narrowed down to the Henry and Martini actions, both of which are exceedingly good, and both of which have their advocates. We believe that both systems have satisfied all the tests which the committee have applied, and that neither by moisture, rust, dirt, nor the use of defective cartridge and excessive charges has it been found practicable to throw either of these actions out of gear, or to bring to light any weakness or radical defect. Both actions, however, have undergone some minor improvements since they were first submitted, with a view to exhibiting the merits of each system in their highest light. Mr. Martini, the Swiss inventor of the gun which bears his name, is now in England, superintending the manufacture of some arms which will be used in the final trials. So the breech-action question stands at present; a close race between the Henry and Martini, with the odds rather in favour of the latter. The twist and precise form of rifling are still undetermined. Mr. Henry's rifle has made excellent results as an arm of precision, and for flatness of trajectory and penetration; and is, on the whole, decidedly the favourite as far as the barrel and shooting qualities are concerned. The compressed powder charges, from which a good deal was hoped, have not been found to furnish such satisfactory results at the longer ranges as charges of loose powder. However, as fouling has been completely got rid of with both descriptions of ammunition, that which at one time was a salient advantage of the compressed powder enters no longer into the arguments in its favour. But the compressed powder still possesses the advantage of rendering possible the employment of a shorter and more compact cartridge; and as this is a point of some importance, the experiments with compressed powder will be continued until its shooting has been brought up to that of the loose powder; or, another solution of the long cartridge difficulty may be achieved by the employment of a larger chamber and cartridge, tapering down at the fore part to the reduced diameter of barrel and bullet. A long cartridge is, it is true, no serious difficulty, or even grave inconvenience, but it is clearly to be ranked as an imperfection, and to be dealt with accordingly.—Home News.

NAUTICAL INCIDENTS.

BOMBAY, Oct. 24.—The Behar (P. and O. Co.'s str.), after having had new boilers put into her at Mazagan, was being taken to the mud-bed at the north-end of the yard for repairs, when she ran on a sharp rock, which stove in the plating of her keelson amidship. She lay on her starboard quarter, with a heavy list and her boilers covered by the tide until the 18th, when she was buoyed and removed from her dangerous position.

HONG KONG, Oct. 27.—The Falcon (German), with sugar, has been burnt in Swallow. Total loss.

Intelligence has been received in Liverpool of the total loss of the ship Claamerden. The news comes by telegraph, and is dated Akyab, Nov. 10, and states that on the morning of the 10th the ship Claamerden foundered at her anchors, off Akyab, and that only the chief and second officers and fourteen of the crew were saved; the captain and remainder of the crew are supposed to have gone down with the ill-fated ship. The cause of the disaster was not mentioned in the telegraph.

The Joachim, of and from Bremen, for Rangoon, was burnt at sea, Oct. 10; crew saved.

LADAKH.—Trade in Ladakh is in a flourishing state. During the past week ending September 30th, about eighty horse-loads of merchandise came in, besides a considerable amount of gold and silver and a quantity of Bokhara jewellery. A number of horses from Yarkand also arrived, some for sale and others purchased for the Cashmere Government. Several of the Yarkand traders took their goods straight down to the Punjab, and some of the chief traders from the Punjab went straight on to Yarkand, and others have expressed their intention to do so.

DR. WILSON.—The appointment of Dr. Wilson, unsolicited, as Vice-Chancellor of the University of Bombay, is most creditable to Sir Seymour Fitzgerald. Dr. Wilson is the first non-official who has held that office in any of the Indian Universities, and his nomination establishes their catholic character, while it may form a precedent hereafter. The selection of Dr. Wilson, the greatest missionary and one of the first scholars in India, has been a subject of gratulation in the native papers of Western India.—Friend of India.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

With the advent of the inclemencies of winter many infirmities will arise unless effective means for preventing or checking their courses be adopted. No lingering cough, hoarseness, or shortness of breath on slight exertion, should be permitted to continue a single day without measures being taken for their removal, more especially when remedial means are safe, rapid, and effective. These qualities are displayed in a high degree by Holloway's preparations. The Ointment rubbed upon the skin draws surplus blood from congested structures, and gives immense relief to every oppressed organ concerned in the respiration and the circulation. This wholesome effect, externally aided by the alterative action of the Pills, internally dispels all danger from latent mischief.

CAUTION.—Many spurious, worthless, and injurious preparations are offered to the public. See that both bottle and label have the name and address.

QUINTESSANCE OF JAMAICA GINGER AND CAMOMILE.

WILKINSON'S PREPARATION OF GINGER and CAMOMILE has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine. It is a most efficient stomachic tonic, and the best remedy for flatulency and disorders arising from impaired digestion.

It is not affected by climate.
No European in India or tropical countries should be without it.

Sold in one-eighth, quarter, and half-pint bottles.

AROMATIC TINCTURE OF QUINOIDINE.

For the Prevention of Fever, Ague, and effects of Malaria. An unfailing remedy. It may be mentioned that those who, during the campaign in the Crimea, daily took a small quantity, passed entirely unharmed through the raging fire of fever and dysentery that thinned the ranks around them.

Sold in half and quarter-pint bottles.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body."

It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guarantee not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvement would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. Webb's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and imitatable system, free by post, or on application to MR. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS. Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 229, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 6d. Umbilical, 25s. and 32s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 6d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.

—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 229, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.—

UPWARDS OF FIFTY YEARS' experience has fully confirmed the superior reputation of these Lozenges in the cure of ASTHMA, WINTER COUGH, HOARSENESS, SHORTNESS OF BREATH, and other PULMONARY MALADIES.

RECENT TESTIMONIAL.

August 23, 1868.

Dear Sir,—Having tried your Cough Lozenges in India, I have much pleasure in testifying to their beneficial effects in cases of incipient consumption, asthma, and bronchial affections; so good a medicine ought to be known to be appreciated. I have prescribed it largely with the best results.

W. B. G.,

IMPORTANT HISTORICAL WORKS.

Just ready, in Two Vols., 8vo., £1. 8s..

MEMOIRS AND CORRESPONDENCE OF FRANCIS ATTERBURY, D.D., BISHOP OF ROCHESTER. With his DISTINGUISHED CONTEMPORARIES, chiefly from the Atterbury and Stuart Papers. By FOLKESTONE WILLIAMS.

Just published, in Two thick Volumes, demy 8vo., price £1. 12s.,

LIVES OF THE ENGLISH CARDINALS, from NICHOLAS BREAKSPEAR (Pope Adrian IV.) to THOMAS WOLSEY, Cardinal Legate. Including Historical Notices of the Papal Court. By FOLKESTONE WILLIAMS, Author of "Court and Times of James I.," "Court and Times of Charles I.," "Memoirs of Sophia Dorothea," &c.

Scarcely one adequate biography exists in print of "the Princes of the Church" of English birth; and when they are named collectively by their own countrymen, or foreign writers, they are briefly catalogued—frequently with doubtful incidents and questionable dates; nevertheless, the majority attained the highest honours, spiritual and temporal, and were engaged in some of the most important transactions in European history. It has, therefore, been considered that an acceptable service might be rendered to students by collecting the trustworthy details of Bale, Pita, Leland, Godwin, Tanner, Dugdale, and similar explorers in the same field of inquiry, adding such notices as may be gathered from the annals of the popes and cardinals, Baronius, Ciacconius, Aubrey, Spaldanus, &c.; from the numerous monkish chroniclers, from Hemingford to Jocelin de Brakelonde, as well as from contemporary correspondence; and combining with them new facts from the researches of modern historians, such as Paulli, Neander, Dollinger, Banks, Cardella, Siemondi, Guizot, Lingard, Milman, Brewer, Giles, &c., &c.

Whilst tracing the development of the papal system, care has been taken to exhibit its influence upon society, especially at Rome, Avignon, or wherever the Pontifical Court resided. As members of what may be called the Privy Council of the Pope, each of the English cardinals who chose to remain at the seat of government assisted in its administration. Many were employed as diplomats, or took a prominent part in the great councils, called from time to time to remedy evils then afflicting the Holy See; almost all were members of the hierarchy, in one or other of the principal branches of the Roman Apostolic Church, and not a few possessed almost unlimited authority at home in secular employments.

HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA. By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq. Containing a copious Glossary of Indian Terms, and a complete Chronological Index of Events, to aid the aspirant for Public Examinations.

"Mr. Thornton is master of a style of great perspicuity and vigour, always interesting, and frequently rising into eloquence. His power of painting character and of bringing before the eye of the reader the events which he relates, is remarkable; and if the knowledge of India can be made popular, we should say his is the pen to effect it."—Times.

"The writer evinces diligence and research into original authorities; his style is easy, and the intrinsic interest of the important events of Indian history is thus increased by a popular and amusing narrative."—Edinburgh Evening Courant.

THE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA from the Appointment of Lord Hardinge to the Death of Lord Canning. By LIONEL JAMES TROTTER, late 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The First Volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment, in 1844, to the retirement of the Marquis Dalhousie, in 1856.

The Second Volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India, in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death, in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains has been taken in its narration.

In One Vol., 8vo., pp. 1015, with Map, price £1. 1s.,

A GAZETTEER OF INDIA, Compiled chiefly from the Records at the India Office. By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq.

The chief objects in view in compiling this Gazetteer are:—

- 1st. To fix the relative position of the various cities, towns, and villages, with as much precision as possible, and to exhibit with the greatest practicable brevity all that is known respecting them; and,
- 2nd. To note the various countries, provinces, or territorial divisions, and to describe the physical characteristics of each, together with their statistical, social, and political circumstances.

To these are added minute descriptions of the principal rivers and chains of mountains; thus presenting to the reader, within a brief compass, a mass of information which cannot otherwise be obtained, except from a multiplicity of volumes and manuscript records. The work, in short, may be regarded as an epitome of all that has been written and published respecting the territories under the government or political superintendence of the British power in India.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, November 7; Agra, November 3; Calcutta and Madras, November 2.

After all it seems that there is to be no grand durbar at Peshawar, for the sufficient reason that the Ameer of Afghanistan cannot come just now, and that Sir J. Lawrence could wait no longer for him. Shere Ali's absence may perhaps be accounted for by the news lately telegraphed from Bombay, concerning a bloody battle between his troops and those of Abdurrahman Khan, which battle ended in the total defeat of the latter and his flight to Balk. The Viceroy on his part was expected to leave Simla on the 10th of November for his downward journey to Calcutta, which he would probably reach in about ten days. His departure from that side of India will pretty nearly synchronise with Lord Mayo's arrival at Bombay.

ONE of his latest legislative acts has been the passing of the Punjab Tenancy Bill, after a seven hours' debate, on the 19th October. This measure, which affects the interests of seventeen million Punjabies and the special rights of several hundred thousand landholders, was hurried through its last stages in a manner far from commensurate with the importance of the questions at issue. Some of the councillors, including Sir W. Mansfield, Sir G. Couper, and Mr. Cockerell, fought hard for a delay that might ensure a fairer hearing for the claims of those landlords who had been seemingly dispossessed of their rights by the settlement of 1849. But Sir John was inexorable, although his opponents had had but three or four days' time to peruse the amended Bill. Mr. Maine supported the measure as tending to confirm the results of previous legislation. Messrs. Strachey and Taylor and Sir R. Temple all spoke strongly on the same side; the latter agreeing with Sir John in the power of Government to bestow on any class it pleased the benefits itself had created in the land. The new Bill sanctions the tenant-right conclusions of the old settlement, as against the landlordism of the last.

THE Hazara Field Force having returned to the comforts of civilised life at Oghee, Sir Donald Macleod, the Lieutenant-governor, held a durbar there on the 25th October, at which a good many of the border chiefs were present in order to receive their meed of praise or censure at Sir Donald's hands. Conspicuous among the former class was the brave young Khan of Umb, whose loyalty to his masters had been nobly attested during the late commotions. After these formalities, the Lieutenant-governor proceeded to thank General Wilde, his officers and men, for their late good service, and to enlarge on the character and extent of the work achieved. The perfect equipment of the Force, the thoroughness of its bloodless triumphs, the great consternation caused by its progress, and the good results of a policy at once stronghanded and merciful, were all enforced with becoming dignity. Sir Donald at any rate is among those who feel convinced that the great show we have made of our power to punish and our forbearance from undue severity will leave a lasting impression on the border tribes. We can only hope that his view is the right one. But we may heartily echo his dissent from those "who consider that the only way of dealing with the wild tribes of the frontier is to punish with rigour, and even to exterminate all who take part in or sympathise with wanton aggression." The sentiment is good, but how about the facts? Were no villages burnt on this occasion after all?

AN Indian heroine of much renown died on the 30th October. Secundra, Begum of Bhopal, threw in her lot with the English in the dark days of the Mutiny, at a time when so many other heroines of her race and creed were busy plotting or fighting on the rebel side. Tempted on all hands to betray her friends, surrounded by courtiers and counsellors all adverse to her own leanings, she still held her own way, and won from Lord Canning, in the great Durbar of 1861, a memorable tribute to her loyal zeal and her timely services. When Bhopal was beset by our enemies, "you, a woman," he said, "guided its affairs with a courage, an ability, and a success that would have done honour to any statesman or soldier." Besides suppressing revolt within her borders, and saving the lives of many Englishmen, including the Governor-General's Agent, the Begum had done her utmost to quicken the march of all British troops that came within her reach. For all these services Lord Canning invested her with the sovereignty of the Burseah District, forfeited by rebellious Dhar; besides decorating her with the Order of the Star of India. An active sportswoman in her youth, she proved herself afterwards a first-rate administrator, cutting down expenses, paying off debts, and carrying out wise reforms in every branch of the public service.

MR. COOPER, the explorer of Tibet, was last heard of at Bathang, on his journey to which place he had encountered many hardships and some unforeseen hindrances from the jealousy of native traders and other classes of the people. The Chinese authorities were willing to help him forward on the road from Bathang to Assam; but their trading countrymen, fearing the future influx of Assam tea into their markets, did their best to bar progress. A party of Tibetan soldiers cut him off from the way to Lhasa also. A friendly Romish bishop gave him what help he could; but, with drained resources and ebbing hopes, Mr. Cooper was fain to retrace his steps towards the borders of Yunnan, whence he purposed entering India by the road which Captain Sladen has lately travelled. It will thus be seen that Mr. Cooper's experiences hardly tally with the averments of Consul Morrison, as far at least as the non-official classes in Western China are concerned.

THE famine in Central and Upper India grows daily a more and more dismal certainty. All over Northern India the food prospects are described as very gloomy. From Cuttack to Agra, from the Central Provinces through Rajpootana up to the heart of the Punjab, scarcity or downright famine seems to prevail. In Rajpootana and Central India the scale of suffering stands highest. In supplying the immediate wants of the former province Colonel Keatinge has been empowered to lay out a lakh of rupees at once. From Marwar about sixty thousand starving people have already poured into Guzerat. Thousands of ryots are flocking into Berar, which itself is threatened with scarcity for want of rain. Other emigrants are hastening to Bhopal, where rain has fallen in time for the autumn sowings. At Hyderabad in Sindh the price of rain is rising from the influx of immigrants from Kattiawar. Of the north-western districts Jhansi and Lullutpore are said to be worst off. Some 8,000 sufferers in those districts are already employed on public works or supported in poor-houses. In the unirrigated districts of the Punjab the signs of scarcity are growing more and more visible.

THE returns sent in by the Revenue Department of the Punjab forestal to a great degree the regular Census Report for that flourishing province. From them we learn that the present population exceeds seventeen millions and a half, of which 3,148,858 belong to the newly added divisions of Delhi and Hissar. Of the whole population, more than nine millions and a half are males, against little more than eight million females. The males of all ages greatly outnumber the females, in accordance with the general rule for Eastern countries in warm latitudes. There are only 2,949 native Christians. More than nine millions and a quarter are Mohammedans. The Sikhs number only 1,129,319, while "other Hindoos" amount to 6,134,243. Other races not specially named make up nearly another million. About 670,000 Sikhs are found in the Lahore and Umritsur Divisions, while those of Jullunder and Umballa contain 350,000. The Hindoos are pretty equally distributed through the whole province. On some parts of the North-West frontier the Mohammedans outnumber the Hindoos by 20 to 1. Three of the districts, Jullunder, Umritsur, and Sealkote, average about 550 to the square mile; in four more, Delhi, Goordaspore, Hoshiarpore, and Ludhiana, the numbers range from 496 to 429 the square mile. On the other hand Kohat, Dera Ismael Khan, Jhung, and Montgomery average between fifty and sixty only to the same space. Of the whole population nearly nine millions and a half live by agriculture. Dwellings of all kinds amount to 4,021,769, giving an average of $4\frac{1}{2}$ inmates to each house. Everywhere the census was taken with perfect ease, thanks to the carefulness of the preliminary arrangements, and the close and constant intercourse kept up between the people and their rulers. For months before the European officials were employed in explaining to the people what was to be done and in testing the preliminary returns prepared by their native subordinates. The results were quite satisfactory, both as regards the general accuracy of the returns and the temper of the people from whom they were obtained.

FROM Madras we learn that a man-eating tigress at the foot of the Shevaroyas has at length paid the debt of her destructive nature. The villagers of Pulliamputty caught her in nets and killed her with their spears. They are to have twice the usual reward for ridding the jungles of a brute which is known to have killed about twenty men.

MR. G. S. FORBES, of the Madras Civil Service, has been promoted from the junior membership of the Revenue Board to a seat in the Supreme Legislative Council. His appointment is regarded as a loss to his own Presidency, however gainful to himself and the Supreme Government.

THE meeting of the Madras Irrigation Company came off on Monday afternoon. The report, which dwelt with satisfaction on the progress made in canal works during the last six months, and looked forward to yet greater progress next year, was unanimously adopted.

ON November 30 Lord Napier of Magdala was still in Egypt, inspecting the Suez Canal. A full report from himself on that subject will be worth having. At the same date the Jemna had just steamed into Suez Harbour with the 101st Fusiliers on board.

WE learn by telegram that on Nov. 13 a cyclone swept the Bay of Bengal, chiefly on the Arracan shore, doing much damage to rice crops, and to buildings in Akyab.

GENERAL WILDE's campaign in the country beyond British Hazara has revived an old discussion touching the true site of Alexander's Aornos. That mighty conqueror, as some of our readers may remember, marched from Afghan Turkistan with a huge army of Greek and Asiatic horse and foot over the Hindu Khoosh to Kabul. Then, while one division passed down the Kabul valley to the Indus, he himself took the upper road through the Yusufzai country, driving the enemy before him as he went along. At length the highlanders made their last stand on Aornos, a steep hill of great height overlooking the Indus near the spot where that river emerges from the Himalayas. In four days Alexander made his way into the mountain stronghold, one division following the other, as did those of General Wilde's the other day. Now the question is, which of three different places comes nearest Arrian's description of Aornos? According to General Court and Mr. Loewenthal the true Aornos is identical with the castle of Rajah Hoddi, opposite Attok on the Indus. General Cunningham finds Aornos in Ranees Ghat, above Nogram; a hill and fort so-called after the Queen of Rajah Vara, whose name the Greeks may have twisted into Varnos or Aornos. The hill however is too small to tally fairly with the Greek historian's measurements. Did Strabo and Arrian exaggerate, as the General maintains; or must we look for Aornos where General Abbot finds it, in the Mahabun or Black Mountain? The ruins at Ranees Ghat, says General Cunningham, tally in all essential points, save that of size, very closely indeed with the accounts of old Greek writers. General Court's selection hits the mark in respect of size and height, but seems scarcely to harmonise with Arrian's statement that the natives sought Aornos to get out of Alexander's way. This would seem rather to tell in favour of the Black Mountain's claim, which is further strengthened by the historical importance of the Mahabun as the great natural stronghold of the Yusufzai country since the time of Akbar. On the other hand, the Mahabun nowhere presents a very steep face to the Indus, and the Chinese pilgrim who visited it in 630 A.D. made no mention of any fort on the top. A thousand years however might make a great difference in the artificial appurtenances of such a place. Nor is it necessary to assume that the Black Mountain would have been covered with snow at the time of Alexander's attack on Aornos, merely because he is said to have marched thither in the winter. There is so much however to say for each of the three places, that some further attempt to settle the controversy would be well worth making under the protection of the Indian Government.

THE Anglo-Indian official element will be less represented in the new Parliament than we hoped and expected. In our last number we gave the names of fourteen gentlemen belonging to it who were candidates for election; but the name of Sir Herbert Edwards was erroneously included in the list. Sir Herbert was mentioned as likely to contest South Shropshire in the Liberal interest in conjunction with Mr. More, but did not after all come forward. Of the remaining thirteen, two—Sir A. W. Buller for Liskeard, and Colonel Sykes for Aberdeen, both Liberals—have been returned unopposed; two Conservatives, Messrs. C. B. Denison and E. B. Eastwick, have been elected for the S.E. Division of the West Riding of Yorkshire, and for Falmouth respectively; and two Liberals, Sir C. J. Wingfield and Mr. Wyllie, have been successful—the former at Gravesend and the latter at Hereford. On the other hand, five Liberal and one Conservative candidate have failed in their endeavours to get into Parliament. The list of Liberal failures includes the names of Mr. Laing, the Right Hon. W. N. Massey, Sir R. Hamilton, Lord W. Hay, and Sir W. Yardley. Major Lees, at Gloucester, is the unsuccessful Conservative candidate. Mr. Laing and Lord W. Hay were members of the last Parliament, and their loss will be felt in the House of Commons, especially in debates on Indian subjects. Mr. Massey's rejection at Liverpool must be a great disappointment to him, as it is generally understood that, in the event of his return, Mr. Dodson would have vacated in his favour the chairmanship of committees in the House of Commons, which appointment was held by Mr. Massey before his departure to India. The election in Orkney and Shetland, where Mr. Riddell comes forward as a Conservative, has still to be decided. That gentleman's chances of success must, however, be small, inasmuch as the general verdict of Scotland has been unmistakably in favour of the Liberal policy, and Mr. Dundas, the Liberal candidate, has long represented Orkney and Shetland, and is a cousin of the Earl of Zetland, the Lord Lieutenant of those counties.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, December 2, 1868.

RUSSIA IN EASTERN TURKISTAN.

THE prospects of Indian trade with Eastern Turkistan by way of Ladakh are already brightening into a fruitful certainty. Merchants from Yarkund are gradually exchanging Bokhara for Leh. The demand of Turkistan for tea, especially green tea, from India, is said to be unlimited. They will give ten shillings a pound for green tea of the best quality. We are assured that the whole body of Turkoman traders would come to India through Ladakh, if they could reckon on fair treatment and a good market. Leh itself has been the scene of a successful fair, got up by the ruler of Cashmere, under the promptings of Mr. Forsyth, the well-known inspirer of the Palampore Fair. The Cashmere officials have ceased to levy outrageous dues on merchandise passing through Ladakh; and as if to crown the list of happy omens, we hear of the discovery or rediscovery of a new and easy road by the Changchenmoo Pass over the plains of Ladakh, which, properly worked, ought wholly to supersede the perilous passes of the Karakorum and the roundabout road by Leh.

Unluckily a road which is straight and easy for trade may also be applied to purposes of war. Along this new undulating track, where camels can pass easily and find no lack of wood, water, and grass, guns also of the newest pattern might some day be borne at the head of an invading column, over gradients gentle enough for a railway like that which has made Mont Cenis surmountable in three hours. Under whose orders that column would escort those guns we need not say. It is a dismal prospect, all the more disheartening because hitherto we have been thanking our stars for the inviolable sanctity of our Indian Empire on the side of Eastern Turkistan. If India is vulnerable on that side also, what is to be done? The dwellers in Simlah may wake some fine October morning to hear "the clattering squadron and the thundering car," and the tramp of armed footmen winding along the Hindostan and Thibet Road, to swoop down on the rich broad plains of Northern India. Yes, that is the course marked out by nature, Lord Dalhousie, and Russian greed. Eight years ago the Russians wheedled or worried China into letting them start a factory at Kashgar; and then they began bargaining for the right to build a cantonment at Gumah, a point due north of Simlah, where the roads from Yarkund and Kashgar meet before entering the Changchenmoo Valley. From that spot they would command Cashmere and threaten alike the Punjab and Hindustan. Baffled for a time by the events which raised Yakob Beg to an independent throne in Yarkund, they have since returned to their old programme. Beaten in the field and powerless to stand alone against his encroaching neighbour, the Koosh-Beghi has sued for a peace which will probably be crowned by the building of a Russian cantonment at Gumah.

Such at least is the tale which Mr. Forsyth has put together from the accounts of native travellers. Meanwhile the Koosh-Beghi, alarmed at the prospect of being swallowed up by the Russian Python, has applied for help to the Indian Government, and according to the Friend of India has not applied in vain. It is averred at any rate that a reference in some way connected with his appeal has been made to the India-office by Sir John Lawrence. We are warned that the old policy of masterly inactivity has come to an end, and that something will really be done to stop these aggressive Muscovites from advancing any further towards British ground. Now is the time, we are told, for coming to some sort of understanding with a Power whose progress we have hitherto ignored in vain. Let the Foreign-office at once bargain with St. Petersburg for the neutralisation of all Turkistan. Or would it not be wiser to declare that the passage of the Oxus or of the Tien Shan Hills by a Russian column would be tantamount to a declaration of war against England? The bolder spirits prefer the latter course, on the plea that diplomacy against such diplomatists would be employed in vain. Certainly if we make up our minds on no account to have Russia for India's next-door neighbour, it were best to speak out plainly at once. A little plain dealing would have prevented the Crimean war. But is it so very clear that Russian supremacy in Turkistan would seriously imperil the well-being of British India? And how about the trustworthiness of Mr. Forsyth's informants? As for the Viceroy's reference home, we shrewdly suspect it has very little to do with the case alleged. There is no good ground for believing in any serious designs of Russia on the regions south of the Himalayas. Her true mission lies elsewhere, and if the absorption of Turkistan should bring her into our immediate neighbourhood, what then? Is not Asia wide enough for both? Such a proximity, if it were to ensue, ought not to frighten us out of our self-reliance, or provoke us into laying out one penny the more on Indian armaments. Common prudence will always teach us to keep our swords sharpened and our powder dry. But to our thinking the only rivalry we have just now to fear from Russia in Asia is a rivalry of trade. Under present conditions a Russian invasion of India seems about as feasible as a French invasion of England.

A VOICE FROM INDIA.

THE appeal of a Bombay journalist to the electors of Great Britain and Ireland comes rather late in the day for its apparent purpose. The Times of India is supposed to represent the interests and claims of the natives at large on the Bombay side, and its latest manifesto in their behalf aims in terms of solemn yet sober earnestness to enlighten the people of England on the nature of their debts and duties to Hindostan. As a formal protest against British apathy on Indian subjects, the appeal in question is not ill-timed. As an index to the wants and aims of an immense community, growing yearly more alive to its own interests and the shortcomings of its rulers in the past and present, it claims as full and careful a hearing as wise statesmen will always give to the temperate expression of any popular complaint. But if its authors had any idea of influencing the popular mind in this country on the eve of a great party struggle for the settlement of issues looking much nearer home, they will very soon discover what a misreckoning they have made. With one or two exceptions, during the late elections the name of British India has hardly even been uttered. Of the dozen candidates who could boast of their Indian experience, hardly one, we think, alleged that as a reason for seeking the votes of their "free and independent" countrymen. One question at a time is quite as much as John Bull at such a crisis cares or is able to apprehend. At no time indeed can you expect him to play with half-a-dozen ideas together, like a rider managing his five or six steeds in the circus-ring. But to dream of his hearkening to more than one cry at a period so exciting as that which has just passed, were to be guilty of the wildest Utopianism. How could a faint shout of justice to India, coming over so many thousand miles of land and water, reach ears already dazed with the conflicting war-cries of Justice to Ireland and the Constitution in Church and State?

Now that the excitement is lulling down however, people of an inquiring turn would do well to con the Bombay editor's indictment against his countrymen at home. It contains nothing new indeed to readers of the Times of India, and on some of the main charges we have commented more than once in the last six or seven months. But how many Englishmen ever think of questioning the justice of the rule by which the Indian Treasury was saddled with the whole costs of the Afghan war, or of asking why India should not be as free as Australia to borrow what money she needs for the development of her own resources? Does it ever occur to the average Britain that the natives of that country may resent as injustice some things which seem to him matters of course, that they may loudly demur to paying not only the costs of their own government, but the charges levied on them for England's special behoof as well? And even if such a notion has ever entered his head, the chances are that he has promptly dismissed it as a glaring fallacy, or at best a grievance of the sentimental sort. What business have those black fellows to grumble, as if we should take the trouble of governing them for nothing? They are lightly taxed and paternally guided by the representatives of the most civilised country in the world. For all the blessings they have reaped therefrom, why should they begrudge their masters some small return in the shape of a percentage on the revenues which those masters have helped so greatly to enlarge?

An appeal like this then should do good, if only it succeeded in arousing some few readers here and there from the dreamless sleep of ignorant self-content or careless scorn for the rights of the weaker party. It is something to learn that after all there are two sides to the simplest question. The writer of the Appeal is not insane enough to expect a miracle. He has no idea of asking the British Elector to prove his new sense of justice by paying back to the Indian Treasury the twenty millions, with interest up to date, wrung from the Indian taxpayer on account of the Afghan War. All that must be written off as so much clear loss. There is no use in crying over spilt milk. But from the contemplation of past shortcomings he would shame us into acting less unfairly in the future. Ought we not for instance to place India on just the same footing as Canada, in respect of home depots and the despatch of troops? If the Imperial Treasury pays the passage-money for troops sent out to the one place, why should the sending of troops out to the other be charged against the Indian, not the English revenues? And why should India have to pay the whole cost of maintaining depots in this country, which virtually form a part of the effective British garrison? Ten thousand men at home or going out to India cost somewhere about a million a-year. Surely the whole of that expense ought not in justice to devolve on the Indian Exchequer.

One difference indeed may be alleged between India and one of our regular colonies. "In the one case our troops form an army of occupation, in the other an auxiliary corps of defence." We colonised Canada; we conquered India. But the difference after all is one of past circumstances, not of present needs. Both cases claim considering from the same point of view. If troops go out to Canada at the expense of the mother country, why should India be required to defray the cost of every English soldier landed on her shores? In both instances England consults her own interests before those of the country thus supplied. Here at any rate is a question which needs considering from the Indian as well as the English standpoint. To our thinking indeed it is not so simple a question as it looks to the writer of the Appeal. There is not much of practical analogy between Canada and Hindustan. For ordinary purposes the former country needs no importation of troops from home. In time of peace she could be trusted to take care of herself, and therefore with her the presence of a British garrison rests far more on imperial than on local grounds. Moreover the time seems not far off when Canada also will have to pay for every soldier sent out from England. Could India on the contrary get on for a moment without a British garrison? If not, she must pay for the accommodation, as she would for any other article supplied from this country, as Lombardy had to pay for the Austrian soldiers who ensured her obedience to Austrian rule. It is vain to hope that England will ever consent to keep up her Indian garrisons at her own cost. All that can fairly be expected of her is to refrain from driving hard bargains with her great dependency, to reduce the burden to its least possible proportions, and to draw as broad a line as she can between outlay incurred for her own especial benefit and outlay incurred for the maintenance of her rule in India. Under the former head, might not some part of the charge on home depots for India be fairly included?

With regard to the complaint about India being forbidden to raise money on her own terms for her public works, that raises a question which in due time, we hope, will practically solve itself. The shortest way of settling it would certainly be to let the Indian Government borrow freely at low interest on the guarantee of this country. Being mainly responsible for the present debt of India, we ought not, in justice, to shirk a liability, the accepting of which would quicken the development of India's resources and the fructification of our own outlay by very many years, while it would furnish fresh safeguards of various kinds for the maintenance of our Indian Empire. But to this conclusion we are gradually drifting, and meanwhile there is every reason to hope that all manner of public works will be pushed forward in the next few years on a scale far larger than heretofore.

The exclusion of natives from the higher posts of the Civil Service forms another item in the list of native grievances. On this point we can only say that English opinion, so far as it is to be heard, has already spoken in favour of the native side. In principle the admission of natives to high posts under their own government has long ceased to be a moot question. Everybody allows that the time for acting on that principle is come at last. To speak strictly, there is no anti-native party remaining. Between one set of Anglo-Indian politicians and another, it is now only a question of more or less steam. There is the party that would go full speed, and the party that is rather for moving slowly; the party that would at once throw open every door to native ambition, and the party that would wait to see what came of opening half-a-dozen doors at a time. On the one side an enthusiastic faith in native worth and talent is apt to overlook those stumbling-blocks in the way of a full concession to just demands, of which on the other side an overweening sense of British superiority is inclined to make too much. How to conform our future practice to the requirements of a just principle without danger to existing needs and interests, is one of the problems that await an early solution at our hands. Meanwhile, it is only fair to recognise the efforts already making in that direction on the part of India's present rulers. Much credit is due both to Sir S. Northcote and Sir J. Lawrence for the proofs they have given of a genuine desire to remove all the heavier shackles from the feet of native ambition and native talent. If their successors will but follow in their steps, native India will have not much cause to complain.

NEW FURLOUGH REGULATIONS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Can you or any of your numerous readers kindly oblige me by solving the following Indian puzzle, which, to me, appears far more difficult than any Chinese one ever invented? Why is it that an officer with a military staff appointment should be allowed to take his furlough whenever he likes, and still draw 50 per cent. of his pay and staff allowances whilst in England, whereas the unfortunate officer in civil employ must have held his appointment for three years in India (and drawn the pay too) before he can get 50 per cent. of his salary (Vide Chapter I., Clause V. of the Furlough Rules of 1868) ?

2ndly. With reference to the second portion of the said clause—what possible advantage can an officer in civil employ derive by being permitted to draw his “average salary for the three years prior to his proceeding on furlough,” when his pay in the Civil Department happens to be the same from one year’s end to another? And lastly, Why should not the clause in question have been worded as follows (if the meaning I take be correct) ?—“But if an officer in civil employ or drawing consolidated salary shall not have held his appointment for three years at the time of his quitting India on furlough, he will be allowed 50 per cent. of the average salary drawn by him for three years prior to his proceeding on furlough.”

Trusting the authorities at the India-office may be pleased to remove the existing hardship upon officers in civil employ who may not have held their appointments for three years, and by that means bear out the intended liberality of the New Furlough Rules by permitting all officers holding appointments in India (civil as well as military) to receive 50 per cent. of their total receipts (without reference to the period for which they may have had their appointments),—I remain, dear Sir, yours faithfully,

A SUFFERER.

London, Nov. 30, 1868.

[An officer drawing a civil consolidated salary receives while on furlough the half of his average receipts for the three years preceding furlough, whatever those receipts may have been. Of course, if an officer has been unemployed for the greater portion of the three years, the half of the average will probably be less than the half of his civil salary, but it will be more than half his unemployed pay.—ED. A. I. M.]

EARTH-CLOSETS FOR INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF “ALLEN’S INDIAN MAIL.”

SIR,—The subject of sanitation constitutes one of the most unpleasant, but at the same time one of the most important and necessary duties of a magistrate in India. What is known as “the dry-earth system” is now very generally carried out in places of public resort in that country, but has been as far as I know little adopted in private houses. A visit to the offices of Moule’s Patent Earth-Closet Company at 29, Bedford-street, Strand, has convinced me of the desirability of the use of earth-closets in private houses in India; and I strongly recommend private individuals, and more particularly Government officials from India, to visit the offices of the company (where, judging from my experience, I can answer for their being most civilly received), and to decide for themselves as to the merits of the earth-closets, compared with the present defective sanitary arrangements of private houses.—I am, Sir, yours faithfully,

A BENGAL CIVILIAN.

Nov. 23, 1868.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR C. W. D. STAVELEY, K.C.B., second in command of the late Expeditionary Force to Abyssinia, will, it is said, be appointed to command the Western District, in succession to Lieut.-General Sir Augustus Spencer.

CAPTAIN SLADEN.—We learn from the Rangoon Times of the 21st of October that Captain Sladen has returned to Mandalay, and assumed the post of Resident. The successful issue of Capt. Sladen’s expedition is stated to have caused great excitement at Mandalay. The King said that the English captain had done what none of the Royal officials had ever been able to accomplish. The Burmese traders look upon Capt. Sladen as being under the special protection of the good nats, for they knew well all the conflicting interests and intrigues which were arrayed against him, and they cannot sufficiently express their wonder that he has overcome them. It is stated that his health requires change. The Rev. Mr. Marks, a Rangoon Missionary, had arrived in Mandalay with five of his pupils. The King had received him very honourably at a public audience, and at once had promised to build at the Royal expense a Christian Church and an S. P. G. School for 1,000 Burmese boys. He presented nine of his own sons to the missionary for education in English learning. The King refused all other contributions towards the erection of church or school. He entertained Mr. Marks and his pupils to a sumptuous breakfast in the palace, and presented two silk putsoes to each of the boys. The markets at Mandalay were showing signs of improvement. A report says:—“Since the resumption of business after the Lent holidays we have had more doing, and our quotations will show an improvement in values.”

FACILITIES FOR EXPLORING CHINESE ASIA.

The Friend of India, quoting Consul Morrison in proof of the encouragement given to travellers by the Chinese, deems his statement most satisfactory; but it is contrary to the common belief on the subject, and the willingness of the Chinese to permit travellers to enter Tibet from India should be at once put to the test. If, for instance, we can suppose that the Chinese still claim suzerainty over the Pamir steppe, then, according to the recommendation of Sir R. Murchison in his last anniversary address, application should at once be made to our Minister at Peking on behalf of “the able young Indian officer, Lieutenant Hayward, who has already penetrated in sporting excursions to the north of the Hindu Kush,” to be allowed to explore the regions north of that mountain range and define the flanks of the Pamir steppe, thus clearing up some of the problems in the physical geography of Central Asia. The progress of Mr. T. T. Cooper would seem to show that Mr. Consul Morrison’s representations are not exaggerated. Certainly the insouciance of the late Sir F. Bruce, when at Peking, is greatly to be lamented. He refused to apply for passports for the Expedition to Lhasa sanctioned by Lord Canning, and geographical research north of the Himalayas has been arrested ever since. Native agents are all very well, and Captain Montgomerie’s Pundit thoroughly deserves the honour, as well as the gift, of a thirty guinea gold watch bestowed upon him by the Royal Geographical Society through Lord Strangford. But no one will deny that Captain Montgomerie himself would have been better, while neither in commercial nor political missions are native agents of use. What could a native have done at Momein, had the best been sent there, without Captain Sladen? And what has the Government of India really gained by the half information picked up by Pundit Munphool at a distance from the Russians, or by the ignorance of Shere Singh? The truth of Consul Morrison’s very confident statements should be at once tested by an application to Peking for passports for a party of English survey officers and naturalists to proceed from Darjeeling or Mussoorie to Lhasa.

THE PUNJAB TENANCY BILL.

The Englishman thinks it surprising that though there was opposition to both the principle and the details of the Bill, there was not sufficient independence in the Council to move the adjournment of the debate for a reasonable period, or to protest against the hot haste with which the Viceroy and his party were confessedly urging so important a measure through its final stage. The great importance of the measure will be evident from the fact that of sixty thousand tenants in the district of Umritsur, registered at the first settlement as having rights of occupancy, no less than forty-six thousand were considered by the officers who made the second settlement to have been erroneously so registered, and were deprived accordingly. The effect of the new law will be to uphold the rights registered at the former settlement, except under certain conditions of rebuttal, unless, as had occurred in nineteen thousand cases in this district, the tenants themselves had voluntarily admitted at the re-settlement that they possessed no such rights. What has happened in Umritsur would not improbably be repeated throughout the Punjab, if the proceedings of the settlement officers were not thus authoritatively interfered with. With those who entertain no doubt of the justice of the principle on which the first settlement officers acted in creating rights of occupancy as the consequence of twelve years’ possession, the only question regarding the present law will be—whether rebuttal should be allowed at all, and, if they are consistent, whether lapse of time should not be allowed to create similar rights in future, as in Bengal. With those who do not admit the original existence of right of occupancy at all, or who deny its dependence on mere possession, it will be a question between the injustice of perpetuating what was originally an error, and that of disturbing what has long been sanctioned—a question involving not only an important point of equity, but if the allegations of those who have urged on the Bill be well founded, a still more important one of policy.

The Friend of India remarks that the Governor-general’s Council at Simla has passed into law the Punjab Tenancy Bill, after a debate lasting for seven hours. The measure is even more important than the Oude Act, which was publicly discussed in India and England for four years. In a population of seventeen millions of Sikhs and Mussulmans in the very province where our position is most delicate, the Act hurried through the Legislature seems to us to confiscate many landlord rights and thus create a serious political danger, to foster litigation by interposing the courts on all occasions between landlord and tenant, and to arrest progress and violate the simplest economic laws by maintaining double rights in the same land and promoting excessive subdivision. In the debate Mr. Maine justified the principles of the Act solely on the English lawyer’s ground of maintaining the status quo, however much founded on a mistake. Messrs. Taylor and Strachey were rightly described by the minority as determined to abolish all landlords. Sir John Lawrence, followed by Sir R. Temple, reasoned that as our Government had created the value of land it might bestow that value on any class. Sir W. Mansfield, followed by Sir George Couper, Bart., and Mr. Cockerell, expressed alarm at the principles and probable results of the Act, and begged for some delay, but in vain. For once Sir John Lawrence's Government has shunned the light, and has baulked public criticism of its rights in a way more worthy of Lord Canning in the days of the Press Act than of his Excellency's generally frank administration.

A PROPER HARBOUR WANTED FOR MADRAS.

The Madras Times quotes statistics to show the great development of trade by sea with Madras. It would seem that the largest British vessels in the Indian trade are attracted to Bombay, and the smallest to Madras; but this is only an additional argument for protection being afforded for these smaller and less powerful craft. A glance at the map will explain the cause of Madras making so good a show of shipping. The coast within the limits of our Presidency extends along some 1,400 miles, whereas the Bombay coast may be put down at about 1,000 and the Bengal at 600 miles. Then in Madras there are a number of rising sea-port towns like Coconada, Bimlipatam, Gopaulpore, Calingapatam, Masulipatam, Negapatam, Tuticorin, Cochin, Calicut, Tellicherry, and Mangalore, such as are rare indeed in the sister Presidencies; and the interport trade has undoubtedly very much to say to the position that Madras occupies in the above tables. Still, after making the most liberal allowance for coasters, and for vessels that pick up a cargo by calling at two or more ports, and so swell the number and tonnage of vessels entered and cleared at each, the fact remains that the Madras and Burmah coasts attract an enormous amount of tonnage for which there is no harbour of refuge on the Carnatic side. As additional evidence of the need for such a harbour as a breakwater on the scale proposed will, it is believed, afford, the Government should collect statistics of the number and tonnage and crews of vessels known to have been lost off this inhospitable coast of ours since 1857. Even were there no trade of sufficient magnitude to warrant the expenditure contemplated on the proposed breakwater, the claims of the shipping that frequent this part of the world to reasonable protection at the hands of a Government towards whose support they largely contribute cannot be ignored. What the contribution amounts to may be easily ascertained by the Government from the Collectors of Customs round the coast.

THE SEAT OF INDIAN GOVERNMENT.

The Madras Athenæum proposes to ascend to first principles and inquire why a seat for a supreme government is necessary at all. Of course we by no means intend to imply that a supreme government is unnecessary; far from it. If India were the appanage of an Anglo-Saxon Republic, a council of the existing presidencies and minor governments might probably give a solution of the problem. The question of the site of the capital would then be settled by those having some real interest in it, and an appropriate locality would no doubt be speedily assigned to it. As it is, Imperial interests, no less than the dignity of the Crown, demand that a viceroy, on his own responsibility, should administer the great questions of Indian policy which day by day arise. For government through a viceroy, we venture to say that the question of residence is merely a secondary one. It is only for a supreme government, grown bloated from the excessive number and variety of the matters it takes cognisance of, that a stationary habitat is of the last necessity. With the enormous and unwieldy establishments necessary for the mere receipt and acknowledgment of the bales of foolscap daily forwarded from all parts of India to Calcutta, the question of removing the capital becomes a serious one. To us the solution appears to be an easy one. Abolish the greater part of the work of the establishments, and the capital may be fixed almost anywhere. To those who demur to such a proposal, what earthly good, we ask, results from the present system of excessive centralisation? We refrain from taking up the strongest ground in the argument, or we might devote the rest of this article to a short resumé of the admitted evils caused by it. What imperial interest, we repeat, is served by attempting to apply a rigid set of rules to populations as numerous as, and more diverse in language, customs, and religions, than those of Europe? Why, in short, is the Supreme Government the rule, and that of the Presidencies the exception? Beyond possessing the exclusive right of making peace or war, of directing the operations of commerce and finance, and being endowed with the unlimited power of levying taxes—we venture to think that any interference in the internal affairs of the Presidencies by the Supreme Government is as hurtful to the general weal directly as it is indirectly—directly, because both ignorance and prejudice not seldom lead to reforms being deferred, which are essential to the good government of a subordinate province, and indirectly because, assuming the best intentions on the part of a Viceroy, no single mind is capable of grasping the necessities of so many different populations. Even Napoleon, possessor of an intellect at once gigantic and microscopic, refrained from interfering with his lieutenants in matters of purely home politics or of local reforms.

THE LATE CAMPAIGN.

If the frontier war, so brilliantly begun and ended in the "veni, vidi, vici" style, were our first instead of our twenty-third campaign, there would be every reason for congratulation. As it is, no eulogy can be too great for General Wilde and his force, and the very murmurs which reach us from the camp are but proofs of its splendid martial spirit. The terms which the Commissioner, Major Pollock, has exacted, are considered by General Wilde to be most satisfactory. We do not know yet the precise nature of these terms, but we may depend on what has elicited the approval of the civil and military authorities on the spot. Hostages from the hostile tribes have been left in our camp—i.e., from the Huzzuzais, Akazais, Chuggurzaies, and Furree Syuds. The villages of the independent and recusant tribes have been penetrated and destroyed. The refugee relations of the Khans, who have been deported, have also submitted. Still, the Hindustani fanatics have not been punished, but have recrossed the river. Although they had nothing to do with the original attack on our police post, they have been the cause of more than one serious war; and not only have we failed once more to extirpate them, but we do not seem to have bound the tribes not again to give them an asylum. This we consider the mistake of the campaign, while in the present condition of the frontier and the country beyond there is some reason to fear that our punishment of the tribes has not been sufficiently thorough. The much more complete and protracted campaigns in the same country have been confessed, in the Sitana Blue-book and by General Wilde himself, to have failed in attaining their object. The present expedition has certainly fallen short of them in this respect, and we cannot be sure that another war will not soon be required to secure a proper frontier.—Friend of India, Oct. 29.

A correspondent of the Pioneer, writing from Ooghee on the 22nd Oct., gives a summary as follows of what has been done:—"Elephants and cannon have been on the crest of the Black Mountain, where no invading force is supposed to have gone before. The north face of the Black Mountain has been at our mercy, and the chiefs have begged for forgiveness, and perhaps the Pathans think we could have burnt their villages, but perhaps also they think their flags and tom-toms kept us from advancing; and I, for one, think it would have been wise to have gone to any point cis-Indus where they still showed front, as they certainly did opposite Machai. The valleys of Nundear and Tikree have been shown our power and their weakness; but they cannot help seeing that while they—the parties who first surrendered, and whose chiefs accompanied us throughout the march—have been heavily fined, the Chuggurzaies and Akazais who burnt most, fought most, and still showed fight, were not punished at all; while Thahkot, whose chiefs have doggedly refused to come in, have not been molested, not even entered by our troops; and the Ullahee chiefs, who would have come against us if they could, and who attacked the survey party, have not even been summoned; and, lastly, the whole of the tribes, as well as our own levies, firmly believe that without cannon and cavalry our troops are the most cowardly and useless in the country, and the British soldiers the worst of the lot, because they made least noise and were always kept in rear. I know these last impressions are false and foolish, but, nevertheless, they are lasting impressions with such men as those we have been among. Still, this portion of the frontier has been shown our power and forbearance; but I fear they will hardly understand the latter. Sir D. McLeod is expected in to-morrow, and is, I hear, going to hold a darbar."

A letter dated Oct. 22, from the Englishman's correspondent with the Hazara force, informs us that the whole of the Hazara field force has returned to Ooghee, or its neighbourhood. Regiments have been marching in all day, and to judge from the appearance and spirits of officers and men, the late brief campaign has agreed with them wonderfully. The native soldiers look bright and clean, and the Europeans of the force were so ruddy and sunburnt that one would hardly recognise them as the same men that left this to climb the Black Mountain. The officers, though thoroughly appreciating the re-visited luxuries of tents, beds, chairs, and tables, seem to have become so wedded to their bivouac habits that, go where you will, you find groups of them either lying on the ground, or seated in the shade, outside their tents, in apparent forgetfulness of the more civilised comforts within. No orders have been received for the dissolution of the force, and it is expected that all regiments not required at their own stations will march at once to Peshawur, to swell the pageant at the meeting of the Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief with Shere Ali, the Amcer of Cabul, to take place about the 5th proximo. The Lieutenant-Governor is expected to-morrow.

DURBAR AT OGHEE.

The Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab, Sir Donald F. McLeod, arrived at Ooghee on the 25th October, and the same afternoon held a darbar. A correspondent of the Pioneer says it was an "undress" darbar—at least those attending were ordered to appear in "undress,"—and the native portion of the community certainly appeared to have carried out the order in the most liberal acceptance of the term, for a dirtier or more ragged set of ruffians than those who were presented to his Honour I think I have seldom seen. As I heard a by-stander remark—"I suppose, poor fellows, they have been obliged to pawn their clothes to pay their share of the fine!" The young Khan of Umb was placed in a seat on his Honour's right hand and presented with a handsome sword, besides being crowned with a glittering head-dress, the badge, I suppose, of his Nawab-bahadoorship—(what an awful word to have to write!). The "Jirgahs" of the different repentant (!) tribes were then presented in turn, the "good boys" getting small presents (chiefly pocket-handkerchiefs and cummerbunds), and the "bad boys" some not altogether pleasing bits of admonition and advice, if one could judge by the look of their departing visages. The guard of honour was furnished in equal portions by the two British regiments. The whole affair lasted about an hour, and everybody went away, as reporters usually express it, "very well pleased with the afternoon's entertainment."

General Wilde, Brigadiers, Commanding Officers, Officers, and Men of the Hazara Field Force,—As I have thus been brought into the presence, for the first time, of this fine force, it is right that I should address to you a few words of cordial welcome on your return from the late brief, but rough and arduous, campaign, after having successfully brought your labours to a close.

So long as work remained to be done, it was deemed expedient that I should hold aloof, lest my presence should in any way embarrass those to whom the conduct of the military and political measures connected with the expedition has been so wisely and successfully entrusted. But now that the country, which was lately so excited, has been entirely tranquillised, and those who were at one time reculant and defiant have now become submissive and friendly, circumstances have entirely changed; and it affords me peculiar satisfaction to have an opportunity of tendering to you the thanks of this Government for the important services which you have rendered to the State, and of assuring you that your bearing throughout has won the admiration of all whose opinion is of value. The late expedition has been in some respects unprecedented. I believe that so complete and well equipped a force has never before entered the Hills—it has fulfilled its mission with less sacrifice of life than has attended any of the many successful and admirably-conducted expeditions which have preceded it; and yet I feel assured that no force has ever caused greater consternation amongst those whom it was intended to coerce.

If you had met with an enemy capable of offering you real or effective opposition, you would doubtless have had greater opportunities of earning personal distinctions; and your conduct on all occasions has shown that if the opportunity had been afforded to you, you would have turned it to the best account. But the imposing front which you exhibited, and the admirable system of arrangement which has characterised all your operations, at once paralysed and precluded opposition, and the contrast afforded by the stand made at the outset by the hostile tribes, when they were so ably and successfully resisted by my gallant friend Colonel Rothney, aided by the zealous and energetic Deputy Commissioner of Hazara, Captain Ommanney, as well as by the demonstrations made by them at a later period, when first confronted with this force in their own hills, as compared with their bearing at the present time, sufficiently attest the wisdom of the course adopted by H.E. the Commander-in-Chief, in organising, with the approval of Government, a force which should be irresistible.

I am well aware that there are many who consider that the only way of effectually dealing with the wild tribes of the frontier is to punish with rigour, and even to exterminate all who take part in, or sympathise with, wanton aggression; but I do not myself by any means entertain this opinion. On the contrary, I am firmly convinced—and I believe that the conviction is shared by the head of the British Government in India—that a consciousness on the part of those tribes of their inability to resist us, combined with a sense of the moderation and justice of the power for the time opposed to them, afford the best possible guarantee for permanent tranquillity.

Thanks to the wise and skilful arrangements of General Wilde, ably supported by Brigadiers Bright and Vaughan, by the officers and men of the Artillery, and of every branch of the service, amongst whom I would desire especially to mention Colonel Dickens, and those serving under him in the Commissariat, whose services have been quite invaluable, and admirable in every way, seconded as these arrangements have been, on all fitting occasions, by the troops of our faithful friend and ally the Maharajah of Cashmere, as well as by the levies of the Nawab of Umb, and of the tribes of British Hazara, the border races have seen what I feel sure they never expected to see, an imposing force, accompanied by all the requirements of civilised warfare, penetrating through the rugged gorges and glens of their mountains to their highest peaks. They have learned that the forces of the British Government are able, when required, to reach their fastnesses, to destroy their homesteads and their property, and to punish all who may venture to oppose us; while countries which we have never before visited have been opened out to view, and found to contain whole acres of cultivation and stores of wealth far in excess of what had been previously supposed.

Our Hazara neighbours must, moreover, have become satisfied, from the moderation and forbearance they have experienced, that the British Government is as generous as it is powerful; that it has no wish to regard or treat them as enemies; and that the sole object it has in view is to maintain peace and order, and to promote the prosperity of all. They cannot but have been favourably impressed by the patience and fortitude with which you have borne all the exposure and privations to which you have been subjected, as well as by the admirable spirit of discipline and order which you have on all occasions evinced. I venture, therefore, confidently to predict that the results of your late operations, though comparatively bloodless, will be quite as lasting as if most sanguinary retribution had been inflicted; while the effect produced will have been much more tranquillising and beneficial. I cannot doubt that the lesson which the Hazara tribes have learned at your hands will prove a most valuable one, and that its good effects will speedily extend to other similar tribes, both far and near.

No higher title to commendation can be gained by any army than to have proved itself equal to every duty required of it. This title you have most fully and nobly earned, and history will accord you the praise. Meantime the Government ought not to withhold its tribute of thanks, and I beg accordingly to tender once more to General Wilde, officers and men, the cordial acknowledgments of this Government, and to express the hope that in future years you will always be able to look back with pride and satisfaction to the events of the past three weeks in which you have been the chief actors.

THE KHASIA HILLS A FIELD FOR THE COLONIST.

ASSAM, Oct. 12.—As I was returning from Shillong I met the people of Marbisoo Poonjee going to play a match with Sadeo. They were all equipped with bows and arrows, and were marching along troling their wild hill songs and evidently in high glee. Sadeo was this time to provide the pigs and "Kerrat" (rice spirits) for the feast, next time it will be Marbisoo's turn. These villages play each other pretty frequently, and matches with Mhow Phlang, Moleem and other villages, and even Cherra, also take place, but not so frequently, owing to their greater distance. The great archery meetings, at which all the people of the surrounding district assemble, are worth seeing, on account of the general jollity that prevails, as well as for the good shooting, many of the archers being capable of hitting a rupee at from forty to fifty yards. The bows are of bamboo, and the strings of the same material pared down, with only a knot left thick at each end to fasten a loop to attach it to the bow, and nothing can be stronger and better adapted to the purpose. The cultivation about these villages gives one a favourable impression of the industry of the people. The fields are all hedged in with a live fence on a ridge of earth, sometimes with a wall of slate, where the latter is procurable. The earth within the enclosure is kept well and deeply turned over, and yields regularly two crops of potatoes a-year. Some stout and fresh-looking dames were hoeing in a corn field, earthing up the young plants. They used a hoe which necessitated considerable stooping. The attitude seemed an uncomfortable one, but there may be some good reason in the shape of the implement, as I have observed the same peculiarity in the hoes of the men from Madras and Southern India, than whom there are no better hands at earthwork. The only other implement used is the dhow, either light for ordinary chopping, or a cutlass, which is heavy, and takes the place of the axe, being used for slabbing pine planks. The Khasias are as yet unacquainted with the saw. Dhows of good Moleem iron and steel are not inferior to any, and are very much preferred on the tea plantations to the English rubbish that is frequently sent up. A small dhow costs from twelve annas to a rupee, and a heavy one two rupees. The charcoal iron made at Moleem, Nookrem, and other places is probably as good as the best Swedish, and would no doubt make excellent steel. It is so soft and tenacious that nails can be struck off a rod cold, and it is much preferred by all the blacksmiths of Sylhet and Cachar to English rod or boiler plate; this preference is not without reason, as there can be no doubt that for smaller implements it both welds and works better. Considering the distance that the iron has to be carried to the plains (for which purpose it is made in the form of balls or blooms half cut through, so as to fit on the bars of a framework which lies on the back) it seems strange that the Khasias do not free it more from scoria than they do. After reaching the plains it undergoes a loss of one-half before it is fit to be made up; probably the want of anvils and hammers of a sufficient size makes it more laborious to separate the scoria than to carry them two or three days' journey, as the case may be; and the substitute for an anvil which is frequently used, viz., a block of granite, cannot but be a poor one.

Is iron a promising field of investment for the capitalist or settler? Certainly not, however cheaply he may produce it, if he carries it over twenty miles of ups and downs as the Khasia does. But supposing him to secure the favourable conjuncture of coal, iron and water carriage, which is supposed to be necessary to the success of smelting works would, it succeed? To this the best answer is to be found in the fate of similar concerns that have been tried in Kumaon and elsewhere in India, and which, whether owing to the want of fostering care on the part of the Government or to whatever other cause, have proved failures. Leaving, therefore, for the present coke iron out of the question as no more likely to succeed on the Khasia Hills than in fifty other localities, how would it answer to smelt by means of charcoal? The use of blowing and puddling machinery driven by steam or water power would of course be an improvement on the native processes, but these are conducted so cheaply and with so small an expenditure of capital and outlay in plant; and the result of steam entering into competition with native labour has in India proved unsuccessful in a sufficient number of instances. Moreover, it is difficult to predict the result

But what would really be without doubt a profitable investment of British capital would be the establishment of works for the purchasing of the raw materials from the natives and their conversion into steel, which from the great purity of the iron would no doubt equal the best English brands. The rapid increase of machinery and railways in India could not but create a demand for it, if a market should not already exist.

On all the streams which disembody into the plains from the hills there is a point at a greater or less distance above where navigation ceases to be practicable for boats of any burden, and for these there must be substituted canoes or "barca" boats, navigated by both Bengalis and Khasias, whereas the former are worked by Bengalis exclusively. On the Therria River this point of contact between the Bengalis and Khasias is Bolagunge Bazaar; it is here where the whole potato-mahajuns have their stores. The Bengalis do not, as a rule, go higher, nor are the Khasias found in any numbers below. The business of poling the canoes up the rapids is one which requires considerable training, and it is only a particular class that can manage it; the chief knack is never to allow the canoe to get any backway, in which case it would be swept away in an instant. After the man in front has completed his stroke the man behind holds the canoe in place till the other can get a hold for his pole among the pebbles, when he gives another "heeze." Therria Ghat is famous for its splendid plantations of betel palms; the conditions of soil and situation required by this palm, which is somewhat choice in its predilections, exist here in perfection. The plantations are well filled in, and have reserve nurseries every here and there. It is a pleasure to leave for awhile the Khasia houses with their pigs and filth, and the smell of Jack fruit and fish with which the village is redolent, for a ramble in their "columniated" shade.—Correspondent of the Friend of India.

STATION TALK.

PESHAWUR, Oct. 24.—When the Commander-in-Chief visited this garrison some months ago, it will be recollected that his Excellency was considerably chagrined at the bad sanitary arrangements which he found in operation throughout the garrison. It called forth a memo. from army headquarters, which contained some severe strictures, but without however casting reflection on any one authority in particular; the memo. was followed by an order. The order particularly drew the attention of the major-general and the community to the fact that there were no less than fifty-two miles of open water-courses circulating through the garrison itself; and that the flooding of compounds and large plots of land was also universally adopted. Both were in unmeasured terms condemned; the former was ordered to be reduced to a minimum, the latter to cease altogether. There was something very sweeping about this step of reform, and at first the mind of the garrison was completely staggered by it. Under the recoil, however, the major-general ventured to solicit his Excellency for a modification of the order; but the solicitation met with a hard reply, and suggested that, if necessary, a stricter order might be issued if the first failed to carry out the measures it directed. Of course, there was an end to any further babbling on the subject, and the order was brought at once into full operation; and now the garrison is no longer like a rice field; nor is it now, as heretofore, flooded and flushed with water. Knowing well the prejudices in favour of old stereotyped habits, both by individuals and the large section of a community, his Excellency, doubtless, felt that nothing short of a very stringent order would carry out the reform he so well knew was necessary; and his Excellency was right. But it is probable, after all, that by next spring some slight modification of the order will be adopted. There can be no possible harm in irrigating grazing plots of grass, say twice a month, nor yet in trailing water over the roots of trees at certain times; but well regulated irrigation during the summer months only is a very different thing to swamping the whole garrison all the year round; and the major-general and the community of the Peshawur garrison will in due course comprehend the fact and appreciate Sir William Mansfield's move in the direction of sanitary reform.

BUNDELCUND, Oct. 29.—I understand Mr. Wilson, the Geological Surveyor, is coming to Bundelcund to commence operations here, when I trust Government will find this province as rich if not richer than its neighbours. Our military cantonment at Jhansie is, I am told, to be removed to Nowgaon. What a desolate little place Jhansie will then become, more so under the rule of a native Government, since it is to be made over to the Rajah; as it is, there is not much bustling about among the European residents of Jhansie, no recreation of any description, and thinking of the impending desertion of the station by its European population, one has hardly a mind to live any longer in it. It is indeed bitter to think how the consecrated tombs of the few who fell during the late mutiny at Jhansie, like the handful of patriots under Leonidas at Thermopylae, will be abused and dishonoured by the infidels and idolators to whose tender mercies they will be consigned.

"But little they'll reck if they let them sleep on In the grave where a Briton has laid them."

LUCKNOW, Oct. 31.—Besides the increase of gaeties, another phenomenon, attending the setting in of the present cold weather, is the great increase of robberies that now occur. It may be owing to the cold sending the chowkedars and police to sleep, or it may be put down to the failure of the khureef. But robberies produced by a failure of crops generally occur in the districts, and not in the towns, so I fear the present series of thefts must be put down to a want of vigilance on the part of the police rather than to anything else. Instances occur every day, and need not be repeated here. Generally they are matter-of-fact affairs—watches, money, jewellery, and valuables being preferred. Native gentlemen as well as Europeans are the victims, and it behoves one and all of us to keep a sharp look out for ourselves until our city police awake from their slumbers. It need scarcely be said that the stolen property is seldom if ever recovered. We have also a goodly number of loafers amongst us again. They appear to pay us periodical visits. Some pretend to be sick; others come the genteel dodge and send in cards. They band together, and a gentleman who relieves one is sure to have a dozen others at his door within a week. It was probably one of these gentlemen that a few days ago relieved a well-known native of a pair of carriage horses. The animals, a pair of chestnuts, were sent for to a third-rate hotel under the pretence of being purchased, and were never seen again. A European sent for the horses, and he decamped with them as soon as they arrived, and nothing has since been heard of man or beasts. Our hill-birds are returning, and officiating-appointment holders sink down to their pukka posts. Several officers are also expected to return shortly from England. Mr. Bickers, Mr. Maconochie, Dr. Cannon and others must be with us soon. A great number of officers go home next year. Colonel Hutchinson, Chief Engineer, left to-day, and Colonel Newmarch, from Allahabad, arrived in his place.

ALLAHABAD, Nov. 1.—If the authorities could devise some means of ridding the station of the many loafers that may be seen prowling about at all times, it would be a source of great satisfaction. It is anything but pleasant to be perpetually importuned by this class of men. Each of them comes with a cock-and-bull story to extract a rupee or so; some swear that their wife and children are starving, others want to go to a certain station on the line where situations can be procured; but the sole cause of these men going begging from door to door is owing to their being inveterate drunkards, for none but a drunkard will ever be in the streets without employment of any kind, and the vice of drinking is so powerful in them that every farthing they can scrape up will be spent in grog, although the taste of food might have been unknown de die in diem. The Catholic Bishop of this diocese is indefatigable in his labours. Dr. Tosi has resolved on building a cathedral at this station; the site has been selected, and I believe granted also by Government; funds are being collected, and so soon as a large sum is realised the building will be commenced. The Catholic community here are strenuously exerting themselves one and all for the furtherance of the project. I am given to understand that up to this their endeavours have met with great success; collections are steadily coming in. The Bishop himself is visiting the several districts of his vicariate to exhort his flock to subscribe and co-operate in an undertaking so laudable. I should like to know if the Government will give a donation. No! the present drain on the Indian finances is too great to admit of money being lavished on Papists. How is it to be known that some other claims on account of lands appropriated for railways will not be decided by arbitrators; a provision for contingencies is absolutely necessary now-a-days. Slight errors of discretion on the part of the high Government officials must be borne by the State. Nemo mortalium omnibus horis sapit. The Lieutenant-Governor will proceed in a very few days on his tour across the mountains; a small party will accompany his honour.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

CENSUS IN OUDH.—A census of the whole of Oudh is to be taken on the night of Monday, Feb. 1, 1869.

THE MURDER OF CAPT. DOUGLAS.—Hadjee Beg, the murderer of Captain Douglas, has been put into custody by order of the Commissioner Delhi division; his case is being tried.—Indian Public Opinion.

SIR R. TEMPLE.—Sir Richard Temple's intended tour to the Central Provinces and Bombay has been delayed hitherto, owing to his occupation connected with the care of the Punjab Tenancy Bill, and now from the uncertainty regarding the movements of the Viceroy.—Pioneer, Oct. 30.

SIR D. MACLEOD.—The Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab left Oghce on his way to Abbottabad on the morning of the 26th, escorted by the 2nd Goorkhas. The 5th Goorkhas were to march on the same day, and H.M.'s 19th Regiment on the following day (Oct. 27).—Pioneer.

MR. BOULNOIS.—Mr. Justice Boulnois, of the Lahore High Court, is advised to leave India, if only for a few months, on account of his state of health. The choice of his temporary successor lies, it is thought, between Mr. Cunningham, the Government Advocate at Lahore, and Mr. Jardine, M.A., the Professor of Law in the Agra College.—Pioneer.

SUBSISTENCE ALLOWANCE.—We alluded a few months ago to a resolution passed by the Government of India, in the Financial Department, authorising the grant of a subsistence or out-of-employment allowance to uncovenanted judicial officers. We now hear that the provisions of the resolution are to be extended to deputy collectors and other revenue officers. It has also been ruled that the minimum amount of the allowance be fixed at Rs. 100, and in no case should it exceed Rs. 400 a month.—Indian Daily News.

THREATS OF FAMINE IN ORISSA.—The following alarming news is from Pooree:—20th October.—The rains seem entirely to have ceased, and both here and in Cuttack there appears great anxiety about the crops. They say that if we do not get rain within a week half the crop must be lost. The price of rice is rising, and yesterday there was great difficulty in procuring any in Cuttack. It gave one quite a return of the anxious feeling that was so continual two or three years ago. I trust the Lord, in mercy, will avert such a calamity, even to a modified extent. How terrible it would be to have a scarcity with all these children on our hands!

INCREASE OF BENGAL SECRETARIAT.—The Secretary of State has, upon the recommendation of the Governor-General, given his sanction to the proposal for two Secretaries to the Government of Bengal. Each of these officers will receive a salary of Rs. 40,000 per annum. No arrangements will be made for the permanent filling of these posts until the arrival of the Hon. Ashley Eden in Calcutta. The work in the Bengal Secretariat has no doubt increased sufficiently of late years to justify the appointment of an additional secretary; but the public trust that in this measure may be seen the first step towards the abolition of that expensive and useless revenue agency—the Board of Revenue.—Englishman.

HER HIGHNESS SECUNDA BEGUM OF BHOPAL.—We have received intelligence of the death, on the 30th ultimo, of her Highness Secundra Begum of Bhopal, the mention of whose name will recall to most the recollection of the stormy days of the mutiny, and of the late Begum's unwavering fidelity to the British cause. She could not, indeed, aid with men and materiel of war, but no Englishman or Englishwoman in those troublous times sought shelter in Bhopal in vain. Nor was her fidelity overlooked; it won her many tokens of honour and esteem. In 1864 she visited Bombay, and received a right hearty welcome from the Government and all classes of the community. Englishmen and Englishwomen vied with each other in doing honour to one who, by her unshaken fidelity and devotion in their hour of our need and peril, had earned for her a sovereign's guerdon, and a place in the regard of every one of them.—Times of India, Nov. 7.

PORT BLAIR.—From Penang we learn that Port Blair is flourishing under the rule of its new Governor, Colonel Man, who is making every effort in his power to improve the settlement, to add to the comfort of the residents, and to introduce civilisation amongst the natives. Along with other things which he has lately done with this end in view, we may mention that he has sent to Penang for a lady who lives there rejoicing under the name of Mary Andaman, to go to Port Blair to superintend an orphanage and school which is being established by the Colonel's lady. Mary Andaman, as her name may show, is a native of the Andamans, and when a mere child was picked up at sea drifting about in a canoe a long way from land. She was then carried to Penang, where she has been brought up and educated, and now returns to try and diffuse the blessings of that education among her own people. Colonel Man has also sent to Penang a large order for different species of fruit-trees, vegetables, and other plants, which he hopes to be able to introduce into Port Blair. We sincerely trust that all these praiseworthy attempts to improve the settlement may meet with the success which they so richly merit.—Rangoon Times, Oct. 21.

MILITARY ITEMS.—The 104th Bengal Fusiliers expect to be at Julundur on the 2nd November, Umritsur on the 7th, and Meer Meer on the 11th, en route to Peshawur.—Delhi Gazette, Oct. 31.—The 5th Bengal Cavalry, in course of relief, will arrive at Peshawur on the 14th December.—Pioneer.—The 88th Foot relieves the 77th at Naoshera as soon as possible. The 3rd Bengal Cavalry and 45th N.I., ordered more than a fortnight ago by the Major-general to prepare for their march towards Saugor and Mooltan respectively on the 20th instant, moved into camp on the 18th, and were ordered on the 19th, from Army Head-quarters, to "stand fast."—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.—We hear that two native corps are in future to be located at Agra, the 40th N.I. from Banda, already in the relief, and the 1st N.I. from Dum-Dum, its place in Bundelcund, for which it is put down in the relief, being supplied by the 6th Madras N.I., ordered from Bellare to Calcutta via Madras by sea. The two corps at Agra are to garrison Allypore and Futtyghur, thus allowing the company of the 17th N.I. from Delhi to Allypore to return to headquarters. The 3rd Madras L.C. move to Saugor. So it appears we are again to have Madras troops in Central India.—Delhi Gazette.

AN ANGLO-INDIAN WORTHY.—An aged and distinguished veteran has recently paid the debt of nature at Morar, Lieutenant P. Gill, v.c., Unattached List, Barrack Master of the station. He died on Saturday, the 24th ult., after a long and painful illness, in his 60th year, leaving, we are sorry to say, a widow and two children dependent upon charity. Lieutenant Gill's polite and unassuming manner gained for him many friends among the officers of the station, and the attention he received from all during his last and long protracted illness showed how much he was respected. He has left his family perfectly destitute. The deceased officer served at Sobraon and Ferozepore, and in the campaign under Brigadier Wheeler in the hill districts of the Jullunder Doab in 1848, and in the Black Mountain campaign in 1852, and with the Moradabad Levy in the operations beyond the Gogra in 1859, where he was particularly mentioned by the officer commanding the column. At Benares he behaved with great gallantry in June, 1857, and saved the lives of Major Bazzett and the Quartermaster-Sergeant with the Loodiana regiment, and rescued Lieutenant Brown, Pension Paymaster, when surrounded by marauders, who were plundering the treasury. A statement of Brigadier Gordon certifies that Lieutenant, then Sergeant Major Gill, "distinguished himself for cool gallantry under desperate circumstances on the occasion in question, more than any other individual, European or native, present at Benares on the 4th of June, 1857."—Delhi Gazette.

THE FAMINE.—Another week gone and still no rain. The prospects of the wheat crop of 1869 are intensely gloomy. There is a daily decrease of water in the wells.—Central India Times, Oct. 31.—The ryots in the Bhundara district are emigrating by thousands to Berar; this is attributed, we believe, to the scarcity which is already beginning to be felt there, and the high rates at which the Government revenue is assessed in that district.—Central India Times.—The Guzerat Mitra of Nov. 1 states that thousands of poor people, flying from the famine-stricken province of Marwar, are pouring into Guzerat from the North, and that it is supposed about sixty thousand persons have already taken refuge there.—A gentleman who has been on a visit to Nagpore writes on the 2nd of November to the Bombay Gazette as follows:—"The crops in Berar, as far as I could learn from officers we picked up on the way, and as far as I could judge from the appearance of the fields along the line, are about an average, but unless rain comes soon the rubber crops will be a failure. Here, and to the east and west, and northwards, things are much worse,—in fact, a famine is inevitable unless rain comes soon. The district officers have come in to the station to consult with the Commissioner and discuss modes of relief; and one of these, who is now in the room with me, says the people are fleeing into the southern provinces, seeking for food and labour. It would seem that the drought extends from behind Cuttack in the east to Agra in the north-west, and northwards through Rajpootana into the Punjab. So far as I can gather from the cursory conversation I have just had with the civil officer in question, the food prospects over all northern India are very gloomy."—There is no danger of a famine in Bhopal, sufficient rain having fallen within the last three weeks to enable the rubber sowings to take place. But scarcity there will be, for thousands of starving poor are flocking into the territory from Rajpootana, attracted by the report of comparative plenty. Her Highness the Begum of Bhopal, our staunch ally, has been ailing for the last three months.—Delhi Gazette, Oct. 29.—The Sindian (of Oct. 31) learns that famine, in consequence of the failure of crops, has become so severe in Kattywar as to necessitate hundreds of its inhabitants to travel down to Hyderabad to purchase grain and return to their homes as soon as possible. The price of grain has, in consequence, increased considerably.

OFFICIAL.—We hear that Captain Tredway Clarke will resume his old appointment of Secretary to the Commissioner.—Bangalore Herald.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF'S RETURN.—His Excellency Lieut-General McCleverty, accompanied by his personal staff, was to leave Ootacamund for the Presidency on the morning of the 10th November, and was expected to arrive at Madras on the 12th idem.

MILITARY.—The Bangalore Herald believes it to be definitely settled that the right wing of H.M.'s 3-60th Rifles was to leave Bangalore for Bellary on the 13th November. The troop of Royal Horse Artillery left for Kamptee on the 30th Oct.

THE HORSE DISEASE.—The Commander-in-Chief in Madras has informed the Madras Government that the officer commanding Mysore Division has intimated to him that the disease among the horses at Bangalore is decidedly diminishing, and also that the disease among the horses at Secunderabad has assumed a mild form, and that fatal cases are very rare.—Madras Times.

RETIREMENT OF MAJOR-GENERAL MARSHALL.—Major-General Hubert Marshall, Military Secretary to the Madras Government, is about to retire from the public service. He entered the army in 1824, and his commissions are dated as follows:—Ensign, 14th Sept., 1824; Lieutenant, 11th November, 1826; Captain, 14th February, 1836; Major, 9th November, 1846; Lieutenant-Colonel, 20th June, 1854; Colonel, 20th June, 1857; and Major-General, 9th October, 1865. He was appointed secretary to Government on the 30th March, 1860. He will, we understand, be succeeded in the Secretariat by Brigadier-General Alfred Thomas Wilde, C.B., C.S.I., now in command of the Punjab Frontier Force. This distinguished officer arrived in India in 1832, and his commissions are dated—Ensign, 12th Dec., 1838; Lieutenant, 9th July, 1842; Captain, 12th Dec., 1853; Major, 19th January, 1858; Lieutenant-Colonel, 20th July, 1858; and Brevet-Colonel, 18th Feb., 1864. In 1843 he served with the 19th Regiment Native Infantry during the disturbances in Malabar. He was present in command of the 4th Punjab Infantry at the occupation of the Bahadoor Khail Valley in November 1851, also in the expedition against the Beydar Beloochees in March 1857; served during the suppression of the rebellion in Bengal 1857-58; commanded the 4th Punjab Infantry during the siege, and at the storming of Delhi, 14th September, 1857; formed part of the storming party in the capture of the Delhi Magazine and Palace on the 17th and 19th September, 1857; was present at the affairs of Gungeole, Puttealee, and Mynpoore, December 1857; at the engagement at Shumshabad, 27th January, 1858, and at the siege of Lucknow and storming of the Begum's Palace, March 1858; was severely wounded in the attack on the Goal Musjid, March 1858; commanded the 4th Punjab Infantry in the expedition against the Mynoud Wazeers in March 1860.

THE WEATHER.—After a somewhat heavy fall of rain early last week the weather cleared up, the temperature rose, and the normal sunny sky of the East was again innocent of clouds. Yesterday, however, the sky was again overcast, and there was every usual sign of bad weather being close at hand. Rain is very much wanted in the districts near to Madras, and a short fall can hardly fail to be followed next season by wide-spread scarcity in the neighbourhood of North Arcot, Cuddapah, and Kurnool. So far as the Madras district is concerned the total rainfall this year is above the average; but the importance of this circumstance is modified by the fact that the rainfall has been made up this year of numerous but in themselves brief showers, which have only sufficed to soak the crust of the ground, and the beneficial influence of which has therefore proved ephemeral.—Madras Times, Nov. 2.

IMPROVEMENTS AT OOTACAMUND.—Our readers will have observed doubtless that a tramway has been laid down from the neighbourhood of Zion Chapel to the borders of the lake. We are quite sure that the reclamation scheme, under the energetic superintendence of Major Farewell, will, without loss of time, be conducted to a successful issue. This will tax the skill and scientific resources of the able head of the P.W.D., on the Neilgherry Range. We are sure they will not be found wanting. The scheme itself promises to turn what is now an unsightly and unwholesome part of the cantonment into one of the greatest ornaments of the place. Great taste will be required in laying out the reclaimed grounds. We hope to see cricket, archery, croquet, and other games flourishing there. We want a real people's park, that shall be a pleasant and healthful resort for townsfolk and visitors. It is thus that a Sanitarium maintains its character. While we are on the subject of local improvements, we may remark that Sergeant Hopkins and his stone carts are in active operation. Our roads will in time cease to be a disgrace. The New Library is also rapidly advancing towards completion; the fittings have just arrived from England, and appropriate furniture has been ordered. It will probably be opened by February or March next at the latest. Mr. Misquith's music-hall is also rising, and the enterprising proprietor may be constantly seen under the shade of a wide spreading umbrella, urging on the work which is to improve the taste of the public, and, we hope, put rupees into his pocket. Mr. Egan has put the last ornament on the roof of Norfolk-house. The stained glass window, in memory of the late Bishop Dealtry, has been put up in the new church, and gives great satisfaction. The Roman Catholic Church, on its commanding site, is beginning to present an imposing appearance. The garden in front of the Court House is in progress. Our old shed has not been rebuilt. The churchyard, thanks to our chaplain, is becoming daily more beautiful and more like what "God's acre" should be. The works connected with the water scheme are in full progress. A friend asks us to inquire when the committee of the Ootacamund Agri-Horticultural Society will commence its operations! A Friend-in-Need Society's workshop for women is likely to be established, under the auspices of the ladies of the station.—South of India Observer.

MADRAS SILK COMPANY.—A preliminary public meeting of the promoters of this scheme was held at Messrs. Dymes and Co.'s offices on the 2nd of November. From the prospectus before us we learn that the capital required is Rs. 3,00,000, in 600 shares of Rs. 500. The prospectus proceeds to state that—"This company has been formed for the purpose of carrying on and working silk factories in this Presidency and in the Mysore district. It is an admitted fact that the production of silk on the Mysore plateau is greatly extending, and that it is recognised by Government as one of the most important articles of export. So much so, indeed, and so anxious are they to foster this branch of industry, that they are now importing fresh seed (i.e., eggs) from Japan, &c., for distribution amongst breeders, ensuring thereby, by judicious crossing, an improvement in the breed of the country worms. A vast quantity of the silk now produced is spun by the natives with their rude and primitive wheel, but is so badly manipulated that, as compared with properly reeled Italian raw silk, its value is barely in the proportion of one to three, the cocoons being originally equally good. Such a vast difference in value has attracted the attention of capitalists to the improvement of machinery and the working of silk factories in This country, under the experienced management of professional gentlemen from Lombardy, and it is now proposed to amalgamate under this one company the four existing properties of Kingherry, Oosoor, Gighany, and Madoor. Before describing these properties in detail, it will be as well to glance at the peculiar adaptability of the Province of Mysore and the adjoining plateau in this Presidency, both in climate, soil, &c., for the production of silk. One fact alone speaks volumes in its favour, and that is its prolificness, which enables natives to rear from six to eight crops of silkworms every year, while in Bengal, China, Japan, Italy, &c., no more than one, two, or at the outside three crops in the same period can ever be obtained. The average may with safety be put down at two crops per annum. It will be seen that the production of silk is no new feature in the industry of these districts, for it was estimated in the last Government reports that upwards of 40,000 acres were under cultivation with mulberry, which ensure the company obtaining a large and regular supply of cocoons. The same authority estimates the exports of last year from Mysore, for consumption in Bombay, Hyderabad, Travancore, and adjacent provinces, also in Burmah, &c., at the large value of forty lacs of rupees, equal to £400,000, and to this must be added the value of the silk worked up in Mysore itself, which must be very considerable, although no reliable data on the subject can be obtained."

STATION TALK.

MAHABLESHWAR, Oct. 24.—His Excellency the Governor has "accounted" for the tiger which has recently been doing so much mischief amongst the cattle in the vicinity of Malcolm Peth. His Excellency, it appears, made an unexpected sally upon the enemy a few mornings ago, and polished off the striped devil just as he was about to make a meal off another cow which he had killed the night before. The sporting feat of his Excellency, which, I am told, was performed on foot, has raised him very much in the estimation of the natives, who have a great respect for all true shikarees, let them be of what caste or creed they may. It is reported that another tiger was seen in company with the one which has just had the honour of closing its career under the aim of his Excellency Sir Seymour Fitzgerald. If this should be the case, there can be little doubt that it will not be long before his Excellency beats up the quarters of the royal beast. The weather at Mahableshwar is most delightful, and the nights and mornings are very cold. Nothing seems to be known here as to when the Governor would return to Poona en route to Bombay; but there is a rumour in Poona that he will be back there early in next week.—Correspondent of Deccan Herald.

KURRACHEE, Oct. 23.—Merwanjee Nowrojee Meenwalla, late shroff of the Kurrachee branch of the Punjab Bank, is now on his trial on a series of charges involving forgeries and other dishonesties which almost exhaust the catalogue of pecuniary crime. The case excites the more attention here inasmuch as its surroundings involve the entire reputation of several other persons, natives as well as Europeans, who have hitherto held a position in the public estimation both as men thoroughly solvent and thoroughly honest, but whom the revelations of this trial threaten to reduce to a level of bankruptcy, and more so in fame than in fortune, deeper than it is possible to exaggerate. Never—in the courts of Sind at all events—have the imputations, if not appellations, of "scoundrel," thief, and "forger" been bandied about with such freedom, and such earnest mischief, as they were in the Court of the District Judge (W. Foxton, Esq., B.A.) this morning. Numbers of people out of the crowded audience who had assembled to watch the proceedings left the Court when the day's work terminated with an uncomfortable feeling of distrust in everybody connected with the accused. The surroundings of the case are not only mysterious but romantic. In it not only perjury, forgery, conspiracy, false personation and other minor matters of the Penal Code are grouped round the central fact of Merwanjee's insolvency; but, as if to invest it with more sensational effect, suicide in one instance, and attempted suicide in a second, are among the most prominent of its features. Your readers might remember my mentioning in my letter of the 10th July last the sudden disappearance at Kurrachee of a young Parsee named Dorabjee Dinshaw, and the subsequent discovery of his corpse near the English cemetery. It now transpires that the youth destroyed himself simply in consequence of the detection of the first of the series of frauds and forgeries which go to make up the present complicated case. He had been trading, it is alleged, as the second member of a pseudo-firm which had been transacting business with the Punjab bank (of which his uncle Merwanjee was cashier) under the fictitious name of Radasha Dorabjee and Co.; and it was his imprudence which dropped the first spark into the mine of mischief which is now shaking credits and reputations around us. Dorabjee's frauds were cleverly planned, and had it not been that three or four more irons of the same sort were in the fire of the bank's business, his would not have been suffered to burn, but would have had abundant time to cool and quiet. But for sudden changes of secretaries, and the fact that two or three less clever operators in the same direction spoilt his game, we should never have heard of the revelations which startle the monetary community of Kurrachee to-day. The general truth of the old proverb, "When rogues fall out honest men come by their own," will, in this instance, be falsified for once. The rogues have fallen out, but honest men's "own" is beyond reach for ever; and I foresee that they will never have even the poor satisfaction of a trace as to where it is gone!

JACOBABAD, Oct. 24.—The Poona Horse left this on the morning of the 22nd for Shikarpore en route to Kurrachee. At Shikarpore they will draw their pay and then proceed on to Larkhanah. For the few months they were here they won the esteem of everybody. Grain is becoming very dear, and public employes will, no doubt, be entitled to compensation allowance. A severe famine is apprehended in Kutchee. Grain and provisions are already exhausted there, and I believe the Khan of Khelat has informed both the Commissioner in Sind and the Political Superintendent of the Frontier of the fact. About one hundred Khorasanees have been sent here from the Punjab, under escort, and will be sent as far as Khelat in the same way. From there they will be sent beyond the border under escort by the Khelat authorities. These people are a sort of gypsies, and have been dealing in gold and silver jewellery, precious stones, cloth, fancy shoes, and other things. They have a good deal of money and valuables with them, and have told the Political Superintendent that they will be robbed and murdered when they get beyond Khelat, as the tribes there are their mortal enemies. It is quite likely that Colonel Phayre will refer the matter to the Commissioner.—Sindian Correspondent.

MHOW, Oct. 26.—Government have sanctioned an expenditure of forty lakhs of rupees on new barracks, of which there are to be some twenty-six in number; and the contract for these has been given to Mr. Reeves, of Nassick, who has just finished building a fine set of quarters for troops at Deolalee. All this expenditure here shows that it is the intention of Government to make this a very large station; in fact rumour has it that it will be a sort of half-way station for troops to be stationed at, bound from Bombay to the north-west. New barracks, too, are to be built at Indore, where, besides the detachment of infantry, a number of artillery are to be located. Owing to the scarcity of food towards Neemuch and Nusseerabad, the troop of Horse Artillery here, under orders to the latter station, stand fast, as do the 2nd Battalion 1st Royals under orders to Agra. The 93rd Highlanders also remain at Jhansi, owing to the scarcity of water between Sepree and Indore; and we hear the two regiments of Bengal Cavalry at Malligaum are to stand fast as well. The head quarters and No. 6 Battery of the 21st Brigade Royal Artillery leave this shortly for England. This brigade was formed out of the old Bombay Artillery, and most of the officers and men who have never served out of India will find this change to home service a little painful. This brigade is to be quartered at Woolwich on arrival at home. Besides the artillery, the invalids and time-expired men leave, the Bays having some eleven, and the 95th having no less than 140 time-expired men, who will not take on for a further term of service. Colonel Seymour, of the Bays, has just returned from Poona, after two months' leave. Mr. Gerald Fitzgerald, private secretary to the Governor of Bombay, has accompanied Colonel Seymour on a visit to Central India. We shall lose the Bays and 95th next year, as both go to England. The 15th Hussars are to take the place of the Bays; but many changes may occur before that time, though it would be unfair to the Bays if they are again disappointed of their tour of home service.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

COTTON.—The cotton shipped from the port of Bombay during the month of September amounted to 1,40,48,188 lbs., valued at Rs. 44,47,631.

HORSE FEVER.—Up to Saturday last there had been one hundred and ninety horses belonging to the 1st Madras Light Cavalry on the sick list with fever.—Poona Observer.

THE GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY.—H.E. the Governor of Bombay left Mahabeshwar on Friday, the 30th ult., for Poona, and came down to Bombay last Monday, alighting at the Byculla station about ten o'clock P.M., and proceeded direct to Government-house, Malabar Point, where he now resides.

MR. LONGFELLOW, JUNIOR.—We learn that Mr. Longfellow, who arrived by the Malta at Bombay on the 31st October, is a son of Longfellow the poet, who is now in Italy. Mr. Longfellow intends making a tour in India, and thence through China and Japan to the United States, via San Francisco.

PASSENGERS BY THE "GUNGA."—The following passengers arrived per steamer Gunga, Captain Bonfellow, from Suez on the 6th November:—Mrs. Emma Walsh, Miss Walsh, Miss Lizzie Walsh, Miss Campbell, Miss Garston, Mrs. Muntiano, Mrs. Grinberg, Mrs. Rosa Bacher, Mr. J. Grinberg, Mr. Stephen Muntiano, Mr. Isidor Perez.

POONA.—Mr. F. Lloyd, Sessions Judge, proceeds on leave of absence to the Neilgherries shortly. We have heard that it is probable that the headquarters of the army will be transferred to Bombay on or about the 8th instant. His Highness the Maharaja of Kolapore left Poona for Kolapore on Tuesday afternoon November 3, at four o'clock.

INCREASE OF BUSINESS IN THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.—The Government of India, we understand, has authorised the local Government at Bombay to augment the number of Executive engineers in that Presidency, in consequence of the increase of business in connection with the Public Works Department in Bombay.—Indian Daily News, Oct. 28.

THE NEW STEAMER "MAGDALA."—The steam-ship Magdala, 2,200 tons, Captain E. P. H. Thompson, arrived at Bombay at one o'clock on the morning of November 6. She left Liverpool on the afternoon of the 6th September with a cargo of 5,000 packages of piece goods, 1,200 tons of coals, besides stores for the company, and arrived at Port Louis on the 18th October, resuming her voyage on the 23rd, after taking in upwards of 14,000 bags of sugar, and completing the entire voyage from Liverpool to Bombay in fifty-eight days, including over five days' stoppage at the Mauritius; or fifty-two and a-half days under steam, with a reduced consumption of coal. The Magdala was built by Messrs. Earle, of Hull, for the overland freight route, and is to leave Bombay for Suez on the 20th instant. Her length is 346 feet over all, breadth thirty-five, and depth twenty-five and a-half feet; nominal horse-power 300.

BARODA, Oct. 29.—The General commanding the division arrived here on the 27th (yesterday morning). He inspected the 18th N.I., and put them through the company drill, advance guards, out-post duties, and light infantry drill; and in the evening, guard mounting, having previously inspected the lines, &c. This morning they were reviewed, and pleased the General very much, by the steady, soldierly manner in which they performed the different evolutions. The regiment is composed of a fine-looking lot of men, many being Punjabis. The Broach exhibition building is progressing satisfactorily, and great credit is due to the secretary for the tasteful way in which it is being decorated. A great fire occurred in the city of Baroda yesterday morning about 2 A.M., by which more than two hundred houses were destroyed, and an immense quantity of property. H.H. the Guicwar attended personally on the first alarm, and worked among his subjects at extinguishing the fire; and to him chiefly, I hear, it is due that the fire was got under so soon as it was.—Times of India Correspondent.

COLONEL H. J. BARR.—We are informed that the rumour which was current some time ago in Poona, that Colonel Harry Barr, Controller of Military Accounts in this Presidency, has been selected for the highest military financial appointment in India, that of Controller-General, is confirmed, and that he will be succeeded here by Major Gray, who for several years held the office of Deputy Commissary-General. Colonel Barr has always been distinguished for his administrative capacity, throughout a service which extends over a quarter of a century in the department to which he belongs, and there is not another man in the whole Presidency who is more beloved in all the relations of life than he is. "Harry Barr" has for long been esteemed as the representative in Bombay of all the virtues of a true English gentleman, and a most worthy successor of his father, General Barr, a man who has never been excelled for his popularity with all classes of the people of this Presidency. Both father and son have always been regarded with feelings of the liveliest esteem by all who knew them, and the Government never had more zealous or thoroughly upright servants than they. Col. Barr's transfer to Bengal cannot but be felt as a great loss here to the department over which he has ruled for so many years with the greatest benefit to the State; and it is a fortunate circumstance that there should be on the spot a man so well fitted to succeed him as Major Gray.—Deccan Herald.

MILITARY ITEMS.—The detachment of H.M.'s 2-1 Regiment, which is now at Deolalie will march to Neemuch to relieve the detachment of H.M.'s 96th Regiment, which will join its headquarters.—It is rumoured that the 2nd Grenadier Regiment will be sent back in a month or two to Sattara, and we understand that the 23rd N.L.I. will be stationed at Poona.—By intelligence received from Sholapore it appears that just as the headquarters of the 25th N.L.I. were stepping into the train, a telegram was received ordering them to stand fast at that station till further orders, and that the two companies alone left Sholapore for Bombay on the 30th October, en route for Burdah Chowkey, and have probably by this time arrived at their destination.—The 8th (King's) arrived at Poona yesterday (4th) morning at 4.20 A.M., the headquarters, under the command of Lieut.-Colonel Woods, at 5.30 A.M. Four companies, for want of accommodation in the Wanowrie barracks, are quartered at Ghorpore as a temporary measure, pending the march of the detachment for Sattara. The regiment is very strong.—Poona Observer, Nov. 5.—The left wing of the 3rd N.I., under the command of Major Bowen, left Poona on Thursday afternoon at 6.35, by special train for Callian and Khundwa, en route to Mhow. This corps will replace the 15th N.I. at Mhow, which is under orders to garrison Augur and Mehidpoor. The 3rd N.I. will have a strong detachment stationed at Indore.—Poona Observer, Oct. 31.

ARRIVAL OF H.M.'S INDIAN TROOPSHIP "JUMNA."—H.M.'s Indian troopship Jumna arrived in Bombay harbour on November 2nd, bringing the 8th Foot from Malta and details from England ex Serapis. The Jumna sailed from Suez at 5.30 A.M. on Sunday, the 18th October, and arrived at Aden at two in the afternoon of the 23rd. Four mail steamers were then lying at Aden, the Nubia for Calcutta, the Malta for Bombay, the Salbette for Suez, and a French mail steamer. The consequence was that the Jumna was delayed till Sunday, the 25th, but she sailed that afternoon at four o'clock, and arrived at Bombay on the 2nd ult. at half-past six. There were several births during the passage, and one soldier of the 8th Regiment died at sea. The following are the particulars of the troops, and a list of the officers brought by the Jumna:—From Malta for Poona.—8th Foot: 39 officers, 7 officers' wives and 7 children, 737 non-commissioned rank and file, 64 wives and 84 children—including drafts, 32 men, 1 woman, and 2 children. For Deolalie.—Royal Artillery: 14 non-commissioned rank and file. 1-7 Foot: 2 officers, 131 non-commissioned rank and file, 5 wives, and 3 children. Bengal Sappers: 1 schoolmaster, 1 wife, and 4 children. 85th Regiment: 1 schoolmaster. For Madras.—1-1 Foot: 1 officer, 20 non-commissioned rank and file, 2 wives, and 1 child. For Bombay.—Details: 6 officers, 3 wives, 1 child, 3 wives of soldiers, and 4 children. Officers of 8th Foot.—Lieut.-Col. Woods, Major and Mrs. Colman and child, Major Webb, Captain and Mrs. Cochrane and child, Captain Wheeley, Captain Farquharson, Captain Casack, Captain Page, Captain Madden, Captain Williams, Captain Crawley, Captain and Mrs. Lewis, Captain and Mrs. Jones, Lieutenant Emerson, Lieutenant Fleetwood, Lieutenant Egerton, Lieutenant Malet, Lieutenant Stourton, Lieutenant Stewart, Lieutenant Fawkes, Lieutenant Swinkins, Lieutenant Humphrey, Lieutenant Louis, Lieutenant Sawyer, Lieut. Webster, Ensign Wise, Ensign Cope, Ensign Brown, Ensign Martyn, Ensign McM. Shaw, Ensign Russell, Ensign Kelly, Ensign Atkinson, Paymaster and Mrs. Senior and two children, Lieut. and Adjutant Hamilton, Quartermaster and Mrs. White and three children, Surgeon and Mrs. Brady, Assistant-Surgeon Ross, Assistant-Surgeon O'Brien, Bandmaster Galea. Officers from England.—Lieutenant Howard, Royal Engineers; Lieutenant Wynn, Royal Engineers; Lieut. Walter, Royal Engineers; Ensign Derman, 1st Royals; Captain Kerr, 7th Fusiliers; Ensign Darton, 7th Fusiliers; Paymaster Simpson, 1-4 Regiment; Ensign Lloyd, 53rd Regiment; Ensign Parrott, 76th Regiment.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

ALTERATIONS IN THE RELIEF.

Head Qrs., Simla, Oct. 17.—With the sanction of Government, the following alterations in the relief of British and native troops for 1868-69 are ordered:—

21st Foot, from Nussערabad, to stand fast at Nussערabad.
77th Foot, from Nowshera, to Agra, instead of Nussערabad.
2nd Bengal Cavalry, from Deolee, to stand fast at Deolee.
4th Bengal Cavalry, from Bareilly, to stand fast at Bareilly.
17th Bengal Cavalry, from Barrackpore, to Seetapoor and Fyzabad (instead of Bareilly).

Simla, Oct. 26.—With the sanction of the Government of India, the following alterations in the relief of British troops for 1868-69 are ordered, viz.:—

1st batln. 8th Foot, from England, to Bombay Presidency, on arrival.
1st batln. 11th Foot, from Fyzabad, to stand fast at Fyzabad.
1st batln. 14th Foot, from England, to Cawnpore (instead of Lucknow).
62nd Foot, from England, to Lucknow (instead of Cawnpore).
93rd Foot, from Jhansie, to stand fast at Jhansie.

H.E. the C. in C. is pleased to exempt bandsmen of the native army, to the number of 17 only, who have gone through the annual course of musketry once, from further training. The remarks to the annual practice return must, however, certify to the number of trained bandsmen so exempted.

In consequence of the above decision, it is notified that the position of the 19th N.I., in G.O. of Sept. 1, 1868, is 6th instead of 19th, the percentage of non-exercised men being, by the above decision, reduced from 5.65 to 2.91.

Government having directed the conversion of a field battery of Royal Artillery to a mountain battery, the C. in C. in India is pleased to order that "A" battery 22nd brigade be so converted, under detailed instructions which will be issued by the Deputy Adj. General, Royal Artillery.

The equipment, ammunition, and stores are to be given in to the Allahabad arsenal.

The horses will remain attached to the battery for the present, pending dispersion among other batteries.—By order of H.E. the C. in C., H. R. LONGDEN, Colonel, Adjutant General.

RAILWAYS.

Simla, Oct. 21.—No. 319.—The Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to rule that, on the occasion of any head quarters or personal staff attending H.E. the C. in C. on tour of inspection duty, free conveyance shall be allowed for their chargers to the extent laid down as the ordinary complement in G.G.O. No. 661 of July 7, 1868 (G.O. No. 252).

LEAVE OF OFFICERS ON CIVIL EMPLOY.

Oct. 21.—No. 992.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to notify that, when military officers in civil employ shall apply for leave beyond India on m.c., the accountant-general of the province in which they may be serving, and not the relieving officer, will, on application, furnish the certificate prescribed in the second paragraph of G.G.O. No. 755, dated July 17, 1860, an extract from which is subjoined for facility of reference:—

"When an officer in charge of cash or stores applies for leave on m.c., he shall be required to furnish a certificate from the officer taking charge of his duties, that, as far as can be ascertained after careful examination, nothing irregular nor any known demand against him remain unadjusted in his office."

CAMP EQUIPAGE.

No. 322.—The following copy of a letter, from the Govt. of India in the military dept., No. 373, dated Jan. 8 last, to the address of the inspector-general of ordnance and magazines, is published for information:

"In returning the enclosure of your letter No. 648r, dated 13th ult., I am directed to acquaint you that the Right Hon. the Gov. gen. in Council approves of the use, by officers attached to bodies of invalids and time-expired men, who may have to proceed by ordinary marches over some portions of their journey to ports of embarkation, of staff-sergeants' tents, should such be available, as you propose; without, however, any deduction being made from their pay on account of the very temporary accommodation thus afforded.

"2. You will, of course, in communication with the quartermaster-general, adopt such arrangements as will render the measure as little expensive to the State as possible, by keeping the tents likely to be so used at the places most convenient for their issue," &c.

SUB-ASSISTANT SURGEONS.

Simla, Oct. 20.—No. 3,115.—Read: A docket from the Government of Bengal, No. 3,850, dated Sept. 22, 1868, reporting, with reference to an inquiry whether the transfer of a sub-assistant surgeon to the rank of an unconvicted medical officer involves the loss of his services in the former appointment as counting towards pension and leave, that it was never intended that the officer should forfeit the privileges as to pension and leave which, under the rules, he might have already acquired while serving as a sub-assistant surgeon, excepting only that the previous service will not count towards the periodical increments to his salary.

Resolution: The Gov. gen. in Council approves of the views expressed by the Lieut. gov.

ALLOWANCES OF MILITARY OFFICERS ON LEAVE PREPARATORY TO FURLOUGH.

Oct. 22.—No. 3,205.—Read: The undermentioned correspondence regarding the allowances of military officers in staff employ during absence on preparatory leave:—

From the Accountant Gen., Bengal, to the Sec. to Govt. of India, Financial Dept., No. E 1,702, dated Sept. 9, 1868.

I have the honour, by direction of the Accountant gen., to observe that the new rules for the grant of leave to military officers are silent as to the rate of allowance to be paid to officers on preparatory leave under section 18; considering, however, that that description of leave is analogous to general leave taken in India, this office has in three cases passed to officers proceeding on the former leave full military pay and allowances and half staff salary. I am to beg the favour of being informed whether this procedure has the sanction of Government.

No. 2,560, dated Sept. 18, 1868.—Endorsed by the Financial Dept.—

Forwarded to the Military Dept. for opinion.—Office memo. from Military Dept., to Sec. to Govt. of India, Financial Dept.—No. 216, dated Oct. 12, 1868.

In returning the enclosure of docket No. 2,560, dated Sept. 18, 1868, the undersigned is directed to inform the financial dept. that the allowances of an officer taking leave preparatory to furlough have always been regulated on the principle applying to general leave—that is, an officer is entitled during such leave to the staff corps pay of his rank and a moiety of his staff salary.

The proceeding of the examiner of claims appears, therefore, to have been correct.

E. H. LUSHINGTON, Sec. to Govt. of India.

APOTHECARIES—ABSENTEE PAY.

No. 3,250.—The Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to rule that an apothecary holding permanent medical charge of a civil station on the allowance sanctioned for unconvicted medical officers in the notification of this department No. 2,295, dated April 25, 1867, may be allowed leave on the absentee pay admissible under the rules for the grant of leave of absence to unconvicted servants, provided it be not less than the military pay and allowances of military pay of his rank (as the case may be) which would be admissible for that term of leave under military leave rules.

CONSULAR AGENT, RANGOON.—His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-general in Council is pleased to recognise Mr. John Halliday as Consular Agent for the United States of America at Rangoon.

DEPARTURES TO EUROPE.—The undermentioned officers have reported their departure on the date specified to their names:—Lieutenant Craigue, of the general list, cavalry, and Assist. Surgeon Tandy, of the medical department, G.G.O., Simla, Oct. 12, 1868.

PUNJAB TENANCY ACT.—A Gazette of India Extraordinary, of the 26th October, contains the new Punjab Tenancy Act, which has just received the assent of the Viceroy. From the passing glance we have been able to give at its provisions, the law appears to be a compromise. An up-country contemporary has said that both parties are exultant at the result, each claiming the victory. If such is the case, legislation could have hardly had a more satisfactory outcome. There is one class, however, that can hardly join in this feeling of triumph. Whether they are a numerous class or not we do not know. Proprietors are enabled to rebut the presumption of right of occupancy, arising from the previous registry of such a right in favour of a tenant in the records of a regular or revised settlement. If such rights have been recorded on insufficient grounds, it is no doubt greatly to be regretted; but it may be doubtful how far it is just or politic to open up questions which were, on the best of grounds, believed to have been already authoritatively settled. The Act, we observe, entirely discards the principle of allowing rights of occupancy to be acquired, as in Bengal, by mere lapse of time. The ryots of the latter province may probably consider it a very lucky thing for them that Act X. of 1859 was passed when it was. Official opinion has undergone a marked change on the subject of such rights since those days.

LORD NAPIER AND THE VICEROY OF EGYPT.—Lord Napier of Magdala arrived at Alexandria on the 24th of November, and went on direct to Cairo. The ceremony of investing the Viceroy of Egypt with the Order of the Star of India by Lord Napier of Magdala took place at Cairo on the 25th, and was followed by a review. In the evening Colonel Stanton, the English Consul-General, gave a ball in honour of Lord Napier.

A PARTING PRESENT.—Major Burne, late aide-de-camp to Lord Strathnairn, and now private secretary to Lord Mayo, Governor-General of India, before leaving Ireland presented the officers' mess of his regiment, the 20th Foot, with a casket in silver and bog oak, containing several relics of interest—a lock of the Emperor Napoleon the First's hair, a piece of the coffin from St. Helena, also a rosette presented by some Spanish ladies at Toulouse to the officers of the 20th, and a portion of the old colours of the corps carried through the Peninsula.

THE BANK OF BOMBAY COMMISSION.—The Government investigation into the failure of the Bank of Bombay was continued at the India Office on Monday, the 23rd ult. Mr. Donald Robertson was further examined at great length. With regard to a series of loans granted by him in 1864, he owned that to three members of one firm he advanced twenty-five lakhs of rupees (£250,000) without security and without consulting the directors. He also spoke to several other transactions of a like character, on all of which losses had been incurred. The commissioners resumed their sittings on Thursday, the 26th ult., at the India Office. The examination of Mr. Donald Robertson was continued.

THE OLDEST GENERAL.—General Richard Pigot, the oldest general in the British army, died on Sunday, Nov. 22, at his residence, near Newbury. He entered the army as an ensign so far back as September 4, 1793; became lieutenant, September 16, 1793; captain, December 21, 1793; major, April 29, 1802; lieutenant-colonel, May 1, 1806; colonel, June 4, 1814; major-general, July 19, 1821; lieutenant-general, January 10, 1837; general, November 11, 1851; colonel of the 4th Dragoons, November 26, 1849. General Pigot was actively employed in the West Indies, in 1794, during the Maroon war. He served in the Mediterranean and at the capture of Minorca in 1798; and at the capture of the Cape of Good Hope in 1806; and in the East Indies in 1818.

BREACH OF PROMISE.—A breach of promise trial in the Court of Queen's Bench on Friday excited considerable interest. The plaintiff was Miss Dora Otte, the daughter of a gentleman of German extraction, and the defendant, Mr. Grant, of the Bombay Civil Service. The courtship had gone on during the furlough of the defendant, and the marriage was to have taken place after his return. No quarrel had interposed, but the defendant declined to carry out his engagement on account of his health. Mr. Coleridge, Q.C., admitted the engagement, but contended that, as it would have been suicidal for the defendant to have married, he was released de facto from his promise. Sir Bartle Frere and Mr. F. S. Chapman, formerly Secretary to the Bombay Government, were called as witnesses to prove the illness of the defendant. The case occupied most of the day, and eventually the jury, who could not agree, were discharged without giving a verdict.

COLLISION OF A TROOPSHIP WITH A BRITISH BARQUE.—A letter from Captain George W. Watson, of H. M. troopship Crocodile, dated November 27, reports the collision of that ship with the British barque John Dwyer:—"It is with feelings of deep regret and heartfelt sorrow that I have to report to you, for the information of my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, that H. M. ship, under my command, did come into collision with the British barque John Dwyer, of St. Andrew's, Canada, bound from Callao to Antwerp with a cargo of guano, at 5.50 this morning. Within ten minutes of striking her she had gone down, taking with her four of her crew. Our lifeboats were down and alongside with the utmost despatch, but only succeeded in saving eight of the crew. Her captain got on board the Crocodile over her bows. Our lifeboats pulled round and over the spot where the barque had gone down, but no signs of the unfortunate men left in her could be found. The position of the ship at the time was lat. 49.39 N., long. 3.24 W. Start point N., 7 E. (mag.), thirty-six miles. Beyond the loss of our jib-boom, we have not apparently sustained any damage."

Spirit of the Home Journals.

THE NEW VICEROY OF INDIA.

The Broad Arrow holds that, whatever may at first have been thought of the fitness of the selection, it is now a fait accompli, and the time for criticism is passed. Perhaps, indeed, the criticism in this case has been rather more severe and disparaging than there was any occasion for. In the first place, the appointment is Mr. Disraeli's, and whatever else he may, or may not be, Mr. Disraeli is certainly no fool, and must be quite aware of the obloquy that would be reflected upon him if the man of his choice were to prove himself a conspicuous failure. But, looking on the matter in a calm and unpartisan spirit, there does not seem any valid ground for such evil augury. That Lord Mayo is an untried man is perfectly true, but not particularly to the point. He is neither more nor less untried than any of the other noblemen and gentlemen who have been named as possible or probable successors to Sir John Lawrence. No doubt, all who have the interests of India most deeply at heart would have infinitely preferred to see Lord Salisbury at the helm. But keen as is the interest which Lord Salisbury takes in our Eastern Empire, it is scarcely likely that with his position and prospects at home he would consent to spend five of the best years of his life in semi-exile. Lord Mayo is, of course, not Lord Salisbury, but we see no reason why he should not prove, if not a very brilliant and original, still a very safe and satisfactory Governor-general. If he will be content with fulfilling these moderate expectations the country will have no cause to complain. Our only fear is that he may not; that he may desire to prove to his critics how erroneous and unworthy an estimate they have formed of his character, by doing something striking. There is no possible position in which the exercise of an energy that is not according to knowledge may work such tremendous and perhaps irretrievable mischief as that of the Indian Viceroy. In spite of all the checks that have been devised for his control, he still exercises, directly and indirectly, more power than perhaps any other human being. But there is nothing in Lord Mayo's career that should lead us to apprehend any perilous vagaries from him. What has been urged so unsparingly against him—that he is a man of so little mark—may really be in his favour. It is something for a man to have shown himself content to do his work quietly without an unhealthy craving for being conspicuous and talked about. Lord Mayo has had considerable official experience, and this must have taught him the necessity for listening to the advice of men who knew far more of the matter in hand than he did. He will find no lack of such tried and skilful advisers in the Indian Council. With men like Sir William Mansfield, Sir Henry Durand, and Mr. Strachey at his side, if he should choose the wrong path he will not be able to plead ignorance as an excuse.

HEALTH OF OUR TROOPS IN INDIA.

The Times comments with approval on the strenuous and successful exertions of Sir John Lawrence to furnish our troops in India with healthy barracks and secure fortifications. The weakness of our great military posts was one of the most inexcusable and most lamentable circumstances in the struggle of 1857. It is evident that all our chief stations ought to be so fortified as to be capable of being securely held by the smallest possible British force. With the scientific improvements of the present day, both in fortification and gunnery, there ought to be no difficulty in accomplishing this result without any extravagant expenditure. The great use of a fort is in all cases to make a small force do the work of a large one, and this is precisely the problem which we have to solve in India. Sir John Lawrence, therefore, is providing strong defences for our principal stations, and is protecting all the great lines of communication by a chain of small fortified posts. The provision of healthy barracks is not less important. It not only means economy of life, but increase of efficient strength at any given moment. There is, moreover, good reason to believe that, with dwellings, diet, and habits adapted to the climate, the unhealthiness of Indian life would practically disappear. The climate tempts people to excess, and it is in this that its danger lies. Englishmen carry out to India the habits of food and dress and the neglect of sanitary precautions which they have learnt in our temperate climate, and attempt to live in the same way under wholly different circumstances. Sir John Lawrence, by providing at the chief military stations barracks on the most approved sanitary models, will have contributed greatly towards overcoming this danger. Everywhere, moreover, our correspondent tells us of sanitary works being undertaken, of cantonments drained, and of water supply purified. There remains one great improvement to be effected. Some day or other the Himalayas will be to India what Switzerland is to Europe. They will be the sanitarium of Europeans. When we have more roads and railways to the hills there will be no reason whatever why Englishmen and English troops should not find health as much within their reach in India as in Europe. Even if the dangers of the plains cannot be neutralised there may be hill stations for every form of disease. Mountain air is becoming more and more recognised as a sanitary agent, and if India be more unhealthy than other countries, it possesses at the same time the most splendid and most varied "hills" in the world. Sanitary science, in a word, in India has two tasks before it—to overcome the dangers of the plains and to bring the plains into closer connection with the hills. When this is done we shall have fairly mastered the difficulties which nature opposes to us, and we may be said already to have overcome the other dangers of our position.

PARIS EXHIBITION, 1867.—GOLD MEDAL.

CLAYTON, SHUTTLEWORTH, & Co.

At the Triennial Trials of THE ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY of ENGLAND, held at Bury St. Edmunds, July, 1867, received the following Awards:—

For Single Cylinder Portable Steam Engine,
THE FIRST PRIZE OF £25.

For Double Cylinder Portable Steam Engine,
THE FIRST PRIZE OF £25.

For Horizontal Cylinder Fixed Engine,
THE FIRST PRIZE OF £30.

For Double Blast Finishing Threshing Machine,
THE PRIZE OF £15.

ALSO

The SOCIETY'S SILVER MEDAL for ADJUSTING BLOCKS for MACHINES.

The duty performed by all C. S. and Co.'s Engines on this occasion considerably exceeded that of any others. C. S. and Co. refer with pleasure to the fact that the duty of their "Commercial" or single valve Engine at Chester, so long ago as 1853, was not equalled by any "ordinary" Engine at Bury.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

ACUTE RHEUMATISM.—In all severe pains in the joints and muscles, after due fomentation with hot water, the soothing action of this Ointment is most remarkable. It seems at once to lessen inflammation, ease pain, reduce the swelling, restore the free circulation, and expel the disease. In these complaints, indeed, Holloway's Ointment and Pills are infallible specifics. The Ointment should be rubbed as near the part in pain as the patient can bear. It is absorbed and directly conveyed to the diseased textures, when, acting on nerves, vessels, and quivers, it will arrest disease, and again establish healthy action. The aperient and purifying qualities of the Pills have the happiest effect in assisting the Ointment.

LIVES OF INDIAN OFFICERS,

Illustrative of the History of the Civil and Military Services of India.

BY JOHN WILLIAM KAYE,

Author of "The History of the War in Afghanistan," &c., &c.

Contents.

The Rev. HENRY MARTYR.	Sir HENRY LAWRENCE.
Sir CHARLES METCALFE.	General JAMES NEILL.
Sir ALEXANDER BURNES.	Brig.-gen. JOHN NICHOLSON.
Lord CORNWALLIS.	Captain ARTHUR CONOLLY.
Sir JOHN MALCOLM.	Major ELDRED POTTINGER.
The Hon. MOUNTSTUART ELPHINSTONE.	Major D'ARCY TODD.
	Appendix, &c.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"I am not without a hope that these memoirs may be regarded, in some sort, as a Biographical History of India from the days of Cornwallis to the days of Canning. * * I have not attempted, indeed, to write History; the work has grown up spontaneously out of the Lives of the great men who make history * * and, unless the ability of the execution has fallen far short of the sincerity of the design, I have done something, in these pages, to do honour to a race of public servants unsurpassed in the history of the world. * * I have striven to show how youths, from the middle-class families of our British Islands, have gone forth into the great Eastern world, and by their own unaided exertions carved their way to fame and fortune.

"J. W. KAYE."

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

From the ATHENÆUM.

"We say at once that more admirably-written and interesting narratives are scarcely to be found in any literature. We do not envy the man who could read without deep emotion the lives here given of Conolly, Lawrence, and Nicholson; and we doubt whether the whole range of history can show more perfect characters. Nobler subjects of biography could not have been chosen, and higher praise it is impossible to bestow on a writer than to say, as we do of this author, that he is fully equal to such a theme. * * Mr. Kaye's 'Lives of Indian Officers' will take a high place among the standard books of England."

From the SPECTATOR.

"A cadet, an artillery officer, an editor, an employee of the first rank, a successful historian, Mr. Kaye unites in his own person all the qualifications requisite to the biographer of the great Indian soldiers."

From the EXAMINER.

"Two stout volumes of biography, which, arranged chronologically, have, in addition to their biographical interest, great historical value as illustrations of the progress of political government, warlike exercise, and philanthropic effort in India during the last three generations. It is a work of remarkable interest; the interest being due not only to the stirring subjects of which it treats, but also to the admirable way in which the subjects are treated."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colic, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be so popular did it not supply a want and fill a place."

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "108 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance, and the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. WHITMORE'S COMPOUND LINIMENT OF ARNICA.

A SPECIFIC for the CURE of RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, SPRAINS, CONTUSIONS, WEAKNESS of the JOINTS, CHILBLAINS, &c. It is also an excellent remedy as a stimulating application to the surface of the chest and back in bronchitis, inflammation of the lungs, pulmonary consumption, and whooping cough. When the liver is inactive, rubbed over it, its stimulating properties have a beneficial effect, and in all cases where counter irritation is desirable, it will be found invaluable.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

WILKINSON'S BRONCHIO-THORACIC LOZENGES.

Prepared from the receipt of an eminent Physician, and experience has fully justified their recommendation as the most speedy remedy in irritation of the throat, catarrhal coughs, bronchitis, incipient consumption, spitting of blood, &c., &c. To public speakers and vocalists they will be found invaluable, as they impart a clear and beautiful tone to the voice. Free from any preparation of opium, and of an agreeable taste, they are applicable to all.

In bottles of one uniform size.

WHITMORE'S STOMACHIC DINNER PILLS.

No Pill is so efficacious in promoting digestion, strengthening the stomach, correcting acidity, preventing or removing headache, giddiness, &c., arising from a costive habit, debilitated stomach, or torpid liver.

They require no change of diet, and those of the most delicate constitution may take them with safety.

Taken as an adjunct with WILKINSON'S SARSAPARILLA with the greatest success.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

Prepared by THOMAS WILKINSON (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

DINNEFORD'S FLUID MAGNESIA.

The Medical Profession for thirty years have approved of this pure Solution of Magnesia as the best remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion; and as the best mild aperient for delicate constitutions, for Ladies, Children, and Infants; and for REGULAR Use in Warm Climates.

DINNEFORD and Co., Chemists, 172, New Bond-street, London; and of all other Chemists throughout the World. N.B.—Ask for Dinneford's Magnesia.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body. . . . It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the month and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. Webb's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1861, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.

UPWARDS of FIFTY YEARS' experience has fully confirmed the superior reputation of these Lozenges in the cure of ASTHMA, WINTER COUGH, HOARSENESS, SHORTNESS of BREATH, and other PULMONARY MALADIES.

RECENT TESTIMONIAL.

August 23, 1868.
Dear Sir,—Having tried your Cough Lozenges in India, I have much pleasure in testifying to their beneficial effects in cases of incipient consumption, asthma, and bronchial affections; so good a medicine ought to be known to be appreciated. I have prescribed it largely with the best results.

Also, numbers and widths of Ribbons, Tapes, &c., and sizes in Gloves and Hosiery; in short, all necessary information for ordering this class of Goods from D. N. and Co.'s house in London.

PATTERNS BY POST.—D. NICHOLSON and Co. undertake to forward to India, post free, Packets containing upwards of 200 Patterns of Fashionable Silks. A similar assortment may be had of Muslins, Grenadines, and every kind of Dress Fabric; also Prints, Calicos, Linens, Woollen Cloths, Doeskins, &c., &c. Each Pattern is marked the width, and price per yard or dress, so that Correspondents are able to insure having the exact Goods they order, by retaining a portion of the pattern of each article they require.

OUTFITTING DEPARTMENT.—D. N. and Co. also forward an abridged List containing every requisite for Indian Outfits for both sexes, properly classified for the especial use of Correspondents, Military and Civil, who might be perplexed with some of the technical terms used in the Trade List.

CONTRACTS FOR UNIFORMS, &c.—D. N. and Co. undertake to supply Commanding Officers with every description of Regimental Clothing, Cloths, Serges, Belts, Shoes, and other details necessary for completing Uniforms at considerably less than agent's prices.

Orders addressed to D. N. and Co., accompanied by a Remittance of 50 per cent., will be forwarded on condition that the balance be paid to their Agents in Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, or Colombo, on presentation of the Bills of Lading.

AGENCY DEPARTMENT.—D. N. and Co. undertake the purchasing of Goods for Merchants and Traders in India, who have not buyers in London, for a Commission of 2½ per cent. on Indents of £250 and upwards; on smaller amounts the charge is 5 per cent. As D. N. and Co. have accounts for their own business with every house of importance in connection with the Silk and Manchester trade, they can offer their Correspondents considerable advantages beyond what could be obtained from an ordinary agent. Under arrangements of this kind the original Invoices are in all cases furnished.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, November 14; Agra, November 10; Calcutta and Madras, November 9.

The Hazara Field-Force has been broken up, but a corps of Guides, a regiment of native infantry, and a mountain battery have been left to garrison Oghee for three months. Some addition will also be made to the permanent strength of the frontier force. Sir D. Macleod's speech to the troops has evoked the usual amount of conflicting comments; but the tendency to be satisfied with the results achieved prevails. One paper however already talks of a new movement among the Afreedies, and reports that some of the frontier tribes have shown their resentment against the Khan of Umb for his active loyalty to the English. If there be any touch of truth in this, the lesson we have read these tribes is forgotten as soon as it was learnt.

FROM the famine districts we have but little fresh news, and that for the most part of a gloomy tinge. In and about Rajpootana the prospect is one of unmingled sadness. At Jodhpore grain is now selling at four pounds a shilling. In the North-West, where the scarcity is less widely felt, 1,86,000 people will have to look to relief works for the next six months as their best chance of keeping themselves alive. Happily with few exceptions Lower Bengal is reported as doing favourably. In Guzerat and Berar the crops have turned out well, and British Burmah counts on a plentiful harvest.

THE Indian Government has taken one step forward towards the long-desired achievement of a gold currency, by notifying that English and Australian sovereigns will be received at all Indian Treasuries at the rate of ten rupees and a quarter per sovereign. They will likewise be given out at the same rate to all persons willing to receive them in payment of claims against the Government.

THE Governor-general has paid a becoming tribute to the 101st Fusiliers on their departure for England, in the shape of a farewell order recounting their many a splendid services during the last century, from the day when the four companies of the infant regiment were almost annihilated in defending Fort William against Suraj-ood-Dowlah down to the series of hard fights in Umbeylah. Few regiments in the Queen's service can show such a list of gallant deeds as the old Bengal European Regiment. Sir John Lawrence spoke no more than the truth when he described its distinguished conduct in the field as "proverbial;" and we are glad to see that the 101st has left India "with a reputation for discipline and efficiency quite worthy of its character for gallantry and endurance." Is it impertinent to hope that the officers will not find cause to regret the difference between Indian and English rates of pay?

SIR JOHN LAWRENCE was to leave Simlah on the 10th November and reach Calcutta on the 18th. He is said to have promised help in arms and money to Shere Ali, whose position in Kabul is still far from secure, but the rumour is one of those which it were rash to accept in hearsay. If the Viceroy has entered into any such agreement, we may at least be sure that he has very good grounds for reckoning on the continuance of Shere Ali's better fortunes.

ANOTHER story touching the collision between the Russians and Yakoob Khoosh Beghi has already turned out false. But the newswriters will never leave Russia alone. From one side we hear that the Russians are strenuously pushing on the works of the great Alexander-road along the Upper Oxus. Another writer declares that a Russian detachment is quartered in Bokhara on excellent terms with the Khan, and that Russian cantonments are being built at Kerminah, Gharjui, and Karshi. The Russians are also credited with putting up pressure to stop the sale of Indian teas in Turkistan.

AT a late sitting of the High Court of Madras, the presiding judge, Sir Adam Bittlestone, overruled an objection raised by the English barristers to the appearance of a native vakeel on the Original Side. He very properly allowed a Hindoo gentleman to plead in defence of a native prisoner. If a native pleader be otherwise duly qualified, we cannot see why his interference should be forbidden, merely because his face is dark and his fees moderate. Those who can afford it will always pay for the privilege of being defended by a trained English lawyer; but why should poor people and natives be debarred the benefits of cheaper and for the native more convenient advocacy?

MUSCAT is still, it seems, in a state of disturbance. The new Imam, Azan-bin-Ghes, is neither popular nor humane; and a large body of his countrymen is said to yearn after Syud Toorkee, the exiled uncle of the ousted Selim. The late Imam's appeal for help to Bombay has evoked no answer, and the Bombay papers complain of the policy which keeps Syud Toorkee a kind of prisoner there, instead of letting him try his chance against "a weak and treacherous usurper." Of the new Imam's treachery we have little doubt; but his weakness remains to see. His stern fanaticism, of the school so well described for us by Mr. Palgrave, has already issued in severe laws against the use of tobacco in any shape. Theft and robbery are to be punished by the loss of a hand, and social profligacy by a hundred stripes. On the other hand, some laws that lay heavy on agriculture have been repealed, and the duty on dates, home-spun cloth, and some other things lowered by a half or a third. Whether this balancing of mildness with severity will serve the new ruler's purposes, time must show.

THE last meeting of the Supreme Council at Simlah—on the 28th October—was marked by the introduction of some new Bills. Mr. Maine's Bill to Define and Amend the Laws of Evidence in India is founded on the report of the Law Commissioners, and proposes to relax the artificial strictness of English law by enlarging the Court's discretion, and accepting as relevant all evidence not expressly barred as "hearsay." Among other wise amendments he would allow a certain limited effect to newspaper reports of public meetings. Mr. Cockerell's new Stamp Act consolidates and amends the older measure in the direction of lowering certain duties. Mr. Strachey's Land Improvement Bill aims at redressing certain wrongs involved in the land laws of the North-West Provinces, among others the injustice of forbidding tenants to dig so much as a well without the landlord's sanction.

At Bombay Sir Seymour Fitzgerald met his Legislative Council on the 13th November to discuss business. The Town Drainage Bill was adjourned to the beginning of this month for the purpose of introducing a municipal certificate tax which was likely to make up the deficit. Miss Carpenter also has arrived in Bombay, full of great projects, to which we may honestly wish God speed.

MADRAS may soon be in the way of securing a good supply of water from the neighbouring hills. A scheme to that end, at the probable cost of Rs. 12,80,000, has been laid before the Indian Government. Lord and Lady Napier were back at Madras.

LORDS MAYO AND NAPIER OF MAGDALA left Suez on the 30th of last month in the Feroze steam frigate for Bombay. After a short stay there with the Governor he is expected to touch at Madras on his way round to Calcutta.

THE new scheme of native scholarships has been published in the Gazette. It differs very little in detail from that described by us some months ago. Briefly, nine scholarships of £200 a-year each, tenable for three years, with passage allowance of £150, are to be conferred, three on successful examination-candidates of pure native blood, and the rest on native gentlemen of rank and influence who are also English scholars. The Local Governments will arrange details. The new scheme will come into play at the beginning of next year.

IN the final debate on the Punjab Tenancy Bill Mr. Maine supported the Viceroy in a speech full of clear reasoning founded on a thorough mastery of facts, and betraying a philosophic grasp of first principles. He began by owning his readiness to accept the Bill as amended in Committee, not because it went far enough in securing rights already existent, but because some compromise was needed, and the Viceroy had assured him that this particular compromise would "not inflict intolerable hardship on the large class it will affect." Tenant rights which have stood for years under the protection of law and Government deserve as much respect as any other kind of property. But the last settlement of the Punjab proposed to confiscate those rights in the case of forty-six thousand out of sixty thousand occupants in the division of Umritsur alone. Now the occupant in these cases, strictly speaking, "is a co-proprietor with the landlord," for the rights over land being of two kinds, contract and proprietary, and this being clearly no case of contract, "it follows that the occupancy-tenant has some sort of property in the land." If the settlement officers of the Punjab have their way, all these tenants, who have enjoyed their holdings for twenty-seven years and have "turned the wilderness into a garden," will be left at the entire mercy of others for the right to keep their holdings even on the hardest terms. Thus too the old Settlement of 1819 would be wantonly disturbed, a settlement carried out with every possible care, in close accordance with the customs of the country at that time. And the evidence then taken was naturally far more trustworthy than that brought forward fifteen years later on the opposite side. On the latter occasion oral evidence on matters of old date had to be arrayed against written records; and of course oral evidence, always of very small worth in India, became in these circumstances quite valueless. Besides, the questions asked of these ignorant, uneducated witnesses were mostly vague and misleading, while the new claimants, in view of the enhanced value of the land, had "the strongest temptation to adapt their testimony to their interests." The old inquirers went on the principle of eliciting facts, from which they inferred the common rule; whereas the conductors of the new settlement seemed to mix up facts with theories, and to contradict themselves in their employment of words like "rights" and "customs." And then, on what grounds of policy or justice could Government be required to sweep away at a blow the rights of its own planting, which "had grown up and borne fruit under its shelter" during the last twenty years? Nothing could be more dangerous than such a measure, adopted merely in order to remedy a mistake. Nor would it be practicable to try Sir D. Macleod's plan of buying up the rights of many hundred thousand occupants in accordance with the principles of the Copyhold Commission. As for the claim of settlement officers to recast the Record of Rights at each new settlement, it is both irrational and inexpedient. Are we to suppose that "once every ten, fifteen, or twenty years, a number of gentlemen, many of whom it is surely not disrespectful to call young gentlemen, may go in and reconstruct the very basis of society?" What Communist in his wildest dreams every imagined such an absurdity? If views like these were to prevail, the progress of the country, which has hitherto flourished under a rule that secures protection to property, would receive a check almost as serious as that inflicted of yore by the tyranny of native rulers.

THE International Conference lately held at St. Petersburg for preventing the use of certain explosive missiles in war has pronounced with one accord against the employment of any such missile weighing less than 400 grammes, or 14½ ounces. In other words, the infernal rifle-shell which has been found so effective against elephants and other beasts, is declared by the representatives of every European Power except Spain,—which in this matter at least lags behind Turkey,—to be no fit accompaniment of civilised warfare. The contracting Powers of course bind themselves only as against each other; any of them being free to use the forbidden atrocity against Spain or any other country which has not signed the compact. This with the new arrangements for securing the inviolability of field hospitals, staff and all, in war-time, betokens steady progress in the direction of previous efforts to abate the cruelties of armed strife. It is easy of course to sneer at the inconsistency involved in these concessions to a feeling at variance with the assumed end of all warfare. But facts are better logicians than Mr. Mill. The laws of the duel, whether between two men or two armies, have existed from all time even in countries the least civilised. As a matter of fact wars have not been less decisive, nor battles more protracted, for all the ameliorations which have accompanied and atoned for the invention of more murderous weapons. The conventions of Geneva and St. Petersburg are fitting sequels to the Treaty of Paris. One objection might perhaps be made to this tabooing of rifle-shells; the wounds they inflict being almost inevitably mortal, and that instantaneously, would not the employment of such missiles be in effect the truest mercy? Be that as it may however, the principle of reducing to their lowest the necessary cruelties of warfare, is one that ought to be steadfastly applied by all nations that call themselves civilised.

THE change of Ministry naturally involves a change of Heads at the India Office. Sir S. Northcote, who will bear away with him the thorough respect of all his fellow-workers and subordinates, is to be succeeded by the Duke of Argyll, of whose general ability there can be no doubt, whatever may be thought of his special proclivities on certain Indian questions. Some of our contemporaries compliment him on recanting his old admiration of the Dalhousie policy. We for our part have little fear of his being caught by the cant of the new school which sees no connection between the policy of that day and India's present progress. It is on the religious side of his character that we misdoubt his Grace. Point de zèle, we would say with regard to religious questions in India.

THE name of Lord Clinton's successor in the Under-Secretaryship is not yet known for certain. We have good reason however for believing that Mr. Stansfeld will have first choice for the post. Should some other office await his acceptance it is not unlikely that Mr. Ayrton would come in as Under-Secretary.

A REMNANT OF BARBARISM.

It has often been argued that the worst use to which you can put a man is to hang him. Be that as it may, we should think that the very worst use to which in these days you can put a refractory or disgraced soldier is to brand him. We say nothing of the mere bodily suffering caused by the process of pricking one or more letters into the human flesh with the aid of gun-powder or ink. The smart, no doubt, is great for the moment; but the process once finished, there is an end for the most part to the suffering also. The whole thing is, we grant, a mere trifle compared with the elaborate tattooings of a Burmese or Red Indian victim to the social usages of his race. But we Englishmen would hardly care to claim equality with savages, although our women are proud to wear earrings, and our judges still cover their heads with piles of horse-hair.

And yet, if we look at the practice of branding from the standpoint, not of military use and wont, but of modern civilisation, what a piece of pure savagery it seems and is! Grant that the process and the pain are over in a minute or so, yet the traces of both remain indelible. In that respect branding is far more barbarous than flogging. The latter may leave no permanent marks, while the former may bear witness to the offender's punishment through a whole lifetime. Do what he will to it, the "damn'd spot" refuses to come out, the shameful record cannot be wholly effaced. To the average military mind, content with the oldest or seeking for the shortest methods of curing military ills, that may seem a very trifling consideration. What need to think of ulterior likelihoods in the face of a certain immediate gain? A blackguard deserts from one regiment in hopes of filching fresh bounty on enlistment into another. Against tricks of that sort branding is your only deterrent. It ensures detection in case of a fresh attempt at cheating the State, and the fear of it keeps all but hardened reprobates from making the attempt at all. It serves in short as a cheap and easy safeguard against a serious danger, which no other method can ever keep from swelling into the most alarming proportions. No other punishment would act so well on the blackguard element in the service, and who else save a blackguard would be guilty of so great a military crime?

We think we have heard this kind of argument before. Once on a time nothing could deter soldiers from various sorts of offences but the lash. Take away from the officers the power of unlimited flogging on the smallest provocation, and what on earth would become of military discipline? Well, that power has from time to time been pared down closer and closer; and ever, in spite of the most terrified croakings, did the discipline of the army hold its ground. Every year the floggings became fewer; in many regiments it was found possible to do without them altogether. The power of the lash had already come to be a dead letter, when its formal abolition, at least in time of peace, was decreed by a large majority in the late House of Commons. And still the discipline of the army has managed to survive that last concession to the demands of modern humanity.

Public opinion has refused to tolerate the lash as a means of educating the British soldier. That brutal remnant of a barbarous age has finally shared the fate of some other institutions which the Briton of a day not long past was wont to reckon among the surest bulwarks of the British realm. Flogging and the pillory are now equally out of fashion. One symbol of infamy no longer waves over the entrance to an honourable calling. But the work of amendment cannot stop here. Military conservatism is very strong, and the claims of discipline exceedingly urgent; but the punishment of branding cries out for swift erasure from our military code. It is a monstrous anachronism in these days of democratic progress. It damns a man beyond all recovery for an offence disgraceful it may be, but no worse in fact than many another which no one would think of punishing very severely. "All hope abandon, ye who enter here," might be said with truth of those who enter the room where the surgeon waits to mark them with his soul-scorching needle. Branding assumes the utter badness of men who would afterwards have retrieved their characters, but for the curse that was sure at some critical moment to find them out. It is not long since one poor fellow lost a good chance of bettering himself because in bathing the mark of infamy revealed itself on his bare back.

How it may tend to multiply a man's punishment, one case will suffice to show. We refer to the sergeant of Marines, who was lately convicted of falsifying his accounts, to the sum of forty-nine shillings. He was drummed out of the regiment, and carried off to Coldbath Fields Prison, where, after being branded as a rogue, he was to undergo a year's imprisonment. Here is a pretty heaping up of ignominy for a seemingly small offence. The man loses his rank and prospects in the service; he undergoes the needless torture of having his stripes and buttons cut off, and slouching away to the tune of the Rogues' March; he will spend a year in a felon's prison; and for the rest of his life he will bear on his body a brand too shameful for the vilest criminal. And all this because he has cheated somebody out of two pound nine! If this be justice, what punishment would be severe enough for rogues of a higher class and a larger calibre?

But it is chiefly for desertion that soldiers are branded, and how else are you to check that crime? We would answer, that under no circumstances whatever should it be checked by means so revolting to modern tendencies. The remedy, if we choose to see it, is simple enough. Reduce the incentives to desertion by revising the terms and conditions of enlistment. Instead of a bounty which attracts too many recruits of the worst class and encourages desertion for the sake of fresh bounty, let us shorten the present term of service by at least a half. No round sums of money would be needed to bribe soldiers who could enlist for five or six years at a time, while the army would have twice as many recruits a year to choose from as it has now under the absurd conditions of twelve years' service. And how much worthier a class of men would thus be tempted into its ranks no one who has thought at all upon the matter will be at a moment's loss to discern. Other reforms of a like tendency would of course accompany or follow these, but only in this way can a good beginning be made. Without the abolition of branding and bounties we can never hope to eliminate the blackguard element from a service to which, under right conditions, no man of decent character should think it shame to belong.

WELCOME THE COMING, SPEED THE PARTING VICEROY.

"THE King is dead: long live the King." One Viceroy is on his way out to India, and another is on the point of coming home. When Sir John Lawrence reaches England, a grateful country which has given many a man a peerage for services infinitely less than his, will probably invite him also to take his seat in the House of Lords. In his case at any rate the honour will have been fairly earned. One might say indeed that he proved his right to it eleven years ago; but in these days the coronet hardly makes the man, and Sir John's name needed no such emblazoning to enhance its lustre. Now that his five years of viceregal sway are over, a peerage with a befitting pension will serve to mark the last stage of a public career, some twenty years of which have been spent with few intervals in the broad glare of English, one might even say of European celebrity. Ever since the final conquest of the Punjab the name of John Lawrence has been one of special lustre, culminating in the dark days of the mutiny, and still high above the horizon after five years of exposure to the searching tests of an office second on the whole to none within an Englishman's grasp.

Clouds indeed have passed over it now and again. For many things which Sir John has done or left undone, Anglo-Indian criticism from this or that quarter has naturally taken him to task. Bombay and Calcutta cannot agree in their estimate of his general capacity. The Friend of India denounces that "masterly inactivity" which the Delhi Gazette admires. The Times of India charges him with sacrificing Bombay to Bengal. To the champions of aristocratic privilege he shows a very different face from that presented to the friends of popular rights. And there is no denying that in some instances he has laid himself open to merited blame. With regard, for instance, to the Orissa famine, it is hard altogether to exculpate a viceroy who from his Himalayan Olympus looked calmly down on the mischief brewing beneath him, until it was too late to avert the consequent catastrophe. In the Bhotan campaign a like inertness, arising whether from friendly trustfulness, or fear of undue meddling with another's province, had already made itself apparent. On the other hand his abstinent policy towards Afghanistan, for all the outcry it continually roused in the Anglo-Indian press seems to have thoroughly accorded with the rulings of common sense. His treatment of the land question in Oudh raised up against him a host of adversaries loud in demanding justice for the talookdars, whose proprietary rights it had become the fashion to uphold against all meaner claimants. But the result of the struggle was a compromise which has certainly not disproved the wisdom or the justice of Sir John's preference for land tenures based on Indian rather than English ideas. His last great public act, the Punjab Tenancy Bill, set the seal to a policy which in this respect at least he has steadily pursued, the policy namely of recognising facts instead of twisting them into accordance with given theories. The conflicting claims of landlords and ryots have been adjusted with a stern regard alike for public and private interests. Knowing from his own experience that land tenures in the Punjab are not one but multiform, he has neither "treated the proprietor as if he were a mere incumbrancer on the land," nor transferred to the proprietor the right that seemed really vested, by use or actual assignment, in the tenant; and at the same time he has insisted that the State, which has "created rent where none previously existed," should be free "to apportion the property so created" between the landlord and the ryot.

Sir John's yearly trips to Simlah exposed him to the attacks of Calcutta journals more alive to local and class interests than to those of the empire at large. His action on this point needs no defence in face of the fact that his holiday in the Hills would have been deemed by most people a season of very hard work, and of the likelihood that frequent change of air made him all the more able to work hard in Calcutta. His great industry indeed forms a prominent feature in his viceregal career. It has exposed him, rightly or wrongly, to the charge of over-immersion in small details, to the consequent neglect of more important questions. Part of the blame however is probably due to the accumulations of business forced on the Viceroy's hands, whether by the course of events in India or by the gradual shifting of the centre of power from the Hooghly to the Thames. In his eagerness to arrest a tendency which in a recent minute he has solemnly bewailed, Sir John may have helped to increase his own burden by retaliating as it were on his own subordinates. It is certain at any rate that he has continually set his face against every attempt to restrict his powers or lighten his labours by enlarging the functions of minor governments. No one more strenuously declaimed than he did against giving Bengal a proper Government; and, however little he interfered with Sir Cecil Beadon when interference would have done good, he cannot be accused of leaving too much to the discretion of Mr. Grey.

From one cause or another then, the departing Viceroy has left behind him no splendid legacy of great reforms achieved. With regard indeed to many leading questions of the day his work has rather fallen into arrear. What he has done however has for the most part been done well. In a hundred minor fields of usefulness he has left the mark of a shrewd, upright, steadfast-minded, sober-headed ruler, endowed with sufficient strength of character for most purposes, but lacking the broader sympathies and the masterful self-reliance of true genius. As a Viceroy of the very highest excellence nobody, we imagine, would care to rank him; but the natives of India will not soon forget the efforts he has made to advance their well-being and to reward their just ambitions, while nearly all classes in the public service have reason to be grateful for this or that boon secured to them by his order or in consequence of his prayer.

How Sir John's successor will acquit himself, we need not try to foretell. The clamour evoked by his appointment has long since been followed, both in England and India, by careless acquiescence or a kindly readiness to hope the best. In India many of the English and most of the native journals have agreed to give a fair trial to a Viceroy whose antecedents certainly show nothing in his disfavour, if they have not very much to say in his behalf. An Irish Secretary who has steered successfully through a difficult conjuncture ought not to be a mere blunderer in a post demanding faculties somewhat similar in kind, if different in degree. Innocent he may be of all special knowledge, but so were other viceroys who turned out well. In six months or so, if he is clever at learning from those around him, he will find himself able to walk alone, and ready to bring past experience to bear on local questions of the hour. Personally considered, Lord Mayo is likely to rival the popularity of Lord Metcalfe. His genial manners, his love of sport, his mingled tact and frankness, will not fail to carry their full weight with all who meet him socially or in the way of business. That he can work hard, is of course understood; that he has plenty of good sense and solid ability, we can well believe. He has also shown himself good at obeying orders, and free from undue partisanship. Let us hope that he will not be slack in maintaining the dignity and independence of his new post against all encroachers. A wide field for distinction stretches before him. A cruel famine hangs over a wide tract of country. Bengal awaits the word for a thorough reform in her system of education. The question of Indian taxation is still far from a practical solution. The relations of the Indian Government with native States within and beyond its rule, the employment of natives in the public services, the reconstruction of the Indian army, the claims of minor governments to greater financial freedom, the development of municipal liberties, the promotion of all kinds of public works—here is a list of labours not all alike Herculean, but mostly grave enough to satisfy the greediest seeker after renown.

Correspondence.

NEW FURLOUGH REGULATIONS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I must confess I do not see the force of your reasoning in reply to my letter of the 30th ult., viz., that, because half the "average" will be more than half unemployed pay, therefore an officer in civil employ, after one year's duty, derives precisely the same benefits (with regard to furlough pay) as one on military staff who has held his appointment for a similar period?

But you will probably say they do not, which is the very thing I am so anxious to ascertain. Why do they not? "Sauce for the goose must be sauce for the gander!"—surely. Then, again, perhaps the New Furlough Rules were not framed for military officers in civil employ? If so, why are we not put under the civil rules in all respects?

I feel sure, Mr. Editor, you will easily understand that, when Captain A., Brigade Major, is drawing half his total (Indian) receipts for two years on leave (sick or otherwise), it can be but small satisfaction to me to know that I am to get some £130 per annum less than he does, simply from the fact of my "average" being more than my unemployed pay?

London, Dec. 7, 1868.

A SUFFERER STILL.

[We can only refer "A Sufferer Still" to the answer given in our last issue. His case may seem a little hard, but such cases will always happen under the fairest rules.—ED. A. I. M.]

Spirit of the Indian Press.

INDIAN ARTILLERY.

The Friend of India asks why the Royal Warrant of 15th June, 1864, is not carried out in regard to the removal of the artillery, general and field officers from the Indian list and the promotion of the ten colonels due to the Indian list in the terms of that warrant? These steps have been due since the 6th of March last, and the delay in making the promotions creates the suspicion that there is some intention of withholding them altogether because they have the effect of superseding officers of the British service. It is quite true that colonels of the Home service of 1854 are being superseded by Indian colonels of 1861 and 1862, but if the total service of the two classes is considered the advantage is on the side of the British army. A comparison of the promotions that have taken place within the last few years will prove this. Supposing, however, that circumstances gave more rapid promotion to the Indian than to the British service there can be no reasonable ground for complaint by the more unfortunate branch, as the rules which regulate promotion are the same in both armies. It is the duty of the Government to see that the rights of Indian officers are not infringed, and although they cannot make the promotion in this country they can press the matter on the Secretary of State, who ought to insist on the fulfilment of the conditions of the warrants in force. Some of the home papers hint at a contemplated modification of the warrant, but we cannot believe that the Home Government would sanction any change until the whole of the promises made in it have been made good. Any change that may be retrospective in its effect would be a distinct breach of faith, and even a dishonestly inclined Government would not intentionally run the risk of another flood of petitions to Parliament from the Indian Services.

REGIMENTAL MESSES.

The Madras Athenæum holds that messes as a general rule are failures, and very expensive failures into the bargain, and, whether it is worth while to pay so much to get so little is a perfectly legitimate question. There has been a conventional notion that regimental messes are bound to be hospitable, that the exercise of hospitality (in itself and irrespective of means) redounds to the credit of a corps, though why the public should have greater claims for hospitality on lieutenants and ensigns than on young lawyers and young doctors might be hard to explain. Still the conventionalism exists (though we think in a moribund state) and forces upon the officers the necessity of paying for entertainments which everybody who has anything to do with them, whether as guest or host, invariably proclaims to be bored, usually with an emphatic adjective or past participle. In a European regiment, supposing the management tolerably good, and a majority of the officers prudent men, the evils of the said conventionalism seldom get much beyond "bore;" but when the same thing is attempted in one of the new native regiment, serious impoverishment is the result. In fact, for corps with only eight officers, the ver-idea of a mess according to the European model is an absurdity. There may be a quiet regimental association something in the co-operative store line; but in the sense of a compulsory dinner club, or as a dispensary for hospitalities to the station, it is at once a farce and a cruel hardship. Many hands makelight work, and many purses make, or ought to make, easy payment. If, therefore, the messes of European regiments were conducted agreeably to the spirit of the Queen's regulations, there would not be much hardship involved in them, but we fear, under the present system, there is as little chance of that as there is of finding another ideal manager. But it seems by no means certain that the present system is likely to endure. There are throes of the coming change traceable even in the army itself. The admission of men to free commissions by competitive examination has been the small end of the wedge. The scientific training now introduced into the army drives it in a little further. The abolition of the purchase system will probably come next. One thing is clear, that, whether for good or whether for evil, that which used to be called "the cold shade of aristocracy" is rapidly passing away from the army as a national institution. It may be a matter for regret—we believe it is—that it should be got rid of so quickly, but the fact seems inevitable. All that can be done is to accept the position with dignity, to meet the democratic movement in a friendly spirit, and to turn the new class of officers to the best account we can. We may be sure they will fight as well as the old ones, and in many respects they will probably be more efficient, but it is not desirable for many reasons to cultivate the club spirit in them more than can be helped. There have been no political combinations of officers in the British army since the days of Oliver Cromwell, mainly because of that aristocratic element; while among the purely professional officers of the East India Company such combinations occurred in at least two serious instances. We believe that purely professional officers are likely to be the best, but politically there is that danger; too much confraternity, therefore, is undesirable. Moreover, if British officers were ever rich enough to indulge in luxurious display and extravagance without incurring risk of ruin, it is very certain that they, the majority, are so no longer; that such wealthy minority as still exists will get smaller and smaller, and that expensive habits are undesirable, both for the sake of the officers and for that of the country. Soldiers of fortune, reduced to debt by luxury and extravagance, have proved troublesome customers before now in sundry States of Europe. No officers without private means could honestly keep up the dashing messes of the — Hussars or the — Dragoons. It is not desirable that they should get into the habit of such, or of thinking them essential to their credit. That restaurateur proposition with which we began may be worth thinking of a second time, and if it be still disapproved, or until it is approved, it would be as well that the spirit of the Queen's regulations were rigidly enforced in all British regiments; so that officers without private means, who in a few years' time will constitute nine-tenths of the army, may find their incomes equal to their wants; and that those who are now entering may escape the disadvantage of becoming habituated to a style of expenditure which it will be impossible for them honestly to maintain.

THE CLAIMS OF THE BENGAL RYOTS.

The Som Prokash, in an article on a permanent settlement with the ryots, says "the necessity of such a proceeding is daily perceptible. If the ryot is to be secured against the oppression of the zemindar, or if he is expected to take a lively interest in the education of his children, nothing is better calculated to fulfil these ends than a permanent settlement between him and the Government with the zemindar as middleman. So long as this is not done, the condition of the ryot will never be bettered, and he will be unable to secure for his children the benefits of education." In objection to such a settlement it may be asked who is to be the sufferer in case of land slips, or where lands are rendered unsuitable for agricultural purposes? and who is to be responsible for the cost of digging canals and forming bridges and embankments? As regards the first, we are of opinion that Government should bear the loss, which will be compensated for by alluvial formations which may be favourable to agricultural purposes. The latter objection may be overruled by making the cultivator responsible for a certain portion of the expenses incurred in construction.

AN OFFICER'S GRIEVANCE.

The Bombay Gazette laments the indifference shown to the commonest wants of young officers in India. The British subaltern has had an expensive education. If he obtain his commission by competitive examination, or if he belong to either of the scientific corps, he has had a very expensive education; while, if he purchase, his friends have incurred that additional outlay, over and above his schooling expenses. Therefore, to get him started in the military profession, in which, whatever else he may do at the outset, he most certainly will not save money, as great an expense is incurred as in making him a doctor, or a lawyer, or a painter, or an architect, or an engineer, either which may not, but still which may, prove an immediately remunerative profession. If, then, Government had to bear the cost of this outlay, it is almost difficult to conceive what provisions they would not make to secure the health and comfort of so costly a product. But Government does not bear this cost, and it therefore magnanimously leaves the product to shift for himself. Take we then a regiment marching into a station, and, on one side, we find comfortable and ample quarters, swept and garnished, ready waiting to welcome the soldier, a solicitous Government, carefully looking after its own, as justice, and humanity, and self-interest dictate; and, on the other, we have straitened subalterns, or hard-pressed married captains, having seen their men safely housed, wandering wearily to and fro seeking rest (that is, accommodation—cheap, clean, and healthy accommodation), and finding dirty, dear, musty houses, which they cannot afford to rent, or if they contrive to afford it, cannot enjoy life in them when they have rented them. For them a Government not interested does not provide. And hardest, and strongest of all, considering how plentiful, profitable injustice usually is—hardest and strongest we say of all—it often happens that even of bad and dear houses there are an insufficiency. We are not drawing upon our imagination and painting merely possibilities; we are painting actual, witnessable scenes, and we can support our picture by facts if need be. To-day, let it suffice to mention that a regiment which recently landed in this presidency was sent up-country, with an unusually strong complement of officers. On reaching their destination the men were marched at once to their quarters (and they were clean and comfortable quarters, too); the senior officers went into bungalows commensurate with their fortunate means; while the luckless juniors went up and down upon the face of a blazing cantonment, seeking among bad and dear houses the least bad and least dirty, till, although all the houses were taken and crammed, those who needed them were not yet all housed. Finally, these latter had to be sent as interlopers to some lines a mile and a-half from head-quarters. With this regiment were several young married ladies, whose husbands needed two things with regard to their houses, namely, that they should be cheap and that they should have them to themselves; these having, of course, the preference, the unmarried young subalterns had to do the best they could, and a very unsatisfactory best it was when they had done it. Let this one example suffice to paint the mass, and we see a grievance which, as we have described it above, is an outright one, since those who suffer by it cannot of themselves do much to get it remedied. In another article we intend showing how very simply and inexpensively this grievance could be redressed, and how very justly its victims may demand that it should be redressed.

THUGGEE IN INDIA.

The Times of India maintains that it is now generally admitted that the old crime of strangulation has been abandoned for that of poisoning. For this there are of course good reasons, the chief of which are, the increased facility for the commission of crime by the new method, and greater immunity from detection. Experts in their cowardly and diabolical profession, they take care that no one shall witness the administration of the drug; and in the event of poison being found upon them afterwards, they account for its possession by declaring that they use it as a medicine for cattle, or eat it themselves. Cases of this nature are now frequent in Oudh and the North-West Provinces, as they were to a fearful extent in Bengal two years ago. Colonel Hervey recounts several striking anecdotes to show the necessity for making the possession of poisonous drugs without a licence penal. An objection to such a law was urged in 1865, in the fact that dhatooira is often used by natives for medicinal purposes. "It is," says Colonel Hervey, "the well-known character of the Thug to make that null which would be evidence in our courts of law, and for him to advocate that in his defence which he knows we are ourselves so tenacious about; to declare that he kept poison by him to use it as medicine, because we say it is used by natives for such a purpose, and may therefore be possessed by them, is altogether to sustain that character and overreach us." We do not see wherein such a law as that advocated would be productive of such inconvenience as could for a moment compare with the end sought to be attained, or be allowed to stand in the way of its attainment. The inconvenience would affect but a very few, in comparison to the multitudes whom the restriction would protect. Besides, the few who required such drugs for legitimate purposes would suffer little from the necessity of having to seek permission to possess them; while the risk to the poisoner would be so much increased as to render the practice of his profession dangerous in the extreme. There is reason, also, to fear that not a few criminals escape punishment by emigration to Mauritius as coolies. In their new home they prosecute their career of crime, and renew it in India on their return, when the remembrance of their former career has passed away, or, at any rate, the chance of detection and conviction for former murders has been reduced to a minimum. The indiscriminate deportation of such criminals might be in a great measure checked were an inquiry instituted, through local magistrates, into the character of persons offering themselves to emigration agents. In the absence of reliable statistics, it is impossible to give any accurate idea of the extent to which the crime of thuggee is practised. The latest statement we have is for 1866, during which year there were 150 cases reported, exclusive of those that occurred in Madras, Mysore, and the Hyderabad Assigned Districts, in the returns from which no cases were specified, but in which, there is reason to believe, the crime is perhaps more prevalent than in other parts of India. With regard, also, to the returns from the other provinces, we believe with Colonel Hervey that "many more cases of the crime of poisoning took place throughout the country than is there stated." We also believe that, in the south of India at any rate, nothing but a special agency will suffice to put down these dangerous people. In the southern districts of Bombay, in Mysore, and in Madras more particularly, the Khaikarees (called also Korwees, and Kurwuroos) have again broken out; in Madras, indeed, they have never been checked. These men are, perhaps, more known as dacoits than as thugs; but when dacoity is impossible or too dangerous, they resort at once to the more secret and less easily detected crime of poisoning. The tribe had been completely put down years ago, when Colonel Hervey was Assistant-General Superintendent at Belgaum, for it was by him, indeed, that their habits as professional dacoits and gang burglars were first ascertained and reported upon. But, as might have been expected, a race of confirmed robbers, so extensive and enterprising as the Khaikarees were, and who had been put down only in a portion of their extensive field, were not long in again renewing their depredations, as soon as the agency which kept them in check was removed. No matter how complete and efficient our police administration may be, the force is unfitted by its nature and constitution to deal with the evil which threatens once more to assume serious dimensions, and which, most disquieting thought of all, seems to be more widely spread than the police themselves have any idea of. The Government of India can hardly fail to give due consideration to the recommendations made by Colonel Hervey for its exposure and suppression; for he speaks with a more intimate knowledge of the subject than is, perhaps, possessed by any other officer.

THE ROADS IN RAJPOOTANA.—The condition of the roads in many parts of Rajpootana, as described by the "ghost of Macadam," is very discreditable to the authorities. Surely the native chiefs might be induced by that mysterious influence of political agents we hear so much about to do something towards an improvement in their ways. In some States they have done a great deal for the roads—as, for instance, in Jeypore and Bhurtpore. We know no reason why there should not be as good roads between the principal cities of Rajpootana as there are between Jeypore, Bhurtpore, and Agra.—Delhi Gazette.

MILITARY ITEMS.—The Government, it appears, have under any circumstances determined to strengthen the Punjab with troops. Jhelum is to be reoccupied, and it is said that the 3rd Bengal Cavalry and two infantry regiments will be stationed there; that a regiment of infantry will permanently occupy the Doaba outposts, instead of detaching troops from the Peshawur garrison; and that a regiment of Bengal cavalry will be stationed at Naoshera—probably the 5th, now en route to Peshawur.—We hear from Abbottabad that the 6th Royals remain there for the present, and no part of the late field force will go further from the frontier than Rawul Pindie just yet. The tribes beyond the Indus are threatening the Nawab of Umb in consequence of the part he took in the last affair, and it will be necessary for us to help him. The Afreedies also are said to be giving trouble, and require to be watched.—Delhi Gazette.—A letter from Oghee states that the 24th Regiment N.I., the Corps of Guides, and one mountain battery will remain in Huzara for some three months yet. A sufficient stock of provisions has been left for them by the Commissariat Department.—Pioneer, Nov. 6.—Major-General Harris, Commanding the Meerut division, was to be at Agra on the 10th and 11th of November on his tour of inspection, and at Muttra on the 13th and 14th.

LORD MAYO'S PRIVATE SECRETARY.—The papers in this country—says the Delhi Gazette—not satisfied with re-echoing the most unreasonable outcry raised in England against Lord Mayo, are now running down his military secretary. The attack on Lord Mayo at home was intelligible. There everything in art and nature, every phase of life, social, commercial, political, everything within the compass of our perception is good or bad according as it is viewed through a Liberal or a Conservative medium. But in this country, whatever else we may be slaves to, we are not slaves to party, and therefore for the Indian press, as most of it did, to take up the hue and cry against Lord Mayo, just because they thought it would not do to be behindhand in repeating the sentiments of the English press, was most foolish. Still more unreasonable is the outcry against Major Burne, the new Viceroy's military secretary. Lord Mayo was too old—Major Burne is too young. Lord Mayo had no experience of India, and he would not do. Major Burne has had experience of India, but it is not of the right sort, so he will not do; and so on. As to experience of India, Major Burne knows more about the country and the army than most men of his class. He did not serve an apprenticeship as military secretary first and aide-de-camp and private secretary afterwards to Sir Hugh Rose (having been deprived of the military secretaryship on account of his standing in the army) for nothing, nor was Sir Hugh Rose a man to keep about him an inefficient staff officer, whose services he has been careful to retain ever since he left India. We congratulate the army that the new Viceroy will have upon his staff an officer so well fitted to advise him as Major Burne, and a better appointment could not have been made.

Bengal.

THE LATE CAMPAIGN.

A correspondent of the Friend of India writes as follows from Camp Oghee, Oct. 27 :—In my last letter I brought down the proceedings of the Hazara field force to the time when, consequent on the submission of the Pathan tribes, the force had descended the Black Mountain, and had on the 14th October bivouacked at the village of Cheermung, in the Tickree valley.

Under the Kiar Kote ridge, which forms the northern boundary of the Agror valley, rises the Tickree river, whose course extends under the eastern slopes of the Black Mountain for some eight miles, when it joins that of Nundehar. The Nundehar river, now running under the eastern slopes of the mountain, enters the Indus at Tak-kote, some twelve miles in a direct line from its junction with the Tickree stream, the first four miles of this course being through the small valley of Deyshee, and the remainder between the spurs of the Chailas and Black Mountains; but here in many parts the stream is inaccessible even to footmen, from the rugged nature of the country bordering it. The Nundehar valley runs nearly parallel to that of Tickree, and is divided from it by the Thumbora range. These three valleys—Tickree, Nundehar, and Deyshee—belong to the independent Swatee tribes, who were actively engaged in the late disturbances in Agror. As the strength of the force in the Agror valley became gradually larger, these Swatees, knowing the fertility of their valleys, and the ease with which they could be entered by our troops, became more and more eager for forgiveness, and when the force eventually advanced they had agreed to the payment of the fine fixed by the political officers. But as it was considered that as soon as the Pathan tribes had been coerced a march through these valleys would be more impressive than any fine that could be imposed, arrangements were made accordingly. The line of communication with the reserves, &c., at Oghee was now by the Jalegully pass, and Colonel Brownlow was accordingly sent with the 20th P.I., the 5th Goorkhas, the 2nd P.I., and the 24th N.I., to hold the pass and improve the road through it.

On the 15th the force marched from Cheermung to the village of Tickree. The milder temperature of the valley after the cold blasts on the Muchaie peak was pronounced a decided change for the better. The troops had now been fourteen days and nights without taking off their clothes, and it will be easy to understand the luxury a bath in the stream running under the bivouac afforded. The 16th was passed in making a road across the Shumborra range into Nundehar, where the force arrived on the 17th. Although the whole of the Swatees of the Tickree, Gundehar, and Dayshee valleys had given in and agreed to the fine imposed, there was yet a small body of Swatees holding three or four villages at Takkote, on the banks of the Indus, to be dealt with. They, like the others, had been in arms against the Government, and a reconnoitring party was sent out as soon as we reached Nundehar to examine the country towards Takkote. It was found that, as already stated, to reach Takkote the course of the Nundehar could not be followed, and that it would be necessary to ascend a spur of the Charla Mountain, the boundary of the Ullai country, as far as the Dubraie Gully, whence a road would have to be made through a perfect network of ravines and broken ground and across rocky and precipitous hills, to the banks of the Indus; the next day a reconnaissance in force was made by Brigadier General Vaughan to Dubraie, and working parties were employed making a road towards Takkote. As General Vaughan's column approached Dukaie, the Akhoond of this part of the country, Hubeeb Gool Sahibzada of Peinud, came up and paid his respects, and the inhabitants of the Takkote hamlets of Gourung and Dubraie likewise submitting, their property was spared. It had been previously ascertained that, although the villages of Shawl Khan, the petty chief of Takkote, were situated Cis-Indus nearly the whole of his crops were grown across the river; and as in the evening news came in that, hearing of our preparations for an advance, Shawl Khan had fled into Chaksur country across the Indus, the idea of moving on Takkote was given up, the results of which could only have been the burning of some empty huts, at a cost to us of many, many thousands of rupees. If thoroughly preventive measures to any Takkote entering British territory be enforced, in a few months Shawl Khan will be compelled to bow his head as lowly before us as the rest of the Swatees have done.

The work we had before us was now over, and our faces were turned towards home. Marching up the valley of Nundehar on the 19th the force bivouacked at Puyboorah, and the next day crossing the range at the head of the valley, British territory was entered. After passing this, the lovely Valley of Konch, the Hazara field force on the morning of the 22nd October found itself again in camp at Oghee; after being twenty-two days in the field without tents, having traversed some eighty miles of hill country, where every road had to be made, having ascended the highest point of the Black Mountain, 10,200 feet above the sea, and having been exposed to every kind of climate, from a hot sun by day to, at times, snow, or rain, or frost at night.

STATION TALK.

CALCUTTA, Nov. 5.—The season for changing officers who may be considered to have enjoyed too long a residence at one station doing duty has come round, and several changes have been made. Umballa, Meerut, and Roorkee seem to be the most favourite abodes, as they are so accessible to the hills. I know of more than one colonel who used to have only four months in the plain, filling up the remainder with private and privilege leave, and, if refused, quietly going home on furlough. There can be no doubt that too much sick leave was granted, and the new furlough rules will stop the abuse. In my recollection one medical officer had more than fifteen years' leave in twenty years' service, and was then transferred to the pension list. If the Secretary of State be wise he will endeavour to carry out the suggestions contained in Colonel Broome's scheme, and thus prevent the Army List from containing only the names of field officers. The men first to be got rid of are the lieutenant-colonels, majors, and captains of the staff corps, as casualties cause no promotion. But I can assure the Secretary of State and his Council, from a long study of military human nature, and the impetuosity of the army generally, that few will listen to any offer unless it be accompanied by a bonus and an increased pension. The period from the Mutiny to the present time, with everything quadrupled in expense, has found men so hard up that they can barely exist if they are surrounded with a family. Many are, moreover, seriously embarrassed, or heavily in debt, and a lump sum down on the nail is the only practical sop they will be likely to take. To be able once more to be free of debt, and with a passage paid home, many would gladly retire to some small country place, and endeavour to eke out a quiet existence there. It would be very absurd to refuse applications on the ground that the regulated service had not been completed. If officers are drawing the substantive pay of their rank, better get rid of them in that rank than let them run up to a higher. I shall have more to say on this subject again. The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal is going to open the ball with a large party at Belvidere-house on the 27th, invitations having been issued to-day. By that time we shall have Sir John Lawrence here to entertain us prior to his leaving India for good, and it is to be hoped that he will not allow his caterer to provide bad champagne at the last ball he gives. I hope Earl Mayo patronises Cutler and Palmer. There are only two places at which you are not half-poisoned with bad wine in Calcutta, viz., at the Lieutenant-Governor's and the United Service Club; everywhere else you must think of your head in the morning. Between ourselves there is neither the good wine nor beer in the country which we, old Qui Hyes, drank before the mutiny. Grape and hop have both degenerated; but then we have no four and twelve bottle men left. Major Quin, Deputy-Assistant Quartermaster-General, lately returned from leave, has been posted to Morar. The Major-General commanding the division returned from Darjeeling yesterday, under the salute of his rank. Three companies of the 26th Cameronians, lately quartered in Fort William, were ordered to proceed to Dum-Dum to join the headquarters of the regiment, which is about to be inspected by the general. The corps is a fine one; but the men have been drinking hard with their easily won batta for Abyssinia. Courts-martials have been pretty rife in consequence. A great number of trials have taken place in the 2nd Battalion 60th Rifles, also in Fort William.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

MHOW, Nov. 5.—The invalids and time-expired men, numbering about 145 of all ranks, left this for the General Depot on the 31st ultimo, under the command of Captain Fleming. Dr. O'Brien was in medical charge. Standing camps were pitched for their accommodation by order of the Assistant Quartermaster General at Simrole and Burwal, and every attention to their creature comforts was looked after by the Commissariat department. This is a great improvement on former years. Recruits must be coming forward in great numbers at home, or the regimental authorities here would not be so particular about re-engaging men who had completed their first period of service. I am informed that there were men of the 95th Regiment rejected for being a little near-sighted, men that we were glad to catch a few years ago. If I mistake not, the Commander-in-Chief of the Madras Army in 1859 (after the so-called White Mutiny) proposed that near-sighted men should be served out with spectacles as part of their kit; but what a revolution in affairs now. No doubt there are rules down for the guidance of doctors on these, as on all other occasions. The Head Quarters 21st Brigade, and No. 6 Battery marched hence this morning for Kundwa, under command of Colonel Petrie. This, you may recollect, is the old 2nd Battalion of the Bombay Artillery, "second to none," as Candahar, Guznee, Cabool, Khelat, Krijick heights, Hydrabad and Meanee, Mooltan, Persia, the Mutiny and Abyssinia can testify. Their absence from this station will leave a blank not easily filled up. Where shall we find a Colonel Petrie, or a Colonel Murray, a Captain Ouchterlony or a Captain Ward? The inspection of the head-quarters and No. 6 Battery 21st Brigade was made a few days ago by General Adams. He highly complimented Colonel Petrie, Captain Lucas, and Sergeant-Major Lockyer on the high state of efficiency in which he found the Battery. This from General Adams, who is well known for his impartial reports to Head Quarters, reflects the highest credit on Colonel Petrie and Captain Lucas. The 95th Regiment were also inspected by the General, and I understand that Colonel Massey got the highest praise for the state of efficiency into which he had brought the regiment. The 95th, it must be recollected, has not had fair play; half-a-dozen officers have been commanding it within the last four years, hence the more credit to Colonel Massey.—Times of India Correspondent.

THE FAMINE TRACT.

MARWAR.

Some account of the little-known country, at present known as the famine tract, will be interesting to our readers. More favourably situated as we are in Bombay, those who have not visited the districts now desolated by famine can scarcely realise their generally sterile aspect, and their now deadly barrenness. Of the vast expanse from which the wail of want now ascends, the large province of Marwar, both as regards extent and suffering, demands first consideration. We are familiar enough in Bombay with Marwarrees; but like the Portuguese, many who are so styled have never visited the country from which they receive their distinctive name. Most, perhaps, have indeed no real claim to the title, either from residence or relation in Marwar; although our Marwarree sect doubtless had its origin in that province.

The term Marwar is said to be a corruption of Maroo-war or Maroo-sthan, literally translated, "the Land of Death." This term, it is stated, formerly comprehended the entire semi-desert country between the Sutlej and the ocean; but during the lapse of ages it has been gradually restricted to the smaller, but still extensive territory, to which the name now applies. The terms Merwar and Kherwar are also sometimes used, the first signifying an isolated rock in the desert, of which there are many in the district; the second implying salt, or salt efflorescence on the surface of the ground, both of which abound in Marwar.

The district being situated for the most part away from any main line of road (although that leading from Ahmedabad and Deesa to Nusserabad passes through the eastern portion of the State), the country is little known, and very accurate descriptions of either it or its inhabitants do not exist. We quote, however, from an article by Dr. Moore, of the Joudpoor Agency, entitled "Marwar, or the Land of Death," which appeared two or three years back, in the 20th volume of the "Indian Annals of Medical Science." After mentioning the meaning of the term Marwar, as given above, Dr. Moore proceeds:—

And well indeed is the land named! From one extremity of its vast expanse to the other, excepting in the immediate course of the Loonee river, the greater portion is little better than desert. Mounted on the dromedary of the country, or with a still greater scope for vision, from the summit of one of the conical hills which rise like islands in the plain, the traveller has a spectacle he can scarcely view without wonder and compassion. Far as the eye can reach, until the earth and horizon become apparently blended in impenetrable mist, stretches an extensive steppe, a cruel desolate wilderness, which might form the gathering place of the unjust at the day of judgment. Excepting during the very height of the scanty monsoon, the country is dry, brown, barren, and desiccated as want of water and tropical sun can render it. Should a tree perchance exist, it merely adds to the general desert aspect; the leaves being constantly torn away to feed passing camels, the bare trunk and branches appear ghastly and unnatural, as though blasted by lightning. Here and there, but miles apart, a very small patch of green marks the site of a village. From an elevation of a thousand feet, perhaps three or four of such spots may be discerned. The very comparison of the coloured speck, with the vast wild of dull, dark brown, makes the work of man appear pitiable and despicable. Perhaps a bright gleam, not unlike a "cat's paw" on the ocean, marks the happy village possessing a tank in which water still lingers. In all probability one or more thin columns of blue smoke, rising perpendicularly from the plain, and forming a leaden canopy in the air, otherwise passing horizontally over the land, exposes the whereabouts of some traveller, or maybe desert robber, who halts to cook his "roti" with fuel composed of his camel's dung. In the distance, apparently moving, grand and stately, is a pillar of sand, caused by a "devil," but we are too far away to hear or see the real commotion and confusion of the whirlwind. Far off may be, perhaps, distinguished the blue loom of the iron Aravelli. Possibly a meagre herd of half-starved cattle, attended by a semi-nude "That" may be within the scope of vision, seeming, from our elevated position, to glide like phantom ants in search of that pasture which is not on this sterile, barren plain. While thinking how very different this scene is, from that which poets feign, and picture, as the luxurious East; while recalling those descriptions of tropical splendour and verdure which enchanted our minds ere we had practical acquaintance with the land of the sun, we observe the landscape change! It is the month of April, the commencement of the hot weather; a peculiar haze suddenly appears in the S.W. quarter of the heavens. As this increases, it assumes a dead, murky yellow colour, and quickly half the sky and earth is engulfed in obscurity. It is the first blast of the hot wind, the simoom of the desert. The natives call it "tyfun," but it does not amount to a hurricane; nevertheless, it soon reaches our position. A dull roaring whistling sound, a sensation of delightful coolness, a feeling of irritation about the eyes, a change of colour of any dark garment, and we are within the range of the hot wind, which however may not for some days continually blow. Soon it continues both day and night, until the long-prayed for, but inadequate, monsoon rain again moistens the atmosphere. A view of a Marwar maidan, during a dust storm, is indeed a scene of tumultuous confusion. The hot howling wind, the blinding sand, the gloom arising from an obscure sun, the occasional glimpse of long stretches of wilderness, the depressing solitude, and in all probability a reddened stone, or perhaps small temple, on the summit of our "coign of vantage" devoted with hideous figure to the goddess "Mata," form a fiendish whole, a sort of Pandemonium, fit for the habitation of fallen angels.

If such be a truthful description of the Marwar country in ordinary seasons, what it must be like when devastated by famine may be more easily imagined than described. But throughout the whole extent of its 36,000 square miles, notwithstanding the nature of the country, the population is estimated at 1,500,000. And we learn from the authorities above mentioned, that the most populous portion of the country is near the banks of the Loonee river, which, although a brackish stream even during the rains, serves to supply water for irrigation and other purposes. As a general rule, the villages throughout the country are not supplied with wells, the rainfall collected in a shallow tank serving both man and beast. Even in the best seasons villages are frequently deserted from want of water, which at some districts could not be obtained at less than 200 feet from the surface. The ordinary price of cereals in Marwar averages about nine seers per rupee, having, as we understand, now risen to four. The principal food of the people is bajera, rice being a luxury almost unknown. Wheat, barley, and jowar are also grown in considerable quantities, but neither poppy nor sugar-cane cultivation is ever seen. Immense herds of cattle roam over the country, of which it is now estimated some 75 per cent. have either died from want of grass or have been driven away. The great requirement has, however, been water. Quoting again from Dr. Moore's article we find that—

In such a country the dread of famine is of course ever present. To guard against this calamity the thrifty Marwarree stores his boosa and other food for animals, in conical mounds covered with mud plaster. The villages thus surrounded present a curious appearance. So protected, the vegetable substance will exist without decay for years. At a distance one would suppose these conical eminences mark the places where the rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep, but on nearer inspection cattle may be seen helping themselves to the food beneath the coating of mud which, much to the disgust of the owner, they have broken.

Had the people been as careful to secure a supply of water by digging wells as to store up food, they might have, comparatively speaking, defied the effects of the present drought. But there has been no one to direct their energies, to encourage them to supply the means of works involving expenditure. The Marwar Government for years past has been scarcely worthy the name. Hence the calamity now falling on the country is felt to the fullest extent, and emigration only remains to the inhabitants.

JEYSULMERE.

Involved in almost as much distress as Marwar, is the adjacent territory of Jeysumere. But, situated to the north-west of Marwar, between that district and Scinde, the inhabitants can more easily escape towards the Indus, where, if food is not plentiful, water at least will not fail. The state of Jeysumere, although little known is nevertheless of vast extent, covering upwards of 12,000 square miles. Yet the population is but small, not exceeding 74,000 souls. As in Marwar, so in Jeysumere, the country is barren and sterile in the extreme. But, unlike Marwar, it is not favoured by the flow of even a brackish river throughout its whole extent. Water is often as much as from 100 to 500 feet from the surface of the ground, which is composed of a layer of sand, with sandstone underneath, through which granite and trap occasionally appear. The north-east and west of Jeysumere is not merely semi-desert, but wholly so. It is composed of a succession of sand hills, varying in height from eighty to one hundred feet, and several miles in length. These sand hills generally face in one direction, towards the north-east, evidently the effect of the southerly monsoon winds. In the rainy season (if the small amount of rain falling ordinarily admits of such term) these hills are more or less covered with "kekur" bushes, and very coarse grass. In the hot season, when the latter fades, the dazzle from the glare of the sun is excessively painful, while the similarity of one hill with another, and the continual ascent and descent, utterly defy any landmarks by which the country might be noted. Into this desert district, however, men do penetrate. The bushes growing in the sand afford admirable food for camels, of which considerable herds exist in Jeysumere. It is said the people attending these animals live for weeks on camel's milk and the small quantity of grain they carry with them into the desert solitudes. With the exception, perhaps, of an occasional hyena, no wild animals are found in this wilderness, so that the camel-men feel perfectly safe from molestation. Unencumbered with either purse or scrip, they probably are scarcely aware of, and therefore do not desire, a more ambitious existence. To the south, the sand hills gradually disappear, giving place to low rocky ridges and undulating plains, covered in part with smooth pebbles, which appear to evidence the action of water at some remote period of the world's history. As in Marwar, so in Jeysumere, the food of the inhabitants is principally bajera. No rice cultivation is ever attempted, and very little wheat grown. The Chief of the State does not take the title of Rajah or Maharajah, but is designated the "Maha-Rawal." The family is an ancient one, and though poor, is highly esteemed among the ancient aristocracy of Rajpootana. The revenue in ordinary years scarcely exceeds a lakh of rupees. Many communities, however, in these remote regions, pay no tribute to the State. There are villages, the existence of which is scarcely known; and there are others the property of petty thakcors, who, in the absence of a strong Government, usurp the rights of sovereignty.

The capital of the Jeysulmere principality, called by the same name, is the largest village in the province. It contains about 8,000 inhabitants, and is situated on a rocky ridge, cropping up from the sandy surface about the centre of Jeysulmere. Formerly, it is stated, Jeysulmere was a favourite resort of the Puttiwalls, and other rich merchants of India, who left their families there, and frequently retired to that place, after having acquired wealth in other parts of the country. Now, however, that under British rule and protection other parts of India are safer habitations than the desert districts, none of the class above indicated favour Jeysulmere with their presence. It was not love of "faderland" or romantic notions that induced rich men in former days to retire to such localities, but the idea that they were safer there than among the wars of Moguls, Maharrattas, and Pindarrees. The wealth of the country now consists entirely of cattle, camels, goats, and sheep; and what little trade is carried on passes over the Scinde frontiers.

As before remarked, on account of their proximity to Scinde, the inhabitants of Jeysulmere are better situated than their neighbours of Marwar. They can escape with more ease to the neighbourhood of water. Many Jeysulmere villages have been deserted, but of actual distress from want of food we have heard little. The nomadic habits of the great majority of the people well adapt them to exigencies like the present, and their possessions are neither great to carry away, nor valuable to leave behind and lose.

BIKANER.

The principality of Bikaner is very extensive, and is situated to the north of Marwar, between that State, Bhawalpoor, and Jeysulmere. The area is about 18,000 square miles, but the population is not estimated at more than 550,000. The face of the country is very similar in appearance to Marwar and Jeysulmere, consisting of a succession of sand hills, or of flat hard ground, with occasional stretches of sandy waste. Here, again, bajera forms the staple food of the inhabitants, who only use rice and wheat as articles of luxury. Along the north border, where the Bikaner territory marches for a short distance with Hissar, the soil is of a better description, producing considerable crops of wheat and barley. Melons also grow, during the monsoon season, in great profusion, and are frequently given to cattle for food. Wool, ghee, and cattle are exported in some quantity from Bikaner into the neighbouring British districts of Hissar and Jhansi. The Bikaner territory is also famous for a preparation of crystallised sugar, the water in the neighbourhood of the capital being said to be peculiarly adapted, by some unknown special qualities, for sugar manufacture. Large quantities of sugarcane are sent from the North-West Provinces, and the sugar, after being crystallised in large rhombic prisms at Bikaner, is much prized and extensively used throughout the north-west. A peculiar kind of sandstone, capable of being carved to great perfection, is also found in the neighbourhood of the capital. It is, however, too weighty and bulky to pay for transport, although used in the construction of buildings in the vicinity. Wood being a scarce article in the locality, masses of this peculiar sandstone do duty as beams, and hence the houses are generally flat roofed, presenting an appearance very similar to many of the Afghan and Upper Sind dwellings. Copper ore also exists in the hills on the north-west border, but from some unexplained reason the mines have not been in working order for some years past.

The government of the Bikaner State is not described as very creditable. The State officials are said to be constantly changing, owing to the suspicious and capricious disposition of the Maharajah. That border joining with the Shekawatee State has for an indefinite time past been the haunt of various plundering bands, who have been in the habit of levying black-mail on merchants, merchandise, and travellers. The depredations of these dacoits were so audacious (extending even to Guzerat, Central India, and the Deccan) as to cause, during last year, the location of a British officer, and a force of both cavalry and infantry from the Deolee irregular regiment on the border. Here we believe they yet remain, head-quarters being at the town of Shojahangurh, a place containing some eight or ten thousand inhabitants.

Bikaner, the capital of the province, is perhaps less known than any of the residences of the Rajpoot chiefs. The number of people living in the city is computed at 60,000. The British political officer at the Court of the Maharajah is Captain Colridge. Bikaner is one of the few Rajpoot capitals which has never been invested by a British force.

As will readily be imagined, the failure of the monsoon has caused great distress throughout the whole of this principality. Numbers have deserted their homes and marched in quest of food, and more especially in search of water, both into Bhawalpoor and into the British districts of Hissar and Jhansi. As in Marwar and Jeysulmere, so in Bikaner, especially towards the south, water is very far from the surface, and many villages draw their supply altogether from shallow tanks, which in an average rainy season are liable to dry up before the end of the hot weather. We do not hear that anything has been attempted to relieve distress in the Bikaner State. The inhabitants of Marwar, of Jeysulmere, and of Bikaner, notwithstanding having been under the protection, and subject to the advice of Anglo-Indian statesmen for half a century, have now no better resource or aid in seasons of famine than the emigration resorted to from time immemorial, or since their country has become subject to periodical famines, consequent on the gradual destruction of all forest and vegetation used for firewood by generation after generation.—Times of India.

Miscellaneous.

DEATH OF LIEUT. BIRCH.—The Delhi Gazette is sorry to hear of the sudden death, at Meerut, of Lieut. Birch, of the 14th B.C.

MOVEMENTS OF THE VICEROY.—The official announcement of the Viceroy's movements has been issued. His Excellency was to leave Simla on the 10th November, would be at Umbalia up to the 16th, and arrive at Calcutta about the 18th.

BENGAL MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.—We hear that the successful applicants for the annuities for 1868 granted from the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund are Drs. Green, Dunbar, Guise, and D. Macrae, of the Effective List, and Drs. Oakley, Hubbard, and Littler, of the Retired List.

SIR D. MACLEOD.—Our latest letters from Peshawur are full of the change of the Viceroy's plans in not visiting the frontier as was intended. The Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab is now in camp at Attock, and will probably march on to Kohat, and thence through the lower part of the Rawul Pindee district.—Delhi Gazette.

THE DELHI BANK V. GENERAL INNES.—In the case of the Delhi Bank v. General Innes and Sir Donald Macleod, we hear that the portion of the claim, Rs. 15,000, which Sir Donald contested through his counsel, Mr. Jardine, was withdrawn by plaintiff. As to the remainder of the claim judgment has been reserved.—Delhi Gazette.

DESTRUCTION OF WILD BEASTS.—During the last three years the amazing number of 1,604 tigers, 2,637 panthers, 1,439 bears, 742 wolves, and 1,295 hyenas have been destroyed in the Central Provinces. In the same period 1,751 lives have been lost by wild beasts and 1,874 by snake bites.—Delhi Gazette.

ALLOWANCE TO MENGOON MENTHA.—We understand that the Government of India has sanctioned an allowance of Rs. 300 per mensem for the maintenance of the Mengoon Mentlia, the Burmese Prince who was lately brought up from Rangoon, and is now detained in the Fort of Chunar.—Indian Daily News.

RANGOON.—The Rangoon papers announce that Colonel Fytche, the Chief Commissioner, will come to Calcutta in December next, for the purpose of having an interview with Lord Mayo, on his arrival. The inhabitants are very sanguine that their interests and progress will be considerably enhanced by this interview, and such important matters as the railway scheme, the Kianhung survey and the relations with Upper Burmah definitely settled.

A GOOD EXAMPLE.—The Allyghur British Indian Association are collecting subscriptions in order to form a travelling fund for natives who, for purposes of study, are desirous of visiting Europe. The suggestion appears to be due to Raja Jai Kishen Dass, the Secretary, and will, no doubt, meet with some support. We hope that the Government will double the amount collected by a grant-in-aid.—Indian Public Opinion.

TEA GARDENS IN DARJEELING.—The Darjeeling paper says that labour on tea gardens is gradually being reduced to a reasonable cost—most of the gardens are now paying Rs. 5 per month for able-bodied coolies, and the women and children in proportion. The Government cinchona plantations a-year or so ago paid Rs. 6-8, they then reduced to Rs. 6, and now they have reduced to Rs. 5-8. If the Forest and Public Works Departments do likewise, the price of labour might be permanently settled at proper and moderate rates.

HEALTH OF THE INDIAN ARMY.—The report of the Sanitary Commissioner for 1866-67 shows that the death-rate for the European army in India was 30.95 per 1,000 men. This was more than half as high again as in the previous year; much higher than any year since 1861, when it was 45.93 per 1,000. The rate of 1861 was the highest on record, and 1866 the lowest; 1,071 deaths from all causes occurred, and of these 471 arose from cholera. The percentage of deaths from cholera per 1,000 was 13.84. Next to cholera, the largest number of deaths was due to fever.

THE MYSORE ACCOUNTS.—We believe that the accounts of the late Maharajah of Mysore were given to the world contrary to Sir John Lawrence's wish, not in any clandestine manner, as Mr. Bowring supposes, but owing to the mistake of an official subordinate. The inquiry into the accounts as it affects the Government seems very simple. The Commissioner and officers under him have been for months overhauling everything in the palace—pensions, debts, stables, elephants, and the appointments of hundreds of parasites who did nothing; and have been putting things to rights as far as, in the nature of things, was possible. We are not aware of any marked distinction between the Maharajah's public and private accounts. Everything was more or less in a muddle, and everything had to be gone into. Sir J. P. Grant, it must not be forgotten, was employed from December, 1844, to the close of 1846 in looking into and compounding the Maharajah's debts, and no such distinction was raised on that occasion when the chief was alive, and we had no duties to discharge to his successor.—Friend of India, Nov. 5.

TRANSIT DUTIES AT INDORE.—We hear from Indore that the Maharajah Holkar is about to follow the good example of Scindiah in abolishing transit duties in his dominions during the time the present scarcity lasts.

THE NEW KING OF SIAM.—The King of Siam died at Bangkok on the 1st of October of the jungle fever, which he caught during his expedition to observe the eclipse in August last. His Majesty was in the sixty-fourth year of his age and had reigned nearly eighteen years, but he was distinguished amongst Eastern potentates by his devotion to science and education, and his mild and equitable rule over his subjects. Prince Somdetch Chulaloukorn was elected by the Royal Council as First King in succession to his late Majesty, a Regent, rejoicing in the name of Prince Krom Mun Pawar-wijayan, having been appointed during the minority of the young King. The public coronation was to take place on the 31st October. —Englishman.

THE CROPS IN LOWER BENGL.—The returns of the state of the crops in the several districts of Lower Bengal are represented in the report of the Board of Revenue up to the 20th of October last as being favourable in thirty-two districts. The districts in which a short crop and either severe or partial distress, or the necessity for relief works, is anticipated, are—Howrah, Kamroop, Monghyr, Bhau-gulpore, and parts of the 24-Pergunnahs. In the Patna division the late dry weather has reduced the crops below the estimate previously formed, and in some parts of that division, especially at Sarun, there can be little doubt that relief measures will have to be adopted. In Cuttack, also, the favourable return is said by Mr. Dampier to have been considerably affected by the want of rain during the month of October.

OLD EUROPEANS IN CALCUTTA.—Whilst the healthiness of Calcutta is a subject of discussion in England, we might perhaps be excused if we draw attention to some notices which have appeared in the obituary lists during the past fortnight. Three old residents of the metropolis have died whose ages aggregate 229 years. Mrs. C. Hudson, 72; Mr. J. R. Coles, 77; and Mrs. Marmaduke Stalkart, 80. These three instances, by themselves, prove nothing more than the possibility of living to a good old age in this "deadliest of deadly" cities, the circumstances of the case are such that we cannot look for either exact or complete statistics. People generally do not stay here to be old, a circumstance which gives additional value to such instances as those we have just adduced. —Englishman.

DR. ANDERSON IN CALCUTTA.—Amongst the passengers who arrived in Calcutta on Sunday, Nov. 8, by the Cheduba, was Dr. Anderson, who accompanied the expedition under Captain Sladen, in a scientific capacity. We learn from the Rangoon Gazette that Dr. Anderson has brought back with him several hundred specimens of both the flora and fauna of the country through which he passed, the collection of which was no easy task. Owing to the absence of forests and jungle on the road to Momein, after passing the Kakhien Hills, Dr. Anderson was unable to collect many specimens from that part of the country, or from China, but his collection is still valuable. Some Kakhyens and Shans have accompanied Dr. Anderson to Calcutta, to see the lions, after which they are to be sent back to Rangoon.

A FICKLE RAJAH.—It appears that the Rajah of Chamba expelled his first wife (a Rani of Sukhey) on some frivolous ground—but really because he wanted to be unfettered in his tastes—from his territory, confiscating at the same time both the property she brought him and the dowry which he had given her. They had been living together for twelve or more years, and the lady had always exercised a beneficial influence on her husband. The Rajah of Sukhey is, of course, indignant at the affront offered to his honour, and has appealed to the Punjab Government for redress. The local Government has directed him to take his daughter back, before the case is inquired into, which the Rajah is obliged, by Rajput custom in the case of a married daughter, to decline to do. He, however, gives her a liberal allowance for an establishment out of his territory. —Indian Public Opinion.

HYDERABAD (DECCAN).—Our correspondent, writing from Hyderabad, says that the recent decision of the Government of India, removing the restrictions imposed on native chiefs regarding the dismissal of their dewans, will have a bad effect at the capital of the Nizam's dominions. Already endless intrigues have disgraced the Court, having for their object the dismissal of Sir Salar Jung from the post of Minister, and the appointment of one of the members of the family of Nawab Shums-ool-Oomrah. This family is related to the Nizam. Up to the present time all such intrigues have been frustrated by the support given the Minister by the Government of India. Grain is rising in price at Hyderabad; no scarcity was apprehended, though it is certain the rubbee crop will fail over a large portion of the Nizam's country, unless the north-east monsoon is violent and squally. —Englishman, Nov. 2.

THE FAMINE IN AJMERE.—We hear from the Ajmere district that the famine is pressing very severely upon the people there. Our own people are not so badly off, as they are pretty well supplied with work, but the poor Marwarrees suffer dreadfully. Numbers of them are returning from the south whither, as we related, they were wending their way in thousands, following ignis fatuus in the shape of imaginary plenty, to die of starvation and disappointment at their journey's end, and bear out Mr. John Strachey's admirable theory—"On no account interfere with migration." Some of them, after parting with their cattle and all they have, do manage to get back again to their villages, as they say, to lay them down and die. We are sorry to hear that the Maharajah of Joudhpore is making little or no effort to afford any relief. Perhaps he, too, has studied Mr. John Stuart Mill, and deems interference injudicious. Who knows?—Delhi Gazette, Nov. 5.

LADAKH.—Dr. Cayley, reporting on his vaccine operations in Ladakh, says that nothing could exceed the eagerness with which the people came forward to be vaccinated. No pressure or persuasion was needed. He sent notice a few days beforehand, and the people voluntarily assembled from neighbouring places at an appointed locality. Whole families came two or three days' journey, leaving their work during the busy harvest. The people have the most intense fear of small-pox, which, about fifteen years ago, devastated the district. Since that, however, it does not seem to have been epidemic. Inoculation has not been practised for several years, or only to a very small extent, as the people have the greatest dread of its effects in spreading small-pox. Dr. Cayley hopes that among the people themselves vaccinators may arise who will continue in future years to keep up this prophylactic. In and immediately around Lé the total vaccinations during the month were 350. The people of Lé itself, who at first showed great opposition, now come forward freely of their own accord, and beg to be vaccinated.

CINCHONA AT DARJEELING.—Dr. Anderson's report on the cultivation of Cinchona at Darjeeling during the month of August, 1868, says that 50,380 plants of C. Succirubra were added to the number already planted out, thus raising the number of plants in the open ground to 813,002. About 70,000 plants were transferred to the nursery lines, and 88,200 cuttings made during the month. Vigorous growth has occurred among all the plants in the permanent plantations. The tallest plant of C. Succirubra was 16 feet 2 in. in height at the end of August, three years and ten months after planting. The head gardener reports that the heaviest rain that has been recorded at Darjeeling since the commencement of the cultivation of Cinchona there, fell on the night of Sunday, the 23rd, 6.5 inches of rain having fallen within a few hours. No very serious damage resulted from this sudden and heavy fall; a few hundred recently planted plants of C. Succirubra were buried under a land slip, and the bridge paths in the plantations were carried away in some places, rendering the roads impassable here and there. The rainfall during the month was 41.85 inches, making a total amount of 146.55 inches of rain since Jan. 1. The mean temperature on the plantations varied from 73.95 to 74.49.

BANGALORE POLICE.—At the instance of the Chief Commissioner of Mysore, the Governor-General in Council has approved and sanctioned the scheme prepared by the local authorities for re-organising the police of the Bangalore district in that province, at a cost of about Rs. 68,400 per annum.—Indian Daily News.

REVIEW AT BANGALORE.—There was a grand review of all the troops in garrison on Monday morning, the 2nd November. Lord Napier, with the Chief Commissioner, was present on the ground, and the general public mustered pretty strongly. The Governor of Madras was received with a salute of seventeen guns, the same compliment being paid him on leaving the ground. It was a matter of general remark that the review was one of the most brilliant Bangalore has seen for a long time. The morning was bright, cool, and cheery, and the troops presented a splendid appearance. The march past showed them off to perfection. The 2-19th, in firm and serried ranks, the Sappers, in deep scarlet, the Lancers, about the most showy and yet efficient corps of the whole, were all remarked on and admired. The evolutions of the latter especially were gone through in capital style. Altogether, from the number and appearance of the troops, Bangalore may well lay claim to be the first military station in India.—Bangalore Herald.

STATE OF THE WEATHER AND CROPS.—A correspondent in the Ganjam district, writing on the 31st Oct., says:—"Since my last the rainfall has been nil, the weather fine, mornings cool, days exceedingly hot and dry, and with a brisk north-east breeze evaporation and filtration have been exceeding great for this season of the year. The ground is as dry as it usually is in the month of January. Half the Sarawa, i.e., the general paddy crop of this district, is already lost for want of moisture. Notwithstanding enormous labour during the past month by the ryots in baling water from every tank, nullah, or pool where it could be found, I fear that the outturn of the harvest over all the district will not be one-sixth of an average crop. From the information now before me I am afraid that the failure of the food crops coming so soon after the late terrible visitation is likely to develop into scarcity of a serious nature, particularly so if the drought continues till the period of the summer rains of 1869. Then the sugar-cane and all cereals usually planted during this period are likely to suffer loss, and even a scarcity of pasturage for cattle, and want of water for drinking purposes in some localities may be apprehended. This is a very gloomy picture, but not one bit too dark or gloomy. The time for action has arrived, and if wise, prudent, and timely measures be adopted, the anticipated scarcity may be tided over without much suffering to the people or loss to the State."—An Ootacamund paper states:—"During the last week we have had heavy, and some say excessive rains, with thunder and lightning, in fact, regular monsoon weather. But it has been diversified by pleasant breaks at from twelve to twenty-four hours. Old inhabitants say that this is thoroughly seasonable weather, while others complain that their gardens and young plants are injured. Whom does the weather ever satisfy? We hear from Wynaad that heavy rains are splitting the ripe coffee, and that it is almost impossible to dry the coffee already picked; but at the same time these rains are forcing out wood for next crop to a wonderful extent, though also fostering the growth of weeds, which are taking off hands from the important work of gathering." The average rain-fall during September last was as follows:—In Ganjam 5·80; Vizagapatam, 6·08; Godavery, 4·30; Kistna, 6·53; Nellore, 1·70; Cuddapah, 1·50; Bellary, 6·70; Kurnool, 6·73; Madras, 1·96; North Arcot, 3·20; South Arcot, 3·02; Tanjore, 4·06; Trichinopoly, 5·83; Madura, 3·14; Tinnevely, 2·10; Coimbatore, 2·70; Nilgherries, 9·87; Salem, 5·74; South Canara, 6·90; and Malabar, 3·80 inches.—Madras Times.

THE LATE SECUNDA BEGUM OF BHOPAL.

A short sketch of her Highness's family history will not be uninteresting. The history of the Bhopal State is like that of many others in India. Its founder, Dost Mahomed Khan, was an Afghan adventurer, who, by his prowess and address at the Court of Aurungzebe, won the favour of the Emperor, and obtained the government of a district in Malwa. He succeeded by his force of character in establishing his authority in the midst of a stiff-necked and unruly Rajpoot and Hindoo population.

On the breaking up of the Mahomedan Empire, after the death of Aurungzebe, he fortified the town of Bhopal, and assumed the title of Nawab Dost Mahomed Khan. He early cultivated friendly relations with the British, and history informs us that when Goddard's army marched through Central India in 1778, the Nawab of Bhopal was the only Indian prince who displayed a friendly spirit towards it. This provoked a strong feeling of hostility towards the Bhopal State on the part of its powerful Hindoo neighbours, Scindia, Holkar, and the Rajah of Nagpore, and in 1809, when General Rose appeared in that quarter, the Nawab found it necessary to appeal for British protection, but with little effect. In 1813 Bhopal was besieged by divisions of Scindia's and the Nagpore army. This siege is described by Sir John Malcolm as one of the most remarkable of late days, and the conduct of the chief, whose garrison at the commencement did not exceed eight or ten thousand men, is the theme of praise and the admiration of the Mahomedans in India. This siege was followed by a movement of Holkar's Mahratta battalions against Bhopal, but the attack was averted through the mediation of the British Government.

This friendly office led to the conclusion of a treaty in 1818 between the British Government and the Bhopal State, which provided for protection on the one part, and subordinate co-operation on the other. A handsome territorial assignment was made by this treaty to the reigning Prince, as a reward for his zeal and fidelity, but he was not spared to enjoy it, having shortly after the conclusion of the treaty received his death from a pistol accidentally discharged by a child. His nephew, an infant, was declared successor to the musnud, and was betrothed to the infant daughter of the deceased Prince. A Council of Regency was appointed to conduct the administration during the minority of the young Prince, the widow of the late Nawab being at the head. The other members consisted of a Mahomedan, Hindoo, and a Christian. The last—Belthazar Bourbonna—was the descendant of a Frenchman, who came to India in the time of Akbar.

Belthazar, better known as Shahzad Musseah, was an able and a brave soldier, and a member of his family, a devout Romanist, accompanied the Begum to Bombay. On the young Prince attaining his majority in 1827, Qidsea Begum declined to surrender her authority, and refused to sanction his marriage with her daughter, on grounds which appear to have been regarded as valid by the British Government. The rejected heir soon after surrendered his claims in favour of a younger brother, the consort of the Secundra Begum, who found it necessary to assert his authority by force of arms, in opposition to the party attached to the Queen mother; but his reign was brief, and the succession passed in 1850 to his daughter, Shae Jehan Begum, then a child in her sixth year. The administration was again intrusted to a regency under the control of the Secundra Begum, the subject of this notice.

Various useful reforms were steadily introduced by her Highness, and on the outbreak of the Mutinies in 1857, her position was one of considerable influence. On the 1st July, 1857, the Bengal troops stationed at Mhow openly revolted, and a detachment of the Bhopal contingent employed at Indore mutinied in concert, and compelled Colonel Durand to abandon the residency at Holkar's Court. The resident found it expedient to retreat with the ladies and gentlemen of his party to Sehore. Thither also wended at a later date the English fugitives from Angur, knowing that the Begum would continue a staunch ally of the British Government. The King of Delhi had already conveyed to her Highness an "Istaper," calling upon her, as a true Moslem, to hoist the standard of rebellion; but she evinced no sympathy with the rebel cause, and gave timely warning to the officers of the Bhopal contingent to escape to Hoshungabad, a Madras cantonment on the opposite side of the Nerbudda. Every assistance was given by the Begum to European parties arriving in her districts to reach Hoshungabad in safety, and her active sympathy and kindness towards those who sought her protection at this critical time cannot be readily forgotten.—Times of India.

STATION TALK.

HYDRABAD (SIND), Nov. 1.—Mendicants and merchants have arrived during the last few days from Kattiaur, to procure grain, as famine is prevailing there to a considerable extent. The authorities here, I am glad to be able to say, are doing all in their power to render every possible assistance, and the visitors are leaving with good supplies, but fear they will have to come back for other stocks of provisions. Almost everything has become extremely dear in consequence. I believe the collector will not leave for the districts till the arrival of the commissioner, who is expected here on the 10th instant. The native gentry are on the qui vive for Sir William Merewether's arrival, for they have been told that he, like John Jacob, likes short ceremonies. I have just been told that Colonel Beville, the commander of the 1st Beloochees, will be out very shortly from the furlough he has obtained. The sepoys are very delighted over this rumour.—Sind News' Correspondent.

KURRACHEE, Nov. 4.—Orders have been issued to Colonel Rose, commanding at Hyderabad, to direct the 4-5 Royal Artillery to be held in readiness to proceed to Kurrachee by train, which leaves Kotree on the morning of the 17th inst., for the purpose of embarking in the mail steamer which leaves this port on the 18th. Sir George Malcolm, accompanied by his aide-de-camp, Eusign Heath; Colonel Bacon, the Assistant Adjutant-General; and Colonel Woollcombe, C.B., commanding the Royal Artillery in Sind, have gone to Hyderabad to make the annual inspection and review of the Battery before it leaves this division; they will return to Kurrachee next Friday. The annual official "exodus" is at hand. The Commissioner, Sir W. Merewether, and his assistants, Messrs. Moore and Rozare, leave for Sewhan on the morning of the 9th inst. Sir William, it is believed, will not proceed further, but will return to Kurrachee about the end of the month to receive Lady Merewether, who is expected from England, and then start again for the districts after the termination of the Christmas holidays. Major Lambert, the Collector, and Mr. Beatty, superintendent of works, Western Indus, leave for the districts to-morrow. Mr. Walton, director Mekran Coast and Submarine Telegraph, accompanied by Lieut. Morgan, of the Royal Engineers, proceeded to Guadar and the intermediate stations in the steamer Lord Elphinstone this morning. He has taken with him a large number of masons, carpenters, &c., to erect telegraphic offices on Cape Jask, as far as which, you are aware, the aerial line is to be extended. It is currently reported that a curious fever has broken out at Guadar very much like the "black vomits," and that ere long the telegraph people will have to abandon the place altogether. There is a talk about constructing a "citadel" in Kurrachee, and it is stated that the Bombay Government has requested the Commissioner to favour it with his opinion on the matter. Possibly the "authorities" expect a visit from the Russians before long! The court of inquiry ordered to investigate the circumstances in connection with the stranding of the ship James Childs at the Kye mouth of the Indus in June last, will assemble to-morrow. It is to be composed of Mr. W. T. Cole, Harbour Magistrate and Collector of Customs, and Captain D. Mathias, of the ship Walgrif, which arrived here from London on the 23rd Sept. last.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE NEW BEGUM OF BHOPAL.—The late Begum of Bhopal will be succeeded by her eldest daughter Shahjehan Begum, whose husband died lately on his way back from Mecca.

AHMEDNUGGUR.—The crops throughout the greater part of the collectorate are withering for want of rain, and in parts there is reason to apprehend a scarcity of water. The mamlutdars of Nugur, Sawurgum and Rahooree report that there is already a scarcity for drinking purposes in some villages. The mamlutdar of the last named talooka also states that in fifty villages the rubbee crops were not sown for want of rain. Even if there was a heavy fall of snow, of which however there is no prospect at present, the season could not but be a very bad one. The general state of public health is reported to be good, except at Sungumaw, where cholera has made its appearance.—Times of India.

MILITARY ITEMS.—The headquarters, consisting of six companies of the 25th N.L.I., arrived at Poona on the 10th November for Sholapore, on their way to relieve the 9th N.I., under the command of Colonel Baugh, at Dhoolia. C battery F brigade R.H.A., under the command of Major MacLachlan, marched on Nov. 10 from Kirkee for Khandalla, en route to Bombay, for embarkation to Hyderabad, Sind. The 23rd N.L.I. arrived at Poona by train on November 10th from Cattiaur, to replace the 2nd Grenadiers N.I. The headquarters wing of the latter corps was to proceed to Sattara under command of Colonel MacLeod soon after the 14th November. A detachment of two strong companies of the 8th King's Regiment proceeded to Sattara this week from Poona.

THE BROACH EXHIBITION.—It is now finally settled that the Broach Exhibition is to be opened on the 22nd of next month, by his Excellency the Governor. In the evening of that day there will be a public ball at Cutcherry, and on the following day Sir Seymour Fitzgerald will hold a durbar for the reception of the native chiefs of Guzerat. The prices of admission to the exhibition have been fixed at very reasonable rates—season tickets, with seat at opening, Rs. 5, without seat Rs. 3. None but season ticket holders will be admitted on the three first days. On the following three the prices of admission will be one rupee each. After this other prices will be fixed. Special arrangements are to be made for native ladies visiting the Exhibition. The whole of the arrangements appear to be most complete, and there can now be no doubt that the Exhibition will be a success.—Times of India, Nov. 14.

ARRIVAL OF MISS CARPENTER.—Miss Carpenter, whose name is so well known in India in connection with the cause of education, arrived in Bombay by the mail steamer last Saturday. It had been arranged by a number of native gentlemen that they should meet at Apollo Bunder and welcome back this lady to their shores, but she was unaware of their intention, and so proceeded with the steamer to Mazagon. A number of gentlemen, therefore, who had assembled to meet her at the bunder were not a little disappointed; but fortunately Mr. Venayck Wassoodew, Oriental Translator to Government, Dr. Atmaram Pandoorung, and several others had gone to Mazagon to await the arrival of the steamer there. Miss Carpenter got a hearty welcome from these gentlemen, and from a nice little girl, daughter of Dr. Atmaram, who accompanied him and highly pleased the lady; and she is now the guest of S. McCulloch, Esq., Malabar-hill. As to the work in which Miss Carpenter is to engage in this country, so much is already known that we need at present say but little. After some months of investigation and inquiry, she has again come out to India to proceed in the scheme she has so much at heart. She has received the hearty support of friends at home, and the confidence of Government, too, has been manifested by its paying the expenses of her passage, and of those who are to co-operate with her. We understand that her plans are not yet decided upon, and will not be so till she has learned what help is required from her by friends of the cause in Bombay. At present, however, she means to proceed first to Ahmedabad, which, being a Mofussil town, did not receive a grant from Government, and there to do what she can to promote the establishment of a Normal training school. She is accompanied by a young lady, whom she has adopted, who already has had not a little experience in teaching, and doubtless will be very acceptable to native ladies. Then other two ladies of position, actuated by motives like those of Miss Carpenter, are proceeding from Liverpool, and will soon be here as volunteers—for Miss Carpenter's services are all given gratuitously—in the work at Ahmedabad. Since her arrival in Bombay the Hon. Munguldass Nathoobhoy has waited on Miss Carpenter, and welcomed her back to the work; and we believe she will take an early opportunity of consulting H.E. the Governor and the members of Council. Though she will go to Ahmedabad when preparations for her reception there are ready, we may mention that it is expected Miss Carpenter will ere long return to Bombay to give her assistance here. She has, we may add, at the request of Sir Alexander Grant, obtained the services of a first-class certificated mistress for the Normal School, and that lady, her appointment having been approved by Sir Stafford Northcote, will proceed to Bombay by the end of this month.—Bombay Gazette, Nov. 14.

AFFAIRS AT MUSCAT.—The British India Company's steamship Governor Higginson arrived here on Friday, the 6th November, from Bunder Abbas and Muscat, and the courtesy of the captain of that vessel enables us to state the progress of matters at the Gulf since the departure of the Vigilant. Syud Selim, who has still hopes of regaining his throne, is still at Bunder Abbas, and the gunboats Prince of Wales and Roumania were lying there when the Governor Higginson sailed on the 27th ult. The Persian Government will, it is expected, soon send troops to take possession of Bunder Abbas, and retain hold there till matters are arranged in connection with the recognition of a Sultan. At Muscat the people are still as disaffected as ever, and do not seem to reconcile themselves to the rule of Azan-bin-Ghez. It seems that some of them have a strong idea that Syud Toorkee is in communication with some of the chiefs at Muscat, and has even been sending them pecuniary aid; at any rate, they confidently expect that he will soon reach their shores with power to enforce his sway. Rather an exciting episode took place on the arrival of the Penang about the 21st ult. The people on shore mistook a few soldiers on the steamer for part of a host under Syud Selim; they thought the prompt despatching of a boat was the herald of an invader's approach, feared that Syud Selim had troops approaching by an inland route, and at once the town and forts were deserted by almost everyone. This occurred in the evening, many people slept in boats all night, and the place remained vacated till morning; but then the delusive idea seems to have been overcome, and Muscat was again peopled. No further variety occurred until the Governor Higginson arrived on the 29th ult., bringing Hajee Ahmed, vizier of Syud Selim, on his way to Bombay, in order, we understand, to consult Colonel Pelly as to future arrangements. On arrival the Hajee took a boat and approached the town, in order to visit the English Agent, but he was seen by those on shore, and a great number of muskets were discharged from the forts and town. Besides the alarm, however, there was nothing of note, and so Hajee returned on board in the evening without having gone on shore at all. We (Bombay Gazette) understand that since his arrival in Bombay Hajee Ahmed has had an interview with Colonel Pelly in regard to matters at Muscat. The Sindian of 4th Nov. learns that a Sheikh or Chief of that people (Wahabee tribe, known also as the Ghaffri) in the Bereymee country, named Toyrkee-bin-Sideyree, was preparing to march upon Muscat to depose Azan-bin-Ghez, and that Syud Selim has always had that chief's support, for which, it should be remarked, he paid an annual subsidy of 12,000 dollars. The advance of the Wahabees was considered so imminent that, although everything was quiet in Muscat, but very little trade was going on. The same paper informs us that Toyrkee-bin-Sideyree would have gone to Syud Selim's assistance had not Azan-bin-Ghez been so active and resolute in his proceedings. The new Sultan has obtained another success. On the 11th October he sent his brother, Ebrahim-bin-Ghez, at the head of an attacking party, to take the town of Sohar, which lies about 102 miles north-west of Muscat. The town was easily taken, but the fort, which some forty Belooches defended, was not captured till after four assaults. Hearing of the first repulse, Azan-bin-Ghez was preparing to march against the place in person, when on the morning of the 16th news came in to Muscat of the downfall of the fort.

CIRCULAR ORDER TO MAGISTRATES BY THE HIGH COURT OF JUDICATURE AT FORT WILLIAM IN BENGAL.—CRIMINAL SIDE.

No. 5a, dated Calcutta, Sept. 7.—The court having had under consideration the result of trials and preliminary inquiries before the magistrates in 1867, promulgate the following general rule upon the subject:—

Every magistrate who is authorised to receive complaints, is enjoined to comply strictly with the provisions of secs. 66 and 67 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

The examination of the complainant is not to be a mere form, but an intelligent inquiry into the subject-matter of the complaint, carried far enough to enable the magistrate to exercise his judgment as to whether there is or is not sufficient ground for proceeding.

Where it appears to the magistrate that there is sufficient ground for proceeding, he is to issue his summons, or in certain cases his warrant, for the appearance of the accused before the magistrate himself or before some other magistrate having jurisdiction in the case. Where, in the judgment of the magistrate there is no sufficient ground for proceeding, he is to dismiss the complaint.

The examination of the complainant is to be upon oath or solemn affirmation, and is to be taken by the magistrate himself.

The order upon such examination for the issue of warrant or summons, or for dismissing the complaints, shall be in the handwriting of the magistrate himself.

The provisions of sec. 180 should be resorted to in cases of doubt, in respect of the offences to which this section applies. When a magistrate directs a previous inquiry to be made into the truth of a complaint, under the provisions of section 180, he should fix a day for the further appearance of the complainant, and for taking into consideration the report of the officer directed to make such inquiry, with a view to the issue of process, or otherwise, as the magistrate may find proper.

Complaints should be received at a fixed hour each day, and should be immediately numbered in the order of their receipt. They should then be entered in a book to be kept in the form annexed. This book should be kept under the special control of the magistrate himself.

It will be the duty of the magistrate of the district to take care that these rules are exactly observed by all magistrates within the district who receive complaints, and he should impress it upon his subordinates that the object in view is not to secure a certain proportion between acquittals and convictions. That is merely a result which may suggest a necessity for inquiry. The real object of the rules is to ensure that no person shall be compelled to appear before a magistrate to answer to a criminal charge, unless a magistrate has first satisfied himself that there is reason for proceeding against such person.

The very knowledge that the complaint will be at once brought face to face with the magistrate, and that his examination will be a reality, may be fairly expected to have the effect of keeping out of court many false and some exaggerated complaints, and the examination itself will show the slight foundation on which many charges rest.

In cases where the magistrate may have a suspicion that the charge is false or vexatious, but the suspicion is not sufficiently strong to justify him in withholding process, he may fairly warn the complainant of the risk which he runs of being prosecuted for a false complaint or of being ordered to pay something to the accused by way of amends. But he will, of course, be careful not to do so in such a manner as to deter honest complainants.

It will be the duty of the sessions judge, whenever he has reason to believe that proper care, as to the issuing of process, has not been exercised by his subordinates, to inquire how far the rules above laid down have been observed and carried out.—By order of the High Court, (Signed) C. D. FIELD, Registrar.

Second Charge.—With having, at Subathoo, on the 12th July, 1867, intentionally given in, to a regimental committee held on that date to verify the balance in his regimental pay chest, a false statement of money for the use of H.M.'s forces, the said statement dated the 11th July, 1867, showing a balance due to him of rupees two hundred and seventy-nine, and annas ten, and six pie (Rs. 279-10-6) to date, whereas in reality, as he well knew, there was at the last mentioned date a balance against him of rupees two thousand one hundred and eighty, and annas fourteen, and six pie (Rs. 2,180-14-6), or thereabouts.

Third Charge.—With having, at Subathoo, on the 10th October, 1867, intentionally given in, to a regimental committee held on that date to verify the balance in his regimental pay chest, a false statement of public money for the use of H.M.'s forces, received and disbursed by him from the 1st to the 10th October, 1868, both dates inclusive, inasmuch as he had intentionally omitted to enter, or to cause to be entered in that statement the sum of rupees two thousand (Rs. 2,000), which said amount he received on the public account for the use of H.M.'s forces before the 10th October, 1867, that is to say, on the 4th October, 1867.

Fourth Charge.—With having, at Subathoo, on the 21st January, 1868, intentionally given in to a regimental committee, held on that date to verify the balance in his regimental pay-chest, a false statement of public money, for the use of her Majesty's forces, received and disbursed by him from the 1st to the 21st January, 1868, both dates inclusive, inasmuch as he gave in to the said committee a statement dated the 20th January, 1868, in which statement he (Paymaster Lawes) had intentionally omitted to enter, or to cause to be entered, two sums of money to the aggregate amount of rupees three thousand five hundred and forty-eight, and annas thirteen, and six pie (Rs. 3,548-13-6), received by him on the public account, for the use of her Majesty's forces, between the 1st and 19th January, 1868, both dates inclusive, being portion of canteen money for the month of December, 1867.

FINDING.—The court finds the prisoner—

On the first charge guilty, to the extent of Rs. 7,231-1-1½ only, instead of Rs. 7,394-4-9½.

On the second charge, guilty.

On the third charge, guilty.

On the fourth charge, guilty.

Sentence.—The court sentences the prisoner, Paymaster William Lawes, of her Majesty's 90th light infantry, to be cashiered, and to suffer imprisonment for the term of two years, and, in addition, to make good, at his own expense, the sum of Rs. 7,231-1-1½.

(Signed)

WALTER BIRCH, Colonel, 104th Fusiliers, President.

Subathoo, Oct. 5, 1868.

Approved and confirmed.

(Signed)

W. R. MANSFIELD, General, Commander-in-Chief in India.

Head Qrs., Simla, Oct. 28.—The name of Paymaster William Lawes is to be struck off the returns of the 90th regt. from the date on which this order may be read to him, and a report of the said date is to be made to the adjutant general and the military secretary to H.E. the Commander-in-Chief by the officer commanding at Subathoo.

By order of H.E. the Commander-in-Chief,

H. E. LONGDEN, Colonel, Adjutant General.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

MOVEMENTS OF H.E. THE VICEROY.

Simla, Nov. 4.—The Viceroy and Gov. gen. will leave Simla for the Presidency on Tuesday, the 10th inst.

H.E. will leave Kussowlie on the 12th, Umballa (by train) on the 16th, and arrive at the Presidency on or about the 18th.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S TRIBUTE TO H.M.'s 101ST REGT. BENGAL FUSILIERS.

Head Qrs., Simla, Nov. 2.—The C. in C. in India has great satisfaction in republishing the Right Hon. the Gov. gen.'s order No. 1,010, of Oct. 30, 1868, in favour of the 101st Royal Bengal fusiliers.

As shown by that order, the record of this regiment contains the history of the advance of the British arms from Calcutta to the Indus, and includes many campaigns beyond the limits of India.

It is with a feeling of no ordinary gratification that H.E. is able to assure the 101st foot, when bidding the corps farewell, that in point of order, discipline, and efficiency, the regiment, as now organised, is well worthy of its glorious history:—

No. 1,010, dated Oct. 30.—The 101st Royal Bengal fusiliers being about to proceed to England, H.E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. in Council cannot allow this regiment, the nucleus of which has existed in this presidency, in some shape or another, for more than 200 years, and which has been formed as a regiment—expanding at times into several battalions—for 112 years, to take its departure without expressing, in the strongest terms, the appreciation of the Government of India of its most valuable and distinguished services.

Successively as the Bengal European regt., the 1st European regt., the 1st European light infantry, and the 1st Bengal European fusiliers, the regiment served the Hon. the East India Company for more than 100 years; and, besides being actively engaged in nearly every part of its own presidency, was detached to the Northern Circars of the Madras presidency in 1758, and has subsequently served out of Bengal in the Carnatic, in Java, in the Island of Celebes, in Afghanistan—from Ghuznee in one direction, to Pushoot, on the borders of Koonur, in another—and in Burmah.

The distinguished conduct in the field of the regiment as the senior battalion of infantry of the Bengal army was proverbial, and its colours are covered with the names of operations in which it bore a prominent part. Some are not thus recorded; but the following list includes all the more important of the campaigns, battles, and sieges in which the regiment has been engaged:—

Defence of Fort William against Suraj-oo-dowlah in 1756, when the four companies, of which the corps was composed, were almost annihilated.

Capture of the Fort of Budge-Budge; recapture of Calcutta; battle of Chitpore; siege and capture of Chandernagore; capture of the Fort of Kutwa; and battle of Plassey, 1766-1757.

Campaign against the French in the Northern Circars in 1768, including the battle of Condore, and siege and capture of Masulipatam.

Defeat of a Dutch force at Bedarra, November 8, 1759.

Campaign against the Emperor of Delhi, 1760-61, including the battles of Secrpore, Beerpore, and Suan, in which latter the French mercenaries were defeated, and their leader, the celebrated M. Law, taken prisoner.

War against the Meer Kassim, ex-Nawab of Moorsshedabad, 1763 to 1765, and present at the battle of Manjee, near Patna, where four companies were overwhelmed and destroyed after a gallant resistance; battle of Kutwah; capture of Moorsshedabad; battle of Gheriah; storm of the lines of Oodwah Nullah; capture of Mongheer; siege and storm of Patna; action near Patna, May 3, 1764; battle of Buxar; assault of Chunar, and battle of Kulpee.

In 1774, in the first Rohilla campaign under Col. Champion, including the decisive action on St. George's-day of that year, when Hafiz Kehmut was killed.

Four companies employed against Hyder Allee in the Carnatic, from 1780 to 1783, and present at the relief of Wandiwash; battles of Porto Novo, Polilore, Solinghur, Veracundalore; relief of Vellore; battle of Arnee, and siege of Cuddalore.

Again employed in the second Rohilla war, under Major gen. Sir Robt. Abercrombie, and suffered severely at the battle of Bittorah on the 26th October, 1794.

In Lord Lake's campaigns against the Maharattas, 1804-1805; at the battle of Deig; siege and storm of Deig; and the first siege of Bhurtpore.

In Java from 1812 to 1815, and in the Island of Celebes in 1816. A detachment employed in the Terai during part of the Nepal war, and two companies employed against the Pindarees in 1817-1818.

The right wing of the regiment at the siege and capture of Bhurtpore, 1826, and engaged in the assault.

Joined the army of the Indus in November, 1838, and served during the first campaign in Afghanistan, 1839-1844, and prominently engaged at the storm of Ghuznee. A detachment was employed at the attack on the Fort of Pushoot in January, 1840.

On the Sikhs crossing the Sutlej in December, 1845, the regiment moved from the hills by rapid forced marches, and was engaged at the battles of Ferozeshuhur and Sobraon, losing 20 officers and 392 men killed and wounded.

Engaged in the Burmese war, 1852-1853, and present at the recapture of Pegu, relief of the Pegu garrison, and subsequent operations in the vicinity of that place.

In May, 1857, on the outbreak of the Indian mutiny, moved with great rapidity, notwithstanding the intense heat, to Umballa, and thence marched on Delhi. Was one of the four regiments of British infantry that served throughout the siege of that place, from the action of Budleeka-Serai, on the 8th June, 1857, to the final capture of the city on the 20th September; and was repeatedly distinguished, especially in the assault, where it formed part of the column led by Brigadier gen. John Nicholson. The regiment lost 14 officers and 305 men killed and wounded at Delhi.

Served subsequently, during the latter part of 1857 and in 1858, at the actions of Narnoul, Gungeree, Puttiallee, and Mynpooree; at the siege and capture of Lucknow; and in various minor affairs in Oude.

These services, which can hardly be surpassed by those of any regiment in existence, were rendered when the corps belonged to the army of the Hon. the East India Company.

In 1861 the regiment became H.M.'s 101st Royal Bengal fusiliers, and since then as one of H.M.'s regiments of the line, was employed in the operations at Umbeyla in October, November, and December, 1863, and well maintained its previous reputation in the various struggles with a brave foe throughout that arduous service.

The 101st regiment now proceeds to England for its first turn of home service, and it leaves India full of honour, and with a reputation for discipline and efficiency, as the Gov. gen. in Council is assured by H.E. the C. in C., quite worthy of its character for gallantry and endurance.

The Gov. gen. in Council is convinced that wherever the 101st regiment goes it will maintain its ancient renown; and H.E. in Council desires to assure the regiment that the Govt. of India is proud to send such a corps to take its place in England with the battalions of her Most Gracious Majesty there stationed.

By order of H.E. the C. in C.

H. E. LONGDEN, Colonel, Adj. General.

THE RELATIVE RANK OF COLONEL.

Oct. 30.—No. 1,009.—The following paragraph of a military letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 282, dated Aug. 20 last, is published for general information:—

Para. 4.—Having forwarded, for the consideration of the F.M. C. in C., the papers relating to the claim of deputy inspector general of hospitals * * * to count towards the relative rank of colonel the period during which he officiated on the full pay of a deputy inspector general, H.R.H. has informed me that in the British service a deputy inspector-general of substantive rank alone can claim the relative rank of colonel, and that only from the actual date of the Gazette in which his appointment is notified, and that under no circumstances does a merely officiating appointment so qualify. As recommended by H.R.H., the same rule should be observed in the Indian service.

CIVIL ENGINEER ESTABLISHMENT.

Oct. 28.—No. 281.—The following civil engineers under covenant with the Sec. of State for India in Council, having reported their arrival in Calcutta are posted as follows, and will be placed on the establishment of the public works department as assistant engineers, 3rd grade, with effect from the date on which they may join their respective appointments:—Messrs. E. J. Moore, N.W.P.; D. G. Ottley and A. R. Beecher, Punjab; F. E. Robertson and R. N. Unkles, Bengal; W. P. Lynam, H. Groves, and G. H. Bayly, Mysore; J. T. Brown and H. Richard, British Burmah.

CURRENCY OF INDIA.

Simla, Oct. 28.—No. 3,287.—In modification of the notification by the Government of India, No. 3,517, of November 23, 1864, the Gov. gen. of India in Council is pleased to direct that, from and after the publication of this notification, sovereigns and half-sovereigns coined at any authorised royal mint in England or Australia of current weight shall be received in all the Treasuries of British India and its dependencies in payment of sums due to the Government, as the equivalent of ten rupees and four annas, and five rupees and two annas respectively; and that such sovereigns shall, whenever available at any Government Treasury, be paid at the same rates to any person willing to receive them in payment of claims against the Government. The gold pieces stated in section 13 of Act XVII. of 1835 will also henceforth be received as above, according to the values stated in that Act.

LEAVE TO CIVIL SERVANTS—CASE OF MR. W. H. BLISS.

From E. H. Lushington, Esq., Secretary to the Government of India, Financial Department, to the Acting Secretary to the Government of Fort St. George.—No. 3,354, dated Oct. 29, 1868.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 2,283, of Aug. 28, 1868, requesting that the order of the Government of Fort St. George, No. 2,246, dated the 24th idem, granting privilege leave for fourteen days to Mr. W. H. Bliss, acting sub-collector of Madura, may be confirmed, and suggesting "that general orders may be issued by the Government of India to the effect that, when an officer cancels a portion of his privilege leave under the orders of Government, and not for his own convenience, the limitation in Rule 20" of the new rules regarding leave of absence to covenanted civil servants "shall not operate in his case."

The order on the case of Mr. Bliss, I am desired to state, is confirmed.

H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to rule that when a covenanted civil servant, absent on privilege leave, is recalled to duty for the convenience of Government, he may be allowed the balance of his leave before the expiry of six months from the date of his return to duty.

SALARIES—HYDERABAD COMMISSION.

Oct. 29.—No. 1,902.—H.E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to authorise the following arrangements with reference to the revised scale of salaries sanctioned for the extra assistant commissioners of the Hyderabad Assigned Districts, in the financial resolution, No. 9,842, of May 15, 1868:—

Home.

THE LATE GALE.—The Nyanza, which left Southampton on Saturday, with the India mail, was obliged to anchor in Yarmouth-roads until Sunday morning, in consequence of the severity of the weather.

SCINDE RAILWAY.—The half-yearly meeting of the Scinde Railway (Indus Steam Flotilla, Punjab, and Delhi Railways) Company is called for the 22nd inst.

MEDALS FOR THE ABYSSINIAN CAMPAIGN.—Her Majesty has been pleased to direct that a medal be granted to the British and Indian forces who were engaged in the operations in Abyssinia. The necessary orders for the preparation of rolls have been given.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for £200,000 in bills on Calcutta and Madras took place on Wednesday, the 2nd inst., at the Bank of England. The whole amount was allotted to Calcutta. The minimum price was fixed at 1s. 11d. on both presidencies. Tenders at 1s. 11½d. will receive about 80 per cent. The result shows a rise of ½d., the demand for remittances having recently increased. In consequence of the improvement in the rate for bills on India the price of bar silver has advanced ¼d., to 5s. 0½d. per ounce.

MILITARY ITEMS.—Orders have been received at Chatham from the Horse Guards, directing one hundred non-commissioned officers and men of the 109th Bombay Regiment to be held in readiness to embark for India to join the service companies of that regiment in the Bengal Presidency. Lieutenant J. H. Campbell is ordered to embark in charge of the troops. The next embarkation of the troops relief for India from Portsmouth, via Alexandria and Suez, has been altered from the original Horse Guards programme, the 62nd Infantry taking precedence of the 6th Brigade of Royal Artillery. In accordance with this amended arrangement the 62nd will embark in the next Indian relief troopship leaving Portsmouth for Alexandria—the Serapis; and the 6th Brigade of Royal Artillery will embark in the succeeding ship from the same port—the Crocodile.

LORD NAPIER IN EGYPT.—Her Majesty's ship Endymion arrived off Alexandria on the evening of Monday, the 23rd ultimo, and Lord Napier landed early on the following morning, his lordship having previously been met on board the frigate by Colonel Stanton, C.B., Consul-general, accompanied by Vice-Consul Calvert and Secretary Cohen, together with several Egyptian officials. Lord Napier immediately proceeded by an express train for Cairo, where he was received by Mr. Reade, the consul, and by the Egyptian authorities. The Casr Moussa (the Palace of Delight) was placed at the disposal of his lordship by the Viceroy, this being the palace where the Prince of Wales resided during his last visit. On the Wednesday morning Lord Napier went in a State carriage to the Palace of the Abbasiah, in the Desert, where he was received by the Viceroy, who, surrounded by his Ministers, invested him with the Grand Cross of India. The ceremony being completed, Lord Napier witnessed from the Viceregal tent a review, in which there were about 6,000 troops of all arms on the ground. After the review lunch was provided at the Palace; and in the evening Col. Stanton gave a banquet, the day's festivities being concluded with a ball, which was kept up until a late hour. On the following day Lord Napier, who was visited by the Viceroy, intended going over the Suez Canal before leaving the country.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY.—The directors of the Peninsula and Oriental Steam Navigation Company have issued their annual report. The capital account shows a surplus of assets over liabilities to the amount of £334,316. 14s. 8d.; while the revenue account for the financial year which terminated on the 30th September last shows a net profit, after allowing for interest on debentures, reserves for insurance, and depreciation, &c., of £172,148. 15s. 2d. Deducting the dividend of 3 per cent. for the half-year ending 31st March, and a further half-year's dividend of the same amount now to be recommended, there remains a balance to be carried to the general reserve fund of £13,148. 15s. 2d. On the underwriting account there appears, after deducting the value of the steamers Nippon and Benares, a credit-balance of £30,968. 17s. 11d., which is also carried to the general reserve fund. The present amount of this fund is £334,316. 14s. 8d. The report states that the working of the contract for eight months has left the directors in the position of having to claim from Government the full proportion of the sum of £100,000, to which the company is entitled when the fund accruing for dividend falls below the amount required for the payment of 6 per cent. on the capital employed. The result affords, it is stated, a striking proof of the accuracy of the estimates upon which the directors based their tender for the service. The operations of the present year are spoken of favourably compared with those of last, as, instead of a loss of £177,000, which was the case in 1867, an available profit of £172,000 has been made during 1868. A considerable portion of this is due to the Abyssinian transport service; but the number of passengers by the company's steamers was never larger than during the last twelve months. The want of specie freight to the East, however, is still lamented. The report concludes by recommending a dividend of 3 per cent. for the six months ending 30th September last—making, with that declared in June, 6 per cent. per annum.

THE NEW OOMRAWUTTEE COTTON CROP.—The first of the new Oomrawuttee cotton crop appeared in the Oomrawuttee market on Friday last, the 6th instant. This is fully a month earlier than last year. In another week or so considerable quantities will be coming into market, and the season fairly commenced. The few bales which came in on Friday were of very fair quality, and quite up to the average of last season. They were secured by the Mofussil Press and Ginning Company.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

NATURE'S MONITOR.—Pain, though hard to bear, is evidently necessary for our safety: wanting it, disorder would become disease without our knowledge; death would end the scene ere danger was discovered. Suffering is the indicator of some disorder or disease, and should never be neglected, for the pain of to-day may prove the agony of to-morrow. Holloway's medicines stand pre-eminently forward, and are everywhere commended, for quickly removing all maladies when the least uneasiness has discovered their seat and kind. These remedies so purify the blood and regulate its circulation that every organ acts perfectly, and every secretion is natural, which is health, and may be secured by every invalid at a trifling outlay.

SARSAPARILLA.

WILKINSON'S (late Bridge's)
ESSENCE or FLUID EXTRACT OF RED
JAMAICA SARSAPARILLA, prescribed by the Faculty for purifying the blood, debility, liver complaints, and freeing the system from the effects of mercury. Exclusively used in India and the Colonies as a prevention to tropical diseases.

"Superior preparation that may always be relied upon."—Sir Astley Cooper.

"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.
"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—Medical Review.

Sold in quarter, half, and pint bottles.

CAUTION.—Many spurious, worthless, and injurious
preparations are offered to the public. See that both bottle and label have the name and address.

QUINTESSANCE OF JAMAICA GINGER AND CAMOMILE.

WILKINSON'S PREPARATION OF GINGER and
CAMOMILE has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine. It is a most efficient stomachic tonic, and the best remedy for flatulency and disorders arising from impaired digestion.

It is not affected by climate.
No European in India or tropical countries should be without it.

Sold in one-eighth, quarter, and half-pint bottles.

AROMATIC TINCTURE OF QUINOIDINE.

For the Prevention of Fever, Ague, and effects of Malaria. An unfailing remedy. It may be mentioned that those who, during the campaign in the Crimea, daily took a small quantity, passed entirely unharmed through the raking fire of fever and dysentery that thinned the ranks around them.

Sold in half and quarter-pint bottles.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED
STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No
chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body."

It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation
of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent
Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed
not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft
and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection
impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell.
Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. WEBB'S residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free
by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL
LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER
TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great
Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite
resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, November 21; Agra, November 17; Calcutta and Madras, November 16.

A whole batch of official papers regarding the Hazara campaign has come to hand. First of all in point of dignity comes the Viceroy's General Order thanking everybody concerned for the results of his successful labours. General Wilde of course is specially praised for the "excellent judgment" which brought his "great experience of hill warfare" to bear with such telling effect on the border tribes, who will doubtless learn that even in their remotest fastnesses they cannot henceforth escape punishment. Lieut.-colonel Rothney earns merited notice for his prompt move upon Oghie and his resolute conduct there. And the troops in general are commended as they ought to be for having shown "some of the best qualities of soldiers by their discipline, their cheerfulness, and their active and willing exertions under all circumstances." The Nawab of Umb gets thanked for "the prompt and gallant aid" rendered by himself and his retainers. A few words are reserved for the police and the levies, and "the troops of the Maharajah of Cashmere" bring up the rear of this verbal pageant.

SIR W. MANSFIELD's despatch comes next, telling us how the original plan of sending troops from Peshawar to the scene of disturbance was exchanged for the process of forwarding troops from the rear stations of the Punjab and the North-West, when it was found that matters looked doubtful for our interests in the country of the Akhoond. On another object which he had in view, the frightening of the tribes by an overwhelming show of strength, the Commander-in-Chief believed he had "the happiness to be in complete accord with" the Viceroy and the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab. Only in this way can protracted hill-campaigns to his thinking be avoided, with all their consequent risks and losses, including the "loss of prestige along the border." It is impossible, he thinks, to exaggerate in terms the alacrity of officers and men in marching forward through "the deadly heats of August and September," or the efficiency of the Commissariat, aided by the civil officers, in the work of concentration. "The spectacle has been seen of British troops, European and native, operating over and among mountains 10,000 feet high, in bivouac for three weeks, the General in command himself being without a tent." We are further told that "the English regiments moved as easily and with as little incumbrance as the native," that the rations were always up to time, that the health of the troops was good, and that the great lesson of moving lightly in mountain warfare has thus been learnt. Sir William finally compliments General Wilde on the skill and completeness of his arrangements for taking the passes and holding the Machai Peak. Great forbearance was shown in the punishments afterwards inflicted, the Pararie Syuds alone suffering heavily for their obstinacy; and meanwhile the tribes of Hazara have learnt that our regular forces, with trains of ordnance, can pierce fastnesses "never approached by the native predecessors of the British Government." After specially naming all the more prominent coadjutors of General Wilde, the Commander-in-Chief remarks admiringly on the readiness of all arms for active service "after long years of peace," as if they "were just emerging from a general campaign." For which result the thanks of the Government are due, he thinks, to the commanding officers and heads of departments.

In a series of despatches General Wilde details the progress of his troops during the three weeks' campaign. The results are thus summed up in his despatch of October 26:—The force traversed eighty miles of country, through which it made its own roads and carried its own supplies. Whenever a shot was fired or an insult offered, punishment was at once inflicted. Three Pathan and three Swattie tribes were brought to terms. The Pararie Syuds were signally punished, and one of their chief leaders forced to sue for peace. The independent Swatties had to pay Rs. 12,000 to the British Government for their misdeeds, and one of their most honoured chiefs "paid his respects to the Commissioner" in token of his countrymen's helplessness against their conquerors. General Wilde further remarks that the British troops, saving the one blanket carried for each man, fared like the natives, and required no more carriage for their food. Not a murmur did he hear throughout the campaign. In another despatch General Wilde points out that to have made the expulsion of the Hindustani refugees a condition of peace with the Chuggurzais, would only have prolonged the war to no purpose, in the absence of means for cutting off their retreat. The Pathans however have refused them an asylum, and their end as a colony is probably near.

ACCORDING to the official returns the losses on our side during the late struggle were, two Europeans wounded, thirteen natives, including police and levies, killed, and forty-nine wounded between the 30th July and the 2nd October. After General Wilde's advance down to the end of the campaign—that is, from the 3rd to the 22nd October—one officer was wounded, seven natives were killed and thirty-five hurt, two of them mortally. The immunity of our own countrymen is curious. General Wilde dwells with evident heartiness on the signal services of Lieutenant-colonel A. D. Dickens, head of the field commissariat, of Lieutenant-colonel Johnstone of the Survey Department, and of Lieutenant-colonel Rothney, commanding the 5th Ghorkas. Some other names, including that of Lieutenant-colonel Atlay, who had charge of the field ordnance, are duly brought to the notice of the Commander-in-Chief. On the whole, the authorities seem more than pleased with the way in which every arrangement was planned and carried out.

A CALCUTTA telegram of November 20, transmitted by the last mail from Bombay, makes brief mention of the cyclone in the Bay of Bengal and the damage done by it on the Arracan coast. The storm must have travelled by Madras, for the surf there was reported as tremendous, and the Nubia, due at Calcutta on the 9th, only made her appearance on the 14th November. By the same telegram we learn that Sir John Lawrence reached Calcutta on the 18th, and that Rajpootana was already in the throes of famine.

THE reports from the famine-threatened provinces are as gloomy as any one could expect. Rajpootana is far beyond hope, and the Punjab has no cheering news to send. In many districts the khareef or autumn crops are quite lost, and for want of rain the time for the rubbee sowings was fast slipping by. Even Bengal was growing uneasy. In all but one district of the Bhagulpoore Division, the crops were suffering from want of rain. Similar complaints reach us from the Dacca and Patna Divisions, from Midnapore, Chittagong, and Cooch Behar. The Presidency Division, where the rainfall was heaviest, sends the most hopeful news, yet even there we find a black spot in the twenty-four Pergunnahs. From the Central Provinces we learn that the khareef crop is not much below the average, but the prospects of the rubbee are still uncertain. In the North-West Provinces the worst of the drought extends over the divisions of Meerut, Rohilkund, Agra, and Jhansie. Large numbers of natives are already at work on canals, tanks, and other works in Bundelkund and the North-West.

MISS CARPENTER has been heartily welcomed by all classes in Bombay. Her letter to the Government on the subject of Normal Schools was backed by an earnest memorial from thirty of the leading native gentlemen in Bombay. In reply, Sir S. Fitzgerald accepts her offers of aid, "with a warm appreciation of the spirit" in which she makes them, politely evades compliance with some of her requests on the plea of deficient means, and places at her disposal a suitable residence for herself and her training mistress, with class rooms added for the English ladies who mean to qualify themselves for teaching their native sisters. A like institution will be started at Ahmedabad, under one of Miss Carpenter's colleagues. To the Bombay school fifteen, to the one at Ahmedabad ten scholarships will be attached, most of which will be held by native candidates. At Bombay the pupils will learn English as well as the native tongues. One good feature of this new move for educating the women of India is the zeal with which it has been taken up by the natives themselves, in which term we are glad to include not Parsees only, but Hindoos and Mohammedans.

ACCORDING to Colonel Hyde's Report on the Indian Currency the issues for all India have risen from $3\frac{1}{2}$ millions sterling in 1862 to $9\frac{1}{4}$ millions in the present year. During that time, in spite of commercial mishaps, the paper currency of Bombay has risen from $1\frac{1}{2}$ to $4\frac{1}{2}$ millions, while the increase in Calcutta shows only the difference between $2\frac{1}{2}$ and 3 millions. Poor Madras takes little more than half a million even now. Bombay has added a full million to her account since the crisis of 1865. Of the circles in the interior, where the increase has not of course been so great, the most successful have been those of Allahabad, Lahore, Kurrachee, and Nagpore. The circles in Southern India have as yet been "comparative failures."

ACCORDING to the Friend of India the Mysore accounts, about whose publication so many complaints have been made, were given to the world against the Viceroy's wish, through "the mistake of a subordinate official." With regard to Major Bell's own quarrel with the Friend, that journal repeats its former statement that Major Bell long passed even among his friends as a disinterested advocate of native princes, and declares that even two or three years ago such a belief was very general.

WE had some pretty hot weather in England last July and August, and "Indian heat" was the idea that phrased itself on many a tongue. But a report on the Punjab for 1866 now lies before us, a page or two of which would help English readers to realise the difference between Indian and English heat. Observations taken at a dozen different stations in the Punjab bear out some remarks we made last summer on this very topic. Mooltan, for instance, which is nearly as hot as Sukkur, shows in the sun on the 15th June a temperature of 177.5. On the same day the thermometer in the shade rose to 116 degrees. The lowest temperature in the sun was 120 degrees on two days of December. At Peshawar, which is a good deal cooler on the whole than Mooltan, the highest temperature in the sun was still 170 and the lowest 108 degrees, which was also the highest figure marked by the thermometer in the shade. At Rawal Pindi, a pleasant place for India, the thermometer marked 166 degrees in the sun in June, but fell to 94 degrees in December. In the shade the temperature varied from 20 degrees in December to 124 degrees in June! Sealkote is a fine healthy station for English troops, yet even there the thermometer in the sun ranged from 89 to 155 degrees, and once rose in the shade to 124 degrees. At Jalundhar again the temperature varied from 92 to 161.5 degrees in the sun, and from 33 to 119 degrees in the shade. The thermometer at Lahore marked 117 degrees in the shade for three days in May. The only place quoted that reminds one of English heat is Srinuggur, where 90 degrees was the highest temperature recorded in the shade. Even there the sun's full power would be many degrees greater than in England; but the full returns are not given. At Dera Ismael Khan, on the other hand, the thermometer in the shade ranged from 120 down to 29 degrees. It would be interesting to compare these statistics with those for Sindh, the North-West Provinces, and the really tropical latitudes of Madras and Bombay. The greatest heat would be found outside the tropics. The rainfall in the Punjab for that year varied from 28.86 inches at Sealkote to 0.94 inches at Dera Ismael Khan. At Mooltan no more than 3.90 inches fell, against 24.40 at Jalundhar.

THE Secretary of State for India has sanctioned as a special case, in the absence of rolls from India, payment of donation batta for service in Abyssinia to such officers of the Indian army as are now in this country.

THE changes in the staff of the India Office have all been completed since our last issue. In Mr. Grant Duff, the new Minister for India should find an able Under-Secretary for the departmental work, and a very intelligent expounder of his Indian policy in the Lower House. The remaining appointments are as follows:—

Private Secretary to the Duke of Argyll ...	Mr. W. H. Benthall.
Assistant Private Secretary and Precis
Writer	Mr. H. Hill.
Assistant Precis Writer	Mr. Edmund Neil.
Private Secretary to Mr. Grant Duff ...	Mr. W. Neville Sturt.

THE P. and O. Company's steamers Delta and Poonah are due, the former at Marseilles on the night of the 18th, the latter at Southampton about the 26th December.

MADRAS MILITARY FUND.

WE regret to state that, after mature consideration, the Secretary of State for India has decided that it is impossible to allow all daughters to revert to pension upon becoming widows without cancelling some of the concessions already granted, as these exhausted the available surplus assets. We understand however that the surplus should have been supplemented by some compensation for the losses sustained by the fund, consequent upon the amalgamation of the services, such as the cessation of new subscribers, the early retirement of many officers upon extra pension, and the removal of the new line regiments from India. It is possible legal advice will be obtained upon these points, as also whether the guarantee in the Act transferring the fund to the Crown, did not provide that the surplus should be distributed as nearly as possible pro rata, instead of to a class of subscribers, as is the case by the abolition of the minimum, and the re-admission when widows of daughters hereafter born. If so, the Indian Council will not have heard the last of the Madras Military Fund grievances.

TELEGRAPHS TO INDIA.

MR. SIEMENS' answer to Sir James Anderson, touching the relative merits of an overland telegraph and a submarine cable to India, may serve as a very good defence of lines already worked or in course of making. The objections made to his own particular line by Teheran and Russia, on the score of interruptions by lightning, icicles, cobwebs, and ill-disposed nomads, may be set down as of little worth. Proper instruments and disciplined overseers would reduce three out of the four drawbacks to a mere nothing; and as for human enemies, it is satisfactory to learn from Mr. Siemens that the chiefs in the wild country between Fao and Bagdad are "very moderate" in their demands, and "discharge their obligations as protectors most faithfully;" to such effect indeed that no "line in Asiatic Turkey has been less subject to interruption than that between" the two places aforesaid. We should like however to know a little more on this point. Freedom from interruption is a comparative merit. In a spot haunted by brigands one or two robberies a day may be matter for thanksgiving. We do not wish to believe that the line from Fao to Bagdad is frequently damaged by ignorant or ill-disposed neighbours; but the tu quoque retort by Mr. Siemens that sea lines are just as liable to interruption as land lines merely begs the whole question. He is more to the point in stating as the results of his own experience touching the Persian climate, the fact that of fifty English telegraphers resident in Persia during the last five years one only has died, "and that from natural causes;" nor has any case of personal injury from violence been recorded.

With regard to the paying character of these overland lines, the Chairman of the Indo-Turkish Company may be left to fight his own battles with the director of the Anglo-Mediterranean line. Sir James Anderson's estimate may be "greatly exaggerated," and Mr. Champain will doubtless do his best to correct it; but anyhow the fact remains that some part or another of the Indo-Turkish line is continually breaking, that the delays and blunders in forwarding messages have made merchants shy of using it more than they can help, and that all this must have told injuriously on the financial outcome. The Indian Government ought to know something on this point; and Sir J. Lawrence, writing last February to Sir S. Northcote, saw "reason to believe that the proceeds of the existing line, and the total income derived from the communication, will not much more than suffice to pay for that line alone."

The question of profit however has little actual bearing on the case at issue between land and sea lines to India. It might of course be argued that, with one land-line working and another in process of construction, a third line whether by sea or land would never pay its own expenses. We think the argument starts from false assumptions and imperfect experience; but let that pass. The first and main point for practical consideration is political rather than financial. Ought not England to keep up one line at least of telegraph, whose maintenance would not largely depend on her relations with any foreign Power? At present any failure of the Turkish line, itself badly worked and dependent on the carelessness of a weak ally, would throw her back on the line that runs through Persian and Russian ground. What an agreeable prospect for our statesmen and merchants in the event of a Russian or Persian war! But a sub-marine cable between the two countries would avoid all risks of that kind. We need not have it all at once. A million sterling would more than suffice to lay a new cable from Suez to Bombay by Aden, Muscat, Gwadar, and Kurachee. From Alexandria to Suez, as the Times observes, "is only a few miles, and the territory of the Viceroy of Egypt is as completely neutralised as any portion of the globe." From Alexandria the existing cables to France and Italy would ensure us a pretty safe line through Europe, until it might become possible to lay down a separate cable from Falmouth to Alexandria by Gibraltar. For the present however a Red Sea line would supply the missing link between Suez and our possessions in the East; and modern science is surely equal to any demands which the coral reefs on the way might make upon its inventive powers. Will no public or private body set to work on such an enterprise?

MORE ABOUT THE KIRWEE PRIZE MONEY.

THERE seems to be no end to the controversies raised by the precious plunder which the capture of Banda and Kirwee threw into the hands of Sir George Whitlock's little force. It took many years to decide the knotty question between how many claimants the plunder should be divided. How the eagles gathered and fought over the carcase according to the wont of such birds, we all remember; and a very pretty share of the pickings fell to the legal cormorants who joined in the fun. The auri sacra flammæ could not help showing itself in the case of so rich a prize. After all deductions however a splendid balance remained over for division among the successful claimants, whose good fortune, if it came late to some of them, was still by no means to be despised.

The exact amount of the balance indeed has yet to be finally declared. Out of the seventy lakhs at which it was reckoned in 1864, it seems that the Indian Government would very much like to keep back at least fourteen lakhs, or £140,000, on their own account. That sum represents the whole or the greater part of the Government promissory notes once held by the rebellious chiefs of Kirwee. It is pleaded on the one hand that the property represented by these notes is naturally forfeit to the public debtor, while the Prize Committee on the other claim it as a natural part of the prize awarded by the Crown to its troops. No doubt the Indian Government would very much like to wipe out so large a portion of the public debt, and will be very loath to admit the counter claims of the Prize Committee. But we have a strong suspicion that the law is against them. It is very hard that their opponents will not be reasonable enough to spare them a fourth or so of the richest booty divisible for many years past. But where so much money is at stake, how can any one look for reason or self-denial? The troops concerned want the money, the whole money, and will take nothing short of their just due. They feel themselves manifestly entitled to the full pound of flesh; and a Briton standing upon his rights is a very Shylock. No plea of compassion will tempt him to swerve an inch from his demands. If all the world were against him, he would still

"crave the law,
The penalty and forfeit of his bond."

And the law apparently is on his side in this matter. An opinion, signed by five eminent lawyers, finds ample precedent for the claims of the Prize Committee in the similar instances of Chinsurah, Bordeaux, Poonah, and the Rajah of Coorg. In all these cases the debts of the conquered enemy formed part of the prize. The Peishwar's deposits at Bombay shared the same fate as the property captured in Poonah. But how about the true relations existing between the rebel chiefs of Kirwee and the Indian Government? That question was virtually settled by the proceedings of the Indian Government during the Mutiny. In more than one proclamation Lord Canning declared that all property taken from rebels, save only the recaptured effects of loyal persons, would be subject to the usual laws of prize. It is true that by an earlier decree "the property and effects of all persons amenable to the articles of war for the native army, guilty of mutiny," were declared "forfeit." But the chiefs of Kirwee were no mutineers, and the notification of January 7, 1858, merely announced the "stopping" of their notes in the Accountant-General's Office, and warned all persons against "taking or purchasing the same." Lord Halifax in the same spirit assured his hearers in Parliament that the booty captured in India would be distributed as lawful prize.

But all doubts on the legal relation between rebels and their rulers are dispelled, one would think, by reference to the practice of our own and other countries in similar cases. During the revolt of our American colonies in 1776 Parliament declared the movable property of the insurgents "forfeited as if the same were the goods and effects of open enemies." A subsequent attempt of the English Exchequer to obtain for civil purposes the plunder found in a captured American vessel, was defeated by the Court of Admiralty, which awarded the property to the Crown as prize of war. On the same principle General Grant's old troops are now drawing prize money on account of property taken in the Southern States of the Union during the late struggle.

We need not revert to older precedents of a less civilised age. It may be that the existing laws of war need some fresh revision in harmony with other practises of a more enlightened era. But certainly, while those laws remain in force, we must allow that, in respect of this Kirwee booty, the troops that claim it all have law and justice on their side. The whole question indeed was fully argued by the law officers of Lord Palmerston's Government, and that shrewd nobleman's reluctant concession of the whole claim ought, we think, to have stopped all further contention. From the Indian Government the matter has now passed, we believe, under the consideration of the India-office, whence we hope it may issue in a form satisfactory to all concerned.

CLAIMANTS FOR JUSTICE.

We are glad to see that the bulk of officers in the new line regiments still look forward with perfect satisfaction to the day when their promised turn of service out of India shall have become a downright certainty. Whether a term of garrison duty at home will find them equally satisfied at the end of it, is of course another question. But there seems no doubt that if the long-promised arrangement had not begun to be fulfilled by the despatch to England of the 101st Fusiliers, the balance of discontent would have greatly preponderated on the side of those whose expectations of a pleasant change of scene would have been thereby turned to naught. There is however a small minority to whom the prospect of home service on English pay brings with it anything but delightful reflections. With their complaints the press of both countries has for some time past been resounding; and the case they make out for themselves is certainly one to which the home authorities should not too readily turn a deaf ear.

The substance of their complaint is shortly this. When the process of amalgamating the Queen's and Company's armies was in course of completion, these officers were led to volunteer for the new Royal service, under the impression, which then seemed well founded, that no other choice was left them. Debarred by the conditions of service in the new Staff Corps from entering therein, and hopeless of assured employment as locals, they fell back on "Hobson's choice," and took service in the line. One loophole of future advantage seemed open to them in the Royal warrant of January, 1861, which declared them eligible under certain conditions for the Staff Corps. But even that gleam of hope was to prove a mockery.

In 1866 however a new day seemed to dawn for all who had suffered by the previous misarrangements. In August of that year Lord Cranborne from his place in Parliament gave out that all officers of the Indian army before the amalgamation should be free to re-elect for service in the Staff Corps without test or condition. Lord Cranworth's Commission had already condemned the Warrant of 1861 as a breach of the privileges guaranteed in 1868. Unluckily the new concession was found in practice to exclude some of those who had best right to profit by it. Lord Cranborne's despatch of 8th August announced that "all officers of the Cavalry and Infantry, with the exception of those who entered upon the new conditions of service, and are borne upon a general list, will be allowed to enter the Staff Corps of their respective Presidencies . . . without being subjected to previous examination." It was thus decided that what was sauce for the goose should not be sauce for the gander; and a number of officers who had volunteered under misleading circumstances for general service were forbidden to retrace their steps by the path so tardily reopened to their luckier comrades. Some of them indeed might still hope to struggle through many hindrances into the new land of promise; but that last chance was quenched for ever by an order of last year, which shut the doors of the Staff on all officers of more than seven years' standing.

The result is that many officers—we know not the exact number—are left to choose between the discomforts of home service on English pay, and the resignation of their commissions at any cost. It is easy to say that they are welcome to choose, that having volunteered in haste they are free to repent at leisure, and that a surfeit of old officers already afflicts the Staff Corps. In Sir C. Wood's off-hand language it might be argued that these officers made "a free election" in 1861. But all that is mere sophistry and verbal dust-throwing, in view of the fact that other officers who made their free election in 1861 were invited to reconsider the question in 1866. Is it or is it not true that the orders issued in 1866 were meant to remedy the injustice caused by the arrangements of five years before? And is it or is it not certain that among the victims of that injustice were many officers of the Artillery and the Line, who had either been transferred without their consent, or had been led by false appearances to volunteer for the new regiments? If these points are beyond a doubt, why in the name of common sense and fairness were not these sufferers also allowed full freedom to reconsider their choice? They had ceased to be Indian officers, we are told. But that is a simple begging of the whole question. Between 1861 and 1866 they certainly formed no part of the Indian Army. But the very essence of the changes made in 1866 was to ignore the work of the past five years, and to resuscitate for all who needed it the military conditions of 1861. They had no meaning at all, if they did not mean that all officers of the old Indian army were free to start afresh from the point at which they had diverged five years before.

It is not too late yet to repair the injustice already done in this matter. The complainants in question are not unreasonable. They ask only for the same freedom to choose again, which their brethren of the local service were allowed to exercise two years ago. Let them, if they like, be free to enter the Staff Corps on easy conditions, or at least to fall back on their old paper regiments, and the consequent certainty of pay sufficient to keep them and their families from starving. Such a concession will surely hurt nobody, while a certain number of deserving officers would have no further excuse for complaining of unredressed wrongs. A powerful government can well afford to be just.

MADRAS MILITARY FUND.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

DEAR SIR,—We have been requested by General Sir H. G. A. Taylor, K.C.B., late Chairman of the Home Committee of the Madras Military Fund, to give publicity to the enclosed letter from the Under-Secretary of State for India, and we cannot do this better than by requesting you to publish it in your next number.—Yours faithfully, GRINDLAY AND CO.

55, Parliament-street, S.W., London,
9th December, 1868.

India-office, S.W., 8th December, 1868.

SIR,—With reference to the memorial signed by subscribers and widows and daughters of subscribers to the Madras Military Fund, and forwarded by you, I am directed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to inform you that the subject of that memorial has received his attentive consideration. Sir Stafford Northcote regrets that without cancelling concessions already made, there exists no surplus from which provision can be made for allowing all daughters on becoming widows to revert to their former pensions.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant,

HERMAN MERIVALE.

Major-general Sir H. Taylor, K.C.B., &c., &c.

MONEY ORDERS IN INDIA.

The Madras Times has no hesitation in expressing its conviction that there can hardly be too many offices in this Presidency, whatever may be the state of things in others. Every village, with a few exceptions here and there, is supplied with a staff of responsible Government officials, who are thoroughly conversant with the ordinary modes of keeping accounts, and are trusted with the temporary custody of considerable sums of money. Almost every town of any local importance is the head quarters of a Tahsildar, or, at all events, of some officer of position and standing; and all officials whose duty it is to collect and receive money, communicate more or less directly with the collector of the district. Here, then, we have ready to hand a long-established and in many ways most efficient machinery for the distribution of money, and all that is needed is to frame rules in such a manner as to avoid confusion. As we said before, the very existence of the system is as yet but little known, and therefore it would be premature to judge from results hitherto obtained of the probable extent to which the natives will make use of money-order offices. But, no doubt, it will gradually become very considerable. The "hundred and fifty millions" must necessarily send innumerable small sums of money to and fro over the country, and when once they have realised the fact that they can send such sums whither they please with great expedition and absolute safety, common sense will lead them to use money-orders on all occasions. In order to ascertain whether or not this is likely to be the case, we would suggest the advisability of trying an experiment in one of the richest and most compact districts, say Tanjore. Let twenty or thirty money-order offices be opened in the principal towns and villages, and let the revenue authorities be instructed to advertise everywhere the fact that for a very small consideration

Government are willing to receive any sum of money, however small, and pay it within a day or two to any person named by the depositor. If, as we firmly believe it would be, the plan was found to succeed, in the course of two or three years it might be extended to all or most of the other districts. With regard to the question of reducing the rates demanded for the transmission of money, we think that the scale varying from 1½ to 1 1-16 now in use is certainly too high. As the Government of India observe, it is, no doubt, desirable that the banking operations of the country should not be interfered with, and therefore there is a prima facie objection to sending money for less than the Sowkars find it profitable to send it. But it must be borne in mind that the very object of establishing money-order offices is to supply a want which the Sowkars do not supply, and probably if small sums were conveyed by Government free of all charge, the native bankers would suffer inappreciably, or not at all. This consideration, therefore, need not deter Government from lowering their rates, and it only remains to be considered whether there are any financial objections to so doing. If, as we think probable, lowering the rates will induce many senders of money to have recourse to the offices, the extra business will soon reimburse Government for the immediate loss in receipts. But why should the expensive system of employing agents to transact money-order business be continued? An extra clerk in the Tahsildar's kutchery would do the work just as well on twelve rupees per mensem, and would be useful to the Tahsildar when not so employed; and in large villages the Kurnam would be available. Not only would this system be cheaper, but it would doubtless be more popular with the people. They place great confidence in Government treasuries, and many a man would lodge money with the Tahsildar or with the Kurnam who would fight shy of a money-order agent, however gorgeous that gentleman's gold turban and numerous pocket-handkerchiefs may be.

THE THEORY OF ANNEXATION.

The Indian Daily News remarks that plain-spoken people are in the habit of saying that, moral or immoral, it is a practical fact that the greatest boon which can befall a native territory is that it be annexed to British dominion—or, in other words, passed under British administration. Law, they urge, thus gets itself better administered; taxation is lower; tyranny is discountenanced by every elaborate means a Government can hit upon; education is higher; trade less fettered; and the population becomes very much more enlightened; and, although perhaps nobody really wants them, they hold that the inhabitants of the Gackwarate, the Nazamate, Cashmere, and other similarly situated people, are very much to be pitied that an over-scrupulosity has preserved them from passing beneath our rule. Without going into this discussion further, we only desire to point out that the policy which has withdrawn from ill-ruling native princes the wholesome check which the dread of absorption once imposed upon them is clearly responsible for the at least decent administration of regions by their rulers, over which those rulers have been mostly placed, and are firmly secured in their control of, by our own aid. Take up the Gazetteer, and note the military force which the Gackwar and the British Government between them maintain, to do what? To defend the former against the latter? Or, rather, is it to prevent his subjects from failing to appreciate the blessings of native rule? The Gackwar, we contend, being a puppet of our own supporting, should be compelled to rule in a manner that will not discredit that support. Now, does he? Is he extravagant—foolishly, childishly extravagant? Does he foster by his example an attachment to gross and extremely costly superstitions? Is justice well administered? Are taxes five and even six times higher under his rule than under ours upon corresponding items of taxation—land for example? Is dastoorie the rule among his officials? Are his accounts ever investigated? And is an imbecile extravagance (thousands, for example, spent upon a pigeon mating and such like absurdities) sternly rebuked by the Resident? If not, why not? Finally, could he maintain himself without our influence? And if he could not, what is the implication?

THE GREAT MUSSULMAN CONSPIRACY.

The Friend of India has reason to believe that there has been laid before the Government of Bengal and of India very startling evidence of a Mussulman conspiracy having its ramifications spread all over Bengal north and east of the Ganges, if not farther. We use this language deliberately. As the Jews looked forward to the coming of the Deliverer who should drive out the Romans and not only restore to them independence in their own land but give them the mastery of the world, so the Mussulmans of India are filled with a longing and a faith, more or less vague according to the sect which they favour, that their Imam is to appear in the West to give them the government of Asia. At least from Patna to Dacca there is hardly a mosque in which the Jihad, the crescentade, is not preached; and every good Mussulman is urged either himself to become a Mojahideen or crescentador, or to contribute of his substance for the holy cause. All classes are appealed to, and with general success. The landholder, the shopkeeper, the artisan, the peasant, and the poor labourer are fed, not so much by the regular preachers in the mosques as by the itinerant Wahabees, with visions

Bengal.

THE INDIAN CROPS.

PUNJAB.—The official reports from the Punjab on the state of the crops grow worse and worse. The last published are to 25th October. From every division and district in the province, except Peshawur, the khureef crop was reported as lost, and the rubbee remained unsown for want of rain. Emigration from Marwar, Bikaneer, and the several States of Rajpootana had set in regularly towards Sirsa and the districts near Delhi. The price of grain does not seem to vary much in any of the districts—wheat ranging from ten and a-half to fifteen seers the rupee, the average price being about twelve seers' throughout the province.—Pioneer, Nov. 11.

CENTRAL PROVINCES.—Judging from the official reports published in the Central Provinces Gazette, the khureef crop can hardly be said to be below the average. The reports from eight districts are good, from seven indifferent or bad, and from four no remarks are made with regard to the condition of the crops. The prospects of the rubbee appear to be still uncertain, although the reports from the majority of the districts are encouraging. Cholera had disappeared from every district except Saugor; but fever, the real scourge of the Central Provinces, was prevalent almost everywhere.—Pioneer, Nov. 13.

BENGAL.—The reports on the state of the crops in Bengal up to the end of October would have been on the whole satisfactory, were it not for the telegram from Bhaugulpore, which is added as a postscript, and which tends to dissipate the hopes raised by the previous favourable accounts. This telegram says that the crops everywhere in that division, except in Purneah, had suffered much from want of rain, but that "no serious distress was apprehended anywhere for two or three months." Now, we also find that in the Midnapore district, in Chittagong, in parts of Hazareebaugh and Cooch Behar, as well as in the Dacca and Patna divisions, the same want of rain is mentioned, and that in the latter division the Commissioner has already called upon the collectors to prepare schemes for affording relief. As we have not heard of any rain having fallen in these districts since the end of October, we may presume that the prospects have not improved, and may therefore prepare ourselves to hear of suffering in many parts of Bengal. In the Presidency division the prospects are generally good, with the exceptions of the submerged tract in the 24-Pergunnahs, where relief measures are already in operation.—Englishman, Nov. 12.

KHANDAIS.—The cereal crops in Khandeish are suffering from drought. It is usual at this time of year for heavy dews to fall at night; during the present season, however, this has not been the case, and in consequence it is feared that the crops will not yield more than eight annas in the rupee.

THE DECCAN.—We hear from Hyderabad that the Sowcars of the city have been advised from Berar of the failure of the cotton crop, in consequence of the want of rain. The out-turn, it is estimated, will be less than half the usual quantity. Grain is rising also week by week, both in the Berar and Nagpore markets. The famine in Rajpootana extends across the Nerbudda river, but south of that stream it is partial only in its effects. The contingent regiments have begun to march in relief. At Aurungabad, Mominabad, and Julna the rainfall up to the present has been but half the usual quantity for the year. At Hingoly, on the other hand, the fall was some inches above the average.

BOMBAY.—Various famine works have been ordered in the Ahmedabad collectorate.—Englishman.

STATION TALK.

NAGPORE, Nov. 4.—The weather is gradually getting colder, but not a drop of rain has fallen during the past week. There is hope of the cotton harvest down south being a fair one, but in most of the northern districts the crop is a failure to some extent. The rich harvest, as I have already said, will be even poorer than was anticipated in some districts, from which I have learnt that the people, despairing for rain, turned their cattle into the fields and let them graze on the standing crops, there being no grain in the ear. We must really have heavy winter rains to tide over distress, as the wells, tanks and streams are running dry; and in many hilly parts the worst fears are entertained for the supply of water sufficient to meet the wants of villagers until the next monsoons; for the winter showers in these parts do not contribute much towards the drinking supply. Importations of grain from the cheaper to the dearer districts is going on, and prices of the edible grains are naturally becoming equalised. The levy of octroi on such importations has been interdicted. There has been some distress to speak of in the Chanda district already, and emigration from Bhundara towards Berar is going on. The people are fully alive as to what is required of them at such a time, and only require that the Government should remove all difficulties from the course of their proceedings; and Mr. Morris is even doing more for them by facilitating the spontaneous action of the people to avert distress. The Sanitary Commissioner has been started off on a tour, to see that sanitation is being properly observed, and that everything is done to prevent epidemic disease accompanying general of the immediate coming of the Deliverer who is to appear in glory on the mountain tops of the North-West, on that Mahabun where the Aryans first rested on their march, and lead all those who are so blessed as to be there waiting his coming, to victory over the infidel here and sensuous delights hereafter. With such dreams many classes of Mussulmans in Behar and Northern and Eastern Bengal are filled. For years they have been contributing their means for this purpose. A regular rate of taxation is laid down by the leaders and cheerfully accepted by the people. The poorest set aside one handful of rice for the holy war when they proceed to cook their daily meal, and every week the grain is taken to the mosque, where it is sold from time to time to recruit the Jehadees' treasury on the frontier. The more respectable classes contribute their two seers of wheat, at fixed times, or pay the equivalent in money at the market rate of the day. The rich landholder and trader pays his 2½ per cent. on the strict principle of an income-tax. The most dangerous feature in the whole organisation is one which, appearing for the first time, appeals to the simplest peasants, however little of fanatics they may be. It is the promise earnestly preached, and the belief now general, that the great Deliverer will, after breaking the infidel yoke, free every Mussulman from the land-tax and exact it only from the Hindoos. No language can too strongly express the danger involved in this. We have allowed the masses to remain in ignorance; their one lust is the lust of land, and if that belief spreads 'Fifty-seven will be child's play to the consequences. Our power will remain stable, but we rule at least thirty millions of Mussulmans, and we might be driven to appeal to Hindoos as equally threatened with ourselves.

DEPARTURE OF TROOPS FOR ENGLAND.—The troopship Junna left for Suez on Nov. 16. Her passengers included forty-four officers, six officers' wives, and thirteen children, six second class passengers, thirteen staff sergeants, eleven wives and eighteen children of ditto, 862 non-commissioned officers and men, sixty-two wives, and 126 children of ditto. The troops include the head-quarters, and 6th Battery 21st Brigade R.A., Aden, Kurrachee, Bengal, Poona, Bombay, and Madras details.

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS FROM ENGLAND.—H.M.'s Indian troopship Euphrates arrived at Bombay on the 13th of November, bringing 61 officers, 11 ladies, and about 1,150 soldiers, women, and children. The following are the several detachments, with the names of their respective destinations:—For Deolalee.—1-14 Foot: 37 officers, 9 ladies, 11 children, 1 schoolmistress and child, 791 non-commissioned rank and file, 82 wives, 66 children, and 7 female servants—including drafts 39 men, 15 women, and 7 children. Royal Artillery: 4 officers, 1 lady and child, and 13 men. 21st Hussars: 1 staff sergeant, wife and child. 26th Cameronians: 1 officer, 62 men, 9 wives, and 11 children. 103rd Foot: 2 officers, 1 lady, 80 men, 6 wives, and 9 children. For Madras.—2-10th Foot: 1 officer and 15 men. For Kurrachee.—109th Foot: 1 staff sergeant and wife. For Bombay.—1-23rd Fusiliers: 1 man. Various Corps: 16 officers (and 1 lady) who will take their orders from the Brigade Major Bombay.

BENGAL CURRENCY DEPARTMENT.—We are glad to see that the operations of the Paper Currency Department for the past year in Bengal show almost as striking an increase in the circulation as in the North-Western Provinces. There was an increase in the issues to the extent of Rs. 14,60,463, and in the receipts to the extent of Rs. 8,23,684 over the previous year. We notice, however, that the Government were led to impose a restriction, which had not before existed, on the issue of notes for cash at surplus treasuries, it being found that the public were availing themselves largely of this means of remittance to the presidency to the inconvenience of the Government. The issues of money-orders at the same time exhibit, as in the North-Western Provinces, a large increase both in number and amount. In 1867-68 as many as 44,228 orders were issued for Rs. 26,66,671, against 36,638, and Rs. 19,49,939 in 1866-67. The number and amount of orders paid were respectively 54,534 and Rs. 31,05,322. The commission realised was Rs. 1,24,186. The total number of money-order offices in the Lower Provinces at the close of the year was 180, of which 114 were opened in 1867. The enormous defalcations, however, which occurred in the office of the Deputy Commissioner of Darjeeling seem to show that there is something defective in existing arrangements connected with this department. Measures have, it is stated in the report, been taken to render such mal-practices impracticable in future.

distress, should such a calamity come about. Apropos, I may mention that some very practical rules have recently been issued for observance by the public works, postal and other departments, who have gangs of labourers employed. These coolie colonies are the very centres of disease when epidemics are abroad; and too much attention cannot be devoted to them. On a reference recently made by Mr. Morris, the Government of India have exempted from the Pindari-tax all servants and clerks who, under Act. IX. of 1868, are exempted as such from the certificate-tax. This affects a very small class of the public, drawing low salaries, and the loss to the exchequer will therefore hardly be felt. But it is none the less to be commended. There is a rumour that, if Major Playfair should vacate the deputy commissionership of Jubbulpore, by proceeding on sick leave to England, Captain Fenton, at present Deputy Commissioner of Nagpore, will be transferred to Jubbulpore, and then Captain Brooke, who is now officiating Cantonment Magistrate of Kamptee, will get the Nagpore district. Two deputy commissionerships will shortly fall vacant—those of Hoshungabad and Seonic—as Colonels Crichton and Dennys are going home. Captain Plowden, officiating Cantonment Magistrate of Jubbulpore, has been here to see the Chief Commissioner, who has promised him the Hoshungabad vacancy. The Seonic one will be reserved for some experienced officer, as being on the high road from Calcutta to Bombay it constitutes a very important charge. Mr. Ross, the Uncovenanted Assistant Commissioner of Nagpore for many years, has at last been transferred to Nimar; he was one of the very few “fixtured,” who form the matter of surprise at table talk in these provinces, where the rule of shifting about officers predominates.

Lucknow, Nov. 11.—There is always something exciting going on in this station. Just now all the talk is of the Argus, the affairs of a certain bank which has been undergoing the scrutiny of an officer appointed by the Chief Commissioner, the Oudh and Rohilcund Railway, and the probability of Colonel Barrow succeeding Mr. Davies. I will deal with them in the order mentioned. The Argus, while I write, has seen the light three times, and all three issues contain articles dealing rather trenchantly with the agent of the Oudh and Rohilcund Railway, the municipal commissioners, with the members of the Chutter Munzil Club for selling stores, as well as the merchants here, at low prices; with the affairs of the bank alluded to above and the shortcomings of Colonel Barrow. With regard to the proceedings of the agent Oudh and Rohilcund Railway, the current of opinion seems rather in favour of the remarks of the Argus. In reference to the selling of stores by the club, people are divided; purchasers say they cannot afford to pay high prices, and that it makes no difference whether the goods are sold by a club or a company formed for the sale of cheap stores; of course the merchants differ in their views. As to the Municipal Commissioners, I believe it is generally thought they do as much as they can with the means at their command. The report of the Government Examiner into the affairs of the unfortunate bank has ended very unsatisfactorily for the shareholders; a deficit of Rs. 90,000 has been found, and there are other ugly rumours afloat. I will mention only one that I heard. It is said that some, if not all, the Government securities deposited in the bank have been pledged to another bank. I asked if this was not liable to a criminal prosecution, but was curtly and irreverently told there was no use in prosecuting a certain person in his own territory. Such is the high estimation the commission is held in. Finally, all are of opinion that Colonel Barrow is not the man for the Chief Commissionership. Sir George Couper is at present here waiting for the Governor-General to pass down.

HAZAREEBAGH, Nov. 7.—A sad gloom has been thrown over our social little station by the death of one of its oldest and most respected inhabitants, Captain John Burnell, the Executive Commissariat officer. This sad and quite unlooked for event took place yesterday morning at 8.45 A.M., from a severe attack of inflammation of the lungs, which only began on the afternoon of the 31st ultimo. Up to Saturday last he enjoyed his usual good health; but at 12.30 on that day he was attacked by severe fever and violent inflammation of his left lung. Matters got gradually worse till the disease attacked the other lung, when all hope of saving the dear old man's life was gone, and he died without a struggle yesterday morning. What, if possible, rendered the event more sad was the absence of his wife in Calcutta, who was so ill as to be unable to travel. Captain John Burnell was sixty-eight years of age; he landed in India nearly fifty years ago with a draft for one of the H. E. I. Company's European Regiments (I do not know which). After some years of regimental service, he did duty in the Timber Agency for years, and after that in the Government elephant keddahs, where he distinguished himself as being the most successful capturer of the “giants of the forest” that perhaps ever lived, and to hear him relating some of the events and scenes he witnessed in those bygone days was a treat never to be forgotten. He next joined the Commissariat Department, in which he became the senior officer of his grade, and served in it up to his death. During the mutiny he served at Cawnpore and Lucknow, and was one of the first to enter the scene of the horrible massacre of the women and children at Cawnpore. He also served in one of the Rangoon wars. It would take an abler pen than mine to do duty to his memory; suffice it to say he was a most able departmental officer, respected by his superiors as well as by those under him. Few men had such an intimate knowledge of the native language and character. In his private capacity it would be harder still to do him justice. Generous to a degree, he was never so happy as when he and his friends assembled round his hospitable table. Honourable in the extreme, and just in all his dealings, it was truly said of him “he was one of nature's gentlemen.” He was buried at 4.30 P.M. yesterday with military honours.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

DEATH OF LIEUT. PYE.—We learn that Lieutenant Pye, Adjutant of the 11th Regiment N.I., died at Nusserabad on the 10th Nov.

THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.—Mr. Minchin, of the Madras Civil Service, and the quondam infelix puer of the Council, will succeed the Hon. Noble Taylor in Council.—Pioneer.

A DESERVING CASE.—Mr. W. Tayler, who was Commissioner of Patna in the early part of the Mutiny, is petitioning the Council of India for some recognition of his services.—Pioneer.

OPIMUM.—The following is the result of the opium sale held on the 9th November, on behalf of her Majesty's Government:—

	Chests.	Highest.	Lowest.	Average.	Proceeds.
Behar ...	2,300 ...	1,360 ...	1,345 ...	Rs. 1,350-2-3 ...	Rs. 31,05,325
Benares..	1,700 ...	1,335 ...	1,330 ...	1,330-4-5½ ...	22,61,475

MR. CHARLES CURRIE.—We (Pioneer) hear from Lucknow that Mr. Charles Currie is about to return to Oudh, and will serve as Commissioner of Seetapore until he assumes the post of Judicial Commissioner, on the retirement of Mr. St. George Tucker in March next. The arrangement, we are told, will give general satisfaction.

OBJECTS OF ART IN INDIA.—In Bengal and Southern India, says the Pioneer, considerable progress has been made towards complying with the requisition of the Lords of the Committee of the Council of Education for detailed information regarding objects of architectural and artistic interest in India. In Mysore, Coorg, and some divisions of the Madras Presidency, and in most of those of the province of Bengal, photographic views have been taken of all the principal remains and curiosities.

AN EXCHANGE FOR CALCUTTA.—Another attempt is being made to form a Merchants' Exchange in Calcutta. Some years ago an exchange was established, but it is only frequented by brokers. A new building in Clive-row is to be leased, and reading, writing, and tiffin rooms are to be established in connection with a mercantile exchange, which will be open during certain hours of the day. It is estimated that subscriptions aggregating Rs. 1,000 or Rs. 1,200 a month will be sufficient to provide for all expenses. Several leading houses are said to have promised to support the scheme.

LATEST FROM CALCUTTA.—Through a Calcutta telegram of Nov. 20 the Times of India learns that a cyclone occurred in the Bay of Bengal on the 13th November, principally along the coast of Arracan. Akyah suffered severely, and the rice crop has been damaged. No casualties to shipping have yet been reported, except to the str. Busheer (B.I.S.N. Company's), which went ashore and was slightly damaged. It is said that famine already prevails in Rajpootana. Measures are being adopted to meet the distress, which is also commencing in the North-West Provinces. The Viceroy reached Calcutta on the 18th November. The Government of India are preparing an elaborate note regarding the present mail administration.

THE FAIR AT LEH.—The recent fair at Leh, the capital of Ladakh, as far as can be gathered from a Jummoos source of information, was a success. A Lahore paper states that merchants from Sreenaggar, Bhudwarah, Yarkund, Khoten, and several parts of Kashmir, gathered on the occasion, bringing articles for sale with them, consisting chiefly of silk and tea. Dr. Cayley and the Maharajah's Wazir at Ladakh (Syed Akbar Ally Shab) presided at the fair. The prizes, which consisted of silks, cloaks, shawls, &c., were distributed by Dr. Cayley's own hands, while to tradesmen and others of minor importance five rupees each were awarded. This last sum, because trifling, does not seem to have inspired any desire in these tradesmen to take the trouble of visiting Leh a second time, and this is a matter probably to be deplored. The business on the occasion ended by the delivery of a speech by Dr. Cayley, which was applauded.

THE DELHI BANK v. INNES AND OTHERS.—The case of the Delhi Bank v. General Innes, Sir Donald Macleod, and Major Innes, was heard by the Deputy Commissioner of Delhi, on the 3rd inst. Mr. Newton appeared for the bank; Mr. Jardine for Sir Donald Macleod and Major Innes. The suit was based on two bonds, to which these defendants were sureties for General Innes. The sureties pleaded that the bank had misappropriated Rs. 15,000, which should have been credited, to the account in suit to some other account, and Major Innes further pleaded the laches of the bank in allowing certain collateral securities to slip out of their hands. Upon the first point, the plaintiff's counsel put Mr. Lancaster, manager of the bank, into the witness box, Mr. Jardine cross-examined him on the way in which the bank carried on its business, until, in the midst of the cross examination, the plaintiff's counsel announced that he would withdraw that portion of his claim. As to the second issue the Court reserved its judgment, after hearing arguments.—Indian Public Opinion, Nov. 10.

THE DEATH OF LIEUT. BIRCH.—In recording the death at Meerut, on Nov. 6, of Lieut. R. T. Birch, we abstained (says the Pioneer of the 11th Nov.) from publishing the more painful details furnished us, in the hope that our correspondent might have been misinformed. We fear there is no room for doubt that Mr. Birch destroyed himself, probably driven to the act by pecuniary embarrassments. The unfortunate officer borrowed a pistol from a friend. He then went into an outhouse in his own compound, shut the door, and blew his brains out. The Mofussilite of the 10th Nov., in mentioning the melancholy occurrence, says:—"His remains were buried with military honours on Saturday morning. Lieut. Birch was well known and highly respected throughout Upper India, where his kindly nature had endeared him to many. He was moreover for some years after the death of Mr. Lang connected with this journal."

MILITARY.—We learn from Rawul Pindee that the D, F, and H R.A., E-19 R.A. and the 19th Regiment have not been allowed to discharge their marching establishments, which are ordered to be kept up for the present. The reason for this is not stated. It is very hard on the officers who have to keep up their carriage and to pay for the same after having already had to do so, to little purpose, for nearly three months in Huzara. The following corps are halted, waiting orders, as follows:—1st battalion 6th Foot, Abbottabad; 2nd Goorkhas, Kala-ka-Serai; 1st and 4th Goorkhas, Hussun Abdal; 30th P.I., Rawul Pindee.—Delhi Gazette, Nov. 19.—The 5th Lancers were to leave Lucknow on the morning of the 16th inst. for Campbellpore, marching the whole way.—We observe that the 11th Regiment Native Infantry left Dinapore on the 15th inst. by train for Dum-Dum in the regular course of relief.—The 21st Hussars, it is stated, was to leave Umballa for Lucknow in the regular course of relief on the 16th inst. The regiment was to proceed by the usual marches via Delhi, Allypore, and Cawnpore.—It is stated that the Commander-in-Chief of the Forces in India will leave Simla about the 20th inst., and that the head-quarters will be formed at Calcutta by the 8th proximo.

STATION TALK.

CALINGAPATAM, Oct. 31.—The want of rain at the end of the year to ripen our crops has, as usual, set the prices of grain at very high rates. From three rupees per bag of 164 lbs., the price of rice has risen to six rupees, and is likely to rise still more if the rains do not come before the crops have ripened. The price of six rupees is already a famine rate, putting the article beyond the reach of an ordinary labourer here, whose hire only amounts to as. 1 and pice 3 per diem. Hundreds of the labouring class are already fearing a repetition of the famine, and have not sufficient work at home to enable them to earn their livelihood. Our godowns are pestered for labour. To avoid the horrors of famine the people talk of emigrating to Rangoon; but they tell you sad tales of the misfortunes of their brethren who took this step last year. These latter fell in most unluckily with high rates of living on the other side of the bay; some never returned home, and the greater part who did, it would appear, did not better their position; emigration having to be carried out by themselves, it would appear that the interest and other charges for loans absorbed all the profits, and left the emigrants as poor as they were before. The common cry already is that the merchants raise too much the rates of their produce; but this is merely looking at the surface of things, for it is to be taken into account that the merchants get their produce from the agriculturists, who part with their stock at the end of the year, with the view to save themselves from any fall in prices at the coming in of each successive new harvest. The merchants, it must be said, buy the produce at a great risk, and have therefore the right of exercising their judgment in the sale of the article. The ryot war system and the want of manufactures in the district are evidently the cause of all the mischief, causing thousands every year to get a very precarious existence, and preventing the owners of land rising to their natural position. As if to mend the whole, a cry is always raised against merchants, while it is the faults of the system under which we administer.

There is one remedy to this. Let a few villages here and there be given to those capitalists who are established on the coast, and who are willing to assume the care of small estates from Government on the same terms as the ryots have them. These capitalists are willing to spend money in buildings and in manufactures, saving thus so much public work to Government. There need also be no remissions, and we should not see year after year thousands of the labouring class leading a precarious existence in this and other parts of the country.—Madras Times' Correspondent.

BANGALORE.—A volunteer rifle corps of three companies was started at Bangalore on the 9th November.

Miscellaneous.

MILITARY CHANGES.—It is stated to be the intention of his Excellency Lieutenant-General McCleverty to propose to Government the abolition of all rifle corps and rifle companies attached to the Madras Native Infantry Regiments.

DR. HAMILTON ROSS.—The Western Star says that Dr. Hamilton Ross, Physician to H.H. the Maharajah of Travancore, has found it expedient to resign his appointment, and that it is not at present known by whom the vacancy will be filled.

KEONGHUR.—Sir William Mansfield, Commander-in-Chief of India, has expressed, it is said, his entire satisfaction with the manner in which the Keonghur service has been carried out and brought to a termination by the commanding officer and troops detailed for the duty.

TRAVANCORE.—The Travancore Government has reduced its export duty on pepper from nine to five rupees per candy of 500 lbs. In notifying the reduction the Government hopes that "cultivators will feel stimulated to extend the cultivation of the spice, and that smuggling will cease."—Indian Daily News.

QUESTION OF EXTRA PAY TO ABYSSINIAN OFFICERS.—On a proposal made by Lord Napier of Magdala respecting working pay being granted to the commissioned officers who took part in the late Abyssinian campaign, the Secretary of State for War has expressed his regret that he can see no reason for granting to these officers the working pay allowed by the royal warrant, as it is not admissible under the Indian Regulations of which these officers have received the full advantage as regards pay and allowance.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN FOORD.—We (Madras Athenæum) have done our utmost to ascertain the facts connected with the reported untimely end of this officer. As far as we can learn, he went out shooting near Salem. Meeting with a bear he wounded and enraged it. The animal seized him, when the shikarry accompanying Captain Foord, in endeavouring to shoot the bear, shot his master. The remains of the unfortunate gentleman were brought to Salem on Monday (Nov. 9th), and were interred on Wednesday morning. Captain Foord served during the Abyssinian campaign with the Madras Sappers, of which corps he was adjutant.

A SELF-MADE MAN.—Mr. John Maskell, B.L., Acting Registrar-General of Assurances in Madras, whose death occurred on the evening of the 11th inst., at the age of forty-eight years, was, as we learn from the Madras Times, a notable example of self-help. He was educated at the Madras Military Male Asylum, and commenced life in the Uncovenanted Civil Service without friends; but by characteristic energy and probity he rose slowly to the position of first Uncovenanted Assistant in the Board of Revenue, and from thence was promoted to the magistracy of Vepery District. He made two trips to England, and was on the last occasion called to the bar. On his return to India he was appointed Acting Registrar-General of Assurances.

DR. WYLIE'S CHARITABLE BEQUESTS.—Two Madras charitable institutions have just received timely and valuable aid from the estate of an old Madrasse, the late Dr. Wylie, member of the Medical Board, and by whom the wants and claims of the "poor of Madras" seem to have been held in paramount importance. On his death Dr. Wylie bequeathed £200 to the funds of the Friend-in-Need Society and the Monegar Choultry respectively; and by his will these societies were entitled, after her death, to a large portion of the sum in which his widow had a life interest. Mrs. Wylie's death has now placed £4,000 at the disposal of these societies, and they will each immediately receive, deducting legacy duty and law charges, some Rs. 18,000. This noble bequest has fallen most opportunely to both societies; it will extricate the Friend-in-Need Society, at all events for a season, from its state of chronic impecuniosity, and set it fairly on its legs again. The Monegar Choultry will be able to replace the large sum expended from its accumulated funds on additions and improvements made during the present year, and thus two of our most valuable public institutions will be enabled to persevere in the good work which they are so steadily pursuing in Madras.—Madras Athenæum.

Bombay.

THE ANNUAL RELIEFS.

A large draft of men for the corps in the Mhow brigade, consisting of 4 officers, 277 men, 27 women, and 26 children, from the depot at Deolalie, marched into Mhow on the 12th inst., and after a halt of three days the drafts for Neemuch and Nusseerabad would proceed to join.

The 3rd Regiment N.I., under the command of Colonel Scott, marched into Mhow on the 9th inst., relieving the 15th N.I. under Colonel Borrowes, which left for Mehidpore and Angur on the 13th inst. The wing of the 15th N.I., which goes to Angur, will be commanded by Major Wahab. The 26th Bengal N.I. will march from Mehidpore for Umballa as soon as relieved.

By a letter received from Asseerghur, dated 13th inst., we learn that the detachment of the Grenadier N.I. will be relieved by two companies of the 2nd Grenadier N.I. from Poona, and that the former will take rail at Chandnee on the 21st, and join its headquarters from Doolia at Chalisgaum, proceeding with it to be quartered at Poona, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Baugh.

A strong detachment from the 1st Battalion, 8th King's Regiment, stationed at Poona, marched thence for Sattara yesterday morning, under the command of Major Colman. The strength of the detachment was eleven officers, twelve sergeants, five drummers, and 245 rank and file. They have been sent to Sattara in consequence of the want of accommodation in the old Horse Artillery lines for the whole regiment, which is particularly strong, especially in officers.

The troop of the 1st Madras Light Cavalry stationed at Sholapoor, under the command of Captain Cherry, has received orders to march thence for Poona to join the head-quarters there; the whole corps will then proceed by road to Kamptee. From recent accounts we learn that three-fourths of the horses attacked with fever are now convalescent, and that the regiment expects to commence its long march on or about the 4th of December.

The 5th Battery 5th Brigade Royal Artillery left Kirkee on the morning of the 16th for Khandalla, to join at that station the C Troop E Brigade R.H.A., under the command of Captain MacLachlan. The former battery will embark at Bombay on the 23rd for Madras, and will be joined here by the 4th Battery 5th Brigade from Hyderabad, Sind. At Vingorla the two batteries will pick up the 6th Battery from Belgaum, and the whole will then proceed to Madras under the command of Lieut.-Colonel C. J. Barton, late of the 21st Brigade, who has lately been transferred to the 5th Brigade in the Madras Presidency. The C troop E Brigade will embark at Bombay on the 21st for Kurrachee, en route for Hyderabad, Sind.

We hear from Poona that the head-quarters wing of the 2nd N.I. (Grenadiers), under the command of Colonel MacLeod, marched from that station on the 14th inst. for Sattara, there to be quartered. It was originally intended that the 23rd N.I., from Kattiawar, should garrison Sattara, but as the families of the 2nd Grenadiers had been left there, the latter regiment went back, while the 23rd will remain at Poona. The head-quarters and six companies of the 23rd arrived at Poona on the 9th instant from Dwarka, having left (at the request of the political officer, we believe) two companies behind them, as the Wagheers were assembling in force when they heard that the whole of the Native Infantry would be withdrawn. These gentry are said to have contemplated occupying the post themselves. On hearing, some time ago, that the Provincial Commander-in-Chief intended withdrawing the regiment of Native Infantry from Kattiawar, we questioned the wisdom of the step, and the position now shows the soundness of the opinion we then expressed. Besides the two companies of the 23rd at Dwarka, there are two companies of the 25th at Burda Chowkey; beyond these four companies, there are, we believe, no other troops in Kattiawar.—Times of India, Nov. 21.

MISS CARPENTER.

Many of our readers will no doubt be glad to learn that Miss Carpenter has, since her arrival in Bombay, submitted a letter to the Governor in Council, offering her services in connection with the normal school for females to be established here, and that the Council have been pleased to accept the proposal. A letter was addressed to the Council by Miss Carpenter, and a memorial also signed by about thirty of the leading native gentlemen of Bombay for presentation to H.E. the Governor in Council.

The following are the terms of the resolution of Government regarding Miss Carpenter's letter:—

Resolution,—Miss Carpenter should be informed that the Government will be glad to receive her valuable assistance and co-operation in the Normal School to be established under the sanction of the Government of India, and her offer is hereby accepted with a warm appreciation of the spirit in which it is made.

But at the same time the Governor in Council cannot without further deliberation at once pledge themselves to aid the details of the programme, inasmuch as to do so would possibly involve an expenditure greater than the amount sanctioned by the Government of India. Miss Carpenter will, his Excellency in Council hopes, be satisfied with the assurance that the details will be left to her management so far as may be permissible with the financial limits assigned.

Miss Carpenter should be invited to place herself in communication with the Director of Public Instruction, to whom a copy of these papers should be sent, and who should be directed to give her assistance.

In the meantime the most urgent necessity appears to be the preparation of a suitable residence for Miss Carpenter and the Training Mistress, with sufficient room for classes for instruction, such as that contemplated, and accommodation for the European ladies who are being prepared for the school.

But the Governor in Council is not prepared at present to provide for the board of other assistants, or to provide accommodation except for those ladies who, under Miss Carpenter's superintendence, are about to devote themselves to her work of instruction.

The local Government have appointed a committee, consisting of the following native gentlemen, to assist Miss Carpenter in the work which she has undertaken of establishing Female Normal Schools:—The Honourable Munguldas Nathooobhoy, Drs. Bhau Dajee, and Dhirajram Dulpuram, Mr. Venayek Wassoodew, Oriental Translator to Government, and Mr. Mahadeo Govind Ranade, Assistant Professor of Literature in the Elphinstone College. As there seems yet to be some doubts entertained in some quarters as to Miss Carpenter's feelings with regard to native customs and religion, we may mention that she does not at all intend to interfere with these, but is quite ready to proceed on the Government principle.

Such of the Bombay native papers as we have seen unite in giving Miss Carpenter a hearty welcome.

The Hindu Reformer says:—"A crowded meeting of educated native gentlemen was held at the residence of the late lamented Rao Bahadur Ramchandra Balcrishnaji, on Wednesday evening, the 11th inst., at the invitation of Dr. Atmaram Pandurang, for the purpose of offering her a cordial welcome to this field of her useful labours, when she took occasion to deliver, amidst a succession of hearty cheers from her audience, a very clear and lucid account as to how she had employed herself on behalf of her Indian sisters, since her last departure from these shores. Her speech occupied nearly two hours in delivery. After Miss Carpenter had resumed her seat, amidst the enthusiastic applause of her native audience, Mr. Nowrojee Furdoonjee, who acted as spokesman to the meeting, expressed his warmest thanks to her on behalf of his native friends for the generous and practical sympathy she evinced for the women of India; and it was unanimously resolved by the meeting to prepare and submit a memorial praying Government to induce Miss Carpenter to remain in Bombay and to establish a Native Female Normal School under her fostering and experienced care and management. The meeting then broke up at about 11 P.M."

Miscellaneous.

BROACH EXHIBITION.—An intimation that the date of Lord Mayo's arrival has been postponed for twelve days—the 18th December is now named—has interfered with the arrangements for the opening of the Broach Exhibition.

MILITARY.—We observe that the 5-5 battery Royal Artillery left Kirkee on Monday morning by the 9 A.M. train for Khandalla, under the command of Lieutenant Hewett, and that it will be joined by Col. Barton, who commands the battery.—Bombay Gazette, Nov. 21.

THE 25TH B.N.I.—We are sorry to hear that the 25th Regiment Native Infantry, in their march from Sholapore to Dhoolia across the jungle, suffered very severely from cholera, having lost ten men and one subadar. They halted within about a day's march from Dhoolia.

A MILITARY SCANDAL.—We (Pioneer) are told that Lieutenant Bailey, of H.M.'s 106th Regiment, has been placed under arrest for a violent assault upon Assistant-surgeon Doak, of the same regiment. The fracas is said to have arisen out of some "chaff" at the mess-table.

IRRIGATION.—We learn from the Poona Observer that—thanks to the efforts of H.E. Sir Seymour Fitzgerald—the Supreme Government has finally sanctioned Lieut.-colonel Fife's irrigation scheme, in which is included the project of furnishing Poona with an abundant supply of pure water. The scheme is well known as the Moota aqueduct scheme.

A PARSEE BARRISTER.—On the 13th Nov., at the High Court, before Sir Joseph Arnould, the first Parsee barrister, Mr. Peeroshaw Mervanjee Mehta, took the usual oaths as an advocate of the High Court. Another new barrister, Mr. F. L. Latham, appeared at the High Court before the Chief Justice and the Hon. Sir Charles Sargent on the previous day, and took the oaths.

GOOD NEWS FOR TRAVELLERS.—Government has sanctioned the construction of travellers' bungalows at Nandgaum and Pachora at a cost of Rs. 5,000 each. The bungalows are intended chiefly for the accommodation of visitors to the Ajunta and Ellora Caves.

SIR R. TEMPLE.—Sir R. Temple, accompanied by his secretary, Mr. Onslow, proceeds at once on a tour to Bombay. Sir Richard would no doubt have "done" Madras also but for the unusually late period at which the Vice-regal migration from Simla to Calcutta has taken place.—Pioneer.

BAHREIN.—Much has appeared in our Bombay contemporaries about the destruction of the Wahabee Chief's stronghold at Bahrein, laying the credit of the exploit to Commander Brown, of the Vigilant. Without wishing to detract from what this gentleman is entitled to, we owe it, nevertheless, to the Clyde and Hugh Rose to state that they battered down the fort. All that the Vigilant did was to send her marines and sailors ashore to assist those of the gunboats to burn the piratical boats and cut up the water tanks.—Sindian, Nov. 4.

BOMBAY UNIVERSITY.—The University examinations commenced in the Town Hall, Bombay, last Monday morning. The hall and other rooms had quite a crowded busy appearance, there being no fewer than 637 candidates for the Matriculation, or about 100 in excess of last year. Of these 55 have taken Sanskrit as their second language, 26 have taken Latin, 258 Marathi, 259 Gujarathi, 7 Canarese, 3 Hindustani, 1 Persian, 9 Sindee, and 19 Portuguese. There are 43 applications for the Jagannath Sankarsett Sanskrit Scholarships. For the M.A. examination there are 12 candidates, of whom 3 go in History and Philosophy, 3 in Mathematics, and 7 in Languages. Of these last 4 have taken Sanskrit and 3 Latin as their second languages. For the examination of LL.B. there are 6 candidates.—Times of India, Nov. 21.

THE NEW IMAUM OF MUSCAT.—According to the Sindian, the present Imaum of Muscat is not a Wahabee—on the contrary, he is opposed by the Wahabee tribe, which is also known as the Ghaffri. We learn that a Shaik or Chief of that people in the Bereynee country, named Toorkee-bin-Sideyree, was preparing to march upon Muscat to depose Azan-bin-Ghés, and that Syed Salim has always had that Chief's support, for which, it should be remarked, he paid an annual subsidy of 12,000 dollars. The advance of the Wahabees was considered so imminent that, although everything was quiet in Muscat, such a feeling of insecurity prevailed that but very little trade was going on. We are informed also that Toorkee-bin-Sideyree would have come to Syed Salim's assistance had not Azan-bin-Ghés been so active and resolute in his proceedings. We learn, further, that the new Sultan has obtained another success. On the 11th October he sent his brother, Ebrahim-bin-Ghés, at the head of an attacking party, to take the town of Sohar, which lies about 102 miles north-west of Muscat. The town was easily taken, but the fort, which some forty Beloochees defended, was not captured till after four assaults. Hearing of the first repulse, Azan-bin-Ghés was preparing to march against the place in person, when, on the morning of the 16th, news came in to Muscat of the downfall of the fort.

THE LIQUIDATION OF THE OLD BANK OF BOMBAY.—An extraordinary general meeting of the proprietors of the old Bank of Bombay was held at the bank premises on the 16th Nov. to receive the report of the liquidator as to the progress made in the liquidation, and to appoint and fix the remuneration of a liquidator in the room of Mr. Stuart, resigned. The Hon. Alexander Brown was voted to the chair. Mr. John Stuart (the liquidator to the old bank) having read the notice convening the meeting, the Chairman stated that a doubt had been raised by the legal adviser of the liquidator as to the construction of certain clauses in the charter of the old Bank of Bombay as applicable to the proceedings for which they had met that day. The nature of that doubt Mr. Rimington, the solicitor to the bank, proceeded to explain. According to Section XCV. of Act XIX. no meeting of the kind in question shall be deemed to be duly held unless "two months' previous notice" shall have been given. Now the section of the Bank Act which provides for the mode of convening a special meeting is section XL, and that provides that "Any three of the directors, or any ten proprietors of the said bank, may at any time convene a special general meeting of the proprietors upon giving fifteen days' previous notice." The question had therefore arisen, whether or not this meeting had been properly convened by the notice which had been given, and which had appeared for about eighteen days, and not for two months. One of the leading counsel in Bombay still held to his opinion, that the meeting had not been properly convened, while the other two were of opinion that the notice was sufficient. In accordance with Mr. Rimington's advice, it was then agreed that the meeting should be called again for that day two months.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

SUBSTANTIVE COLONELS.

Simla, Nov. 6.—No. 1,043.—With reference to G.G.O. No. 304 of March 28, 1866, it is hereby notified, under the authority of the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, that substantive colonels of the royal artillery or engineers, or of the late Indian army, when holding brigade commands, will receive the old rate of regimental pay and allowances of the arm of the service to which they belong, in addition to the old scale of staff allowance, instead of the rate shown in the margin of the general order above referred to.

PAY TO WARRANT AND NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS.

No. 1,044.—Under the authority of the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, it is hereby notified that warrant and non-commissioned officers withdrawn from permanent staff appointments for field service shall receive in the military department such addition to their pay, &c., whilst so employed, as will raise their aggregate receipts to the amount they were in receipt of when so withdrawn, special local allowances being excepted.

These officers will have no claim to compensation in virtue of an officiating appointment; and a warrant or non-commissioned officer holding a permanent appointment, but officiating in a higher one, will be entitled only to the aggregate receipts of his permanent appointment.

PENSIONS AND GRATUITIES.

Simla, Oct. 24.—No. 3,078.—Read again: Despatch from the Sec. of State for India, No. 290, dated July 9 last, ruling, with special reference to the case of Major Raitt, superintendent of the House of Correction, Bombay, who had been recommended to be exempted from the operation of the rule which requires that military pensions shall merge in civil salaries, that an officer who, having retired on a pension, obtained, not on medical certificate, but after a prescribed period of service, is subsequently employed in any public capacity, shall draw his pension in addition to the salary of the office to which he may be appointed.

Read: Communications inquiring whether the rule quoted above is applicable to officers of the civil department, covenanted and uncovenanted, or only to military officers in civil employ.

Resolution: Apparently the orders, as they stand, refer only to military officers in civil employ, but the Gov. gen. in Council is of opinion that they might fairly be extended to all pensioned servants of Government, and he is accordingly pleased to declare that they shall be so extended.

TRIBUTE TO THE MEMORY OF H.H. THE BEGUM OF BHOPAL.

Nov. 5.—No. 1,296.—H.E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. in Council has received the intelligence of the death of H.H. the Secunder Begum of Bhopal, c.s.i., with feelings of profound regret.

2. H.H. had conducted the administration of this principality since the year 1847, when she was first appointed Regent, with ability and success until the day of her decease. In the early years of her rule she improved the system by which the revenue of the State is collected, abolished monopolies, regulated the mint, reorganised the police, and gradually increased the public revenue, while she effectually diminished the public debt. In later times, by her support of the cause of male and female education, by her superintendence of works intended to supply her capital with pure and wholesome water, by the construction of Serais and roads, and by other improvements, she gave convincing indications of real and abiding interest in the progress of her people and in the prosperity of her country.

3. Her relations with the representative of the British Government at her capital had been for a long time established on a sound and satisfactory basis, and she was on terms of friendship with the rulers of neighbouring States.

4. But it was by her firm conduct during the great mutiny that she established a more direct title to the acknowledgments of the head of the administration.

5. Her unswerving fidelity, her skill in the management of affairs at an important crisis, the bold front which she presented to the enemies of the British power, and the vigilance with which she watched over the preservation of Englishmen, were acknowledged by Lord Canning, in open durbars, in terms of well-deserved praise and commendation; and the gratitude of the British Government was further evinced by a grant of territory, which its owner had justly forfeited for open rebellion, by a recognition of the right of succession according to the custom of the principality and the Mahomedan law, and by the bestowal of one of those titles which the Sovereign of Great Britain, as the fountain of honour, has instituted to reward good services performed in India either by the natives of the country, or by the British servants of the Crown.

6. H.E. in Council, while thus testifying to the chiefs, to the services, and to the people of India, the regret with which he has learnt the death of H.H., takes this opportunity of appealing to the example left by the late Begum as a proof that women, in oriental nations, are fully capable of conducting public affairs with discretion and with dignity, and of thereby not diminishing but increasing the respect and honour in which they are held by their subjects. The Viceroy further expresses his earnest hope that the administration of Bhopal may be carried on by her successor, the Begum Shah Jehan, on the same sound principles as hitherto, and that the chiefs and rulers of other native States will endeavour to imitate the example which the deceased has set before them, of hearty co-operation with the British authorities, of zeal and fidelity to the interests of the paramount power, and of that conscientious and earnest discharge of administrative functions which never fails ultimately to conduce both to the welfare of the community, and to the honour and stability of the Prince.

QUESTIONS REGARDING THE NEW CIVIL FURLOUGH RULES.

Simla, Oct. 31.—No. 3,286.—Read the following papers:—From F. Lushington, Esq., accountant general, Madras, to the Secretary to the Government of India, financial department.—No. 735, dated July 13, 1868.

I have the honour to inquire whether a civil servant who, having had special leave under the rules of 1855, was, in virtue of the Secretary of State's despatch, dated June 16, 1865, No. 140, financial, eligible after six years' service to another six months' leave on private affairs, with moiety of salary, under the rules of 1864, can be granted that leave on the same terms under the rules of 1868.

From G. H. M. Batten, Esq., under secretary to the Government of India, financial department, to the Accountant General, Madras.—No. 1,842, dated Aug. 19, 1868.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, No. 735, of the 13th ult., and in reply to state that section 25 of the new Leave Rules, which states that special leave on urgent private affairs may be repeated after intervals of six years without allowances, cancels all previous orders on the subject.

Extract of a letter from the Financial Secretary to the Government of India, to the Officiating Accountant General, Punjab.—No. 3,286, dated October, 1868.

Para. 1.—I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 99 of the 2nd inst., inquiring whether a covenanted civil servant, who has taken six months' leave on private affairs under the old rules, may, after rendering six years' service, take another special leave on private affairs with allowances under the new rules, and in reply to inform you that, in the case you describe, special leave on private affairs could not be granted under the rules except without allowances.

Nov. 2.—No. 3,420.—The following letter to the address of the accountant general, N.W. Provs., is published for general information:—

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of Mr. Dep. Acct. gen. J. Eede's letter, No. 15,576 of Oct. 19 last, and in reply to state that the resolution No. 2,703, passed in this department Sept. 29 last, allowing uncovenanted servants to draw full salary during absence on privilege leave, is applicable to all uncovenanted servants who are allowed leave of absence under the rules promulgated in the notification of this department, No. 1,915, dated April 13, 1864.

Nov. 5.—No. 3,477.—Read the following extracts from the rules regarding leave of absence to covenanted civil servants, published in the notification of this department, No. 533, dated June 16:—

Section I.—“Actual service includes the period during which an officer is on duty, also periods spent on privilege and subsidiary leave, and periods during which an officer not on leave may be out of employ on subsistence allowance in India.”

Section III.—“One year's furlough shall be placed to the credit of each officer for every four years of actual service.”

Resolution.—To the definition in Section I., the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to add that “actual service” includes the period spent by a covenanted civil servant on leave within the limits of the late East India Company's Charter, which, under the rules in force before June 8, 1855, was allowed to be reckoned as service and residence.

2. With reference to Sections I. and III., H.E. in Council is also pleased to rule that periods of leave granted without any pay shall be regarded as dies non, i.e., it shall neither be credited in an officer's account as actual service, nor debited to him as furlough taken.

3. Leave on urgent private affairs taken under former rules, and which was allowed to be reckoned as service and residence, shall be considered as actual service under the new rules.

No. 3,478.—The following letter to the address of the Officiating acct. gen., Punjab, is published:—

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your endorsement No. 114, without date, and in reply to forward a copy of a letter No. 3,420 of the 2nd inst., to the address of the Acct. gen., N.W.P., and to state that, as the resolution No. 2,703, passed in this department Sept. 29, 1868, declares that the acting allowances of the substitutes of uncovenanted officers absent on privilege leave are to be “paid out of the general revenues,” you are wrong in supposing that the rule that privilege leave can be granted to uncovenanted servants “only when it is unattended with additional expense to the State” is still in force.

THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT.

Nov. 6.—No. 4,450.—The Gov. gen. having notified his intention of leaving Simla on the 10th inst., H.E. in Council is pleased to direct that the Council of the Gov. gen. shall, after that date, and until further notice, assemble at Calcutta in the territories under the Govt. of the Lieut. gov. of Bengal.

ARRIVAL FROM FURLOUGH.—Mr. A. Brandreth, of the Bengal C.S., reported his return to India on Oct. 16.

EDUCATIONAL.—The following gentlemen, appointed by the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India to the Fourth Grade of the Bengal Educational Service, are appointed to be professors in the colleges mentioned—viz., Mr. A. W. Garrett, Dacca College; Mr. E. Lethbridge, Kishnaghur College.

EXAMINATIONS IN THE NATIVE LANGUAGES.—The following officers have passed an examination in the Pushto language, according to the standard prescribed in Punjab Gazette order, No. 2,054, dated Sept. 22:—Asst. surg. J. B. Johnson, Corps of Guides; Lieut. R. B. Lockwood, 3rd Punjab Cav.; Lieut. J. Charles, R.A., No. 1 Punjab Infantry; Lieut. W. Biscoe, 19th Bengal Cavalry. Major F. Brine, R.E., Executive Engineer, Ferozepore Division, Public Works, has passed the examination in the native language according to the Departmental Standard.

CIVIL FURLOUNDS AND LEAVE OF ABSENCE.—The following civilians obtained furloughs and leave of absence under the last new rules, on m.c., in November:—Dr. Greene, Medical Officer of Tipperah, for two months, from the 16th January, 1869; Mr. Drake, Assistant Sub-Deputy Opium Agent of Gya, for two days, under paragraph 18 of the Uncovenanted Service Absentee Rules, preparatory to rejoining his appointment on his return from sick leave to Europe; Mr. Connolly, Medical Officer of Bograh, for two months; Mr. Davey, Revenue Surveyor, 3rd Division, Lower Provinces, is allowed a furlough for two years; Mr. Elliot, Judge of Dinapore, is allowed subsidiary leave for a period not exceeding thirty days, preparatory to Europe on furlough; Rev. W. C. Bell, Chaplain of Dinapore, for two years; Rev. A. Stone, Chaplain of Dum-Dum, for six months, in extension; Mr. Sterndale, Assistant to the Deputy Commissioner of Paper Currency, Lahore Circle, on private affairs, Europe, for six months; Major Mocatta, one month's leave, from 6th November, or from such date as he may be able to avail himself of it, to proceed to Bombay, preparatory to submitting an application for furlough; Assistant Surgeon Lackersteen, leave in extension from 7th September to 27th October, 1868, to remain at Dalhousie, and to proceed to Calcutta; Lieut. Bartholomew, Assistant Commissioner, Bunnoo, has privilege leave for two months, with effect from the 5th November, 1868; Sergeant Davies, Supervisor, Lower Sirhind Division, one month's leave, to proceed to Calcutta, from such date as he may avail himself of it, preparatory to obtaining his discharge from the army; Rev. G. Lovely and the Rev. M. R. Burge, Senior Chaplains on the Bengal Establishment, have each obtained a furlough for two years, with effect from the dates on which they may respectively avail themselves of the same; Conductor Gibson, Sub-Engineer, Kangra Roads Division, one month's leave, to Calcutta, to appear before the medical board, with a view to applying for leave to Europe on m.c.—this cancels the leave granted Oct. 15; Rev. J. R. Baldwin, a Senior Chaplain on the Bengal Establishment, to Europe, for one year, with effect from the date on which he may avail himself of the same. The undermentioned officer is allowed furlough to Europe:—Assistant Surgeon French, M.D., of the Medical Department, Civil, Rajshahye, for two years.

DESPATCHES OF THE HAZARA FIELD FORCE.

(Gazette of India Extraordinary.)

Simla, Nov. 7.—H.E. the Viceroy and Governor-general in Council is pleased to direct the publication of the accompanying letter from the Quartermaster-general, dated the 5th inst., forwarding, by direction of H.E. the C. in C., copies of Despatches from Major gen. A. T. Wilde, C.B., C.S.I., commanding the Hazara Field Force, detailing the recent operations of the force under his command.

The Governor-general in Council cordially concurs with the C. in C. in highly appreciating the services that have been performed, and desires to thank H.E. for his able and energetic direction of the military resources of the Government on this occasion.

H.E. in Council wishes also to acknowledge the great exertions of his Honour the Lieut. gov. of the Punjab, who promptly caused reinforcements to be moved into Hazara on the serious nature of the outbreak becoming apparent, and who throughout has most actively aided the force by all the means at his command.

To Major-general Wilde the Government of India is much indebted for his great care in superintending the proper equipment of his force, owing to which it was enabled to operate successfully in most difficult and rugged mountains. His great experience of hill warfare and excellent judgment have caused the duty entrusted to him to be carried out without accident and in a manner which, beyond its present and immediate effect, will doubtless convince the border tribes that they cannot inflict annoyance on our frontier without rendering themselves liable to punishment, despite the almost inaccessible situation of their villages.

It is gratifying to the Governor-general in Council to be able to offer his hearty thanks to Major-general Wilde for his conduct in his recent command.

The valuable and untiring exertions of Major Pollock, the Commissioner, and the services of those under his orders, will be acknowledged in the proper department of the Government; but H.E. in Council desires here to express his satisfaction at the cordiality and goodwill with which Major-general Wilde and Major Pollock acted together prior to and throughout the operations.

Brigadier-general Bright and Brigadier-general Vaughan, C.B., have earned the approval of the Government by the manner in which they commanded their respective brigades, and all the commanding officers named in Major-general Wilde's reports deserve the thanks of Government.

Lieutenant-colonel Rothney, commanding the 5th Goorkha regt., has already received the commendation of the Governor-general in Council for his prompt movement to Oogio in July last, and for his resolute conduct in maintaining his position until reinforcements enabled him to drive the enemy from his immediate vicinity.

The staff of the force and officers of departments are reported to be deserving of approval for a correct and intelligent performance of their duty, and are therefore entitled to the thanks of the Governor-general in Council; but the very important services from the first movement of troops of the principal Commissariat officer, Lieut.-colonel Dickens, upon whose exertions the success of the expedition so much depended, demand special recognition which the Governor-general in Council is happy to accord.

The troops employed, British and native, have exhibited some of the best qualities of soldiers by their discipline, their cheerfulness, and their active and willing exertions under all circumstances. The opportunity of serious encounter with the enemy was denied to them, but there can be no doubt from their whole conduct, and from their anxious desire for such opportunity that, had the enemy ventured to make a serious stand, the force would have distinguished itself, and inflicted signal punishment on its adversaries.

As it is, the troops have rendered admirable service in a most difficult country when deprived of tents and many of their usual comforts, and H.E. in Council offers the best thanks of the Government of India to each of the corps engaged.

Nor does the Governor-general in Council forget that various troops, European and native, moved with great rapidity from distant stations, some of whom were necessarily kept in reserve and not actively engaged. These troops underwent great fatigue at a most unfavourable season, but pressed forward with ardour in the hope that they might be of use. To all of these, and to the departmental and civil officers by whose exertions they were enabled to quit their stations with promptitude, the Governor-general in Council tenders the thanks of the Government.

H.E. in Council desires to express his appreciation of the prompt and gallant aid rendered by the Nawab of Umb and his retainers, and of the useful service of the Hazara levies and police, some of whom distinguished themselves; and H.E. would finally acknowledge the assistance rendered by troops of his Highness the Maharajah of Cashmere, placed temporarily at the disposal of the British Government and usefully employed by Major-general Wilde.

From Lieut.-colonel P. S. Lumsden, Quartermaster-general of the Army, to the Officiating Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department, Simla, No. 563, dated Nov. 5, 1868.

By desire of the C. in C. in India, I have the honour to forward despatches from Major-general Wilde, C.B., C.S.I., commanding Hazara Field Force.

2. It is unnecessary for H.E. to advert to the policy of Government which caused the assembly of the force. But in justice to the troops actually engaged in the field, to others placed in reserve, and to the administrative departments under Government, Sir William Mansfield deems it right to trouble the Right Hon. the Viceroy in Council with a brief narrative of events antecedent to the matter treated of by the Major-general.

3. It will not have escaped the recollection of Government that in the month of July, the most urgent telegraphic notices came from the Punjab, indicating serious disturbance in British Hazara, the same being due partly to domestic insurrection, and partly to complicity; indeed, it may be said, invasion by the independent tribes of the border.

4. The warning was so urgent, and the call for assistance so imperative (certain detachments of our troops being in fact beleaguered by the insurgents), that the Government of India lost no time in requesting the C. in C. to exercise his authority, and to tender such recommendations as might be fitting to meet a state of war.

5. At the same time H.E. was made aware that the position of affairs, as respects British interests, was doubtful in the country of the Akhoond, the inference being that it might not be possible to localise the petty war in independent Hazara.

6. Accordingly, a military policy was now pursued, with the full sanction of Government, as H.E. believes, for the first time.

7. Thus, instead of weakening the garrison of Peshawur, or drawing troops from the posts along the border, according to the first recommendation which came from Major-gen. Wilde, it was determined to supply the force for operation from the rear stations in the Punjab and from the North-Western Provinces; whilst the whole front of the border stations which is held by the regular troops in Peshawur, and by the Punjab force along the border, was preserved intact.

8. The consequence was that for the time being, the force in the neighbourhood of the frontier was almost doubled.

9. H.E. had another object in view, in which he believes he has the happiness to be in complete accord with H.E. the Viceroy and his Honour the Lieut.-gov. of the Punjab.

10. This object was to show such an overwhelming body of troops in the disturbed districts as not only to render opposition unavailing, but to convince the tribes by the first demonstration that to offer further opposition in arms would be an act of madness.

11. H.E. believes that this is the only manner in which the Government of India should condescend to execute offensive operations against the border tribes. And as a matter of fact, it is only in such a mode that protracted hill campaigns can be avoided, with their consequences of extreme risk to small bodies of troops; of useless bloodshed amongst ourselves and the uncivilised enemy; and finally of loss of prestige along the border, the preservation of which is a matter of the greatest importance and State economy.

12. Accordingly, reasoning in this sense, all the troops stationed in Rawul Pindee* were at once transferred to Hazara: Abbottabad, the head quarters of that district, being about 65 miles from Rawul Pindee. The 20th N.I. marched a distance of 232 miles from Lahore to Abbottabad in ten days in the month of August. The 38th Foot moved in like manner from Sealkote, and finally reached Derboud, in Hazara. The 1st and 4th Goorkhas, coming from the distant hill stations of Bukloh and

* D Battery F Brigade Royal Artillery, E Battery 19th Brigade Royal Artillery, 2-24th Battery Royal Artillery, 1st Battalion 6th Foot, 1st Battalion 19th Foot, 2 Companies 77th Regiment, 16th Bengal Cavalry, 2nd Goorkha Regiment, 24th N.I.

Dhumsalla, emulated the exertions of the above corps, and joined General Wilde in a wonderfully short space of time, considering the distance traversed. The 31st N.I. having left Umballa was also able to take part in the campaign in its occupation of the Derbund with the 38th Foot, having marched a distance of 422 miles. Two companies of the Sappers and Miners actually covered nearly 600 miles by forced marches in 29 days in August and September, and were ready to take part in the advanced Guard of General Wilde's force.

13. Other regiments* left their several stations of Cawnpore, Allyghur, Umritsur, Lahore, and Campbellpore, and took post at Rawul Pindee as they arrived, and formed the immediate reserve to meet any eventuality as alluded to above, the 9th Cavalry having joined the brigade at Derbund.

14. In like manner troops were held in readiness at Peshawur and Nowshera to support the Guide Corps at Hote Murdan, which is opposite to the country of the Akhoond.

15. When it is recollected that all the necessary movements for these extensive strategic precautions were carried through in the deadly heats of August and September, there not having been a note of war until the end of July, it is impossible, his Excellency thinks, to exaggerate in terms the alacrity of the officers and soldiers in carrying out the orders for their concentration, or the efficiency of the Commissariat Department, aided by the civil officers, by which that concentration was rendered possible.

16. In correspondence with General Wilde, it was determined that the operating force, consisting of between 6,000 and 7,000 men immediately under his command, should be equipped in such a light manner as to ensure absolute mobility over the highest mountains in Hazara, and the absence, with the exception of the commissariat and ordnance trains, of all baggage. This measure was carried out, as reported by General Wilde, with great success.

17. The spectacle has been seen by British troops, European and native, operating over and among mountains 10,000 feet high, in bivouac for three weeks, the General in command himself being without a tent.

18. It is placed on record that the English regiments moved as easily and with as little incumbrance as the native; this fact even extending to the commissariat arrangement for rations. It is further shown that the health of neither English nor native troops suffered in any significant degree.

19. The political consequences of this experience are, H.E. ventures to observe, at least as important as the military ones.

20. H.E. thinks that a great lesson has been learnt in mountain warfare which should never be lost sight of in future hill campaigns in India; it being certain that in all operations the presence of heavy trains and comparatively useless baggage is more fatal to the initiative of the general in immediate command, than any positive resistance it may be in the power of the enemy to offer.

21. H.E. would now leave General Wilde to complete the narrative.

22. His movements for the taking of the passes and the occupation of the Muchia Peak were characterised by great skill and decision, the results of the submission of the tribes having quickly followed on the demonstration as had been originally anticipated.

23. After the taking of the Muchia Peak the troops remained, as shown in the Despatches, for a fortnight in the independent territory without molestation, except that of a very petty kind, for which the heads of tribes were made immediately responsible.

24. Although, in a spirit of humanity, as little devastation as possible was committed against those who had offended so deeply, heavy punishment was nevertheless inflicted on the particular leaders, viz., the Pyarree Syuds, who had shown marked inveteracy.

25. In the meantime the tribes of independent Hazara have learnt that British regular forces, with trains of ordnance, can, and on occasion will, penetrate the most difficult fastnesses, and carry fire and sword through glens which have hitherto been deemed inaccessible, and were never approached by the native predecessors of the British Government.

26. It will surely be understood, H.E. believes, along the entire border stretching from Peshawur to Scinde, that hostility on the part of border tribes will hereafter be met and curbed in like manner, and therefore it may be hoped that the Hazara Expedition may prove to have had a lasting effect.

27. H.E. would now invite the special notice of Government to the excellent services rendered by Major-gen. Wilde and the Political Commissioner, Major Pollock. The two authorities have acted throughout in consultation together, and in the most praiseworthy spirit of harmony. Major-gen. Wilde's care and self-sacrifice have been unremitting, and he has shown himself to be able to stand by his own judgment, when a weaker man might have grasped at personal opportunities of display, to the disregard of humanity and the wishes of his Government. It must be most satisfactory to him and to Major Pollock to have already learnt that they have earned the cordial approval of the Lieut.-gov.

28. H.E. also requests the favourable notice of Government of the manner in which Major-gen. Wilde records his opinion of the services performed by Brig.-gen. R. O. Bright, Brig.-gen. J. A. Vaughan, c.b., and the several commanding officers† of regiments.

29. Although not engaged in the active operations, Col. F. A. Willis, c.b., 38th Foot, commanding at Derbund, and the commanding officers‡ under his orders have done good service.

30. Sir William Mansfield would also beg to convey his own most favourable impression of the performance of their duty by Major C. C.

Johnson, asst. qmr.-gen., Major J. Morland, asst. adj.-gen., Lieut.-col. H. C. Johnstone, in charge of the survey, and of the several staff officers named by the brig.-gen. Sir William Mansfield would add to these the name of Capt. W. K. Elles, 38th Foot, dep. asst. adj.-gen. of the army, who, on account of his regiment being in the field, was sent to join the staff of the force under Gen. Wilde, from head quarters. Although this officer's name does not appear in the official report of recommendations, the omission has been corrected in a letter received by H.E. from Major-gen. Wilde.

31. H.E. most specially recommends to the notice of Govt. Lieut. col. O. E. Rothney, comdg. 5th Goorkha regt. of the Punjab force, who stood at bay for some time against the insurgents until he could be reinforced, he having moved out by a forced march of 40 miles on his own responsibility on the first intelligence of the insurrection in Agrore reaching him. Lieut. col. Rothney then fought an action of his own, the execution and result of which were greatly to his credit and of the troops engaged. When the force advanced under Major gen. Wilde, Lieut. col. Rothney was specially selected by him, on account of his experience and intelligence, to command the base at Oogie, which comprehended the direction of a portion of the Levies and Kashmir troops.

32. Col. E. Atlay, comdg. the royal art., is well known to Govt. as a very experienced and able officer. On this occasion his talent for organisation was expressed with great advantage to the State, and both in this matter and in the field operations he was admirably seconded by the several officers* comdg. batteries. Major T. Hughes, who lately vacated the comd. of the Peshawur Mountain battery, and had been wounded in Col. Rothney's affair, has also made himself conspicuous by his exertions.

33. H.E. would record, for the information of Govt., the admirable success of the commissariat arrangements, which are entirely due to Lieut. col. A. D. Dickens. H.E. had the satisfaction of serving with this officer many years ago in Lord Clyde's campaigns. The C. in C. was convinced that when he was able to recommend Lieut. col. Dickens for the charge of the commissariat, owing to his being at Rawul Pindee, the Govt. might rest assured that the troops would be well cared for in this most important particular. As reported by Gen. Wilde, H.E. conviction has been more than justified.

34. It is most pleasing to Sir William Mansfield to remark on the alacrity and good humour of the British soldiers and native sepoys in their long and forced marches to the scene of action, in the worst of weather, and in encountering the privation and exposure during their protracted bivouac. Their ardour to meet the enemy was of course to be expected; but it is most satisfactory to note that the bearing of the troops caused general admiration; and that their discipline stood the test, of all others the most difficult, of petty galling attacks, and of restraining their temper when ordered to do so by the gen. in districts lately hostile.

35. Government will observe Gen. Wilde's satisfactory report of the arrangements of the medical department under Dep.-ins.-gen. of Hospitals G. E. Morton. The activity displayed on all occasions by Lieut. W. B. Holmes, R.E., is also prominently brought to notice with the conduct of the officers commanding and attached to the sappers and miners. Here, also, I am to attract attention to the intelligent and devoted assistance rendered to Gen. Wilde by his aide-de-camp, Major W. H. Paget, 5th Punjab cavalry.

36. H.E. observes that, whether as regards the regiments of the line, the cavalry, sappers, artillery, or the military departments, the army seems to be as ready for active service, after long years of peace, as if it were just emerging from a general campaign. In short, the only characteristic of a peace establishment may be said to lie in the numerical weakness of individual corps. That numerical weakness is a matter of Government economy, but for the efficiency otherwise preserved, the C. in C. is sure that H.E. the Viceroy in Council will agree with him in thinking that the acknowledgments of Government are due to the commanding officers in their several degrees and the heads of administrative departments.

37. It is almost beyond H.E.'s province, but Sir William Mansfield cannot close this despatch without recording his high opinion of the services rendered by the regiments of the Maharajah of Cashmere, by the very chivalrous Khan of Umb, and the courageous perseverance displayed by the Hazara district levies before the reinforcement of troops arrived. In short, prior to this, a very active, though small, campaign fell to the lot of the Khan of Umb, the levies, and the troops under Col. Rothney.

No. 1.—From Major gen. A. Wilde, commanding Hazara field force, to the adjutant general, head quarters, Simla:—

Head Quarters, Hazara Field Force, Camp Oogie,
October 24, 1868.

Sir,—In the letters marginally noted,† I had the honour to report, for the information of his Honour the Lieut. governor of the Punjab, the disturbances that had occurred in the Valley of Agrore, district Hazara, and in the above communications the military precautions taken by me to preserve the peace of the border were fully explained.

2. Subsequently I received orders to report direct to army head quarters, as H.E. the C. in C. had assumed the direction of the military movements in this province. My reports to the quartermaster general, marginally quoted,‡ continue the history of events up to the time when the Hazara field force entered the hills on October 3, 1868.

* Lieut. Colonel G. A. Renny, v.c., D.F.R.A.; Major F. R. De Bude, Hazara Mountain Battery; Captain Minto Elliot, Peshawur Mountain Battery; Captain C. S. Jackson, 2-24th Royal Artillery.

† To the Military Secretary, Punjab Government:—No. 1, dated Aug. 6, 1868; No. 2, dated Aug. 6; No. 3, dated Aug. 6; No. 4, dated Aug. 7; No. 14, dated Aug. 8; No. 18, dated Aug. 9; No. 21, dated Aug. 10; No. 30, dated Aug. 10; No. 40, dated Aug. 11; No. 50, dated Aug. 15.

‡ To the Quartermaster General:—No. 51, dated Aug. 15, 1868; No. 64, dated Aug. 14; No. 5, dated Aug. 17; No. 7, dated Aug. 18; No. 9, dated Aug. 18; No. 16, dated Aug. 22; No. 31, dated Aug. 25; No. 45, dated Aug. 25; No. 76, dated Sept. 5; No. 106, dated Sept. 11; No. 171, dated Sept. 22.

* 30th N.I., 19th do., 23rd do., 9th Bengal cavalry, and 20th hussars.

† Lieut. col. C. H. Brownlow, 20th N.I.; Lieut. col. E. Chippindall, 1-19th Foot; Lieut. col. C. O. C. Osborne, 6th Foot; Lieut. col. H. T. Macpherson, v.c., 2nd Goorkhas; Lieut. col. G. N. Cave, 24th N.I.; Major D. Mocatta, 3rd Sikh Infantry; Major J. T. Rawlins, 1st Goorkhas; Major J. A. Tytler, v.c., 4th Goorkhas; Captain R. Topham, 16th Bengal Cavalry; Captain H. Tyndal, 2nd Punjab Infantry; Captain R. B. P. Campbell, Guides.

‡ Lieut. col. H. M. Wilson, Commanding 31st N.I.; Major H. L. Campbell, Commanding 9th Bengal Cavalry.

3. On July 30 a party of some 500 men of the hill tribes attacked the police station in the Agrore Valley. Through the fidelity and courage, however, of the police they were driven off with the loss of six men killed and several wounded. Lieut. col. O. E. Rothney, commanding at Abbotabad, immediately moved out the Peshawur mountain battery, 5th Goorkha regt., to the assistance of the police. From the date of the arrival of these troops in the Agrore Valley till Aug. 12, when a reinforcement of one infantry regt. and a squadron of cavalry enabled Lieut. col. O. E. Rothney to act on the offensive, the small garrison was beleaguered and annoyed by the assemblage of the tribes to the number of 4,000 or 5,000 men on the surrounding hills. At one time the position of the troops was the cause of much just anxiety, as in addition to the fact that the hill men were gradually working round and threatening the line of communication, the greater part of the inhabitants of the Agrore Valley itself had proved themselves to be inimical.

4. After repulse of the enemy on the 12th August, and until the final assembling of the Hazara field force at the end of September, nothing of any importance occurred, as the troops thrown into the district under the orders of H.E. the C. in C. effectually disarmed all resistance within British territory, and checked the hill men beyond.

5. I beg to record my admiration of the excellent service performed by the Nawab of Umb and by the Hazara levies. The loss inflicted in August upon the enemy was considerable, and the nature of the conflict carried on by our troops and levies is best illustrated by the casualty return marked A.—I have, &c.,

A. WILDE, Major-general,
Comdg. Hazara Field Force.

INDIAN ARTILLERY.—It has been decided that the future field artillery of India is to be armed with a muzzle-loading rifled gun. There are several points connected with this piece of ordnance which are, however, still undecided. It is not yet settled of what material the gun is to be, or of what method of manufacture. To decide this, as well as all details of carriage, ammunition, and fuses, a special artillery committee is to be assembled, under the presidency of Major-General Lefroy, R.A. The members of this committee will be Colonel Simpson, late of the Madras Artillery; Colonel Wray, C.B., late of the Bombay Artillery; Colonel Adye, C.B., R.A.; Colonel Middleton, C.B., R.A.; Colonel Maxwell, late of the Bengal Artillery, and Superintendent of the Gun Factory at Cossipore; and Colonel Reilly, C.B., R.A. This committee, the composition of which gives a good earnest of rapid and successful labour, is one of the first fruits of the reform of the Ordnance Select Committee which we announced some time ago as impending, and which, within the last few days, has been carried out. Notwithstanding the alarm expressed by some of our contemporaries, the reformed artillery committee will not interfere with the responsibilities and discharge of duties of the heads of the manufacturing departments in Woolwich Arsenal.—Daily Telegraph.

RAJCOLE, Nov. 15.—Two companies of H.M.'s 18th N.I. arrived in camp on the morning of the 2nd instant, to relieve H.M.'s 17th Regiment N.I. The latter regiment left for Porebunder on the 4th instant, and probably arrived there the day before yesterday. They were to embark yesterday, and proceed by sea to Nagotna, where they will land, and march to Kolapore via the Phonda Ghaut. The headquarters of the 18th N.I. are expected here about the 20th instant. Your Baroda correspondent is quite mistaken in supposing that the 17th Regiment applied for permission to go on with the building of the new lines commenced by the 18th Regiment N.I. It will be a long time before any regiment applies for permission to build lines, for it is anything but pleasant work. The real facts of the case are, I believe, that as the 17th Regiment had only a few years before built new lines at Nusseerabad, it was decided that they should not be troubled with the building of a second set of lines; and, accordingly, the 18th Regiment return to complete the work they commenced. The squadron of the 1st Light Cavalry is to be replaced by another squadron from the headquarters of the regiment at Deesa, and the 2nd Company Native Artillery will change places with the 1st Company now at Aden. The prospects of the race meeting are improving, and the secretary has heard of several horses coming from other stations. The meeting deserves support, for it really aims at improving the breed of Kattywar horses. I cannot say that I see any fine specimens of the Kattywar horse at present in training; but the best probably are in the stables of the native chiefs. The heat for the last month has been intense, and fever is very prevalent. I am sorry to hear, too, that the crops generally throughout Kattywar will be poor, owing to there not having been any late rains.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

It is rumoured that the proposition for abolishing the Board of Revenue, Lower Provinces, or rather amalgamating it with the Bengal Secretariat, will be carried out early in January next. In the meantime the details will be arranged, that is, immediately after the arrival of the Hon. Ashley Eden, the Bengal Secretary, who is expected from England early next month. By the proposed arrangements there will be another Secretary to the Government of Bengal, in the Revenue Department, as equally responsible as the Secretary in the General Department, and we suppose Mr. H. L. Dampier will be appointed to the post, and that another Covenanted Officer will be appointed to assist him.

Home.

H. M. S. "EUPHRATES."—SUEZ, Dec. 12.—Her Majesty's Indian troopship Euphrates arrived here to-day with the drafts of various regiments from India.

P. AND O. S. N. COMPANY.—At the annual meeting on the 8th inst. of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, Mr. P. D. Hadow in the chair, the report, a full extract of which we have already given, was adopted, and a dividend declared of 3 per cent., free of income-tax, for the six months ending 30th September last, making, with the distribution in June, 6 per cent. per annum.

EAST INDIA COMPANY.—A general meeting of the East India Company was held on the 9th inst. The accounts showed the security fund invested in Consols and Reduced Annuities to be £6,812,823. 11s. 8d., at a cost of £6,215,421. 18s. 3d. The investment account showed £13,616. 1s. 5d., at a cost of £12,283. 12s. 11d., and £5,000 in Exchequer Bills, at a cost of £5,006. 10s. 6d., making a total of £17,280. 3s. 5d. It was announced that the usual dividend on the stock would be paid on the 6th proximo.

MR. WILLIAM ABBOTT, the Conservative candidate for the City of Cork, has shown a spirit, notwithstanding the failure of his attempt to represent that city, above all praise. Through his agent, Mr. Lane, he has voluntarily contributed the sum of £700 to the various local charities and institutions of the place, amongst which we may mention £100 to the new Cathedral. He has acted throughout in a most independent and generous manner, silencing many of his determined opponents; and we hope that at the next election he may succeed.

RE AGRA AND MASTERMAN'S BANK.—On Monday last a case came up before Vice-Chancellor Giffard which concerned the claim of Mr. Cannan, as liquidator, against the Agra and Masterman's Bank. Mr. Cannan, it was generally allowed, had wound up the affairs of the bank in a very masterly way, and for this service he claimed £25,000. His own estimate had varied: once it had been £30,000, and afterwards it was reduced to £28,000. He was offered £7,000, and this he refused. The Vice-Chancellor awarded him £9,000, and the costs of making out the claim, taking as the basis of his calculation the Lord Chancellor's order as to the remuneration of liquidators according to the number of hours employed by them and their clerks. The Court was bound to say that in the liquidation Mr. Cannan had acted with great care and judgment.

BANK OF BOMBAY COMMISSION.—Sir Bartle Frere, the late Governor of Bombay, was examined before the Bombay Bank Commissioners at the New India Office, and objected to the production of certain papers which he had received from the Governor-General of India, and from the Secretary of State, which he considered were "privileged communications." The Chief Commissioner (Sir C. Jackson) said the commission had the same powers as the Courts at Westminster, and the only exception was that their production would be against the policy of the State. Sir Bartle Frere said it would be so. He was requested to attend on Thursday with the documents. The Commission met on Friday, the 11th, at the Grosvenor Hotel, Pimlico, to take the examination of Mr. Hannay, the director, and afterwards the president of the Bank. He had been staying at the hotel, and was too ill to attend at the new India office. On the conclusion of his evidence the inquiry will be completed, and the Commissioners will prepare a report to the Government. The losses of the Bank are £1,890,000, and the question is whether any or what portion should be borne by the Government. The matter will probably come before Parliament.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

THE CONVENTION OF ST. PETERSBURG.

The Pall Mall Gazette, quoting the reasons which influenced the Conference of St. Petersburg in coming to their extraordinary decision to interdict the use of a particular agent of war, declines to discuss the whole question afresh. The mischief, if there be any, is done now; and there is little to be said except that Russia has, under the guise of humane intentions, stolen a march upon her neighbours, by inducing them to forego whatever military advantage may attach to the use of a class of war material likely to be developed and perfected, if at all, by the more ingenious mechanical nations, and therefore unlikely to be a Russian product. The reasons alleged above prove what we had always feared, that the question was discussed on the narrowest basis and exclusively from one point of view. Was there not one member of the Convention who could sufficiently disembarass himself of the narrow considerations of the immediate discussion, and point out that the great loss of life in war occurs, not on the battle field, but in the camp and on the march, and during the weary months of inactivity or of bloodless campaigning—that an instrument which will tend to shorten campaigns by striking more terrible blows when the battle is set, tends not to increase but to diminish the aggregate amount of human suffering? Was there no one to point out that battles are not, as the plenipotentiaries assumed, decided merely by the number of men placed hors de combat? The French representative might usefully have borne in mind an oft-quoted saying of Marshal Marmont:—"Battles are decided not by the number of men killed, but by the number frightened"—a saying which admits of a very much more general application, and in which we may substitute the word "wars" for "battles." Was there no one, in short, to present that aspect of the case and those arguments which have been urged more than once in these columns, and which the Times has now employed with a new force? We have only one observation to add. Let this be the last concession of the sort on the part of England. Of all countries, she is the last which needs to vindicate her humanity by such clumsy contrivances. And if it be the last—if no general principle be recognised, no principle of trying to make war pretty and slaughter pleasant—then not much harm will have been done by the abandonment of this particular instrument of war.

A SUBMARINE TELEGRAPH TO INDIA.

The Times points out that the matter which still occupies the attention of merchants and others who desire a speedy communication with India, China, and Australia is whether the present or future land lines through Asia are sufficient for the service of the British Empire. We do not quarrel with the Government for having favoured the existing system, since there are undoubtedly weighty reasons on that side. They can adduce the failure of one Red Sea line, and the undeniable directness of the land route, as justifying their judgment. But it must be remembered that with the advance of science the conditions which the Government have to regard are every day changing, and that within the last three years the success of the Atlantic Cable has entirely revolutionised the ideas of the world on ocean telegraphy. The scheme which might have been looked upon as extravagant and foolhardy some years since is now within the scope of legitimate enterprise and of national support. Is, then, the prospect of regular and rapid land communication such that the British Government should not seek to create an independent line? The argument of Sir Stafford Northcote, that it is impossible geographically to carry a line to India without passing over some foreign territory, is by no means conclusive. From Alexandria to Suez is only a few miles, and the territory of the Viceroy of Egypt is as completely neutralised as any portion of the globe. There is no prospect that any political difficulty will ever prevent that line being worked. Then it is not necessary that the theory of absolute British control should be insisted upon if the line from Falmouth to Gibraltar, Malta, and Alexandria should be found too expensive. There will be no difficulty in sending messages across the European continent, nor need we despair of finding Governments willing to give this country the utmost facilities and considerable independence in the working of the telegraph. Land lines across Europe are in a very different condition from those which traverse the territory of half-civilised Governments or the haunts of wholly barbarous tribes. Putting aside all scientific considerations as to the means of preserving telegraphic lines when carried across tracts of country where they are exposed to all the fury of the elements, we think it incontestable that they are better at the bottom of the sea than on the path and before the eyes of savage tribes, who may at any time destroy them under the influence of superstition or blind hostility, or incited merely by the desire to possess themselves of the material. It is true, we may call to our aid the military power of the Empires through which the wires pass or that we may pay baksheesh to the chiefs of the tribes themselves; but that is at best an unsatisfactory and most insecure system, besides being necessarily expensive. This part of the subject, indeed, hardly needs argument, for we presume no impartial person would assert that a line through Asiatic Turkey or through Persia is essentially superior to one under the sea. The argument is that the sea line is impossible, or at least so liable to continual damage that no prudent investor ought to undertake and no Government to patronise it. The favourers of the land system speak of the coral reefs of the Red Sea as an insuperable bar to the rival enterprise. But every one must recollect how often obstacles have been called insurmountable up to the very hour that they have been overcome. The steamship, the railway, the Atlantic Telegraph itself, have been the subject of these dismal prophecies, and we feel no despair when it is declared that a submarine line will never be laid from Suez to Aden. If this be done we shall certainly have a more satisfactory means of communication than any which now exists. Should the cost of the construction and maintenance of sea lines diminish with the progress of science, we might have the Falmouth and Gibraltar line as suggested, but in any case the line from some port of Southern Europe to Bombay would be entirely under British control, and the European line might be carried across countries not likely to be hostile to us. Thus we should not only have a system comparatively free from derangement by natural accidents, but one in which the disturbing causes arising from the action of man are reduced to a minimum; and when we consider that communication is to be established not only with India, but with China, the Indian Archipelago, and Australia, to say nothing of Eastern and Southern Africa, there seems every reason to believe that the enterprise would have its reward.

MAILS TO INDIA, ETC.

The Mails to all parts of India, via Southampton, are now made up in London every Saturday at 8 A.M., and those via Marseilles every Friday, at 6 P.M.

For Ceylon, China, Straits Settlements, &c., the dates of despatch up to the end of December will be as follows, viz.:

Via Southampton, at 8 A.M., on the Saturdays, October 3rd, 17th, and 31st, November 14th and 28th, and December 12th and 26th.

Via Marseilles, at 6 P.M., on the Fridays, October 9th and 23rd, November 6th and 20th, and December 4th and 18th.

INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

INDIA OFFICE, 1st December, 1868.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That an EXAMINATION OF CANDIDATES FOR TWENTY APPOINTMENTS AS ASSISTANT-SURGEONS in her Majesty's Indian Medical Service will be held at CHELSEA HOSPITAL, on the 8th February, 1869.

Copies of the Regulations for the Examination of Candidates, together with information regarding the Pay and Retiring Allowances of Indian Medical Officers, may be obtained on application at the Military Department, India-office, Westminster, S.W.

T. T. PEARS, Major general,
Military Secretary.

INDIA OFFICE, 10th December, 1868.

BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That it is intended to SEND TO INDIA annually a certain NUMBER OF YOUNG MEN, Trained and Educated for ultimate EMPLOYMENT in the Higher Branches of the Department for the Conservation and Management of the FORESTS under the Government of India.

Eight Young Men will be selected in February next to go to India at the end of 1871.

The Salary will be at first £300 a-year, and the salaries of the appointments in the three Presidencies range between that sum and £1,000 a-year. Promotions will depend upon efficiency, and the occurrence of vacancies in the higher grades.

Applicants must be British subjects above seventeen and under twenty-five years of age.

As active habits and a strong constitution are most important, Candidates will have to undergo a strict Medical Examination.

They must send to the Revenue Department of the India-office, on or before the 8th of January, 1869, a statement of their names and parentage, with a certificate of birth, and of being possessed of a competent knowledge of the following subjects, and they must be prepared to undergo an examination in them:—

1. English writing from dictation and English composition.
2. Arithmetic in all its branches.
3. Algebra, elementary principles, simple and quadratic equations, ratios, and proportions, logarithms, arithmetical and geometrical progression.
4. Geometry (1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 6th Books of Euclid), and plane trigonometry.
5. Free hand and plan drawing.
6. A good colloquial knowledge of either French or German, with the facility to read and translate the works of some classical writer in the language.

A preference will be given to those Candidates who obtain a certain proficiency in—

1. Surveying and land measuring.
2. The elements of any of the following natural sciences:—
Mechanical and natural philosophy.
Chemistry.
Botany.
Geology.

If selected, they will be further required to go through a course of training and instruction in Forestry and cognate sciences for two years and a-half, in France or Germany, previous to their departure for India, and the Secretary of State will contribute £50 at the end of each half-year towards the expenses of their training, in the case of such Candidates as are favourably reported on by their instructors. In addition to this, if it should be found practicable, the young men will be required to place themselves under an approved Forester in Scotland for a few months before they go out to India.

More detailed information as to these appointments may be had on application to the Under Secretary of State for India, India-office, Westminster.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

With the advent of the inclemencies of winter many infirmities will arise unless effective means for preventing or checking their courses be adopted. No lingering hoarseness nor shortness of breath on slight exertion should be permitted to continue a single day without measures being taken for their removal, more especially when remedial means are safe, rapid, and effective; these qualities are displayed in a high degree by Holloway's preparations. The Ointment rubbed upon the skin draws surplus blood from congested structures, and gives immense relief to every oppressed organ concerned in the respiration and the circulation. This wholesome effect externally, aided by the alterative action of the Pills internally, dispels all danger from latent mischief.

THE NEW INDIAN NOVEL, OUT OF THE MESHES.

"It has the rare union of instructiveness concerning a mass of obscure points Indian, with the constructive attractiveness of a natural, simple, and interesting story. There is a generous appreciation of the good in things, with a genial satire of the bad; there is pathos and there is comedy. There has been no better romantic début for many a long book-season than this first appearance of the author of 'Out of the Meshes.'"Morning Post.

"It is a clever, amusing book, and there is a thread of deep and dark interest running through the web of the light, bright sketches. The work contains many details of the Mutiny, which seem to be the records of personal experience. The conclusion of the story is extremely well given, and it is worked up to a pitch of painful interest."Athenium.

"The heroine is a very lively bit of painting. She is made really fascinating in spite of her instability and coquetry, and the reader is not expected to take her fascinating qualities on the personal assurance of the author. . . . The physical conditions of Indian life are reproduced with singular vividness and force."Spectator.

"Our author has obviously complete familiarity with the scenes and characters he describes. Their local colour is admirable."Globe.

"A picture which never wants gleams of humour and wit, and even of pathos. India has often been drawn upon by novel writers, but the author of 'Out of the Meshes' has managed, by his powers of sensitive and accurate observation, and his general cheerfulness of vision, to produce a very clever and pleasant book from the old materials."London Review.

LIVES OF INDIAN OFFICERS,

Illustrative of the History of the Civil and Military Services of India.

BY JOHN WILLIAM KAYE,

Author of "The History of the War in Afghanistan," &c., &c.

Contents.

The Rev. HENRY MARTIN.	Sir HENRY LAWRENCE.
Sir CHARLES METCALFE.	General JAMES NEILL.
Sir ALEXANDER BURNES.	Brig.-gen. JOHN NICHOLSON.
LORD CORNWALLIS.	Captain ARTHUR CONOLLY.
Sir JOHN MALCOLM.	Major ELDRED POTTINGER.
The Hon. MOUNTSTUART ELPHINSTONE.	Major D'ARCY TODD.
	Appendix, &c.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"I am not without a hope that these memoirs may be regarded, in some sort, as a Biographical History of India from the days of Cornwallis to the days of Canning. . . . I have not attempted, indeed, to write History; the work has grown up spontaneously out of the Lives of the great men who make history . . . and, unless the ability of the execution has fallen far short of the sincerity of the design, I have done something, in these pages, to do honour to a race of public servants unsurpassed in the history of the world. . . . I have striven to show how youths, from the middle-class families of our British Islands, have gone forth into the great Eastern world, and by their own unaided exertions carved their way to fame and fortune.

"J. W. KAYE."

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

From the ATHENIUM.

"We say at once that more admirably-written and interesting narratives are scarcely to be found in any literature. We do not envy the man who could read without deep emotion the lives here given of Conolly, Lawrence, and Nicholson; and we doubt whether the whole range of history can show more perfect characters. Nobler subjects of biography could not have been chosen, and higher praise it is impossible to bestow on a writer than to say, as we do of this author, that he is fully equal to such a theme. . . . Mr. Kaye's 'Lives of Indian Officers' will take a high place among the standard books of England."

From the SPECTATOR.

"A cadet, an artillery officer, an editor, an employee of the first rank, a successful historian, Mr. Kaye unites in his own person all the qualifications requisite to the biographer of the great Indian soldiers."

From the EXAMINER.

"Two stout volumes of biography, which, arranged chronologically, have, in addition to their biographical interest, great historical value as illustrations of the progress of political government, warlike exercise, and philanthropic effort in India during the last three generations. It is a work of remarkable interest; the interest being due not only to the stirring subjects of which it treats, but also to the admirable way in which the subjects are treated."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

Mrs. Forbes, wife of the Chaplain at Paris.—"I cannot speak too highly of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne; I have not in any single instance been disappointed with the result, even in aggravated cases of Indian Cholera."

Extract from Medical Times, Jan. 12, 1866.—"Chlorodyne is prescribed by scores of orthodox medical practitioners. Of course it would not thus be singularly popular did it not supply a want and fill a place."

Extract from the General Board of Health, London, as to its efficacy in Cholera.—"So strongly are we convinced of the immense value of this remedy, that we cannot too forcibly urge the necessity of adopting it in all cases."

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "108 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 1d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. WHITMORE'S COMPOUND LINIMENT OF ARNICA.

TISM, LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, SPRAINS, CON-
TUSIONS, WEAKNESS of the JOINTS, CHILBLAINS,
&c. It is also an excellent remedy as a stimulating application to the surface of the chest and back in bronchitis, inflammation of the lungs, pulmonary consumption, and whooping cough. When the liver is inactive, rubbed over it, its stimulating properties have a beneficial effect, and in all cases where counter irritation is desirable, it will be found invaluable.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

WILKINSON'S BRONCHIO-THORACIC LOZENGES.

Prepared from the receipt of an eminent Physician, and experience has fully justified their recommendation as the most speedy remedy in irritation of the throat, catarrhal coughs, bronchitis, incipient consumption, spitting of blood, &c., &c. To public speakers and vocalists they will be found invaluable, as they impart a clear and beautiful tone to the voice. Free from any preparation of opium, and of an agreeable taste, they are applicable
to all.

In bottles of one uniform size.

WHITMORE'S STOMACHIC DINNER PILLS.

No Pill is so efficacious in promoting digestion, strengthening the stomach, correcting acidity, preventing or removing headache, giddiness, &c., arising from a costive habit, debilitated stomach, or torpid liver.

They require no change of diet, and those of the most delicate constitution may take them with safety.

Taken as an adjunct with WILKINSON'S SARSAPA-
RILLA with the greatest success.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

Prepared by THOMAS WILKINSON (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

invalids and children.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED
STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No
chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body."
It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation
of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent
Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed
not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft
and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection
impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell.
Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. Webb's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free
by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL
LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great
Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite
resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 229, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.,
postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.;
postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Postoffice, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic
and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness
and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c.
It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

NESS, SHORTNESS of BREATH, and other PUL-MONARY MALADIES.

RECENT TESTIMONIAL.

August 23, 1868.
Dear Sir,—Having tried your Cough Lozenges in India,
I have much pleasure in testifying to their beneficial effects in cases of incipient consumption, asthma, and bronchial affections; so good a medicine ought to be known to be appreciated. I have prescribed it largely with the best results. W. B. G.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, November 28; Agra, November 24; Calcutta and Madras, November 23.

We begin to hear at last something more about the defeat of Abdurrahman Khan, the mere announcement of which was telegraphed to this country some weeks ago. The scene of his last unsuccessful stroke for power was Bamian, where the flying Dost Mohammed was once taken prisoner by our troops. Shere Ali himself had got, it seems, as far as Jellalabad on his way to Peshawar, when his steps were turned back by the news of his nephew's advance on Kabul. The Ameer himself commanded his own troops in the hard-fought battle that ensued. His general, Fattah Mohammed Khan, has been sent off towards Balkh in pursuit of the beaten and clearly disorganised foe. This utter rout of a once victorious commander should go far to secure the victor on his hitherto unsteady throne. The want of money which had driven him to make unpopular demands on those who could supply it, will doubtless disappear under the wholesome influence of such a victory; and if the Ameer has anything of his father's spirit, he may yet keep what he has won.

ON his way down from Simlah to Calcutta Sir John Lawrence paid a visit to the Lawrence Asylum at Sanawar, near Kussowlie, and opened the Umballa section of the Punjab Railway at Umballa. On the former occasion he inspected and addressed the “young soldiers of the Lawrence Asylum” in a speech full of tender allusions to the noble brother who founded that great institution, and laboured for its welfare to the day of his death. The lusty cheers which greeted his request for a week's holiday would have made the hearts of some disciplinarians ache again to think of the waste of so much precious time. At Umballa, on the 13th November, a more imposing solemnity awaited his appearance. After a ride on the newly-opened line to Seharunpore and back, a grand breakfast was discussed by the Viceroy and some three hundred guests;

General Abbot, agent of the railway company, presiding. After the breakfast came a number of appropriate toasts and speeches, the General himself leading off with some neat allusions to the Sutlej campaign and the Indian Mutiny, which brought in a compliment to the Viceroy for the share he had taken in promoting Indian railways. What indeed would Sir John and every other Englishman in India not have given for a railway from Lahore to Delhi in 1857! General Abbot then put in a word for the “missing link” from Kotree to Mooltan, for the completion of Kurrachee Harbour, and lastly for the short road to India by the Euphrates Valley, a line which “must”—he said—“eventually be, and your Excellency may add lustre to your name by hastening its construction.” The Viceroy in his answer described the progress already made on the Delhi line, and spoke as if in a very few years the Punjab would be linked “on one side with Kurrachee southward by the valley of the Indus, on the other side eastward with Calcutta by the valley of the Ganges.” Contrasting the old rates of travelling by boat and palkie with the speed of steam, Sir John reminded his hearers of the great cost of building railways in India—at present about £19,000 a mile—owned that 45,000 miles of railway, the amount already completed in America, would not be too much for India, but asked how, at the present average cost, we could “ever hope to attain this desideratum.” If the cost however could be cut down to £10,000 a mile, nearly twice as much progress would be made.

MR. HENFREY, one of the railway contractors, touched on the inherent laziness of native workmen who have sometimes to be forced to earn a good day's wages and never do more than a fraction of the day's work done by an Englishman. But he went on to bear handsome witness to the skill of native handicraftsmen in every kind of work required for a railway. And he laid due stress on the advantages of public undertakings which transferred nearly fifty out of the eighty millions already spent on railways into—he could not say the pockets but—the hands of the working classes.

It is now possible to get into a train at Umballa and find yourself at Calcutta forty-five hours afterwards. Such at least is the recorded experience of some gentlemen of the viceregal staff, who did the distance—about 1,150 miles—in the time stated, thus travelling at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour, stoppages included. What a difference from the time spent on the road even in the advanced days of the ghari-dawk! But the pleasure of the older and slower modes at certain seasons can never be equalled by the new.

THE famine begins to press sore upon the land. In Marwar especially the people who have not yet emigrated know not where to turn for food. In default of their accustomed bajra, numbers of them are living on roots and the bark of trees, ground up and mixed with what atta or bajra they can get for the making of their chupatties. In due time fever and dysentery will play havoc with these poor wretches, thus deprived of their natural food. To a country so isolated as Rajpootana relief of any kind comes but slowly. Colonel Keatinge no doubt is doing his best to lead native action among the ruling classes aright. The Rana of Oodipore has at length followed good example by removing all restrictions on the trade in grain throughout Meywar. The official accounts from the Punjab to the 1st November are full of gloom. Those from the North-West are but little more cheering. Throughout India the price of grain is steadily rising, so widespread is the growing scarcity.

In speaking on Colonel Norman's Bill for consolidating and amending the Articles of War for the native Indian troops, Sir W. Mansfield forestalled an objection that might be raised against a clause which limits the jurisdiction of summary courts-martial. It would be a complete mistake, he said, to suppose that the limitation in question would restrict the military powers of the commanding officer. From his own experience in Bombay, and afterwards during his present command, Sir William could point to many cases in which the powers of summary courts had been misapplied; certain officers, "not well versed in law," having actually held such courts "to try offences against themselves and even against their own property." Article 93 therefore of the new Bill merely provides that offences by which a commanding officer is personally aggrieved, and crimes of a fraudulent character, shall not, as a rule, be brought before a summary court-martial, that is before the complainant himself, without reference beforehand to superior military authority. Against such a provision, which really abates in no way the commanding officer's rightful powers, it seems idle to complain if without it officers will overstep the bounds of law, reason, and fairplay. All checks are expedient that tend to debar prosecutors from being their own judges.

THE newborn trade with Central Asia through Ladakh seems likely to beget a brisk demand for other Indian products than tea, cotton and woollen goods, and spices. Dr. Cayley tells us that some bales of fine figured muslins of bright colours, which in Calcutta cost Rs. 6 the piece, were readily bought by the Yarkundie merchants at Rs. 16, which after all deductions for carriage would leave the sellers a profit of more than 100 per cent. The showiest of the muslins were in special request for the Yarkundie women, and in the Yarkund markets would fetch Rs. 25 the piece. In exchange for our wares the Yarkundies offer any amount of pushm, silk, bhang, felts, carpets, stone ornaments, and even gold. Unless the Russian advance towards Yarkund and Kashgar proves aught more real than the mare's nest we take it to be, this new development of our Indian trade ought to take root and flourish like a banian-tree in Bengal. The Yarkundies ask and offer high prices for everything, as if they were a thriving and comfortable race. Let us hope that our rivalry with Russia will always be confined to questions of peaceful trade. In this direction at least India has little enough to fear.

A POWERFUL ally has come to General Abbot's aid in the controversy touching the true site of Alexander's Aornos. In a late number of the Friend of India an officer who has been surveying the whole frontier from Sindh to Cashmere since 1855 pronounces undoubtingly in favour of the view which finds Aornos in the Mahabun. Of the two other theories to which we referred a few weeks back, this new authority holds that Mr. Loewenthal's is "not worth arguing about," while General Cunningham's is "utterly absurd." Mr. Loewenthal, it seems, stands bravely by his own conclusions in favour of a site on the hills opposite Attok, which are full of ruined fortifications; but his views are clearly at variance with the conditions implied in the classic narrative. At Ranigat again are the ruins of a very large city, on "a huge natural rock such as are common in the Trans-Indus hills." The writer in question shrinks from seeming "bumptious" in deciding summarily against General Cunningham, but "if you could only go over the ground you would see how utterly absurd" is the selection of Ranigat. After repeated surveys of the surrounding country from the most commanding centres, he can see no other solution than the identity of Aornos with Mahabun, which means not the peak so called in the maps, but another 7,471 feet above the sea, whence high spurs run north and south, while the main ridge wanders far away to the west. "Aornos is Mahabun with all its belongings, the main peak being the key." Mahabun abounds in water and forage, and could hold any number of people. It lies, as Aornos did, a little off the road taken by Alexander, along the left bank of the Cabul River, before he turned south to cross the Indus at the Neelab ferry, a few miles below Attok. And like Aornos it is an excellent place of shelter, a conspicuous vantage-ground for purposes of precaution and defence.

THE little Portuguese settlement of Goa is engaged in equipping a little force to aid the Portuguese settlers in Mozambique, who are trying to make head against a rebellion there. The Goa Government are raising a loan of Rs. 2,50,000 for the equipment of 600 men and some artillery.

A new version of both Civil and Military Furlough Rules has just been published in the Gazette of India. This is the third or fourth variation on the original draft—how many more are coming? In the present case the changes are apparently of a minor kind; but our readers will next week be able to compare the latest edition with the one we published in July.

WE are glad to find that the stories begotten of Mr. Gladstone's visit to Lord Salisbury have proved to be as groundless as to us they certainly seemed. It is but another instance of the readiness with which your average club-lounger jumps to a conclusion from the very slightest premiss, that such a visit, which might mean anything or nothing, should have at once suggested the notion of Lord Mayo's supersession by the Marquis of Salisbury. The thing, no doubt, was just possible, but a little regard for present circumstances would have shown its great improbability. Was it likely for instance that a premier not yet fairly installed in his post would take the invidious, ill-natured, if not wholly unwarrantable step of recalling a viceroy who has already set foot in India, without some show of a fair trial, merely because he had been sent out by a former Ministry? Mr. Gladstone's well-known scrupulousness alone forbids the notion. Still less was it likely that a nobleman of Lord Salisbury's influence and prospects would accept an appointment in a distant country, hampered by the conditions of service under a chief of another party and of a character as unbending as his own. Of his lordship's remarkable fitness to rival the renown of Lord Dalhousie, there is of course no question. But would he go out, even if Lord Mayo did not stand in the way? And would Sir John Lawrence care to keep the place warm for him?

A GREAT many members of the Bombay Civil Service have memorialised the Secretary of State for India about the working of the Annuity Fund. As the contributions to this fund go on during the whole period of service—an average of more than thirty years—it follows that many of the contributors spend their money in vain by dying either before or soon after their retirement. The complainants reckon that in the last ten years some five and a-half lakhs of rupees have lapsed to the State, either through early deaths or over-payments on the part of survivors. The memorialists ask for such changes in the fund as will best advantage the service that supports it, and admit of some increase in retiring allowances.

THE latest mail steamer from Bombay reached Suez on December 19, and is therefore due here on Monday, the 28th.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, December 23, 1868.

THE WAHABEES IN BENGAL.

OUR countrymen in India seem to have a peculiar knack of sniffing danger from all sorts of unlikely or quiet-seeming quarters. Now that the Hazara Highlanders have settled down again after their mild dose of Snider bullets, and that General Kaufmann is found to be still many miles away from the Changchenmoo Valley, they would draw our attention to a yet more alarming movement of which our own provinces contain the abiding centre. According to the Englishman and the Friend of India, it is not the Wahabees on the frontier but their brethren and fellow-plotters in Bengal, whom we have most reason to fear. All Mohammedan India is said to be continually seething with hopes and purposes, to which these bands of Mussulman fanatics impart from time to time renewed strength. In the divisions of Bhagulpore, Rajshaye, and Dacca, where the Mussulman element most prevails, these Wahabee plotters are said to have widely infected the minds of the Mohammedan peasantry with vague dreams of a day at hand when all the lands of their Hindu or infidel neighbours shall become theirs, rent-free, and the green flag shall once more float triumphant over the breadth of Hindustan. Recently-discovered papers, implicating Mohammedans of mark and good repute for loyalty, point to Moorshedabad as a leading centre of disaffection. Patna itself, that proverbial hot-bed of Mussulman intrigue, has retired into the background since the successful raid carried out by the Indian Government in 1864; but two new depots of secret insurrection—one at Islampore, near the railway-station of Pakour in Chota Nagpore, the other at Soorujghur, between Patna and Monghyr—have been opened by some of those who escaped conviction in the State trials of 1864 and 1865.

One of these arch-plotters, Ibrahim Mundul by name, has at length been caught and lodged in the Rajmahal jail. His life for many years past has been devoted to plotting against the Government. He was described officially in 1865 as "a very active agent," who came to Patna eight years before with money and means for carrying on the Jihad whose ultimate starting-point lay across the frontier. The head of the Soorujghur depot, one Abdool Gunnie, a hide-seller, was formerly secretary to the Patna conspirators, who sent him to look after the recruiting-depot at Tanesar. Both these men have for years been driving a lucrative trade in the patriotic process of forwarding recruits to the Wahabee colony across the Indus. Other men in a hundred towns and villages are always at work preaching up the duty that lies on all good Mussulmans of aiding the holy cause with their persons or their purses; and for years past there has been no lack either of recruits or money for an end as dear to Mohammedan zealots in India, as the establishment of an Irish Republic is to Fenian visionaries in the Green Isle.

There seems good reason to believe that India has long been honeycombed with secret societies fed by a common hatred of the existing rule. And far from surprising is it that popular disaffection should take in India the same form which it has continually taken in other countries where the people and the governing classes are opposed to each other by creed or race. Happily for us the great bulk of our Hindoo subjects bear no particular grudge against the conquerors who have given them peace and order, and general freedom of speech and worship, in exchange for any loss of national independence. But to the thirty million Mohammedans in British India our rule is simply odious in spite of all compensations. They are by nature much less patient of a foreign yoke than the Hindoos. They cannot forgive us for having wrested the ancient sceptre from their hands. They hate us for our religion, for our domineering ways, for the checks which our system of government places on their ambition, for the very justice with which we force them to abstain from outraging their neighbours' creeds and prejudices. All through the Mutiny the Mussulmans were our worst and most determined foes. It was they who lighted the fires and fanned most sedulously the flames of revolt. Untamed by the lessons of that time, they have lately been fired afresh by the strong Puritan enthusiasm of the Wahabee reformers, who are doing for Islam what the Saints of Cromwell's day did for English Protestantism. With this element of unrest and trouble we must continue to reckon for many a long day. But there is no occasion to worry about it overmuch, or to launch out into acts of unseemly panic on account of a danger easy enough to meet without any great stretch of lawful power. The timely seizure of the ringleaders in this new plot and a few well-concerted raids on the recruiting-depots will answer every purpose of temporary repression. Time alone can materially abate the feeling which begets these plots and gives volume to these movements. Repeated failures ought to teach our Mohammedan subjects the lesson of contentment with existing ills. Already we are told that a reaction against the Wahabee movement has begun. Some of those who have borne active part in the crescentade on the frontier have come home again disgusted and disenchanted, to teach their neighbours the folly of paying large subscriptions towards a hopeless or a worthless cause. It may be that such experiences will bear fruit in due season. Anyhow we can well afford to watch quietly and strike only at worthy game.

All this, if it be true, tends to throw a clearer light on the recent doings in Hazara. Is it after all a fact that the gathering of so many thousand troops on that part of the frontier, in seeming punishment of a petty border raid, pointed to the imminence of a widespread explosion connected with the Wahabee organisation in Bengal? Are we to suppose that all along the frontier a train was laid, which might a little later have burst forth in a general uprising of furious Pathans, aided on the one hand by men and arms from Kabul, on the other by money and prayers from Bengal and the Deccan? If the Indian Government believed in such a likelihood, they were right in acting as they did. But we strongly doubt the existence of good reasons for such a belief.

BONUS COMPENSATION.

It is much to be regretted that the Bonus Compensation Committees in the three Presidencies have failed so signally to set at rest the dissatisfaction which has kept fermenting among officers of the Indian Army ever since the Amalgamation of 1858. Limited as they were by their instructions, they might at any rate have carried them out in a far more liberal spirit than they have done. As things are, the whole scheme of compensation for money spent in buying out seniors has resulted in a melancholy farce, and the sting of disappointment has been sharpened by the feeling that they who ought to have shown most sympathy with the sufferers have joined in mocking at their complaints. "Et tu Brute!" is the thought which a large number of officers are now audibly expressing with regard to the awards of these Committees. When claims of hundreds of pounds, put forth in the best faith and confirmed by antecedent likelihoods, are answered by awards of ten or twenty pounds, and not seldom by awards of nothing at all, on pleas which cannot bear a moment's calm peruspension, is it possible that the aggrieved will admit the justice of such an issue to all their long-deferred hopes? They were willing to accept the half-loaf seemingly offered by Lord Cranborne in 1866; but the Barmecide feast to which they have since been invited has proved too much for their proverbial patience. If their natural guardians will not befriend them, unto Cæsar they will go. If the half-loaf be thus steadily refused them, what wonder that their efforts are once more directed to beseeching Parliament for a formal concession of the whole?

"He gives twice over who gives quickly," is one of those trite principles which men in power are continually overlooking. Had Lord Canning preferred sound policy to legal technicalities, the "European Mutiny" would not have happened, and eight or nine thousand men would not have taken their discharge at a very heavy cost to the Indian Government. Had the Indian officers in the present case been offered years ago some small set-off for their forfeit bonuses, they would not now be bent on obtaining full value for the same. The payment of a few thousand a-year for half-a-dozen years or so from the Indian Treasury would have been so mere a "fleabite"—to use the late Premier's synonym for a far more serious burden—that the wisdom of keeping up an old sore in order to shirk so trifling a consideration does seem to us the reverse of credible.

That the officers in question have everything in their favour except a legal quibble, it certainly seems hard for any impartial observer to deny. According to Act 21 and 22 Victoria, cap. 106, it is provided that "the military forces of the East India Company shall . . . be entitled to the like pay, pensions, allowances, and privileges, and the like advantages as regards promotion and otherwise, as if they had continued in the service of the said Company." Again, on introducing the Amalgamation Bill of 1860 into the Upper House, Lord Derby declared that, so far as the Bill related to individuals and bodies, "they shall have reserved to them all the RIGHTS, PRIVILEGES, AND EXPECTATIONS, which they were led to form at the time of their admission into the service." When the Bill came before the Commons, Sir Charles Wood, after a vain struggle against the juster tendencies of those around him, at length yielded to the sense of the House, declared that there would be "no change in the position of officers," and in pledge of such arrangement avowed his willingness to "accept the amendments of the Right Honourable member for Oxfordshire [Mr. Henley] with respect to the rights and privileges of the officers and soldiers of the local army in India."

One of those rights, privileges, advantages, expectations, whichever term best suits the fact, was the practice among officers of retiring on a bonus subscribed by their juniors according to the scale prevailing in each regiment; each officer paying his regulated share. The senior lieutenant, for instance, received on retiring eight hundred or even a thousand pounds; the senior captain perhaps twice or thrice as much. This practice had taken such root that, in 1837, the Court of Directors, writing out to the Governor-general, could "see no necessity for interfering with the arrangements" made by junior officers for "adding to the comforts of a senior officer on his retirement from the Service;" and the Indian Government formally avowed its belief that the bonus system "must conduce to the contentment of the officers and the efficiency of the Service." In furtherance of these views the Court of Directors set aside an old rule which seemed at variance with the new practice.

How thoroughly the bonus system came to be embodied in the framework of the Indian army, was shown by the protests of so many Anglo-Indian officials against the amalgamation of the two armies. Listen, for instance, to Sir James Outram, the Bayard of India, pleading that the amalgamation would inflict grievous injuries on six thousand gentlemen in the Local Army, among other things in respect of the retiring-funds to which "they had subscribed in hopes of afterwards receiving equal bonuses themselves." Another dissentient, now Sir Henry Durand, of the Supreme Council, dwelt on the vested rights of Indian officers in the matter of the bonus. "The hard-earned savings of many officers have been invested in purchasing out senior officers, with the reasonable expectation of profiting in their turn when they retired." These gentlemen indeed belonged to the army; but their own interest in upholding the right in question was no greater in fact than that of civilians like Mr. Willoughby, who held that amalgamation would "violate the Parliamentary guarantee," and "involve heavy compensation for bonuses, to which the officers would have as much right as those in the Queen's army." Several other of Mr. Willoughby's colleagues in the old India-house government wrote or spoke to similar effect, and their opinions ought to be conclusive touching the formal sanctions of the system for which they pleaded.

All cause for further doubt on this point was removed by the opinion of Lord Cranworth's Commission, as published in their Report of November, 1863. Therein the Commissioners show how it became "the interest of the junior officers to induce their seniors to retire from the service;" how "a practice prevailed of raising subscriptions among the officers, to be given by way of bonus to a senior officer to induce him to retire;" and how rarely it happened "that any officer would retire without the benefit of such a bonus." And they go on to say that "this practice, though lately decided to be illegal, was certainly acquiesced in by the East India Company." The absolute legality of the practice is neither here nor there, although it would be easy to show that one decision on a narrow point of law supplies no solid ground for affirming the illegality of a custom which the Court of Directors had sanctioned for years past in the case of their own officers. Even in the Queen's Army the sums paid for the buying out of officers are only legal up to a certain amount; but the illegal surplus is openly and continually paid nevertheless; and Mr. Trevelyan, in proposing to abolish the purchase system, made a point of offering compensation, not for the legal only, but for the illegal value also of an officer's commission.

The question however is not one of law, but of common justice as it would strike any disinterested reader of the foregoing statements. Parliament has twice guaranteed the old rights, privileges, and so forth of the old Indian army. We have seen how decisively all those who were best acquainted with the facts of the bonus system have spoken to the question of its forming a part of the rights and privileges so guaranteed. It is absolutely certain that the system was formally and deliberately sanctioned by the East India Company, whose obligations on all points of public moment were formally taken over by the new masters of British India. And it is hardly less clear that the justice of this particular claim was virtually admitted in 1866 by Lord Cranborne, so far at least as concerned the repayment to Indian officers of money actually spent by them in the purchase of steps. It now remains to see whether Parliament will make good its own reaffirmed pledges, or allow them to be overridden by a piece of legal casuistry; whether a certain number of deserving officers shall at length reap the fruits of a patience sorely tried, or be doomed once more to illustrate the unpleasant truth that justice even in England too often goes by favour, that the weakest here as elsewhere is sent to the wall.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

IMPROVEMENT OF LAND IN THE NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES.

The Englishman admits that if the provisions of the Bill to facilitate the Improvement of Land in the North-Western Provinces applied only to the case of tenants having a right of occupancy, they would be beyond all objection, whether on grounds of equity or economy. But applying, as they do, to the case of tenants-at-will also, it appears to us that they cannot be defended, unless we first assume as a principle that private rights should only be suffered as far as they are consistent with economy. However reasonable such a principle might be per se, it is evident that to act up to it under existing circumstances would involve an entire reconstruction of society. Carried out to its legitimate conclusions, indeed, it would abolish landed aristocracies altogether, if it did not also abolish private ownership of land. We have no hesitation, therefore, in condemning the North-Western Provinces' Land Improvement Bill, as a whole, as in the highest degree inequitable, and probably impolitic. The Act not only confers on tenants possessing rights of occupancy, the liberty to dig wells, plant trees, and make any other improvement on their lands without the consent of their landlords, and the right to receive compensation for such improvements, in case of the landlord bringing a suit for ejection or enhancement of rent, but extends similar privileges and rights, with the exception of that of planting trees, to tenants-at-will. In other words, the Bill enables the tenant-at-will to create by his own acts a bar, though not an absolute one, to the termination of his tenancy. A landlord can sue a tenant of either description for ejectment for negligent culture, resulting in the deterioration of the land, a most just and important provision, and a tenant-at-will for planting timber trees without his consent; and the Bill proposes to give the Court a discretion to substitute compensation for ejectment in the case of both tenants having rights of occupancy and tenants-at-will. In the case of the former this discretion is properly protective of the tenant, and in the case of the latter of the landlord, since it would be very small compensation for the ruin of his land to permit him to anticipate by a few months the ejection of a tenant whom he would, without any such provision, be at liberty to oust at the end of the year.

THE HAZARA CAMPAIGN.

The Friend of India remarks that the despatch of Sir William Mansfield on the Hazara campaign is written in a high key which only the peace of the frontier for the next generation will justify. Many of his Excellency's remarks are well deserved, others are open to question. It will be observed that the Commander-in-Chief attaches quite as much and as serious importance to the cause of the war as the general public, from whom it was so long and carefully concealed. Not only was there "serious disturbance" in British Hazara and "invasion by the independent tribes of the border," but it seemed likely that the Akhoond would render it impossible for us to localise the war. Hence Government pursued a "military policy," for the first time, as Sir W. Mansfield believes. That is, "the force in the neighbourhood of the frontier was almost doubled, with the object of showing such an overwhelming body of troops in the disturbed districts, as not only to render opposition unavailing, but to convince the tribes by the first demonstration that to offer further opposition in arms would be an act of madness." Sir W. Mansfield considers this new and military policy, which to so many, both in the field force and out of it, seemed so little military, to have been so successful that protracted hill campaigns can only in this way be avoided for the future. Had the Wahabees been caught, or had the force gone farther, the public might have agreed with his Excellency. As it is, we must wait for the commentary which the future may supply on this new policy. We trust it will prove to have been all that Government believes. But there can be no doubt as to the very slight basis of truth, or rather the concealment of half the truth, which there is in this remark—"the army seems to be as ready for active service, after long years of peace, as if it were just emerging from a general campaign. In short, the only characteristic of a peace establishment may be said to lie in the numerical weakness of individual corps. That numerical weakness is a matter of Government economy." After Umbeyla and Abyssinia, and in reference to a war in which there was no fighting, can Sir William Mansfield say that our regiments are not weaker in officers than they are in men—that, in truth, the irregular system as applied to a whole army is not a hopeless failure?

LORD SALISBURY ON INDIA.

The Bombay Gazette holds that if the constituencies ever import Indian questions into their political contests, depend upon it that the day will not be distant when those questions are made the counters of party. Lord Salisbury, with his views, cannot desire to see Indian politics contested at the hustings of Great Britain; and we accept the regret he expressed at their absence from election addresses as the preface to a compliment intended to please the good people of Lancashire. Upon the main subjects lightly touched on by the speaker we are not disposed to differ from him. The opinion in favour of a gold currency is fast ripening, and will probably be realised in action sooner than some believe. But it may be doubted whether this is one of those changes which it is expedient to force upon a people, and whether a fit opportunity, the wise and adroit choice of an occasion, is not half the battle. Fortunately, it is not a matter of right or wrong, but one of simple expediency, and, when tried, will succeed or fail according to the insight which governs the adoption of means and the choice of the moment. In his remarks on cotton cultivation, and especially the remark that it is a question of quality rather than quantity, a genuine aperçu, we entirely concur; for good sound clean cotton will always command a market, whereas inferior products will be certainly subjected to a keen competition, and obtain only low prices if they are not driven out of the market. No doubt also the question of cotton and commerce is a question of conveyance—indeed, other things being equal, the nation with the best communications will have the largest local and general trade. But if railways are to be constructed and canals dug that are not to "pay," in the ordinary sense, then clearly they must be made by the Government upon some plan least trying to the revenue and least onerous on the future. A reckless policy of borrowing, suggested in some quarters, is the continuation of the gambling spirit which poisoned legitimate and solid enterprise in Bombay during a recent and painful period. What is wanted is a sound policy, which, though less showy than South Sea Bubbles and Mississippi schemes, will yield enduring fruits. Let us have railway extension, road-making, irrigation by all means, but do not let us be seduced by headlong and sanguine projectors from the path of common-sense utility. The immediate end must be governed by the clearly available means, or we shall be like the man who began to build without counting the cost, and instead of lasting works we shall strew the land with ruins wasting under sun and rain. But whatever policy may be adopted in regard to the promotion of reproductive public works, it is indubitable that "the great means to unite England and India, is to push to the uttermost the commercial relations between them." We are ashamed to bring even near the discussion of so large a question the painful attempts made in our own community to frustrate the life-giving policy forcibly expressed by Lord Salisbury. But, considering the ardour and unscrupulousness with which the attempt is made, and the difficulty with which measures, hostile to Indian and Imperial interests are resisted, we feel bound to draw attention to the Manchester demonstration in the hope that some who aspire to be statesmen will abandon their retrograde opinions. The true policy, as we have always urged, is to push trade, to invite it, to facilitate it, and not to fetter it, treat it as an invader, as an alien, making it pay tolls and fines for the privilege of transit; and such measures are absolutely impertinent and inadmissible when they are proposed solely for the purpose of filling a local exchequer. We have no doubt that Lord Salisbury's views on self-government, expressed with so much emphasis, will provoke heated opposition. But we do not hesitate to say they are very weighty opinions, and that it is most questionable whether what is called self-government, though it may gratify vanity and make things temporarily pleasant, is not an insidious and fatal gift. The declarations which give us the most intense satisfaction are the many sentences repudiating the notion that our rule in India is to be but temporary, and that we are only preparing the nation for self-government.

THE VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT.—The volunteer movement in India is about to be extended in a new direction. The East Indian Railway Company have, we hear, by circular recommended their employes at Jumalpoore, Dinapore, and Allahabad to enrol themselves into separate corps.—Pioneer.

DESTRUCTIVE ACTION OF THE GANGES.—Dr. Wilton Oldham has drawn up an interesting account of the destructive action of the Ganges in the Benares province. This destructive action is of two kinds—the slow acting upon the permanent banks of Kunkur, and the rapid upon the non-permanent banks. The destructive action of the river is invariably on the concave bank. The current sets dead against a concave bank, and causes the washing away and hollowing out of the portion of the bank near the river, and consequently the fall and destruction of the bank. The civil station of Mirzapore is built on the permanent bank of the river on the concave curve. There is a constant destructive action going on; but, owing to the permanent character of the bank, the destruction is very slow, a few feet in a few years. Since 1840 a tract of country containing about 3,500 acres of rich land has been destroyed, and the river course has, at the point of maximum deflection, changed two miles—i.e., the present river edge is two miles from the line where it was in 1840. These facts are proved by comparing the Pergunnah map prepared in or about 1840 by the officers of the Revenue Survey with the village boundaries and the river bank as they now exist. The destructive action is not merely in the rainy season, but continues throughout the year. The rapid changes now going on are likely to continue until the river runs in a straight course from Chochukpore to Ghazeepore along the permanent northern bank.

Bengal.

THE PARSEES IN INDIA.

Under native rule the Parsee seems to have eschewed politics and to have passively accepted every change of Government. He was of a nation of traders, and had entirely lost all that public spirit which must have animated the people who founded such a magnificent structure as the Medo-Persian empire. Indian history affords us no examples of the Parsees exercising any political influence; but they seem to have been allowed to possess their wealth in safety on the same terms as the other trading communities. English education and the influx of Western ideas have aroused the latent energies of the race, or more likely created new ones, and the Parsee now aspires to influence public opinion and legislate not only for himself but for the other subjects of our Indian Empire. English and vernacular newspapers, in Bombay, and in Guzerat and the Deccan, represent the particular views of the class, and strive to advance their newly-discovered interests. Even one of the two daily papers of Bombay has always been more or less under Parsee influence. The Bombay Association, an institution professing to advance the interests of the natives of that Presidency, is presided over by a Parsee merchant, while the lists of the cognate East India Association show many names belonging to the same class. Of all Oriental races the Parsee community has produced the only man who, by his public spirit and large hearted philanthropy, has been thought worthy to bear an English title, the late Sir Samsetjee Jeejeebhoy. Lately, loud complaints were preferred by the representatives of the 49,201 Parsees of the Bombay Presidency, that their interests should have been overlooked in the appointment of members of the Legislative Council. Another prominent feature in the Parsee revival is the abandonment of commerce for other professions. The native press has attracted many of the best educated Parsees in the Bombay Presidency, and dating from 1851 the Parsees are now able to boast of a small galaxy of national authors. The attractions which the bar offers have not been ignored. In spite of theological and other barriers a Parsee has even made his way into the class and graduation lists of exclusive Oxford, and an annually increasing number of Parsees pass through the curriculum of the London and Bombay Universities. Female education is being extended; and the decrease of infant marriages, and the check which the Parsee Marriage and Divorce Act has given to polygamy, must soon materially alter their social condition.

Zoroastrianism is being fast sapped by Western thought, although the progress of Christianity among its followers has not been very marked as yet. In the attempt to revive the study of the sacred books of Zoroaster, we see the same spasmodic reaction which Paganism is making in the Hindoo world. In both cases the result must be the same, though it may be effected under less revolutionary circumstances among the Parsees. The creed of the Hindoo is associated with his nationality, which is its chief basis, while the Parsee disclaims having any nationality, and takes pride in assimilating himself to the natives of the country in which he sojourns. The faith of the Parsees owes more of its strength to the long years during which they were condemned to witness the practice of a grovelling superstition, which they could not fail to despise in comparison with their own belief, than to any inherent adaptability which the tenets of Zoroaster possess for them. The brief time during which they have been in contact with Christians, and the minute degree in which the influence of Christianity has yet been able to reach them, give no grounds for despondency regarding the future of the race, however much that future may be delayed, like the destiny of the Jews, who resemble them, by a hard and sensuous materialism.—Friend of India.

THE CYCLONE IN THE BAY OF BENGAL.

A week ago (says the Bombay Gazette) intelligence reached Bombay that the freight market at Calcutta had been paralysed by the receipt of news that a cyclone had swept over the eastern side of the Bay of Bengal, doing considerable damage at Akyab. We now learn from Akyab that the cyclone, which is described as having been terrific, swept over that place on the 13th inst., blowing down some of the oldest trees and causing great damage to property of all kinds. How far the crops had suffered it was impossible to ascertain. The lines of telegraph to Calcutta and Rangoon were both completely interrupted. Several casualties also occurred amongst the shipping. The mail steamer Busheer, which arrived at Akyab from Rangoon on the 12th inst., was forced from her moorings at the landing pier, and driven on shore with considerable damage. The British barque Duke of Northumberland, which was loaded; the British ship Naomi, about two-thirds loaded; and the British barque Volunteer, which had arrived in ballast, were all driven on shore, and the latter so high that it seemed doubtful whether she could be got off again. The native shipping and smaller craft were all driven on shore or sunk, in some cases with loss of life. The Government steamer Nemesis escaped without damage, and she was the only vessel of any kind left afloat in the harbour. After the cyclone had diminished she was engaged in trying to tow the other vessels off the shore. A few days before the cyclone there was a gale from the east, during which the British ship Clasmerden, 1,598 tons register, sunk at her anchors outside the port, where she was waiting for instructions from home, and nine of the crew, consisting of twenty-nine men, were drowned.

The Englishman of the 20th inst. says:—The fall in the barometer about a week ago, and the dull hazy weather it introduced, appears to have been due to very severe storms in the central region of the Bay of Bengal. At the end of the first week of the current month the incoming mail steamer was delayed for several days by bad weather in the neighbourhood of Madras. A week later the break-up of the monsoon appears to have been accompanied by phenomena of terrible violence along the Arracan coast. Akyab was visited on the 13th November by a cyclone, which has completely devastated the station. The harbour was swept, and several houses blown down. The rice crops unfortunately have been severely damaged by the heavy rain and wind. We shall have, of course, to wait for full particulars. We have to tender our thanks to Messrs. Mackinnon, Mackenzie, and Co. for the following telegram:—“Akyab, Nov. 14, 15-45 hours.—Heavy cyclone here on the 13th —Busheer driven ashore above Bazaar Ghaut —slightly damaged —may be some time before she comes off. Will send mails and passengers by Coringa; are busy lightening ship, to see if anything can be done this spring.”

The Indian Daily News of the same date adds:—It is said that much damage has been done at Akyab; houses and warehouses blown down and other property destroyed. Telegraph communication with Rangoon was interrupted, the line between Mungdoo and Akyab having been destroyed along thirty-five miles.

A telegram was received in Bombay on the 26th Nov. by a native firm from Calcutta, stating that the ship Fattul Mobaruck experienced a very severe gale on her way to Bombay from Moulmein on the 8th, and became a total wreck on the 15th. The nacoda and crew were all saved through the assistance of a British ship.

THE FAMINE.

PUNJAB.—The Pioneer regrets to say that the latest accounts of the crops from the Punjab are no better than heretofore. The official reports are brought down to the 1st November, but they tell the same gloomy tale as before. Emigration from the Rajpootana States into the Delhi, Goorgaon, Rohtuk, and Sirsa districts seems steadily on the increase.

RAJPOOTANA.—The pressure of famine in Rajpootana is even thus early very heavy. Robberies are rife. Colonel Keatinge, the agent for Rajpootana, has convened a meeting at Ajmere in December, to consider the measures to be adopted to find employment and food for the starving population. He has requested each Durbar to send a Vakeel with full powers to acquiesce in whatever measures may be agreed upon. This is as it should be. Are there no Imperial works that can be suggested to the Durbars, each State working at its own section? Should money be required by any of the States, to what extent and upon what terms may Colonel Keatinge promise a loan? The famine will never be fairly met by a multitude of native officials representing the conflicting interests of numerous States. It is to be hoped, therefore, that the paramount power will do its duty, by not only suggesting a common line of action, but keeping the Durbars to whatever engagements they may undertake.—Englishman, Nov. 20.

JEYPORE.—The Delhi Gazette is indebted to a friend at Jeypore for the following:—“Grain here is at famine prices. Wheat and grata selling at 7 seers, and jao at 9 seers for the rupee; grass at 20 seers. Nor have we yet come to the worst. In one district the cattle are dying by hundreds, and one can quite understand why such should be the case, seeing that the people are almost entirely dependent upon the rains. The land consists of a series of sand-hills, which are ploughed and sown in the rains. Wells there are scarcely any; nor would they be of much use even did they exist, on account of the hilly nature of the district. We have commenced a number of public works, and are about to commence more. Already about six thousand are employed. The Maharajah, to meet the distress, has taken three lacs of rupees out of his private purse and put it at the disposal of the Treasury for new works. Lieutenant Jacob, Executive Engineer, has got a grant of Rs. 20,000 for the purchase of grain, to be sold at a cheap rate to those on his works. In Marwar the distress is very great in many parts. Water for drinking is sold, and has to be brought a distance of ten or twelve miles. Colonel Keatinge has just issued a circular convening a meeting in Ajmere for the middle of December, in which he calls upon each Durbar to send a vakeel vested with full authority to acquiesce in such measures as may be considered advisable to meet the present distress. He is really going heart and soul into the work, and deserves all praise and encouragement. Disease is sure to follow the scarcity. Robberies have commenced.”

DEHRA DOON.—A correspondent writes as follows to the Delhi Gazette:—“It may be of interest or use to some of your readers to know that a party, of which I was one, in driving from Dehra to Saharunpore, met on the road we think a thousand at least, and, perhaps, twice that number of oxen and cows coming from Hansi and Hissar to graze in the Doon. They were all miserably lean;

we did not see a single plump fat one among them. From what the men accompanying the cattle said, it would appear that owing to the excessive drought, large tracts of the country from which they came will in a few weeks be depopulated."

NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES.—There is no better news in regard to the prospects of the season in the North-Western Provinces. The burden of the tale is still—no rain and no signs of it. Prices, however, are not rising as they were expected to do, and though Government has opened labour works in many districts, the only severe distress which has yet occurred has been in Ajmere, Jhansi, and Lullutpore. Suffering, however, is increasing and will increase during the next few months. All is being done that can be done to avert the impending calamity as much as possible, and to prepare for it. Every drop of water in the canals is being utilised. We are told by an officer who passed along the Jumna Canal the other day, that it was being so worked that not a drop escaped at the tail. All is absorbed during its course. The people are hoping and praying for rain during the next week, but alas it seems very unlikely to come; the sky is cloudless, and in the plains a westerly wind continues to blow. The former good harvests have left much grain in the country, so that though prices will be high and the very poor will be distressed, Government hopes to succeed in averting mortality from famine.—Friend of India, Nov. 19.

JODHPUR.—In the city of Jodhpore the inhabitants are already suffering terribly from drought as well as famine. Wheat flour is at four seers the rupee, and every drop of drinking water has to be brought from a considerable distance. The Maharajah has sent to Scinde and Guzerat for grain to alleviate the scarcity.—Pioneer.

HYDERABAD (DECCAN).—The Englishman learns from Hyderabad that the famine in Marwar is sensibly affecting the price of grain in the province of Berar, and in the adjacent British territories. From the English district of Barsee, near Sholapore, large quantities of grain have been imported into the Nizam's country, but this importation has been discontinued in consequence of the export of grain to Kattywar. Such is the story of the soucars. The partial failure of the cotton crop and the rise in prices at Liverpool have caused a rise of from twenty to thirty rupees per candy on uncleaned cotton. Speculation is becoming as eager as it was during the American war.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL AT UMBALLA

The Viceroy and Governor-General opened the Umballa section of the Punjab Railway at Umballa on Nov. 10. At the State breakfast, General Saunders Abbott, the agent, in proposing the health of Sir John Lawrence, said:—Your Excellency has done much for the extension of railroads in India, from the date of your turning the first clod of the Lahore and Umritsur line in February, 1859; and your crowning work, now commencing from Lahore to Peshawur, will alone be a worthy and lasting monument of your Excellency's name, which can never be separated from the Punjab, or, indeed, from India. Of the importance of the line your Excellency has just opened, those only (yourself among the number) can form any estimate who can remember the time when, twenty-three years ago, that noble and illustrious statesman and soldier, Lord Hardinge, had to organise the repulse of the Sikh invasion from this very spot. What would he not have given for this line of railroad by which to have brought the Meerut reserves to the front? And what would not your Excellency have given for this railway in 1857, by which to have hurled a body of these noble Sikhs, now our friends, at the Meerut mutineers ere they could have established themselves at Delhi? Where then would have been the great Indian revolt which shook the Empire to its foundations? Sir, to complete the great monument you are erecting, the "missing link" is wanting to connect it with its foundations; and I have that confidence in your Excellency's wisdom to believe that it will be sanctioned ere you leave this country. There will then only remain for the Government to carry out the plan for improving the Kurrachee harbour (which, it is understood, has been favourably reported upon, and the construction of a branch line of rail from Sukkur to the mouth of the Bolan Pass. When this is effected—and no obstacle stands in the way (money is cheap, peace happily prevails, this company is ready to carry out the "missing link")—then your frontier will be secure against external invasion, your country against revolt, and this company will have one continuous system by which to exchange the merchandise of Northern India, Afghanistan and Tibet, by the port of Kurrachee, with the whole world. If your Excellency is not able to work out this, India's necessity, ere you leave our shores, I feel certain of your valuable advocacy of what appears to me India's security. Your Excellency, I will not push the question of railways further than to remind you of a shorter route to India, as proposed by the indefatigable chairman of our board, Mr. Andrew—viz., that by the Euphrates Valley. It is one which must eventually be; and your Excellency may add lustre to your name by hastening its construction. Ladies and gentlemen: I feel sure you will all most heartily join me in drinking to the health of the Viceroy, Sir John Lawrence, and in wishing him God speed on his return to his country, his family, and the honours that assuredly await him.

Mr. Seton-Karr proposed the health of Sir Donald McLeod and the other Punjab officials, and Colonel Dickens proposed the toast of Colonel Drummond and the engineers of the railway. In replying, Colonel Drummond proposed the contractors, Mr. Henfrey and his staff.

His Excellency the Governor said: I have asked as a personal favour that I may be permitted to reply to the toast which has just been proposed. If there is a man alive who may claim to speak on behalf of the Punjab and Punjab officers it is myself. I am not about to refer to my own services in that province. Of these I shall leave others in time to come to judge, and to say whether or not I did what was right in my efforts to perform my duty there. But to speak of my friends in the Punjab, and of their merits—that is to me a very congenial task. I recall the times when that fine soldier, Sir D. Ochterlony, conquered the Goorkhas and pacified the native States in the adjacent hills; when Major Murray was the able Political Agent of Umballa; the days when Sir G. Clerk distinguished himself here, more especially in the crisis of the war in Afghanistan; and to come to later days, my thoughts naturally turn to such Punjab officials as my respected brother, the late Sir Henry Lawrence, the gallant Brigadier-General John Nicholson, Sir Herbert Edwards, Sir Robert Montgomery, and last, though certainly not least, Sir Donald McLeod. I have mentioned the names of men of whom it may justly be said that they were great in war and great in peace—I speak of men, some of whom cheerfully laid down their lives in the great struggle of 1857, and all of whom spared neither health nor strength to serve their country under all difficulties and circumstances. There are many others I could name in all grades of that fine service. Referring now specially to the present Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, I must say there is no man in India who more deservedly commands the cordial goodwill, the affectionate respect of all classes of his fellow-countrymen, and at the same time is more respected and beloved by the natives of all ranks and grades, than Sir Donald McLeod.

STATION TALK.

KUSSOWLEE, Nov. 14.—On Wednesday, the 11th, I was at Sunar to meet the Viceroy on his farewell visit to the Lawrence Asylum; he went there with his staff and several ladies. Arches were erected at several points of the road through the grounds, with inscriptions in large coloured letters tastefully arranged over them. "Health and Honour to Sir John Lawrence;" over the first arch was "Welcome," and on the other side of it, as it would be of course the last on his departure, was "Farewell." After his reception by the Principal, the Rev. J. Cole, he was saluted by a guard of honour of the boys under their sergeants, and the two little guns thundered out their salute. The boys then marched to and were formed up on their parade ground, where they were wheeled into line, ranks opened, and salute given, colours being lowered, and band playing "God Save the Queen." The Viceroy walked through the ranks, and the boys then marched past, and very well, the little ones striding manfully to keep up with their bigger comrades, in slow, quick, and double time; then wheel into line, and advance to salute. The Viceroy then addressed them, under manifest emotion, to something like the following effect:—"Boys of the Lawrence Asylum! This is the last visit I shall pay here; but I shall not forget you. I have all along taken an interest in this institution, only second to that of my brother, Sir Henry Lawrence, who founded it. I will remember the interest he took in it from its first foundation to almost the last hour of his life, when in his will he recommended it to the care and consideration of the Government. The Government answered to that appeal; and as you know, from that time this institution has been supported by Government, and not as previously by private charity. . . . And now you will expect me to say something about a week's holiday. I do not know that this is a particularly good thing to ask for you, but as Mr. Cole is responsible for your good conduct, and does not object, I suppose I cannot do less on this my last visit than ask a week's holiday for you." The principal here asked the boys, "Would you like to have this holiday?" A hearty response left no doubt on this subject. Caps were then taken off and three hearty cheers for the Viceroy, and three more, were given; the parade was broken off, and the Viceroy and party turned to go all over the institution. The girls' school, where all the elder ones, under the evidently able and admirable direction of Mr. Mellor, sang very sweetly and well; the girls' workroom, cooking-room, dormitories, infant school, telegraph-office—a most capital addition to the institution, the boys being regularly instructed to read and send messages from one room to another—the nicely ordered little chapel, and so on, all round. It was nearly dark when all had been gone over, and the Viceroy bade Mr. and Mrs. Cole good-bye. A guard of honour duly awaited and saluted the Viceroy again on departing, and the band, after playing the National Anthem for the royal salute, followed him through and out of the grounds, playing "Auld Lang Syne." And so ended a very touching visit.

LUCKNOW, Nov. 16.—The 5th Lancers marched out at three this morning. They were entertained on Friday, the 13th, by the Chief Commissioner. It is rumoured, though I do not know with what truth, that for the present there will be only half a regiment of cavalry here, troops being required for some army of observation to be formed on the frontier. However, the Oude people need not be flustered. Sir Maun Sing and Co., and that distinguished corps the Oude Rifle Volunteers, are quite able to take care of us. In fact, I would like to see the force that would face the volunteers without being discomfited—by laughter. I was about closing this short letter when I heard that the 5th Lancers have returned to the station. It seems they were directed to stand fast till the 16th, when they would receive orders. They moved on the 16th, and at the first halt got their orders; they are to remain here for another twelvemonth. Pretty look out for the officers who have sold all their property, and must now repurchase at high prices. I hear they intend to join the mess of the 102nd. General Beadle, of the Oude and Rohilkund Railway, has gone to Calcutta for two or three weeks. The usual cold weather brushing up of the station has commenced. Station anything but lively, and weather remarkably mild; winter clothing and night covering scarcely bearable.

ALLAHABAD, Nov. 21.—House proprietors are making a good harvest of it since a portion of the High Court has arrived here. No respectable looking house can be had for under 80 rupees a month, and houses that could be had for 60 rupees a year ago are readily taken up for nearly twice that amount. What will be the state of things when the office of the Controller of Public Works Accounts, the remainder of the High Court and other offices move down? and I am informed that the Lieutenant-Governor is bent on having all controlling offices here. The Controller's office will be here some time in March, that of the Director of Public Instruction is on its way to Allahabad. Mr. Tyrrell, the present Judge of the Small Cause Court here, has, I believe, been selected to fill the Registrarship of the High Court, vacated by Mr. James Simson. Mr. Baldwin, our permanent chaplain, has rejoined his appointment only to vacate it in March, when I understand he goes to England on furlough; he will be succeeded by Mr. Baly, once military chaplain here.

Nov. 22.—The Governor-General and suite arrived here by special train on the morning of the 17th, Tuesday last, and after partaking of some refreshment of chota hazree in Kellner's rooms, proceeded on the journey to Calcutta. The elite of the station were one and all in attendance on the Viceroy. I do not suppose it was quite the thing for those unaccustomed to rising at the first peep o' day to have had to tumble out of bed at 4 A.M. The usual salute of twenty-one guns was thundered from the fort bastions. Sir Richard Temple broke his journey to the Central Provinces for a day at this station. I find that Mr. Ricketts, our late magistrate, has returned to the station. This gentleman's presence has a most extraordinary effect on the weak nerves of natives; he is held in mortal dread by them. It is not yet known whether Mr. Ricketts resumes his seat as Sessions Judge, or whether he is to be transferred to some other district. For the past two years successively this official has contrived most wonderfully to have himself deputed at the expense of the State on special duty to Simla during the hot weather—a remarkable fact that there should exist so much extra work as to necessitate the deputation of an officer for six months every year. The Rev. Mr. Baldwin's locum tenens, the Rev. Baker Morrel, has been transferred to Oude as chaplain of the Lucknow cantonments. I am glad to be able to record for such of your readers as it may concern, that Dr. Tosi, the Roman Catholic Bishop, who has been dangerously ill with fever, is now quite recovered, and fast regaining his health. I am also told that Mr. George Sibley, the chief engineer of the East India Railway, is expected to return to Calcutta shortly, when he will resume charge of his duties, the sea air having wrought a surprising change for the better in his constitution. It is rumoured, though, that Mr. Sibley will ultimately go to England on furlough.

JUBBULPORE, Nov. 15.—The Commissioner, Colonel Spence, has returned from his tour to Saugor, where he had gone to dispose of a heavy criminal Sessions. He has been associated with Majors Playfair and Vandergucht in carrying out the examination of civil officers and applicants for pleaderships ever since. The examination was concluded yesterday evening, having lasted five days on account of the large number (about forty) to be examined. On dit that one or two natives who came up have up actually committed the codes to memory. It has been a standing reproach to the civil examinations that the questions have been framed apparently more with the object of testing a man's memory than his judgment and intellectual capacity; but many of the examinees of this season have assured me that there has been great improvement in this respect this year, and that most of the questions embrace whole subjects, or the entire parts of a law, rather than, as used to be the case, the minutest particulars of such parts. I cannot say much for the season. The nights have become very cold; but the heat in the day reminds me of the month of March. Wheat has come to ten and a-half seers, and gram to twelve seers for the rupee. Distressed natives have been seen going about the station. The grass is looking brown instead of pea-green, as it has always done in November, and the diminished supply of water is quite unusual for this time of the year. These may be the precursors of coming hard times, but if the winter rains should opportunely come down we may tide over them. Another month will perhaps decide the fate of the young wheat and gram crops, and during that period the civil authorities, who are alive to the necessities of the time, will be enabled to watch events, and to provide for the worst, it is hoped.

THE MARQUIS OF HUNTLEY.—Among the guests present at the opening of the Umballa section of the Delhi Railway was the Marquis of Huntley, who had returned from Cashmere and Simla.

Miscellaneous.

OFFICIAL.—We hear that Captain P. H. Harris has been appointed an Assistant Inspector General of Police on that portion of the Delhi Railway that is under the government of these provinces.

THE EAST INDIA RAILWAY.—The Indian Daily News says the new service of fast trains which comes into operation on the 1st proximo on the East Indian Line will include several novelties to the Indian public. The train will consist of new carriages approximating the American model. There will be means of communication from end to end of the train, and greater safety insured to the passengers in several ways.

MR. FOSTER HILL.—The Indian Daily News announces the death of Mr. Foster Hill, Professor of Civil Engineering in the Presidency College (Calcutta), who died of dysentery and abscess of the liver on Thursday, the 19th Nov., at Raneegunge, whither he had gone in the hope of benefit from the change. Mr. Hill is spoken of as a young man of great promise, and highly respected. He was Assistant Honorary Secretary and a Member of the Council of the Dalhousie Institute.

FROM UMBALLA TO CALCUTTA.—We learn from the Indian Daily News that a second special train from Umballa reached Howrah on the morning of the 26th of November, bringing the foreign, financial, officiating home, D. P. works, and military secretaries, all the under secretaries, a number of other covenanted officials, &c. The train left Umballa at 11 A.M. on the 24th, and, including ample halts for chota hazree, breakfast, dinner, &c., the 1,150 odd miles were done in less than forty-five hours.

THE SALT DUTY.—The Indian Daily News says that the Government of India contemplates alterations in the salt duty in India. A despatch has lately been sent to the Secretary of State soliciting sanction to the measure proposed. The members of Council, in their minutes, have expressed their opinion on the subject, in which the Viceroy is said to have concurred. The Government of India appears to think that the contemplated change will not necessarily reduce the revenue of the State, but will rather gradually increase it, by greater consumption of salt.

THE FAIRS HELD IN THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.—From a statement of fairs in the districts of the Central Provinces, during the half-year ending 30th September, 1868, we learn that eighteen such gatherings were held, fourteen of them in the Nerbudda division. The largest took place at Chanda, in the Nagpore division, in April last, the number attending it being estimated at 140,000, and the value of property sold at Rs. 1,76,000. The others averaged in population from 400 to 5,000, the sales effected ranging from totals of Rs. 40 and 50 to 3,000 and 4,000.—Indian Daily News, Nov. 21.

COLONEL WILLIS, OF THE 38TH.—Colonel Willis, of H.M.'s 38th Regiment, has requested the permission of the Commander-in-Chief to commence an action for libel against the Indian Public Opinion, with reference to the articles lately published by that paper on the "Death March to Jhelum." The Commander-in-Chief replied that it was entirely a matter for Colonel Willis's private decision; that he had already assisted Colonel Willis to vindicate himself by enabling the correspondence to be published by the press; and that it was not in his province to give any further advice or assistance in the matter.—Pioneer.

CIVIL ITEMS.—Colonel Nembhard, who returned from England by the last mail steamer, has assumed charge of his duties as Commissioner of East Berar from Colonel Stalls.—Central India Times.—Mr. F. Henvey has been appointed to officiate as Junior Secretary of Government N.W.P., during the absence of Mr. Charles Robertson.—Pioneer.—On dit that Colonel R. Strachey, Inspector General of Irrigation, has been offered his old post of Secretary to Government in the Public Works Department. We have not yet heard where Colonel Dickens, the present secretary, goes, but most probably he will proceed to England on furlough.—Central India Times.

SHOCKS OF EARTHQUAKE IN INDIA.—On the night of the 12th November a very severe shock of earthquake was felt at Peshawur. It was so severe that many persons sprang from their beds and rushed out of their houses. Walls literally trembled, and some damage was sustained. The shock lasted, it is said, over sixty seconds. On the same night, at Fort Attock also, a smart shock was felt. A severe shock of earthquake is reported to have occurred at Dera Ismail Khan also, early on the morning of the same day. Lahore experienced a shock of an earthquake on the night of the 12th, shortly after midnight; the vibrations lasted about four minutes. Jubbulpore, also, was visited by an earthquake at about five o'clock on the morning of the 17th November. "The shock," says the Delhi Gazette, "lasted about a minute, and though not severe was very distinct and generally felt. Charles Dickens must have felt a similar shock in England, when he described it as a huge beast shaking himself under the bed, and our informant says he cannot give a better description, unless it be the effect of heavy thunder on the hills. Some of the natives in the city are said to have rushed out of their houses to look for the locomotive engine which they believed had got loose from the railway station."

ARRIVAL OF THE VICEROY AT CALCUTTA.—His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-general arrived in Calcutta a little before noon yesterday morning, and was received at Government House by the principal military and civil officers at the Presidency, and a large number of influential citizens, European and native. The volunteers were paraded early in the morning, in anticipation of his Excellency's arrival, with the view of forming a guard of honour to receive him; but, as it was announced after falling in that his Excellency would not arrive for some hours, the regiment was dismissed, after going through the usual drill. About two hundred volunteers were present, and Colonel Walton, on dismissing the men, expressed his regret that his Excellency would not have an opportunity that day of seeing how much they had increased in strength since last year.—Englishman, Nov. 19.

MILITARY.—The 45th N.L. marched from Peshawur on the morning of the 16th November towards Mooltan. The 3rd Bengal Cavalry proceeded towards Jhelum on the morning of the 18th.—The 17th Bengal Cavalry began to move on the 17th November from Barrackpore.—The 90th Light Infantry were to leave Subathoo for Kamptee on the 20th Nov. The regiment was probably to reach Umballa on the 25th and Delhi about the 9th or 10th December; from thence it was to proceed by rail to Jubbulpore.—It appears that, in consequence of the present scarcity, the 5th Lancers and the 20th and the 21st Hussars have received orders not to begin their march to their various proposed destinations according to the relief until further orders.—The Mofussile understands that "the recent Artillery promotions are to be followed up immediately—an arrangement which will give a good many officers a lift up the list."—We (Delhi Gazette) hear that Major Hill, District Superintendent of Police, Sultanpore, goes to the Hyderabad Contingent Cavalry as second in command.

DEATH OF LIEUT.-GENERAL PARSONS.—Many readers will, we are sure, hear with regret of the death of Lieut.-general Parsons, after a service of sixty-two years in the Indian army, his first commission having been dated in December, 1806. For many years General Parsons was connected with the Commissariat and Stud Departments, and subsequently filled the position of Brigadier to the Gwalior Contingent, as well as Commandant of Bareilly. His services include the capture of the Isle of France in 1810; the Nepal Campaign of 1815, for which he received a medal; the Pindaree war in 1817, and the Rajpootana campaign in 1820. He was also present and wounded at the capture of Ghuznee, for which he obtained a medal and the second class of the Douranee order. He received the Bronze Star for the battle of Punniar, and a medal and two clasps, and a C.B. for the Sutlej campaign, including the battles of Moodhee, Ferose-shuhur and Sobraon. We may add, that in whatever department General Parsons was employed he always gained the respect and esteem both of his superiors and inferiors in rank, whilst in private he was almost universally beloved.—Englishman.

Madras.

MADRAS.—Madras is very full at present, every one having come back for the cool season. Lord and Lady Napier are here, and all officials are at their posts. It is a pity they don't display a little more go-a-headishness, for our broken pier still remains a monument to the sleepiness of this city.—Madras Athenæum.

MR. GORDEN FORBES.—The best men are coming to the front since the last famine discredited the seniority system. Madras is to be represented in the Governor-General's Legislative Council by Mr. Gordon Forbes, the official who saved Ganjam from worse horrors by his foresight and official audacity. Madras has generally been unfortunate in the representatives she has sent to Calcutta since Mr. Elliott's time, while Bombay has been more careful since Mr. Le Geyt's.—Friend of India.

MISS CARPENTER.—A feeling has already been shown which proves that Miss Carpenter will have plenty of work before her, ere she gets her female schools established in India. A meeting of native gentlemen was lately held at Madras, the result of which was a decision that the proposed female normal school must be restricted to caste Hindoo girls or it would meet with no support from those who were at the meeting. A female normal school, however, is shortly to be opened in Madras, but people generally are not very sanguine of its ultimate success.

GOVERNMENT PROMISSORY NOTES.—The Chambers of Commerce of Madras and Bombay have on several occasions represented to Government the very great inconvenience to which holders of Government promissory notes are subjected by the delay arising from the necessity of transmitting the notes to Calcutta for renewal. The Government, in reply to a letter from the latter Chamber, say "that any alteration of the present practice would involve a reconsideration of the agreements between the Government and the banks. The banks of Bengal would demand compensation, and the Bank of Madras and Bombay would look for an increased rate of payment for the additional duties imposed upon them. This alone would appear to be a sufficient reason for rejecting the proposal of the Chamber of Commerce. Besides, a similar proposal was fully discussed in 1859, when the management of the debt was in the hands of the Government and it was rejected on the merits, on account of the risks of error and fraud, the expense involved in copying the registers which are all kept in Calcutta, and the general increase of correspondence which would follow from the interchange by every mail of advice, registers of all the renewal entries, &c., made during the interval. All these reasons equally exist now. On the other hand, the inconveniences of the present system are not serious. The value of the paper is certainly not affected by the delay in having to send up to Calcutta for a new note, and the delay does not exceed the time actually taken up in the transmission by post to and fro. Under these circumstances, the representation of the Chamber of Commerce, Bombay, cannot be complied with by Government."

TELEGRAPH OFFICE AT GUNTOOR.—The Government of India have, in compliance with the request of the members of the Chamber of Commerce at Cocanada, authorised the opening of a telegraph office at Guntoor, as an experimental measure, for one year. This sanction is given on the understanding that those merchants who have signed the memorial are ready to guarantee the cost of the necessary establishment to the amount of 90 rupees a month.

CANAL EXTENSION.—The extension of the East Coast Canal, from its late northern terminus at Doogoorazapattam to the Back Water at Kistnapattam, was sanctioned for execution only a few months ago, and we now learn from the Madras District Gazette that the first reach of seven-and-a-quarter miles was opened for traffic on the 19th of last month. This speedy opening of more than one-third of the entire length of the extension is very satisfactory, and is chiefly owing to the personal exertions of Mr. Fraser, C.E., who has charge of the Coast Canal, and who had to encounter unusual difficulties in the prosecution of this work. The present terminus is at a village called Goondarazapadoo, on the right bank of the Soornamooky River, to which it is expected the canal will be completed in a few weeks. The greater part of the line chosen for the canal passes through property belonging to the Rajah of Venkatagherry, who, with his usual liberality, afforded every facility for the transfer of the land required for the works; so that in this case that fertile cause of delay—"getting up the land"—has not been experienced. The Rajah may well, however, do what he can to facilitate the progress of a work the execution of which will bring a large number of his villages into direct communication with Madras, and enable his people to send the produce of their fields to the best market, without the expensive and tedious land carriage to which it is now subjected. The work is being pushed on vigorously on both sides of the Soornamooky River, and we trust that now that so satisfactory a beginning has been made there will be no stoppage of the work for want of funds. There has been, it seems, no provision made for it in the Budget, and the cost of the work is defrayed from the current revenues of the East Coast Canal. We draw the attention of the Government to this fact, as we consider that the completion of a project which has an object so important as the connection of Madras with the fertile district of Nellore is too important to be left to a provision so precarious.—Madras Times.

STATE OF AFFAIRS AT MANDALAY.—Things are not very pleasant at Mandalay. Matters are not improving in the capital, and if they go on much longer in the way they have been doing for some time, our Government will be forced to take some stringent measures to bring the King to reason. When Captain Sladen went to have an audience a few days ago, one of his servants who was following him into the palace was stopped by the guard and severely flogged. Capt. Sladen at once complained to the King, who made light of the matter, and seemed to think that the guard had done quite right. If the servant of her Majesty's representative is to be thus punished without trial and with impunity, what guarantee is there for the safety of any of her Majesty's subjects? His golden-footed Majesty, as was stated some time since, is making great but misguided endeavours to increase the strength and efficiency of his army, and we now learn that he has just sent to Madras the sum of Rs. 1,200 to pay the expenses of a Frenchman who is to instruct H.M.'s invincibles in all the latest military arts and tactics. Besides the Rs. 1,200, he is to receive Rs. 500 a month, a grand house, and honours and distinctions without end. This appointment is being made, we believe, at the suggestion of the King's civil counsellor, Father Abboua, who still labours and intrigues with unflagging zeal to set him against the English and their interests in every conceivable way. It is also currently reported that the Royal Tradesman's Agent, who lately arrived at Rangoon from Mandalay with a large quantity of rubies with which to pay the Royal debts, being unable to dispose of them, has been reduced to the necessity of pawning them to some native merchants for about half their value. Another correspondent at Mandalay tells us that the Thonzai Mintha remains in forced seclusion, alias imprisonment, and has few sympathisers. He made few friends during his stay in Rangoon, and those who knew how his people insulted a member of the late Embassy in Mandalay will believe that the epithet of "fool," which his royal father bestowed upon him, was deserved. The other elder princes are under close surveillance. No Ayn Shay Min, or heir apparent, has yet been appointed. Captain Sladen is still unwell. His eight months of anxieties and jungle work have evidently told upon him. All the Burmese, except those about the Court, seem greatly interested in his successful expedition.—Rangoon Times.

Bombay.

OFFICIAL ITEMS.—Sir Richard Temple, member of the Supreme Council, and Finance Minister of India, arrived at Bombay Nov. 23. —Sir William L. Merewether was expected to return to Kurrachee from the districts Nov. 25.

SIR J. ARNOULD.—It is stated that Sir Joseph Arnould retires from the bench in March next year. The learned Judge's appointment was made about ten years ago, when the supreme Court was in existence. It is believed that no one will be appointed in his place.—Bombay Gazette.

ACCIDENT TO AN OFFICER.—On Sunday last Mr. Collingridge and Captain Bird, two gentlemen who arrived by the last mail steamer from England, were driving along the Bhandy Bazaar road in a hack buggy. An old woman having come in front of the horse, the buggywalla pulled up the reins with a sudden jerk, and suddenly the buggy upset, throwing both gentlemen and the driver out; Capt. Bird's arm was broken. Mr. Collingridge, who now resides in the Byculla Hotel, has written to the Commissioner of Police, informing him that it was a mere accident, and that the buggy driver was not at all to blame. We regret to say that it has been found necessary to amputate the broken arm. The operation was performed yesterday by Dr. Mackenzie.—Bombay Gazette, Nov. 28.

MARWAR.—We hear from Marwar that the Thakoors of Awah and Goolur, who were banished after the Mutiny, have returned to the country and forcibly re-possessioned themselves of their jagheers. The Maharajah has sent a force to oust them. This would not be difficult were they left to their own means of resistance; but so many of the Marwar chiefs are disaffected that there is fear of a coalition being formed which it would overtask the power of the Maharajah to break. In the city of Joudhpore the inhabitants are already suffering terribly from drought as well as famine. Wheat flour is at four seers the rupee, and every drop of drinking water has to be brought from a considerable distance. The Maharajah has sent to Scinde and Guzerat for grain to alleviate the scarcity.—Pioneer, Nov. 23.

MAZAGON LAND AND RECLAMATION COMPANY.—An extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders of this company was advertised to be held at the offices of Messrs. Ritchie, Steuart and Co. on Nov. 24. At three o'clock, the time appointed for the commencement of the meeting, the gentlemen present did not represent the requisite number of shares to form a quorum, and after waiting in vain for an hour for a sufficient attendance of shareholders, the chairman, H. Manesty, Esq., said that they had waited an hour in the hope that the shareholders would attend, but as they had not done so they were powerless and helpless and must leave the transaction of the business that was to have come before the meeting, namely, the adoption of the annual report and statement of accounts and election of directors and auditors, to the secretaries and treasurer.—Times of India.

STRIKE OF THE POINTSMEN EMPLOYED BY THE G.I.P. RAILWAY COMPANY AT KURJUT.—On the 12th instant, at ten o'clock A.M., the whole of the pointsmen of the G.I.P. Railway at Kurjut struck work. They struck at a time when seven passenger trains, three mixed trains, and four goods trains were due, in and out of the station. The reason assigned by them was that one of their number having been discharged for absenting himself ten days without leave, they would not work unless he were taken back into service. The station-master reasoned with them, but to no effect. Meanwhile, the district traffic manager entered the station. On learning the state of things, he ordered the section of the Railway Act relating to the offence, and showing its serious nature, to be read and explained to the recusant pointsmen. They resolved, however, to brave the consequences. The district traffic manager, the station-master, and others were obliged to stand at the points on the arrival of the trains to prevent the most serious accidents. The Railway Magistrate investigated the matter on the 13th instant, and committed the accused to the Konkani Court of Sessions for trial. This is the first instance of so serious an offence; and the safety of the travellers by railway depends upon the manner in which the Session Judge deals with the case.—Poonah Observer.

MUSCAT.—A correspondent of the Times of India thus writes on November 12, from Muscat:—"Since my last, I have to inform you that the sheiks of the four most powerful tribes in the south have come in with their retinues. Ahmed bin Mosellum, of the Beneboo Hassen tribe, is the most attached friend of Syed Toorkey, and last year, when the Octavia was taking Toorkey away to Bombay, this sheik was the last that left him, and volunteered even to accompany him to Bombay. It is currently reported that all these sheiks are not opposed to Syed Azan, and that in a few days they will give in their allegiance to the new Imaum. It hardly appears credible, considering that Toorkey was so great a favourite of theirs only last year. Ahmed bin Salem has been set at liberty, and allowed all the honours of his position. The families of Syed Mahomed bin Salem, and Syed Mahomed, brother of the late Sultan Thowany, have embarked on board buggalows and ships which proceed shortly to Zanzibar. In short, there is a perfect exodus of the relatives and people connected with the late sultan, for the island of Zanzibar. Perfect order and peace prevail in the country at present. Syed Salem is residing still at Kism, and evidently intends retiring into private life, sick of the toils and anxieties attendant on royalty. From all accounts, he has up to the present not interfered in any political affairs, and has not, as given out by Hajee Ahmed, his vizier, been collecting reinforcements for the purpose of regaining his kingdom."

MILITARY.—The steamship Dacca, with the transports Atmosphere and Forrick in tow, left Bombay on November 25, with the C Troop of the Royal Horse Artillery from Kirkee for Kurrachee. These vessels will on their return bring the left wing of the Poonah Horse from Kurrachee.—The steamship Asia and transport Tiverton left Bombay on the 24th for Kurrachee. The Asia was to take the 17th Madras Native Infantry to Beypore; and on the return voyage will take two detachments of the 40th Madras N.I. from Cannanore.—The Scotia sailed from Bombay on the same date with the 5-5 Royal Artillery. She would call at Vingorla and receive there the 6-5 R.A., and then convey both batteries to Beypore. The 4-5 battery was to arrive at Bombay from Kurrachee by the Atmosphere for embarkation also in the Scotia, but this was prevented, owing to the Atmosphere being unable to get into Kurrachee. This battery, therefore, will be sent from Kurrachee to Beypore by a later vessel.—The 1st detachment of the 40th Regiment was expected to arrive at Bombay from Cannanore per the steamer Scotia, on or about the 1st December.—The 3rd Regiment of Sind Horse is under orders to proceed to Kurrachee, arriving at Bombay on or about the 3rd December.—A letter from Ahmednuggur of the 20th November informs us that B Battery E Brigade R.H.A., under the command of Major Blunt, had received orders to march, via Seroor, on the 23rd idem, to replace the C Troop at Kirkee. The battery would reach Kirkee on the 29th.—The C Troop, Royal Horse Artillery, was expected in Bombay on the 28th and 29th November.

THE GOANESE EXPEDITION TO MOZAMBIQUE.—Last Saturday we stated that an expedition of 600 men was about to be despatched from Goa to assist the Portuguese settlers at Mozambique. We now hear that preparations are also being made for sending an expedition from Portugal to aid the settlers. In mentioning that the Goanese Government were about to raise a loan of 6,000,000 xarafins, the equivalent of that sum was, by a typographical error, stated to be Rs. 25,00,000. One rupee is equivalent to about 2½ xarafins, so that in rupees the loan will amount to about Rs. 2,50,000. The India Portuguesa (a Goa journal) of the 11th instant, in writing on the rising at Mozambique, says:—"The news relative to the Portuguese possession is very sad. The Governor, Antonio Augusto Currae Lacerda, died on the 31st August last, after having almost lost the expedition that was sent against the Banga, as our readers are already aware. The noble Governor was much esteemed, and his death has been generally lamented. Unluckily, as misfortunes do not usually come single, the barque Nossa Senhora de Conceição, which was conveying ammunition to assist the district of Lourenço Marquiz, has been wrecked. It is said that the Governor of Goa has been requested by the Government of Mozambique to assist it with a reinforcement of 600 men and a train of artillery, which are in course of preparation. It appears that some fatality hangs over the Portuguese Colonies. What has happened in Western Africa our readers have been already informed. The eastern side is in the hands of the rebels; Trinor is hotly engaged in a revolt, the result of which is not yet known; and Macao is in a most critical situation. Such is the state of the vast possessions of our Portugal!" The ship Vijante arrived at Goa on the 7th instant from Lisbon, and is said to be destined to take the expeditionary force to the Mozambique.—Bombay Gazette, Nov. 28.

DEPARTURE OF THE "EUPHRATES".—H.M.'s Indian troop-ship Euphrates sailed from Bombay on Friday, the 27th, with the following officers and men from Bombay, Bengal, and Madras:—Officers' names: Major Graeme, 104th Foot, and Mrs. Graeme; Surgeon-Major Fowler, 82nd Foot, Mrs. Fowler, and four children; Captain H. Wood, Rifle Brigade, and Mrs. Wood; Captain Perryn, 90th Foot; Captain E. B. Wake, 21st Hussars, Mrs. Wake, and three children; Captain Smyth, 103rd Foot; Captain Alleyne, 37th Foot, Mrs. Alleyne, and child; Captain Westropp, 106th Foot; Captain Walker, R.A.; Lieut. A. T. Woodhouse, Madras Staff Corps, Mrs. Woodhouse, and two children; Lieut. Gordon, 93rd Foot; Lieut. Gardner, 2-12th Foot; Lieut. Winslow, 106th Foot; Lieut. Stopford, Rifle Brigade, and infant; Rev. Mr. Hughes, Ecclesiastical Establishment, and Mrs. Hughes. From Bombay:—The following were the details from Bombay: The D.C., R.H.A., the 1-2nd Foot, 1-23rd, 49th, 95th, 108th, 82nd, Royal Artillery, Ecclesiastical Department, and Ordnance Department: total, 3 officers, 2 ladies, and 4 children; 1 man, 1 woman second class; 1 staff-sergeant and 21 men, 3 women, and 11 children third class. From Bengal:—Officers and men from the 4th, 7th, and 21st Hussars, A. F. Brigade R.H.A., E.F., R.H.A., D-8 R.A., A-19 R.A., G-19 R.A., 1-3rd Regiment of Foot, 1-7th, 2-12th, 30th, 37th, 55th, 90th, 92nd, 93rd, 102nd, 103rd, 104th, 106th, and 3rd battalion Rifle Brigade: total, 11 officers, 4 ladies, and 5 children; 1 staff-sergeant, wife, and 4 children; and 432 men, 17 women, and 42 children third class. From Madras:—Officers and men from the 2-10th Regiment of Foot, 2-21st, 42nd, and the Staff Corps; in all, 1 officer, wife, and 2 children; 63 men, 5 women, and 4 children. We may add that 100 men proceeded home from the 104th Regiment of Foot, and there would have been 30 more men from this regiment but that they had been disabled by the outbreak of small-pox in their temporary quarters at Poonah.

TEA IN ASSAM.—The tea season in Assam is said to have been about the average of late years. The grain and rice crops are excellent, in consequence of the early floods which receded in time to form a suitable soil. In Sibsaugor the tea season is said to have been unfavourable. Private gardens have, on the whole, been more fortunate this season than those managed by companies. The Golaghat, East Indian and Central Assam Companies will, we are told, all show greater or less deficits. The Jorchaut's estimate is 5,600 maunds. The new land assessment appears to be telling in favour of the planters, by compelling ryots to bestir themselves and to recoup themselves by labour on the plantations for the enhanced revenue which they have now to pay.

MISS CARPENTER addressed a large public meeting on Saturday, November 21, at Bombay, on her proposed mode of training female teachers.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

"LEAVE" ALLOWANCES OF MILITARY OFFICERS ON STAFF EMPLOY.

Adjt.-Gen.'s Office, Head Qtrs., Simla, Nov. 2.—No. 331.—The following notification, by the Government of India in the financial department, No. 3,205, dated Oct. 22, is published for information, in continuation of G.O. Nos. 231, 284, and 326 of 1868 :—

Read the undermentioned correspondence regarding the allowances of military officers in staff employ during absence on preparatory leave :— From the Accountant General, Bengal, to the Secretary to the Government of India, financial department, No. E 1,702, dated Sept. 9.

I have the honour, by direction of the accountant general, to observe that the new rules for the grant of leave to military officers are silent as to the rate of allowance to be paid to officers on preparatory leave under Section XVIII.; considering, however, that that description of leave is analogous to general leave taken in India, this office has in three cases passed to officers proceeding on the former leave full military pay and allowances and half staff salary, I am to beg the favour of being informed whether this procedure has the sanction of Government.

No. 2,560, dated Sept. 18. Endorsed by the financial department.

Forwarded to the military department for opinion.

Office memo. from military department to Secretary to Government of India, financial department, No. 216, dated Oct. 12.

In returning the enclosure of docket No. 2,560, dated Sept. 18, the undersigned is directed to inform the financial department that the allowances of an officer taking leave preparatory to furlough have always been regulated on the principle applying to general leave, that is, an officer is entitled during such leave to the staff corps pay of his rank and a moiety of his staff salary.

2. The proceeding of the examiner of claims appears therefore to have been correct.

PASSAGES TO OFFICERS' WIVES.

Head Qrs., Simla, Nov. 2.—It has been intimated by the Govt. of India [Military Dept., No. 519, dated Oct. 26 last], that the wife of an officer who has been provided with passage under the operation of the Royal Passage Warrant of 1865, when completing her inland journey by rail with her husband, in continuation of the voyage by sea, is permitted carriage at the public expense for 600 cwt. of baggage.

2. This quantity of baggage is, however, only allowed in cases of first landing, until arrival at corps or station, subsequent moves being regulated by the scale published in G.O. No. 239, of Oct. 24, 1866.

DEPUTY COLLECTORS.

Revenue Dept., Nov. 3.—No. 5b.—In supersession of G.O. No. 581a, dated April 29, 1863, which is hereby cancelled, the Hon. the Lieut. gov. is pleased to invest all covenanted assistants who are now employed, and may hereafter be employed, in the Settlement dept., under an officer entrusted with the revision of the settlement of a district, with the powers of a deputy collector, under regulation 9 of 1833.

Appeals from the orders of covenanted assistants will, under this ruling, lie in the first instance to the officer in charge of the settlement, and not to the commissioner of the division.

Appeals from the orders and decisions passed by collectors of districts in charge of the revision of the settlement of the district, and appeals from the orders and decisions of officers other than the collector of the district, but who may have been placed in independent charge of the revision of the settlement, will lie to the commissioner of the division.

DRESS OF WARRANT OFFICERS.

No. 341.—In continuation of G.O. No. 281 of 1867, the C. in C. is pleased to announce that Government has approved of the following dress and appointments for warrant officers of the Ordnance department holding honorary or veteran commissions; but it is left optional with the officers concerned to provide themselves with the full dress:—

Full Dress.

Tunic.—Dark blue cloth, body lining drab, skirt lining black; single-breasted; scarlet collar, rounded in front; scarlet cuffs. Buttons (with three guns and crown), two inches and a quarter between each down the front; two on each sleeve, and one at bottom of each back seam, edged all round and up skirt seams with scarlet; skirt rounded in front, ten inches and a-half deep for an officer six feet in height, with a variation of a quarter of an inch longer or shorter for each inch in height of wearer. Round gold cord shoulder strap. The sleeves to be trimmed with a ring of lace as follows:—For subalterns, full-dress lace as laid down for an artillery subaltern, only not pointing up the sleeve, but placed covering the seam between the blue and scarlet; for captains in the same way, only of such a pattern lace as captains of artillery wear.

N.B.—No badges or gold lace on collar.

Hat.—Artillery helmet and puggery.

Trowsers.—Dark blue cloth, with a stripe of gold lace, royal artillery pattern, one inch and three-quarters wide down the side seams.

Sword and Scabbard.—Artillery pattern.

Sword Knot.—Gold cord with an acorn.

Sword Belt.—Black leather with slings, to be worn over the tunic; no pouch belt.

Undress.

Stable or Shell Jacket.—Of dark blue cloth, single-breasted; scarlet alpaca lining; scarlet collar, lined black; gold Russia braid round the jacket, but not round the collar, and without the figure 8 at each back seam; cuffs, scarlet, covering the seam between the blue and scarlet; a ring of undress lace according to rank; buttons and button-holes down the front, one inch and three-quarters apart, and two buttons at each wrist; no badges on collar.

When worn as an evening dress the jacket is to be looped together with a small gold tracing band at bottom of collar, two inches long.

Waistcoat.—Scarlet, with gold tracing lace round the edge, hooked up to the neck, and without ornaments round the pockets.

Trowsers.—Dark blue cloth, with a scarlet stripe two inches wide down the side seams.

Forage Cap.—Artillery pattern, with straight peak plain.

Patrol Jacket.—Artillery pattern, the lace on sleeves to be worn as ordered for tunic, no lace on back.

N.B.—Pouch and belt not to be worn.

TOUR OF THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

Head Qrs., Simla, Nov. 10.—Officers in command are informed that the approaching departure of H.E. the C. in C., on his annual tour, is not to interfere with the routine of correspondence, which must continue to be forwarded to Simla, to "officers in charge" of the different offices remaining at that place; communications only of an important or urgent character being referred to the heads of departments in attendance on H.E. [Here follow directions with regard to the temporary reception of applications, letters, &c.]

The C. in C. will be at Umballa on or about Nov. 22, whence H.E. will proceed, via Meerut, Cawnpore, Allahabad, and Benares, to Calcutta, where head-quarters will be established on or about the 8th prox.

General officers commanding divisions will be duly informed by telegraph of the probable dates of H.E.'s arrival at the stations specified in the preceding paragraph.

H.E.'s departure from Calcutta will be duly notified in general orders.

MUSKETRY HEAD QUARTERS.

Head Qrs., Simla, Nov. 11.—No. 338.—With reference to G.O.C.C. of June 27, 1863, in consequence of the rifle range at Barrackpore having been abolished, and a second range at Dum-Dum sanctioned, the C. in C. is pleased to direct the transfer of the head quarters of the 1st musketry division from the former to the latter station.

PASSAGE.—TRANSFER OF WARRANT OFFICERS.

No. 340.—The following copy of the letter from the Government of India in the military department, No. 534, dated Fort William, Oct. 23, to the Government of Bombay in the military department, is published for information, in continuation of G.O. Nos. 82, 119, and 217:—

"In reply to your letter No. 4645, of Sept. 11, submitting for decision the question as to the position to be held by warrant officers of the 1st class holding commissions conferring honorary rank when proceeding as passengers on board H.M.'s Indian troop ships, I am directed to acquaint you for the information of the Right Hon. the Governor in Council that, as relative or honorary rank carries with it all precedence and similar advantages attaching to substantive rank, 1st class warrant officers should receive accommodation according to their honorary commissioned rank, and pay messing for their families at the same rates as other officers."

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

THE NEW POSTAL ROUTE TO BOMBAY.

The following is the letter, dated Oct. 23, addressed by the officiating Postmaster-General to the Director-General, containing a proposition for the change of the mail route from Madras to Bombay—from the one via Bangalore, Hurryhur, and Poona, to the one via Tadpatry, Raichore, and Sholapore:—

I have the honour to submit a tabular statement proposing a change in the mail route from Madras to Bombay, the present one being via Poona, Dharwar, and Bangalore, and the proposed one via Sholapore, Goolburga, Raichore, and Gooty. The reasons for the proposed change are as follows:—

1. The new route is 77 miles shorter than the old one.
2. It has 250 miles less of road, and 173 miles more of railway.
3. There are only two large rivers of importance to be crossed, whilst in the old route there are, I believe, four.
4. Whilst the time required for the transit of a mail from this to Bombay is 76 hours by the old route, only 56 hours will be required by the new one, being a saving of 20 hours.

OLD ROUTE.

	HRS.	HRS.
335 miles of railway, at 20 miles an hour	...	17
531 miles mail cart, at 9 miles an hour	...	59

508 miles of railway, at 20 miles an hour	...	25
281 miles mail cart at 9 miles an hour	...	31

Balance hours in favour of new route ... 20

5. The yearly extension of both the Madras and Great Indian Peninsula Railways will also yearly reduce the distance over which mails are to be conveyed by departmental means on the new route, whilst this can never occur on the old one, as there is no extension to take place, and the distance to be travelled by mail carts will always remain at the present 531 miles.

6. The public feeling is in favour of this proposition, as will be seen from extract marked A of letter from the Chamber of Commerce to the Secretary to Government.

II. I shall now enter into details of my estimate. 1st. I have proposed a departmental establishment in place of a contractor. I am of opinion that an important mail line should be under departmental management, whereby, although the expense may be greater, the results are always more favourable. The man who contracts for the mail line between Sholapoor and Hyderabad has become very troublesome, and I would not propose his being employed.

III. I have also proposed a superintendent of mails on a minimum salary of Rs. 300. His duty will extend from Sholapoor to Arconum, having 226 miles of railway as well as the mail cart. I am not prepared to propose that this important line be attached to an inspector's division. A superintendent of mails will have as much as he can do to keep the line in order and supervise the railway offices to Arconum, without having to perform inspection work, and to leave the line to visit remote offices.

IV. I have also proposed two horses at each stage, additional to the number employed on the Bangalore and Hurryhur line. I am of opinion that at first this number will be necessary, though, when the line gets fairly established, it may be reduced. A still larger establishment will be required during the monsoons, as I do not think it probable that carts will be able to run during that time.

V. The pay of the horses is proposed at Rs. 25. I think this necessary from the fact that this establishment will be merely a temporary one, and liable to be discharged on opening of railway communication, which is expected to take place in two years from date. The country is not a horse-producing one, and animals must be imported from a distance. This is another strong reason for my proposing Rs. 25 as the monthly pay of horses.

VI. I am of opinion that this change of route should be made as speedily as possible, so that when the next monsoons set in the line will be fairly established and in working order. Considering the state of the track between Agra and Indore during the years 1859, 1860, and 1861, when an important mail establishment was successfully worked over an unmade and unbridged road of 400 miles in length, I am of opinion that the mail establishment on this new route ought to be worked equally as well. I have addressed the Resident at Hyderabad, requesting that the Nizam's Government may be induced to execute any urgent repairs to this road, and to make approaches to rivers and nullahs easy for carts.

VII. I must now offer some explanation of the great increase to salaries of all the subordinate servants. I have been induced to propose this augmentation from the fact that the whole of this new route runs along or near to the Great Indian Peninsula and the Madras Railways now under construction. At these works labour meets with the highest remuneration, which is owing most probably to the scanty population of the country, labour of all sorts having to be imported. It is impossible for this department to obtain labour at more reasonable rates when even common coolies get eight annas per diem.

VIII. I have proposed the permanency of a ferry establishment at the two large unbridged rivers, the Kistna and Toomboodra. This is necessary from their size and volume of water that flows down.

IX. I have now, in conclusion, but to remark on the road. From Tadpatry to the Kistna river it is quite passable for carts, and if the Nizam's Government pay a little attention to that part of it that runs through their territory, we shall be able to maintain a fair rate of speed. From the Kistna to Goolburga, the road runs through a barren, treeless plain, and is at present but a mere track. I am of opinion that at first the mails must be conveyed on horseback until the Nizam's Government have it levelled and widened. From Sholapoor to Goolburga, from the conveyance of railway materials, the track is passable for carts in the dry season, but pack-horses must be resorted to in the monsoons.

X. It is intended that the Imperial Post-offices at Hurryhur, Chittledroog, Toomkoor, &c., on the present line shall, on the withdrawal of the mail cart, be served by the existing Anchay runner establishment, which the Inspecting Postmaster of the division reports as sufficient for the local communication.

EXCHANGE OF REGIMENTS.—MEDICAL.—The Commander-in-Chief is pleased to sanction an exchange of appointments between Surgs. Tuson, M.D., 11th, and Grant, 12th Bengal Cavalry.

ADMISSIONS TO THE MEDICAL SERVICE.—The undermentioned gentlemen are admitted as assistant surgeons on the Madras establishment, in conformity with their appointment by the Home Government, with effect from Nov. 9, the date of their arrival at Madras:—Messrs. DESPATCHES OF THE HAZARA FIELD FORCE.

From Major gen. A. Wilde, Commanding Hazara Field Force, to the Adj. gen., Head Qrs., Simla.

Head Qrs., Hazara Field Force,
Camp Oogie, Oct. 25.

Sir,—In my report No. 1, I had the honour to recapitulate, for the information of H.E. the C. in C., the occurrences which led to the formation of the Hazara field force in the Agrore Valley of the Hazara dist.

2. Under the instructions conveyed in the despatches marginally noted,* the force, consisting of the troops as detailed in Appendix A., by the end of Sept. assembled at camp Oogie, and three days were now devoted to the inspection and test of an equipment to which I had given long and careful attention, as my experience in hill warfare convinced me that on the efficiency of the equipment and the mobility of the force success would mainly depend.

3. Previous to the departure into the hills of the Hazara field force two Dograh regts. of H.H. the Maharajah of Cashmeer moved into the valley of Agrore. These troops held the following posts during the expedition, and I beg to express my gratitude for the way in which they performed the duty, viz., the Jalgully Pass, the Kuttaie Pass, the Soosul Pass, and the camp of Oogie.

4. At day-break on the morning of the 3rd October the force marched out from the camp at Oogie in good heart and spirits to take the field against the hill tribes. The troops had one day's cooked rations in their haversacks, and seven days' supplies for the whole force were carried on mules.

5. The object of the first day's operations was to occupy the Jalgully Pass, leading from the Valley of Agrore into those of Tikaree and Nundehar, belonging to the independent Swatees, so as to secure, through the Koongullee village, a secure line of communication with Oogie. The village of Koongullee is situated a short distance up a spur of that name, by which I intended one of my columns should ascend the Black Mountain. To effect these objects it was obligatory to carry the hills on both sides of the Pass. Moreover, a movement of this nature would at once test the sincerity of the professions of neutrality, which had lately been made by the Swatees of Tikaree and Nundehar, as, since the commencement of disturbances in the Valley of Agrore, the enemy had always defiantly shown themselves on these hills. By nine A.M. the heights on the left of the Pass had been taken, and the village of Koongullee occupied by the troops of the 1st brigade noted in the margin.† Only an advanced picket of the enemy showed at Koongullee, which retired up the spur as our troops advanced.

6. Simultaneously with this movement the troops of the 2nd brigade, as mentioned in the margin,‡ ascended the Kiarkote ridge—a spur of the Kubbal Mountain dominating the right of the Pass. A very small number of the enemy were seen on the heights and retired, firing a few shots as our troops advanced. The absence of any opposition on the right of the pass convinced me that the independent Swatees were not then minded to oppose my advance. Accepting the success of diplomacy with the Swatees, therefore, as a fact, I was enabled to bring all my strength to bear on my contemplated operations against the Patan tribes of the Black Mountain. And, accordingly, I at once directed Brig.-Gen. Vaughan, c.b., to leave the Kiarkote ridge, and passing from the right to the left of my position, to occupy and bivouac at the village of Kila-gaie, to which place I had already detached from the reserve two regiments of native infantry and half the mortar battery belonging to No. 2 brigade. This village is situated between the Shahtool and Burchur spurs at the base of the Black Mountain. With Brig.-Gen. Vaughan's brigade I had placed 800 of the Hazara levies in view to their ascending the Burchur spur the following morning, simultaneously with the advance of the 1st and 2nd brigades up the Koongullee and Sumbulboot spurs respectively.

7. While these dispositions were being carried out, Brig.-Gen. Bright, commanding the 1st brigade, had found it necessary to drive off and follow up small parties of the enemy, which were showing above the Koongullee village, and by evening his advanced troops had gained a very commanding position, called Munna-ka-Dunna. Although this was a point higher up the Koongullee spur than it had been my intention or wish to occupy the first day, it was too valuable a position to be abandoned, and I therefore determined to hold it for the night.

8. My original intention was to ascend to the crest of the mountain in three columns. No. 1 Brigade advancing up the Koongullee spur, while No. 2 Brigade and the levies moved up the Sumbulboot and Burchur spurs respectively, as a diversion. No. 1 Brigade having, however, gained the very advanced position of Munna-ka-Dunna on the first day, the necessity for carrying out this operation in its entirety passed away. Moreover, I found that a comparatively easy mountain road might be made up to Munna-ka-Dunna, and, furthermore, I considered that Munna-ka-Dunna itself afforded an excellent temporary base for operations against the Chittabut and Muchaie peaks—the latter being undoubtedly the key position of the Black Mountain. Under these circumstances I ordered No. 2 Brigade to abandon the line of advance up the Sumbulboot spur, and to support No. 1 Brigade on the Koongullee spur, leaving the levies to carry out their part in the original plan of moving up the Burchur spur—a duty they fulfilled, during the following day, with much fidelity and spirit, sustaining a loss of two killed and six wounded.

9. As the 1st Brigade pressed on to Munna-ka-Dunna, the reserve moved forward and occupied the village of Koongullee with the 5th Goorkha Regiment posted in advance to maintain the communication with Brigadier-general Bright. As part also of this movement, four hundred infantry and some wall pieces of his Highness the Maharajah of Cashmeer moved out from Oogie and held the Jalgully Pass.

10. As is usually the case in mountain warfare, the bivouac of the 1st brig. at Munna-ka-Dunna did not remain unmolested during that night. As soon as the pursuit by our troops ceased, and they were preparing to occupy the ground for the night, the enemy took advantage of the surrounding cover, and their numbers hourly increasing as night closed in, the attack on our picket became bold, continuous, and harassing. At times the enemy, under cover of the brushwood and standing crops which surrounded the position, came close up to the pickets, and placing their matchlocks on the rough breastworks our men had hastily thrown up, fired upon the defenders inside; but the gallant defence made by the 20th Punjab inf., under the command of Lieut. col. C. H. Brownlow, c.b., who held the most forward post, assisted by an occasional fire from the Hazara mountain battery, and supported by the 1-19th foot and 1st Goorkha light inf., as often repulsed the attacks. During the night, at Brig. gen. Bright's request, the 5th Goorkha regt. was moved up to his support, the 2nd Punjab inf. being thrown forward from the village of Koongullee to take its place; at the same time 200 of the Cashmeer troops conformed to the general movement and marched into the village of Koongullee.

11. As the day dawned the enemy were obliged to draw off from Brig. gen. Bright's position. Our casualties up to this time being two sepoy killed and six wounded. The bulk of the enemy who had made these attacks consisted of men of the Chuggurzaies and Akazaies, led on by the Syuds of Puryarce, and I at once saw that unless an immediate advance were made, and the enemy driven from the position to which they had retired, the attacks of the previous night were but a slight prelude to what would follow.

12. Accordingly, on the morning of Oct. 4, I made the necessary dispositions for immediately attacking the enemy's position. This position was an unusually well selected one—about eight hundred yards in front of the plateau our troops had so obstinately defended during the night, a high grassy knoll, the top of which could be seen through the intervening fir forest; on this knoll the enemy had erected an abattis with small stone breastwork below. The approach to this knoll was along a narrow ridge connecting it with the Muuna plateau, and below this ridge to the right, as well as around the knoll, was a dense forest of firs.

13. The D battery F brigade, Royal Horse Artillery, which had come up on elephants, now opened an excellently directed and long sustained shell fire. For some time the hill men remained, defiant, showing their flags and waving their swords, but as each successive shot took effect they commenced evacuating their defences. Under cover of this fire Brigadier-general Bright, with the 1st brigade, moved out in the order noted marginally.* After advancing for some distance the mountain batteries came into action on the ridge, and a heavy artillery fire being thus directed on the enemy's position as the 1st and 5th Goorkha regiments ascended the knoll and entered the abattis, but few of its defenders had remained to contest it. Owing to the dense forest in our front it was impossible to discover the enemy's strength; but had the position been resolutely held by the enemy, or had our troops advanced to the attack before the enemy had been shaken by our artillery, the conflict must have been most severe. Brigadier-general Bright, pursuant to my instructions, closely pressing the enemy, effectually prevented their again making any attempt to stand, and successfully forcing his way through the heavy forest, occupied for the night the Chittabut Peak, on the crest of the Black Mountain. He was here joined by the Hazara levies, who had ascended by the Burchur spur. In the interim the 2nd brigade had reached Munna-ka-Dunna, and the 2nd Goorkha and 3rd Sikh Regiments were thrown forward to occupy the breastworks from which the enemy had been driven in the morning, and to keep open communication with the 1st brigade.

14. On the morning of the 5th I ordered the advance of the 1st brigade from Chittabut along the crest of the mountain for the capture of the Muchaie Peak, five miles distant. I have never in the border hills seen such a naturally strong and defensible position as the Muchaie Peak, the hereditary stronghold of the wild tribes of the Black Mountain, and well might the hill men consider it as the inaccessible home of their independence. The approaches to the foot of the final ascent are densely wooded, and the ascent itself is very large and steep. The grassy slips are broken up by huge rocks and boulders affording excellent cover for defenders, and on one side they are flanked by a deep fir forest. Anticipating that the resistance might be a protracted one, and relying on the effect produced by artillery on all mountaineers, I had sent both mountain batteries with the 1st brigade, and I this day reinforced the brigade with the 2nd Goorkha regiment under the command of Lieut.-Col. H. MacPherson, &c.

15. Nothing could have exceeded the regularity of the advance of the 1st brigade through the forest of Dodha (a hill on the crest), and up the heights of the Muchaie Peak. The mountain batteries kept up a dropping fire in line with the reserves of the brigade, as the storming column scaled the heights—

The 20th Punjab infantry in advance,

The 1st and 5th Goorkha regiments in support,

The 1-19th in reserve;

both these batteries, which had come into action at the foot of the ascent, covered the advance by a most accurate and effective fire. As our troops advanced, the scattered bands of the enemy retreated, till at length, as the summit of the peak was crowned, they were seen flying down the spurs into the valley bordering the Indus. Our casualties amounted to eight wounded.

16. On the night of the 5th October the Hazara field force was echeloned as follows:—

On the Muchaie Peak.—1st brigade and Peshawur mountain battery belonging to No. 2 Brigade.

At Chittabut.—2nd Goorkha Regiment and 800 levies.

At the Knolls.—3rd Sikh Infantry.

At Munna-ka-Dunna.—2nd brigade, D F Royal Horse Artillery, 2-24 Royal Artillery, and the commissariat stores.

The night passed off with but little annoyance from the enemy. Rain fell during the night, which, though adding to the discomfort of the troops, prevented the enemy from using their matchlocks much against the pickets. The following morning was passed in searching for water, making roads, and moving up supplies.

17. As the occupation of the Muchaie Peak—10,200 feet above the level of the sea—had been my primary object, and I had now successfully accomplished it, I will, with H.E.'s permission, close this despatch with the following general observations:—

I. The resistance having been less than might have been expected, is, in my opinion, attributable to these circumstances:—

1st. The tribes never believed, and in this idea the Commissioner concurs, that our soldiers would attempt an ascent like that of the Black Mountain, where no roads existed, and the troops would have to force their way by paths through dense forests and over slopes broken up by huge masses of rock, or intersected by deep ravines.

2nd. These tribes had never met artillery, and were ignorant of the power of that arm so potent against the bravest of mountaineers.

3rd. That knowing the Swatees of Tirkaree and Nundehar were the original offenders, and seeing the ease and facility with which those valleys could be overrun with troops, the Patan tribes of the Black Mountain up to the last moment believed our operations would be directed, in the first instance, if not entirely, against those valleys, and not against themselves. Another cause of the speedy success of our arms was that no check or halt occurred between the time the first brigade scaled the heights of Koongullee on the 3rd October, to the final occupation of the Muchaie Peak on the 5th; one day's halt or any hesitation in our advance on the morning of the 4th would have rallied many thousands of the enemy round their standards in defence of their homes.

A. WILDE, Major-general,

Commanding Hazara Field Force.

MERCANTILE BANK OF INDIA.—A dividend of 3 per cent., free of income-tax, has been declared by the directors of the Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China, for the half-year ending the 31st inst., and is payable on the 1st January next.

THE LONDON, ASIATIC, AND AMERICAN COMPANY (T. Wiggin and Co.) have given notice that the dividend warrants of the Pennsylvania Railroad Six per Cent. General Mortgage Sterling Bonds, negotiated through them, will be paid on the 1st of January next.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The biddings for £100,000 in bills on Calcutta and Madras took place on Wednesday, the 16th inst., at the Bank of England. The amount allotted was £76,900 to Calcutta, and £23,100 to Madras. The minimum price was fixed as before at 1s. 11d. on both presidencies. Tenders at 1s. 11½d. on both presidencies will receive about 77 per cent. The result shows a further increase in the demand for means of remittance.

THE ENVOYS FROM ZANZIBAR.—His Excellency Sayyed Mahommed bin Salim, Envoy from his Highness the Sultan of Zanzibar; his Excellency Sayyed Ahmed bin Suluman, Second Envoy; and Hajee Mahommed Bakushmir, secretary to the Mission, accompanied by Major-General C. P. Rigby, late her Majesty's Consul and Political Agent at Zanzibar, in charge of a special mission from the Sultan of Zanzibar, arrived at Osborne on Friday, and were presented to her Majesty.

GENERAL E. M. SHOWERS.—The death was lately announced of General Edward M. G. Showers, Colonel Commandant of the brigade of Royal Horse Artillery (Madras), which occurred on the 13th inst., in his eighty-fourth year. He entered the East India Company's service in 1798, and was placed on the Madras establishment. The late General was present in the campaign with General Stewart's grand army, also at Mugerall, Western Pallanirs, with Colonel Moneypenny's force, and in the campaign under General Malcolm.—Pall. Mall Gazette.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.—The half-yearly meeting of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway Company was held on Friday, at the London Tavern. The report showed that the gross receipts for the half-year ending June 30th were less by rather over £12,000 than those earned over the same mileage in the corresponding period of last year. There had, however, been a reduction in the number of miles run, and the working expenses were less by nearly £3,300. The resolution adopting the report was agreed to.

COMMERCIAL BANK CORPORATION OF INDIA AND THE EAST.—We understand that the litigation which has for many months past prevented a division of the assets of the Commercial Bank Corporation of India and the East is practically at an end. It is stated that an arrangement has, after much negotiation, been made between some of the principal creditors and the various classes of shareholders, the effect of which will be that the creditors will accept 17s. in the pound (of which they have already received 10s.), in discharge of their debts without interest; the balance of 7s. to be paid within one month after the arrangement has been finally confirmed by the Master of the Rolls. His lordship has already sanctioned the holding of meetings of the creditors and shareholders to obtain their formal assent to the arrangement. Under it all the creditors whose claims have been disputed on the ground that they were debts of the Commercial Bank of India will be entitled to receive the dividend of 17s. in the pound, which it is hoped the official liquidator, Mr. Holyland, will be able to pay without resorting to a further call.

GENERAL G. SWINEY.—A few days ago died at Cheltenham one of the oldest officers of the British army—General George Swiney, of the Royal (late Bengal) Artillery. He had been sixty-six years in the service, and had fought with distinction under Lord Lake. Taking an active part in the assaults on Bhurtpore during the first unsuccessful siege of that renowned fortress, he was severely wounded. He commanded the artillery at the siege and capture of Emaumghur in 1810; and afterwards was for many years employed in the Ordnance Commissariat, rising in time to be head of the department with the Bengal Artillery. He was a fine sample of the best class of Indian officers—one who devoted his leisure hours to literary pursuits, and, though commencing his military career very early in life, developed into an accomplished scholar. His contributions to the press, at one time numerous, were distinguished by much elegance of fancy and subtlety of thought; and on the passing events of the day, especially in connection with his own profession, his judgments were of the soundest and most discriminating character. In private life few men bore a higher character or have been more justly esteemed.—Pall Mall Gazette.—The gallant General, who was the senior officer of the Royal (Bengal) Artillery, entered the Honourable East India Company's service at an early age. He was present at the battle of Deig, and commanded the artillery in the three first assaults on Bhurtpore (where he was wounded); medal. He also commanded the artillery at the siege and capture of Emaumghur in 1810, for which services he received the thanks of the Vice-President in Council and Commander-in-Chief.

WILL OF MAJOR-GENERAL HONNER.—The will of Major-General Sir Robert William Honner, K.C.B., of her Majesty's Indian army, who died on the 8th ult., was proved on the 16th inst. by Edmund Champagne Jones, Esq., one of the executors. The personal property is sworn under £35,000. The deceased has left the whole of his property among his brother, Colonel Augustus Cotgrave Honner, and his two sisters, Emily Isabella Rowley and Caroline Jones.

ARRIVAL OF OFFICERS FROM INDIA.—The Serapis, 3, iron screw troop-ship, Captain John C. Soady, arrived at Spithead on the 16th inst., and came into harbour. She brings from Alexandria: Assistant-Surgeon O'Brien, Lieutenant Reilly (Royal Horse Artillery), Major Elgee, Lieutenant Disney, R.A., Lieutenant Stringer (23rd), Captain Taylor, Captain Cresswell, Lieutenant Stevenson, Lieutenant Guyon, Lieut. Gilbert (49th), —McGrose, R.N., Captain Nicholson (108th), Lieut. Withers (Bombay Staff Corps), Staff Assistant-Surgeon Davis, Rev. —Jones, Paymaster Fielden (18th Hussars), Captain Milman, Captain Blakley, R.A., Captain Hill and Lieutenants Morison and Mitford (1st Royals), Assistant-Surgeon Walker (19th), Lieutenant Deverell (45th), Lieutenant Humphry (102nd), Lieutenant Rock (Madras Staff Corps), Lieutenant Andrew (21st Hussars), Lieutenant-Colonel Gibb, R.A., Captain Mair, Lieutenant Helley (12th Regiment), Lieut. Eden (26th), Lieutenant Bicknell (38th), Major Allen, Captain Westby, Lieutenant Kelley (41st), Captain Harrison, Lieutenant Mansergh (107th), Colonel Petrie, C.B., Colonel Murray, Surgeon-Major Mee, Captain Marett, Captain Ouchterlony, Captain Ward, Lieutenant Burgess, Quartermaster Parks (21st Brigade, R.A.). The Serapis experienced heavy weather since leaving Malta, but, notwithstanding that fact, has arrived here about twenty-four hours before her time.

PROMOTION IN THE ARTILLERY.—Colonel Anderson, the junior colonel on the Royal List, is of the season December, 1840. He has, therefore, just completed twenty-eight years' service. Colonels Hammond and Hutchinson, on the Bengal and Madras Lists, are respectively of the seasons 1838 and 1834. The first has completed thirty and a-half and the other thirty-four and a-half years. Lieutenant-colonel Barry, Royal List, junior lieutenant-colonel, has completed twenty-two and a-half years' service. Lieutenant-colonels Tulloh and Carleton, Indian Lists, have served twenty-five and twenty-six and a-half years respectively. Captain Rideout, Royal List, has served fifteen years; Captains Hawkins and McMahon, Indian Lists, have served seventeen and fifteen and a-half years. Second Captain Hollist, Royal List, has served eleven years and two months; Second Captain Davis, eleven years, and Captain Bisset ten and a-half years. These are simple statements which our readers can verify for themselves by referring to the Army List. The comparison, unfavourable as it is shown to be, is unfortunately certain to grow worse and worse, owing to the retardation in promotion in the Indian Lists, arising from the now established "Separate List" of general officers, the absorption of seconded field officers, and the collapse of the bonus fund. The comparative statement given above is even more unfavourable when we look down the lists, and seek for the standing of those whose first commissions agree with the first commissions of officers on the Royal List.—Army and Navy Gazette.

SINDH RAILWAY COMPANY.—The directors of the Sindh Railway Company have issued their report for the half-year ending 30th June last. The receipts of the Sindh Railway in that period amounted to £58,428. 9s. 1d., and the working expenses to £38,974. 13s. 3d., leaving a net revenue of £19,453. 15s. 10d., which exceeds by about £3,640 the highest amount of net revenue realised in any previous half-year since the opening of the line. The whole of the fifth issue of capital (£250,000, in 12,500 shares of £20 each) has been subscribed, and the payments in respect of that issue now amount to upwards of £234,980, the option of paying in full having been largely taken advantage of by the proprietors. With respect to the Indus Steam Flotilla the directors state:—It will be observed with satisfaction that both the gross receipts and the net revenue of the flotilla for that half-year are higher than the amounts at which they were respectively estimated in the last report. The gross earnings in the six months in question amounted to £53,229. 2s. 3d., being the largest amount ever realised in a half-year, and the working expenses to £34,169. 12s. 5d., leaving a surplus of £19,059. 9s. 10d., or 35.81 per cent. of the gross receipts. The working expenses in the half-year amounted to 64.19 per cent. of the gross receipts, showing an improvement of 11.4 per cent. as compared with the average per centage of former expenditure.—As to the Punjab Railway, the directors report that the gross receipts in the half-year ending the 30th June last amounted to £52,148. 8s. 6d., showing an increase of £7,696. 7s. 9d. over those of the preceding six months, and of £1,734 19s. 1d., as compared with the corresponding half of 1867. The whole of the second issue of capital of the Punjab Railway (£500,000, in 25,000 shares of £20 each) having been subscribed, the payments to credit of the Secretary of State for India in Council in respect of that issue now amount to £489,410.

ROBBERY AT THE LONDON ASIATIC AND AMERICAN COMPANY'S BANK.—At the Justice-room of the Mansion-house, before Alderman Sir Thomas Gabriel and Alderman Sir Robert Carden, James Drake, aged 33, a messenger in the employment of the London, Asiatic, and American Company (Limited), was charged with stealing a crossed cheque on the London and County Bank for £6,510, and a draft on demand on the National Bank of India for £2,100, the property of the company, which he was entrusted to pay into the London Joint-Stock Bank, Princes-street. Detective Sergeant Haydon deposed that from instructions he received he went to the departure platform of the Great Western Railway, accompanied by John Grey Russell, a clerk of the company. They searched the train twice, and just as it was on the point of starting they noticed the prisoner about to enter a second-class carriage, with a single ticket for Cheltenham. Witness removed him from the train to another part of the platform, and told him to hand over whatever property he had about him that was not his own. He gave up a green pocket-book and a small bag containing gold, and pointed to a new leather portmanteau, saying it contained a crossed cheque for £6,510, and postage stamps to the value of £60. Witness removed him to Bow-lane police-station, and the charge was there entered and read to him. Witness examined the pocket-book, and found it to contain a Bank of England note for £1,000, another for £500, seven for £50 each, two for £10 each, and one for £5. In the bag there was a sum of £144 in gold, and on the prisoner £3. 15s. 5d., and several duplicates for property to the amount of £2. 9s., a silver watch, gold chain, &c. Witness opened the portmanteau with a key given to him by the prisoner, and found in it a crossed cheque for £6,510, and 3,300 stamps of various kinds, of the value of £60. On this evidence the prisoner was remanded for a week.

IRRIGATION IN INDIA.—On Friday last a deputation from the East India Association waited on her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, the Duke of Argyll, K.T., on the subject of irrigation. The deputation was introduced by Lord Lyveden, the president of the association, and consisted, in addition of Colonel Sykes, M.P., the Hon. H. G. Liddell, M.P., Mr. Eastwick, M.P., General Sir George Pollock, G.C.B., General Sir Arthur Cotton, K.C.B., Major Evans Bell, Mr. W. S. Fitzwilliam, Mr. P. M. Tait, Mr. P. Tayler, Captain Nott, Mr. P. Gordon, Dr. Dutt, Mr. S. P. Low, and Captain H. Barber (secretary). After some introductory observations by Lord Lyveden, urging upon the Government the importance of irrigation in India, Mr. P. Tayler read the memorial which had been presented to the Earl of Mayo, and the subsequent memorial to the Duke of Argyll, and having spoken in support thereof, the prayer of the memorial to his grace was also supported by Mr. Fitzwilliam, Sir Arthur Cotton, Colonel Sykes, M.P., Mr. Liddell, M.P., Mr. Gordon, and Dr. Dutt. The Duke of Argyll stated that he did not understand the deputation to wish to extract from him any expression of opinion upon the details of the measure, but that he could assure them that it was impossible for any one to have a stronger feeling upon the advantage of the object than himself. As he had only been in office for a week he was sure that the deputation would not wish him to enter into the difficulties of the subject, but he agreed in the general principle which had been laid down by the late Lord Dalhousie, that it was hopeless to expect that works of this nature should be defrayed out of the current revenues of the empire. On the other hand, the principle had been laid down, which he thought was a sound one, that as far as possible the revenues of India should be made to assist the ordinary public works of the country so long as those works did not increase the public debt of India. Under these circumstances he thought that schemes of this nature might be met by a loan, in so far as they could be made of a remunerative character. Lord Lyveden, on behalf of the deputation, expressed their satisfaction with the courtesy with which his grace had received them, and with his desire to promote the interests of India, and stated that they were quite satisfied with the expression of opinion which he had given.

In the case of Newspapers, Books, &c., the prepayment of the postage is compulsory, and the weight of Parcels must not in any case exceed 5 lbs., or be of greater dimensions than twenty-four inches in length, or twelve inches in width or depth.

DELHI RAILWAY EXTENSION.—There is, it is said, every probability of the Delhi Railway being open to Loodiana by the 1st of March, 1869.

THE PUNJAB FRONTIER.—The 1st battalion H.M.'s 19th Regiment returned to Rawul Pindie on the 4th, and the 2nd Goorkhas on the 12th. The 6th Royals were, when our letter left, the 13th, still at Abbottabad, but were expected to return to their quarters immediately. The 1st and 4th Goorkhas are also at Abbottabad. The 38th, we believe, have gone from Derbent to Huttee, on the main road between Rawul Pindie and Attock, where they are to stay for the present. A squadron of the 16th B.C. and the 24th P.I. are still at Oghee, where they are to remain till the new "Thana" has been built, or until they are relieved by other corps. The 9th Foot was inspected by General Haly a couple of days after its return from the campaign, and the General expressed himself, in a very flattering speech, highly pleased with the efficiency of the regiment on parade after the "knocking about" it had had during the campaign—a campaign which, although unattended by any very severe fighting, and great military successes, has tried the mettle and discipline of our troops and their capacity for mountain warfare in no ordinary degree. The troops are dissatisfied with the results of the campaign but this, as we have before shown, is owing not to those results themselves, but to their ignorance of the objects of the expedition and the ends it was intended to accomplish.—Delhi Gazette.

BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That it is intended to SEND to INDIA annually a certain NUMBER of YOUNG MEN, Trained and Educated for ultimate EMPLOYMENT in the Higher Branches of the Department for the Conservation and Management of the FORESTS under the Government of India.

Eight Young Men will be selected in February next to go to India at the end of 1871.

The Salary will be at first £300 a-year, and the salaries of the appointments in the three Presidencies range between that sum and £1,900 a-year. Promotions will depend upon efficiency, and the occurrence of vacancies in the higher grades.

Applicants must be British subjects above seventeen and under twenty-five years of age.

As active habits and a strong constitution are most important, Candidates will have to undergo a strict Medical Examination.

They must send to the Revenue Department of the India-office, on or before the 8th of January, 1869, a statement of their names and parentage, with a certificate of birth, and of being possessed of a competent knowledge of the following subjects, and they must be prepared to undergo an examination in them:—

1. English writing from dictation and English composition.
2. Arithmetic in all its branches.
3. Algebra, elementary principles, simple and quadratic equations, ratios, and proportions, logarithms, arithmetical and geometrical progression.
4. Geometry (1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 6th Books of Euclid), and plane trigonometry.
5. Free hand and plan drawing.
6. A good colloquial knowledge of either French or German, with the facility to read and translate the works of some classical writer in the language.

A preference will be given to those Candidates who obtain a certain proficiency in—

1. Surveying and land measuring.
2. The elements of any of the following natural sciences:—

Mechanical and natural philosophy.
Chemistry.
Botany.
Geology.

If selected, they will be further required to go through a course of training and instruction in Forestry and cognate sciences for two years and a-half, in France or Germany, previous to their departure for India, and the Secretary of State will contribute £50 at the end of each half-year towards the expenses of their training, in the case of such Candidates as are favourably reported on by their instructors. In addition to this, if it should be found practicable, the young men will be required to place themselves under an approved Forester in Scotland for a few months before they go out to India.

More detailed information as to these appointments may be had on application to the Under Secretary of State for India, India-office, Westminster.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.

Through these medicaments there is hope for all who are labouring under disease, be its origin recent, remote, or altogether unknown. Whatever their ailments, none need despair of being cured till they have tried these inestimable remedies. Whether the disease be internal or external, spontaneous, or the result of violence, if a cure be possible, Holloway's medicaments will effect it. The severity or duration of the malady is no bar to the successful influence exerted by these medicaments, which render every organ of secretion healthy. These admirable antidotes to disease act immediately on the absorbent system, lungs, heart, and circulation, whereby they invariably give energy, tone, and vigour to all the natural functions of life.

SARSAPARILLA.

WILKINSON'S (late Bridge's) ESSENCE or FLUID EXTRACT OF RED JAMAICA SARSAPARILLA, prescribed by the Faculty for purifying the blood, debility, liver complaints, and freeing the system from the effects of mercury. Exclusively used in India and the Colonies as a prevention to tropical diseases.

"Superior preparation that may always be relied upon."—Sir Astley Cooper.

"We are in every respect satisfied with it."—Lancet.

"We recommend your Sarsaparilla as the best."—Medical Review.

Sold in quarter, half, and pint bottles.

CAUTION.—Many spurious, worthless, and injurious preparations are offered to the public. See that both bottle and label have the name and address.

QUINTESENCE OF JAMAICA GINGER AND CAMOMILE.

WILKINSON'S PREPARATION OF GINGER and CAMOMILE has long been deservedly known as an excellent domestic medicine. It is a most efficient stomachic tonic, and the best remedy for flatulency and disorders arising from impaired digestion.

It is not affected by climate.

No European in India or tropical countries should be without it.

Sold in one-eighth, quarter, and half-pint bottles.

AROMATIC TINCTURE OF QUINODINE.

For the Prevention of Fever, Ague, and effects of Malaria. An unfailing remedy. It may be mentioned that those who, during the campaign in the Crimea, daily took a small quantity, passed entirely unharmed through the malarial fire of fever and dysentery that thinned the ranks around them.

Sold in half and quarter-pint bottles.

Prepared by THOMAS WILKINSON (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body."

It is no secret that of late local anaesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering."—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1866.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. Webb's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.

—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.—

UPWARDS OF FIFTY YEARS' experience has fully confirmed the superior reputation of these Lozenges in the cure of ASTHMA, WINTER COUGH, HOARSENESS, SHORTNESS OF BREATH, and other PULMONARY MALADIES.

RECENT TESTIMONIAL.

August 23, 1868.
Dear Sir,—Having tried your Cough Lozenges in India, I have much pleasure in testifying to their beneficial effects in cases of incipient consumption, asthma, and bronchial affections; so good a medicine ought to be known to be appreciated. I have prescribed it largely with the best results.
W. B. G.

IMPORTANT HISTORICAL WORKS.

Just ready, in Two Vols., 8vo., £1. 8s.

MEMOIRS AND CORRESPONDENCE OF FRANCIS ATTERBURY,
D.D., BISHOP OF ROCHESTER. With his DISTINGUISHED CONTEMPORARIES, chiefly from the Atterbury and Stuart Papers. By FOLKESTONE WILLIAMS.

Just published, in Two thick Volumes, demy 8vo., price £1. 12s.

LIVES OF THE ENGLISH CARDINALS, from NICHOLAS BREAKSPEAR (Pope Adrian IV.) to THOMAS WOLSEY, Cardinal Legate. Including Historical Notices of the Papal Court. By FOLKESTONE WILLIAMS, Author of "Court and Times of James I.," "Court and Times of Charles I.," "Memoirs of Sophia Dorothea," &c.

Scarcely one adequate biography exists in print of "the Princes of the Church" of English birth; and when they are named collectively by their own countrymen, or foreign writers, they are briefly catalogued—frequently with doubtful incidents and questionable dates; nevertheless, the majority attained the highest honours, spiritual and temporal, and were engaged in some of the most important transactions in European history. It has, therefore, been considered that an acceptable service might be rendered to students by collecting the trustworthy details of Bale, Pits, Leland, Godwin, Tanner, Dugdale, and similar explorers in the same field of inquiry, adding such notices as may be gathered from the annals of the popes and cardinals, —Baronius, Ciaconius, Aubrey, Spelman, &c.; from the numerous monkish chroniclers, from Hemingford to Jocelin de Brakelonde, as well as from contemporary correspondence; and combining with them new facts from the researches of modern historians, such as Paulli, Neander, Dollinger, Ranke, Cardella, Sismondi, Guizot, Lingard, Milman, Brewer, Giles, &c., &c.

Whilst tracing the development of the papal system, care has been taken to exhibit its influence upon society, especially at Rome, Avignon, or wherever the Pontifical Court resided. As members of what may be called the Privy Council of the Pope, each of the English cardinals who chose to remain at the seat of government assisted in its administration. Many were employed as diplomatists, or took a prominent part in the great councils, called from time to time to remedy evils then afflicting the Holy See; almost all were members of the hierarchy, in one or other of the principal branches of the Roman Apostolic Church, and not a few possessed almost unlimited authority at home in secular employments.

In Two Vols., post 8vo., price £1. 1s.

HISTORY OF CIVILISATION IN THE FIFTH CENTURY. Translated, by permission, from the French of A. FREDERIC OZANAM, late Professor of Foreign Literature to the Faculty of Letters at Paris. By ASHLEY C. GLYN, B.A., of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

"Mr. Glyn's translation from Ozanam deserves high praise, and will, we hope, be cordially welcomed."—The Month.

"M. Ozanam's work, when not warped by ecclesiastical assumptions, is a valuable repository of facts and observations, relating to a period of deep historic interest."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Second Edition. In 8vo., pp. xxiv, and 439, price 12s. 6d.

THE FIRST AGE OF CHRISTIANITY AND THE CHURCH. By JOHN IGNATIUS DOLLINGER, D.D., Professor of Ecclesiastical History in the University of Munich, &c., &c. Translated from the German by HENRY NUTCOMBE OXENHAM, M.A., late Scholar of Balliol College, Oxford.

"Every ray is collected, as it were, by a lens, and thrown upon the Sacred text. The work is so interesting, that it is no easy matter to lay it down. The translation is as easy to read as if it were an original book."—Weekly Register.

"This book constitutes a very valuable addition to English Catholic literature."—Dublin Review.

"This book abounds in wise and interesting teachings."—Examiner.

THE MOGUL EMPIRE, from the Death of Aurungzeb to the Overthrow of the Mahratta Power. By HENRY GEORGE KEENE, of the Bengal Civil Service.

This work fills up a blank between the ending of Elphinstone's and the commencement of Thornton's Histories.

Third Edition. One Volume, 8vo., with Map, price 12s.

HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA. By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq. Containing a copious Glossary of Indian Terms, and a complete Chronological Index of Events, to aid the aspirant for Public Examinations.

"Mr. Thornton is master of a style of great perspicuity and vigour, always interesting, and frequently rising into eloquence. His power of painting character and of bringing before the eye of the reader the events which he relates, is remarkable; and if the knowledge of India can be made popular, we should say his is the pen to effect it."—Times.

"The writer evinces diligence and research into original authorities; his style is easy, and the intrinsic interest of the important events of Indian history is thus increased by a popular and amusing narrative."—Edinburgh Evening Courant.

In Two Vols., 8vo., price 16s. each.

THE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE IN INDIA from the Appointment of Lord Hardinge to the Death of Lord Canning. By LIONEL JAMES TROTTER, late 2nd Bengal Fusiliers.

The First Volume of this History embraces the period from Lord Hardinge's appointment, in 1844, to the retirement of the Marquis Dalhousie, in 1856.

The Second Volume commences with the arrival of Lord Canning in India, in 1856, and closes with his lordship's death, in 1862. This being the most eventful period in the annals of the East India Company, including the Mutiny, great pains have been taken in its narration.

In One Vol., 8vo., pp. 1015, with Map, price £1. 1s.

A GAZETTEER OF INDIA, Compiled chiefly from the Records at the India Office. By EDWARD THORNTON, Esq.

The chief objects in view in compiling this Gazetteer are:—
1st. To fix the relative position of the various cities, towns, and villages, with as much precision as possible, and to exhibit with the greatest practicable brevity all that is known respecting them; and,
2nd. To note the various countries, provinces, or territorial divisions, and to describe the physical characteristics of each, together with their statistical, social, and political circumstances.

To these are added minute descriptions of the principal rivers and chains of mountains; thus presenting to the reader, within a brief compass, a mass of information which cannot otherwise be obtained, except from a multiplicity of volumes and manuscript records. The work, in short, may be regarded as an epitome of all that has been written and published respecting the territories under the government or political superintendence of the British power in India.

In 8vo., price 7s. 6d.

THE HISTORY OF CHESS, from the Time of the Early Invention of the Game in India till the Period of its Establishment in Western and Central Europe. By DUNCAN FORBES, LL.D.

London: WM. H. ALLEN and Co., 13, Waterloo-place, S.W.

THE NEW INDIAN NOVEL,

OUT OF THE MESHES.

"It has the rare union of instructiveness concerning a mass of obscure points Indian, with the constructive attractiveness of a natural, simple, and interesting story. There is a generous appreciation of the good in things, with a genial satire of the bad; there is pathos and there is comedy. There has been no better romantic debut for many a long book-season than this first appearance of the author of 'Out of the Meshes.'"—Morning Post.

"It is a clever, amusing book, and there is a thread of deep and dark interest running through the web of the light, bright sketches. The work contains many details of the Mutiny, which seem to be the records of personal experience. The conclusion of the story is extremely well given, and it is worked up to a pitch of painful interest."—Athenaeum.

"The heroine is a very lively bit of painting. She is made really fascinating in spite of her instability and coquetry, and the reader is not expected to take her fascinating qualities on the personal assurance of the author."

The physical conditions of Indian life are reproduced with singular vividness and force."—Spectator.

"Our author has obviously complete familiarity with the scenes and characters he describes. Their local colour is admirable."—Globe.

"A picture which never wants gleams of humour and wit, and even of pathos. India has often been drawn upon by novel writers, but the author of 'Out of the Meshes' has managed, by his powers of sensitive and accurate observation, and his general cheerfulness of vision, to produce a very clever and pleasant book from the old materials."—London Review.

HISTORY OF THE FRENCH IN INDIA, from the Founding of Pondicherry in 1674 to its Capture in 1761. By Lieut.-colonel G. B. MALLESON, Bengal Staff Corps.

"A book which we took up with interest and lay down with regret."—Examiner.

"One of the most important works connected with Indian history which has appeared for many years."—Friend of India.

"Briefly but emphatically it may be said that what Colonel Malleison has here done he has done right well."—Fortnightly Review.

"A volume alike attractive to the general reader and valuable for its new matter to the special student. Now for the first time we are furnished with a faithful narrative of that portion of European enterprise in India which turns upon the contest waged by the English Colonel Malleison has here done he has done right well."—Edinburgh Review.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, December 5; Agra, December 1; Calcutta and Madras, November 30. Calcutta telegrams of December 4 are published in the Bombay papers.

According to one of these last the Port Canning Rice Mills had been successfully opened, the prospects of the crops were still unchanged, and the Viceroy had held his levée the day before. We are also told that the Native Marriage Bill has been referred to a Select Committee—not we trust with a view to material revision of it—and that the Punjab Tenancy Bill has given universal dissatisfaction in the Punjab,—a statement of which we beg leave to doubt the truth pending further information.

THE amount of news by this mail is exceedingly small. Among the more salient items is the concession which the India-office has lately made to the claims of Madras officers aggrieved by an order of the late Commander-in-Chief, touching the distribution of regimental commands according to army rank alone. This arrangement evidently favoured the Staff Corps at the expense of the Locals. The Indian Minister has ordered that all officers thus superseded shall at once be reinstated and paid up all arrears of command allowance.

ANOTHER despatch from Sir S. Northcote replies to the demand of the Bombay Association in behalf of admitting natives to the higher posts in the Civil Service. After the usual assurances of a lively interest in native progress, the late Secretary courteously declines to admit natives to the Covenanted Service through examinations held out of England. Were they to be held simultaneously in India also, the difficulties of detail and the inevitable demand for further modifications would end in destroying the unity and greatly impairing the efficiency of the competitive system. As a general rule, the members of a service designed for the welfare of all her Majesty's Indian subjects, ought to spend some time in this country, and the merits of any system of selection for that service ought to be tested not by the facilities it offers to this or that class of candidates, but by the results attained in the shape of "suitable public servants." Sir Stafford however is "ready to consider any measures calculated to facilitate the introduction of natives into the Civil Service." Recent changes in the system of examination will give increased advantages to Oriental scholars. The Gilchrist scholarships ought to develop the native element in the Civil Service, and more scholarships of the same kind may shortly be established if the Indian Government accepts Sir Stafford's proposals. Finally he invites the memorialists to consider the proofs he has given of his regard for the native weal in his correspondence with the Indian Government and in Clause XI. of his India Bill for this year. If by the measures thus indicated or by any others that may come into force, he can forward the admission of natives into the Civil Service, "consistently with a due regard to the public interest," the late Secretary for India will feel sincerely gratified.

THE Bombay Gazette is satisfied with this frank avowal of good intentions. But the Times of India, as the mouthpiece of native interests, makes unkind allusion to the place of which "good intentions" form the proverbial pavement. It would rather have Government openly hostile to these claims than favourable, as it deems them, in word alone. It complains that "there is no earnest effort to promote the people to positions of importance." Instead of searching out some native likely to fill the post, let us say, of Commissioner of Customs, the Government never seriously thinks of such a concession to native feeling. The native gentlemen of India must send their sons to England at great cost in early youth, for the mere chance of competing successfully with candidates having a long start. As for making a native gentleman commissioner of a province or resident at a native court or settlement officer, the mere suggestion "takes the official breath away altogether." Sir J. Lawrence "deserves much praise" for his scheme of scholarships, but the half-dozen ought to be five hundred. Very likely; but why not wait a little and give the Government a little more credit for earnestness of purpose?

ACCORDING to the report of the Cotton Commissioner there is every likelihood of "a tolerably fair average cotton crop, both as regards quantity and quality," in Bombay. Except Khandesh, where the yield will be half the average, and Guzerat, where the crops have suffered from the late floods, the cotton districts are all doing well, and Dharwar best of all. The present season shows an increase on the last of some 80,564 acres under cultivation. All this however goes to the credit of native cotton, the area planted with exotic cotton being 8,000 acres less than last year. We observe that the Lancashire mills are now working short time. How will that affect the prices of Indian cotton?

WE have no particular news from the famine districts. What little there is shows the need for carrying out prompt measures of general relief. The Government officers seem everywhere alive to their duties at such a crisis. Silently and steadily they are following out their instructions. Some parts of Bengal and even of Madras are likely to need help ere long. In the Gya district relief works have already begun. Orissa, Midnapore, and the Twenty-four Pergunnahs will soon stand in need of similar treatment.

WILL no enterprising Briton start a hotel in Madras for the benefit of his countrymen who resort thither? At present, according to the Athenaeum, all hotels in Madras are managed by natives, and "only those who have been obliged to live in them can form any idea of the miserable fare procurable." The town is full of travellers, who ought to be as well lodged and fed as they are in Bombay and Calcutta. They who have tasted the delights of Wilson or Spence, and groaned under the discomforts of some Elahi or Khudah Buksh, will feel for the visitors to the "Benighted Presidency."

THE Indian Government has made a good move in the interests of Indian literature. In compliance with the entreaties of Pundit Radha Kissen of Lahore, Sir J. Lawrence has sanctioned an outlay of Rs. 24,000 a-year for the compilation of a catalogue of all the Sanskrit Manuscripts preserved in the libraries of India and Europe. It is resolved, we perceive, to forward to European societies and scholars of repute printed lists of all the Sanskrit Manuscripts extant in Indian libraries, with a view to ascertaining what manuscripts should be examined, bought, or transcribed. Encouragement will also be given to the search after new manuscripts, and competent scholars will be deputed to examine and purchase, if they think fit, or take copies of the treasures thus discovered. Out of the sum aforesaid Rs. 3,000 a-year will be assigned to the Asiatic Society of Bengal towards the publication of unprinted Sanskrit works. Six agents will be paid Rs. 1,000 a-year each for pushing their inquiries in the six chief divisions of India. That is not a very large sum for such a purpose, but no doubt the projectors of the scheme are satisfied of its sufficiency.

GOOD days may yet be in store for Port Canning. The Lieutenant-governor of Bengal has lately paid a visit to that place of doubtful importance; and already, according to the Daily News, a sum of Rs. 40,000 is to be employed by the Master Attendant in laying down anchor moorings in the port. Several ships with Government stores are said to be on their way to the Mutlah from Calcutta. All this looks like a further trial of a place from which so much was expected ten years ago. There is talk once more of another harbour at Morrell-gunge, which lies on the Horungotta, about thirty-five miles from the sea, in the way of boats and steamers from Sylhet, Dacca, and Chittagong. It is said to have a large trade in rice, and a pretty good one in betel, jaggery, and cocoanuts. The Government seem willing to proclaim it a port, as soon as somebody will ask permission to use it.

A BENGALLIE paper, the Som Prokash, takes Sir John Lawrence to task for "unnecessary expenditure" on British troops. Sir John, according to his critic, is afraid "lest the whole people turn rebellious and cut off the Europeans." Therefore, he has spent eleven crores of rupees on superfluous barracks, to the utter neglect of the native soldiers, who "are provided with bad arms and bad clothes," who are lodged in small damp sheds, and whose military training is of the lowest kind. The people of India are burdened with "multifarious taxes" for the benefit of European soldiers who "never live at home in such beautiful houses as the new barracks." On the other hand "the class from which sepoys are taken certainly enjoy better houses at home." As regards the sepoy there is possibly some truth in this complaint. We are rather too apt to believe that any sort of hut is good enough for the native soldier. And it is certain that his masters, ever since the Mutiny, have put him off with inferior arms; a piece of cowardly precaution which we do not care to justify. Nor is it easy to reconcile a patriotic native to the burdens involved in the maintenance of British supremacy. But the Som Prokash can hardly expect the Indian Government not to pay handsomely for the troops who really ensure the continuance of our Indian Empire, and its estimate of the Viceroy's motives seems to us rather wide of the truth.

ACCORDING to one of the Madras papers, the Indian Government at any rate is not blind to the need of putting forth fresh schemes for eliminating the surplus field officers from the Indian Staff Corps. It seems that the Viceroy has recommended the Secretary of State for India to reduce by several years the twenty-eight which now entitle a lieutenant-colonel to the pension of his rank, and to allow colonels a slightly increased pension after thirty instead of thirty-two years' service. Some such arrangements seems to us inevitable, sooner or later, and we trust that the home authorities will see good reason for ordaining it very soon.

A RECENT telegram from Bombay announced the arrival there of Lord Mayo and Lord Napier of Magdala on the 20th December. The former was not expected to reach Calcutta before the 28th January. Lord Napier has already resumed command of the Bombay army.

SIR HERBERT BENJAMIN EDWARDES is dead at an age by no means ripe even for an Anglo-Indian. Dying at forty-nine, he was still young enough to have won fresh lustre for a name which has shone before the people of his own country ever since the days of the Punjab campaign. A cadet of 1840, he joined the 1st Bengal Fusiliers at an age beyond that of most of his boyish cotemporaries. His "Brahminee Bull" letters to the Delhi Gazette probably helped him to rise out of the slow round of regimental duty into the more promising sphere of staff employ. In 1845 he joined Lord Gough's personal staff in time to share the dangers and successes of the first Sikh campaign. A successful mission in the next year to the court of Golar Singh was rewarded by an important post in the wild district of Bunnoo under the Sikh Government. The rebellion of Moolraj in 1848 brought out all his finest qualities as a bold, active, self-reliant leader of men. Probably nothing but official backwardness at head-quarters prevented the victor of Kineyree and Suddosam from forestalling by several months the capture of Mooltan. For these and after services during the siege the young Lieutenant of Infantry was made C.B. and brevet-major, besides receiving the thanks of both Houses and a gold medal from the East India Company. During his furlough in England he kept himself before the world by his "Year on the Punjab Frontier," a work whose seeming egotism was in some measure justified by his actual deserts. After Mackeson's murder in 1853, Major Edwardes succeeded him as Commissioner of Peshawur. Among the many services rendered by him in that post was the treaty which he encouraged Lord Dalhousie to strike with Dost Mohammed, a treaty whose wholesome consequences came out in the dark days of 1857. Through the worst of the Mutiny the Affghan ruler and the tribes on the Peshawur frontier held fast to their new allegiance against all counter-inducements. Edwardes himself was a tower of strength to Sir John Lawrence and Sir Sidney Cotton. On his return home he found fresh honours awaiting him in the form of a knighthood and an honorary degree at Cambridge in 1860. Ten years before Oxford had bestowed on him a like crown of public admiration. A few years later Sir Herbert bade fair to win a prize hitherto reserved for members of another service. But failing health or disappointed ambition sent him home again, and an older, if not in all respects a more deserving claimant became Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab. On religious questions Sir Herbert became an enthusiast, not to say a fanatic, who would have converted the Hindustanians by force of state dictation open and unashamed. His plan of introducing the Bible as a class book into all Government schools, and his protests against religious neutrality on the part of the Indian Government, however grateful to Exeter Hall, said little enough for his claim to breadth of statesmanship. If he was apt to rate himself at his full worth, Sir Herbert could also pay warm homage to that of others who crossed his own orbit, to Sir J. Lawrence for example, and yet more to John Nicholson, whose noble qualities found an ungrudging eulogist in the friend and fellow-worker who has now followed him to the grave.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

WEDNESDAY, December 30, 1868.

SANITARY PROGRESS IN THE INDIAN ARMY.

It is now nearly ten years since a Royal Commission was appointed to inquire into the sanitary state of the army in British India. Four years of close inquiry resulted in the Report of May, 1863. No time was lost by the Home Government of India in urging on the Viceroy a series of measures on which the Commission had laid particular stress. Convinced as they were of the inaccuracy of many things stated in the Report, the Indian Government were none the less willing to accept its main conclusions, and the first step towards carrying these out was speedily taken in the formation of a Sanitary Commission for each of the three Presidencies. Whatever disputes there might be as to the death-rates and their origin in previous years, whether barracks had too often been built on unhealthy sites and the later improvements wrought by the Indian Government been carelessly ignored or no, certain it was that very much more needed to be done before the waste of life among our troops in India could be brought within reasonable bounds. So the Indian Government set to work afresh with the results reviewed in the official Memorandum now lying before us.*

Even in 1864 however, under the spur supplied by the progress of the Commission, the average death-rate had already fallen to 21 per 1,000 in Bengal; the range varying from 15 in the Punjab to 25 and 27 per 1,000 in the stations along the Ganges. This was an improvement of 1 per 1,000 on 1863, and of 6 per 1,000 on 1862; before which date the lowest figure had been 36 in 1860. Thus "the hope of the Sanitary Commission that . . . the death-rate may be reduced to 20 per 1,000, and only 1,460 recruits be needed annually to replace death vacancies in India, was practically realised before the publication of their Report." The fact speaks volumes when we remember that the army then in India was nearly 73,000 strong, and that before the Mutiny the average yearly loss was 2,135 deaths on an average strength of 30,662 men. Most of that half century indeed was spent in fighting and campaigning; and every soldier knows that the heaviest losses connected with a campaign—battles of course excepted—are those which follow the return of the troops to cantonments. Still there remains a margin of preventible loss, whose reduction in late years may fairly be ascribed to the influence of the Royal Commission.

* Memorandum of Measures Adopted for Sanitary Improvements in India up to the End of 1867, &c. London: 1868.

In 1865 the death-rate among the British troops in Bengal rose to 24·24 per 1,000; part of the increase being evidently due to cholera, which carried off 72·5 per cent. of those attacked. Next year the proportion of fatal cases fell to 60 per cent., and the whole mortality of the year to 20·11 per 1,000. How greatly cholera sometimes affects the death-rate is shown by the fact that in 1865 the European troops in the Bombay army lost 16 per 1,000 from that one cause alone, out of a total loss of 35·1 per 1,000. The Sepoys in the Mhow division were yet worse sufferers, losing 25·4 per 1,000 by the same disease. In 1866 however the death-rate for the Europeans in Bombay fell to 10·1, and of the Sepoys to 8·8 per 1,000. This marks an improvement on previous rates even for the native army, while that for the British troops was about 6 per 1,000 lower than in 1863 and 1864. In point of healthiness the Madras army comes next; the deaths among the Europeans having stood at about 16 per 1,000 for the five years preceding 1865; and at 35 per 1,000 in the fifteen years before the Mutiny. In that year the average was yet lower, although at Rangoon the deaths were 24 per 1,000, and 37 in the little station of Vizagapatam. The year 1866 however having been "peculiarly unhealthy," showed an average mortality of about 20 in the 1,000. Part of the increase may perhaps be explained, according to Mr. James Shaw of the Medical Department, by the greater age of the troops. As the young men of a regiment grow older, they begin after a certain age to die off quicker—a fact worth remembering in calculations of this sort.

Barracks overcrowded or ill-placed are sure to betray themselves in these yearly returns. At Secunderabad the 18th Husars in 1866 lost 33·6 per 1,000, through living in barracks notoriously fruitful of disease. St. Thomas's Mount is naturally healthy enough, but owing to the crowded state of its barracks, European soldiers keep dying there at the rate of more than 26 per 1,000 yearly. At Sumbulpore the old native lines were surrounded with water during the monsoon, and became perfect fever-beds after it. The excessive sickness among the Sepoys at Mysore has led the Government to abolish it as a military station. On the other hand some of the healthiest stations will have their turn of unhealthiness. At Rangoon for instance the usual death-rate of about 8 per 1,000 rose in 1865 to 21·8. It is curious also to note the different proportions of sick in hospital and actual deaths in different places. Rangoon, in spite of its high death-rate, showed a smaller sick-list by the day than any other Madras station except Bangalore, which likewise ranked high in the scale of mortality. Fort St. George on the other hand has a large daily sick-list and a low death-rate. Here, as in other places, Lock Hospitals and the Contagious Diseases Act will doubtless effect a marked improvement in the percentage of daily sick. Of the prevalent diseases hepatitis slays the largest number in Rangoon, Secunderabad, and Thayetmyoo. Fever reaps most victims at Secunderabad, Thayetmyoo, and Bellary; the deaths from dysentery are most numerous at St. Thomas's Mount, while Trichinopoly, where dysentery in 1865 was not once fatal, showed a heavy death-rate from diarrhoea. St. Thomas's Mount again takes the lead in respect of mortality from phthisis; Fort St. George standing second.

The fluctuations of mortality are curious. We have already shown one instance at Rangoon. At Singapore the proportion rose from 4·11 in the five previous years to nearly 13 in 1865. At Bangalore cholera raised the death-rate from 12·10 to 21·12 per 1,000. At Cannanore the death-rate rose from 9 to nearly 17. On the other hand, the deaths at Thayetmyoo fell from 29·81 to 16·84, and those at Fort St. George from 24·59 to 14·88. Contrast again the low death-rate of 1 per 1,000 among the native troops at Vizagapatam with the very high mortality—37·68—among the Europeans at the same place. At Rangoon only 3·63 natives per 1,000 died against 24·88 Europeans. Trichinopoly proved equally fatal to white and black, while at Singapore the native rate rose to 22, and at Kamptee to 26 per 1,000, as compared with the numbers, 13 and 19, on the other side.

The average death-rate among the Madras Sepoys in 1866 was 12·5 per 1,000, against 11·98 in Bengal, and 8·8 in Bombay. Among the irregular regiments of the Punjab force and in Central India the death-rate fell to 7 and 6·28 respectively, while the rates of daily sick were also lower than in the regular army. In all three Presidencies the Sanitary Commissioners have been making steady progress against the unhealthy conditions of former years. The problems of drainage, barrack-room, water supply, food, employment manual and mental, jail-discipline, medical treatment, have all been studied with evident care and not a little success. No cost is being spared in the building of barracks and hospitals on proper sites with the due amount of breathing-space for each man. The system of dry earth conservancy is steadily making its way. Regimental workshops and soldiers' gardens are everywhere springing up, and the employment of British soldiers on public works has been tried with marked success in the Punjab. "The men have been happy and enjoyed the work" of road-making, which has taught them industry, kept them in health, and added to their pay. Very much of course remains to do, but the efforts which before 1859 were tentative, intermittent, and uncertain, are now being made with surer knowledge and greater regularity. Let us hope that means may soon be found for checking that very high mortality among women and children, which may in part account for the low percentage of married soldiers as compared with the number allowed by Government.

THE LATE CAMPAIGN IN HAZARA.

[COMMUNICATED.]

WE are informed that the British forces in the Punjab are to be reinforced. At the same time an order has been given for the immediate commencement of the line from Lahore to Rawul Pindee. These measures form queer running commentaries to the Government despatches—in re the late Hazara Expedition—now being published, the tone of which is pervaded by an intense spirit of self-complacent congratulation.

We doubt whether public opinion in India will endorse the encomiums which Government so liberally heaps upon its own head, or will be induced to record its unqualified approbation of the wonderful political sagacity obviously claimed in the documents alluded to. Narcissus, we are told by the Ancients, on beholding his own image reflected in a sheet of water, fell passionately in love with himself, but we are not given to understand that other people shared in this inordinate admiration. "Self-praise," we have always heard, "is no praise," and we fear the axiom may hold good in this instance.

At all events, the advantages to be derived from the carrying out of the Hazara campaign appear to us to be altogether in futuro, and to be no subject for present satisfaction. The proof of the pudding is in the eating. The fruit of the movements in the Black Mountain, with their concomitant heavy expenditure of the public funds, has to our mind yet to be seen. La jeu vaut il la chandelle? is the question we have to ask, and we can hardly be prepared with an answer, until we are assured that the permanent results of the campaign are commensurate with the efforts expended on it.

We must wait, for instance, to know what has become of our inveterate foes, the Hindoostanee fanatics, who were allowed by our politicals to recross the Indus unharmed. We must pause to ascertain that our ally of Umb suffers no retaliatory measures at the hands of the clansmen and their allies, against whom he has been lately fighting, when the British troops are altogether withdrawn from his neighbourhood—a withdrawal which, to do them justice, the Government seem loth to effect. We must hear that the virus, smothered within the system instead of being removed, has, at all events, for some months failed to break out again in some fresh spot upon the frontiers.

Until these points are proven, congratulations upon policy seem, we repeat, premature, although of course a due acknowledgment of the gallantry of the troops engaged and of the military skill displayed in the affair is by no means so.

Before quitting the subject, we cannot but express a hope that, under the reign of the new Viceroy, our frontier policy will undergo a complete revision. Its success of late years has been more than doubtful, and compares badly with that obtained in the days of Mackeson and of Edwardes. With the departure of Sir John Lawrence, the Lieutenant-governor of the Punjab, seems to have departed the verve and vigour of a most able administration. The advent to power of Sir John Lawrence, the Viceroy of India, seems to have inaugurated a regime chiefly remarkable for nervous irresolution, enlivened by intermittent fits of ill-timed, ill-directed energy.

BONUS COMPENSATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Permit me to draw the attention of yourself and your readers to the following strange and well-nigh incredible anomaly:—

Whilst officers of the late Indian army have wasted their weary hearts in vain but persistent efforts to gain their guaranteed "rights," &c.,—namely, the value of their commissions on retirement—many sinking to their long homes with a bitter consciousness of arduous services repaid by undeserved injustice—an officer of the same service, but dismissed therefrom under sentence of Court-martial (a fiat that would in the good old days have effectually barred an officer from being purchased out by his regiment), has been awarded by the liberality of Government the value of his (in one case declared) "unsaleable" commission.

Far be it from me to cavil at this generous treatment of one who may have been "more sinned against than sinning;" but a sense of justice provokes the inquiry—if such indulgence be shown an erring officer, why is it so unaccountably withheld from his brethren, who have incurred and suffered no such penalty? If it be urged that the fruition of the golden harvest for which we have so vainly borne the heat and burthen of the day, was given in the above cited instance in charity, why is the same charity withheld from the faithful and meritorious servants of Government, who can with the utmost difficulty support the position they have honourably won, or provide suitably for the future of their families, whose prospects the amalgamation—a change wrought for Imperial purposes—has sadly hampered? Although memory does not serve me with the exact words, I can quote the substance of a noble lord's speech with regard to this vexed question of compensation for our unmerited losses—"It follows that if any branch of the service be damaged by any sudden acts of the Government it is the duty of the Government to indemnify them." The nullification of these lofty and truthful sentiments by subsequent acts proves the existence of some blighting undercurrent, militating against the interests of the Indian officer. I wait hopefully for the tide, trusting that the flood of eloquence bearing our cause through the new Parliament will sweep away minor streams until they are lost in the sea of public opinion. In my weather-tossed but well-seasoned bark I will till then steer my way as

A STRUGGLER FOR REDRESS.

THE LAND-TAX FORMERLY PAYABLE IN KIND.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—It seems to me unfair that, in the absence of the party in India, a person under the signature of "Goshmal" (the reprover), should see fit to make a personal attack, in a late number of the Homeward Mail, on the veracity of Mr. Robert Knight as to what he has stated occurred to him when travelling on the road to Poona shortly after his first arrival in India in 1847, referring to the reproaches of a poor fakir who upbraided the Company's Government for having drained the country of all its silver. "Goshmal" doubts this statement, because Mr. Knight could not then have understood what the fakir said, nor does he believe that Mr. Knight could, even now, after a residence of twenty-one years, "carry on an idiomatical conversation on the financial situation of India in any single dialect spoken in the peninsula of Hindustan with a naked fakir, or interpret what any such 'poor fellow' might say to him as an Indian economist."

Has it not occurred to this critic that an English gentleman travelling through the country on his first arrival would not fail to be accompanied by one or more persons, native or European, who might serve him as an interpreter? whereas it is most unlikely, first, that Mr. Robert Knight should not have been so provided; and, secondly, that a person of Mr. Knight's well-known character should trump up a story for the sake of effect, in an essay like that to which "Goshmal" has referred; and if his veracity was doubted and his ignorance of the language established, it ought to have been done while Mr. Knight was in England to defend himself.

"Goshmal" is as ignorant as the fakir himself if he does not know that in the course of free trade silver, like cotton, is an article of commerce, and will be abundant or scarce according to its relative value; and when the people, as he says, convert it into ornaments for display, it could not for the time being be very scarce; when it became so it found its level. The fakir, according to his own, and perhaps the public opinion, found it so twenty years ago; but this can no longer be the case, when the value of money is so much depreciated in India as elsewhere, owing to the discovery of the precious metals both in Australia and in America.

I must now advert to the charge of falsehood and ignorance ascribed to the objects of Mr. "Goshmal's" attack on the subject of revenue, once always payable in kind in districts now occupied by the English, in which it is levied in coin. That gentleman challenges the world to show any one instance in which the revenue was, under native Governments, realised in kind. Mr. Knight does not assert that it was always payable in kind, but that it was payable in kind; and I shall proceed to show that by the law of Asia it ought to have been always levied in kind. The land-tax of the natives of Arabia, Persia, and India was originally fixed on proportions of the crop, both by Mahomedans and Hindoos, and was realised and is still collected in some native States in kind, just as the tithes in England were till the modern Commutation Act was passed, on the same principle as corn-rents are still realised in most parts of Scotland.

The Mahomedan lawyers, such as Abul Hassan, Ahmed Bin Mahomed, who wrote in the tenth century, as well as the author of the "Siraj ul Wahaj," define the portion of the crop to be taken from infidels and from true believers, &c., &c. The tax was a tax on production, not even on the land, for uncultivated land paid no tax. The tax authorised by Haren ul Rashed, according to "Ebon Haikal," translated by that eminent Oriental scholar, Sir William Ousely, varied from one-tenth (asherry) to one-third (sulsi), and to one-fourth (rubai) of the produce. The Kings of India introduced the same laws.

Great pains are taken in the "Hidaya" to show that the land of India was private property, and not that of the State. "Whosoever cultivates waste land does thereby acquire property in it, he becomes Rab-ul-Erth (Lord of the soil)." A Zimny (one who does not profess Mahomedanism) becomes proprietor of it the same as a Mussulman. In the work styled "Al-Khamsa," it is stated the Sovereign is entitled to khiraj (a poll-tax), and in the "Medina Sherhy Baz" (referred to by Colonel Wilks, the author of the "History of Mysore," and a profound scholar), it is written—"A town and the lands annexed to it shall not be sold by the Sovereign if it pay khiraj to the Crown, nor shall it be given, nor inherited, nor shall it belong to the Royal domain; for inheritance belongs to real property. He who has the tribute from the land has no property in the land itself. Hence it follows that the king has no right to grant the land which pays the tax, but he may grant the money arising out of his share of the produce."

Abul Fazl, the celebrated Minister of Acler in the fifteenth century, observes—"In former times the Monarchs or Rajas of Hindostan only exacted one-sixth of the produce from the cultivator. In Turkistan the husbandman paid a fifth. In Tûran, as in India, a sixth, and in Iran (Persia) a tenth of the produce of the soil; but, at the same time, the people were loaded with various other taxes, which frequently amounted to the value of half of the cultivator's produce."

In the "Ayin Acberry," translated by Mr. Gladwin, it appears that Acler caused the whole of the land to be measured and assessed it (according to its relative production) into six classes, the assessment varying accordingly; but in the whole representing about one-third of the crop. At a later period Acler found it convenient to assess whole villages instead of fields, and by degrees compromises were made by money payments according to the agreements of villages. In the latter end of the century however we find that his descendant, Aurangzib, who died

A.D. 1707, issued the following edict:—"With regard to money taxes on land, commutations (in money), termed Mowazif-i-mokasima, are permissible, provided the landholders themselves are satisfied, but otherwise the Government officers must not make such alterations."

So much for the Mahomedans before our time. On the occupation of Mysore by the Company in 1832, it was found that the whole of the irrigated land, forming the main source of revenue, had always paid the land revenue in kind. On the crop being gathered, the Government officer saw that the due proportion was left on each field, and he had to sell it to the highest bidder before it was removed, and the cash carried to the account of Government. It is not many months since we find it officially stated that in the Nizam's country the land-tax is still taken in kind.

After these proofs of the law and practice of the Mahomedans, it would be a waste of time to enter into similar details with reference to the law and practice of the Hindoos. The greater portion of Hindoo taxation has reference to annual increase, resolving itself into a universal income-tax.

"Menu," chap. vii. v. 130.—"The taxes on cattle, gems, gold and silver, added each year to the capital stock a fiftieth part; of grain an eighth part, a sixth, or a twelfth, according to the difference of the soil and the labour necessary to cultivate it." Again, chap. x. v. 118.—"A military king who takes even a fourth part of the crops of his realm at a time of urgent necessity, as of war or invasion, and protects his people to the utmost of his power, commits no sin."

Mr. Mountstuart Elphinstone, advertising to the practice of native Governments assigning the revenue of lands for the support of troops, observes, "it is an easy mode of payment where the Government revenue is payable in kind."

I have thus shown that the Asiatic monarchs, who from the earliest ages derived the chief part of their revenue from the soil as a never failing source, discovered that the only fair mode of realising it was by receiving a fixed portion of the crop produced rather than by a levy in money, the relative value of which with produce must fluctuate from time to time, a fact easily proved by comparing the price of land produce with money at different epochs.

This question is ably handled by Adam Smith in a table of the prices of wheat from A.D. 1202 to 1805, by which it appears that taking the averages of twenty or thirty years, wheat varied from 10s. 4d. a quarter to 8s. 1½d., whereas in the succeeding period of forty years the average varied from 92s. 6d. to 38s. 8d.; the averages fluctuating from 25s. in A.D. 1416 to 81s. 6½d. in 1805; and on reference to Wittich's tables, I find the prices in England have varied from 74s. 3d. in 1860, to 40s. 1d. in 1864, and to 56s. in 1868. It is clear, then, that it would be impossible to maintain for any lengthened period a fixed money standard for produce; whereas a fixed portion in kind might, as has been shown, be made a standard equally fair to the producer and the receiver. Wherever a fixed tax has been attempted it has failed, equally in Montauban, as described by Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations," vol. iii. pp. 286-7, and in the Madras Ceded Districts, as fixed by Sir Thomas Munro in 1800, reported by himself as too heavy in 1807, and reversed by himself as Governor twenty years afterwards by a reduction of one-third.

While the land-tax, according to history, among the nations of the East represented a fixed portion of the crop, how came it that we found in our early acquisition of Bengal from the Mahomedans that the land revenue was realised chiefly in coin? It occurred thus: Instead of the latter Mogul Government undertaking in detail the sale of the produce of the land, it usually rented the revenue from year to year to a class of officers called zemindars (in Bengal Proper) to the highest bidder, leaving it to them to realise and sell the estimated share of the produce to the best advantage.

The contract was however made permanent in 1794 by Lord Cornwallis, and the profits from waste lands since cultivated for the benefit of the zemindars has been a permanent loss to the State, and a robbery from the municipalities, to which from time immemorial this property belonged, as legitimately as common lands in England belong to townships or lords of the manor.

I trust Mr. "Goshmal" (the reprobator) will be satisfied that Mr. Robert Knight is not the falsifier that he would make him out to be, and that the English historians whom he has flagrantly attacked as being of a class incompetent to consult the original works are not so ignorant or conceited as he represents them.

Notices of Books.

Out of the Meshes. A Story. London: Tinsley Brothers. 1868.

We really owe an apology to the author of this very clever novel of Anglo-Indian life for not having noticed it according to its deserts some weeks ago. It is not too late however to express the pleasure we have derived from reading a work of unusual promise by a writer capable, we think, of doing yet better in the same line. These volumes are never dull. The writer's intimate acquaintance with the life and manners portrayed therein speaks for itself in every page. He has not merely passed through the country in which his scenes are laid; the very warmth of his satire on the Brahmins of Anglo-Indian society—a not inapt term for the gentlemen of the favoured Civil Service—betrays the member of a profession less highly paid, but not less useful or reputable in a country where the soldier has always opened a way for the civilian. The Brahmins in question will smile at the little outbursts of professional jealousy in consideration of the many redeeming excellences they are sure to discover as they read. Perhaps a touch of personal spitefulness was needed to give zest to the portrait of Mr. Palmer Brown, the gentlemanly villain of the story. A civilian would have dealt more tenderly with such a character, would have painted him a few shades less black, or at least endowed him with demerits of a grander type. Poor Mr. Liversege, too, is a very weak, if not uncommon specimen of his order. Indeed, we cannot say that the British Brahmin shows to much advantage in this novel. But the author might say he never meant to delineate the typical civilian. A foil was wanted for his hero, and a weak old henpecked husband to serve as a pliant tool in the hands of a strongwilled intriguing woman. Besides, it is open for a gentleman of the luckier service to take his revenge in a novel where officers shall monopolise the parts of fool and knave.

To do the author justice however, he is far from blind to the weak points of his own service. If Ashleigh is an almost impossible hero, he gives us in Major Pulfington Belper a most racy embodiment of a high-souled, warmhearted, vain, droll, fine-mannered, well-read, intelligent simpleton, who could never "say anything that was not intensely idiotic or very good." Mr. Charles Simpkin, too, combines a good share of weakness with his stronger points. For all his wit and cleverness and good looks, he tumbles into love and debt as recklessly as a jolly young Ensign is expected to do, and generally comporting himself with befitting foolishness, until age and many trials have taught him better, and undeserved good fortune has thrown the prize of his youthful yearnings into his hands.

The girl of his fancy is the worthy heroine of the book. It says very much for the author's dramatic power, that Miss Sophy Brabazon keeps fast hold of our sympathies through many varying phases of her career, and in spite of lively reminiscences of Ethel Newcome. Through all her faults and follies she charms us still. Several of the characters indeed have a marked affinity to those of Thackeray's great novel. Clive Newcome has gone out to India in the person of Charlie Simpkin. Major Belper is a broad caricature of Colonel Newcome; Barnes may have suggested Mr. Palmer Brown; and Sophy clearly owes her being to the wayward, worldly-minded, weak, yet noble-hearted Ethel. There is something too of Thackeray's manner in the occasional bits of moral reflection, as well as in the general ease and lightness of the style. But deduct whatever you please on this account, there still remains enough originality to float the book; Mrs. Liversege at any rate is quite unlike the Campaigner; the other characters aforesaid act and talk as naturally as if Thackeray had never written; and the flashes of wit and racy humour that sparkle along the story were clearly born of no foreign inspiration.

Miss Sophy is aggravating enough at times, but we are inclined to lose all patience with her inventor for his treatment of Ashleigh. Could not Palmer Brown have been left to his fate, or else rescued at less cost to the reader's hopes and sensibilities? Was it not possible to comfort Charlie Simpkin with the hand of Sophie's cousin? It is clear however that Ashleigh was never meant for a world where people marry and children are born. A life like his of waywardly noble self-denial was after all fitly crowned by the act which hastened its end. The character, for all its romance, is well conceived and powerfully elaborated.

Even in those early scenes where Charlie can find nothing noteworthy in the quiet captain who asks him tiresome questions between puffs of his cheroot, the more observant reader at once feels himself in the presence of no ordinary nature; and the first impression deepens with each reappearance, until the quiet captain of infantry stands out a hero complete. The same dramatic consistency marks the author's embodiment of Mrs. Liversege, Mr. Palmer Brown, Charlie Simpkin, in fact of every personage brought on the scene. Each character is dramatically distinct, and generally, if not always, true to itself. The incidents and the dialogue alike help out the mental portraiture, and the dialogue, like all good dialogue, condenses and crystallises the talk of daily life.

It would be easy to point out faults of design and workmanship if we were so inclined. The plot, for instance, however well developed, turns on a rather unnatural postulate. The author's sense of fun sometimes leads him into broad farce. A little more polish and self-restraint would enhance the natural beauties of a light, racy, keen, yet glowing style. The Hindustani phrases need translating for the benefit of ordinary English readers. But the merits of the novel so greatly outshine its defects, that we do not care to dwell upon the latter; while with regard to the whole work we can only say that its author bids fair, under favouring conditions, to rank among the first of our rising novelists not more in India than at home.

MISSIONARIES AND CASTE.

The Madras Times, turning to the argument that caste is a heathenish institution, and consequently "devilish" and "idolatrous," asks why we should insist upon its connection with the Hindoo religion, when heathen and Christian natives alike agree in saying this is none, and that it is merely a social distinction? One might as well agree on the same grounds that any and every custom observed in a "heathen" country was in itself heathenish. No doubt by long contact with heathenism, caste has become intensified and corrupted; but its amelioration and refinement may, we imagine, reasonably be looked for from a contact with Christianity, and this result is what ought to be aimed at. Nor does it appear probable that missionary resistance will ever greatly affect the existence of the institution, while in the present position of affairs, caste very materially retards and obstructs the spread of Christianity in India, as far as we can see mainly if not solely, owing to that resistance, which is therefore as unwise as it is futile. Certainly, in some parts of India, some of the more impracticable and unreasonable features of caste have been allowed to die out; this, however, we are unable to trace to missionary opposition, but rather to the discovery by the people themselves, that these particulars were irksome and inconvenient, and also to the general spread of education throughout the country. On the other hand, it is admitted on all sides, that Christianity has not made that rapid progress which might have been looked for in the struggle between a system of false superstitions and the one true religion, advocated as it is by zealous and self-denying men, of superior intelligence, and distinguished by a oneness and a purity of object never before witnessed on the same scale.

LOOK AT HOME.

The Madras Times is quite sure that Miss Carpenter can never be rewarded with any success worth boasting about, until there is less occasion given to natives by one, or two Anglo-Indian ladies here and there to libel the whole sex. Reform must commence nearer home than Miss Carpenter perhaps believes, and we have no confidence whatever in the real representatives of native society recognising the want of enlightenment by their females until Anglo-Indian society sets a better example. It is all very well throwing stones at the natives, and alleging on very scanty evidence that they do not carry to their homes the by no means rude or indecent behaviour that characterises their proceeding out of doors; but it is a dangerous game to play at, since, while we see into their houses but darkly, they peer into ours with all the eyes of our numerous domestic servants. The more we think of the subject of the enlightenment of Hindoo ladies, the more disinclined are we to predict that it will be soon brought about. Anglo-Indian example here and there, now in this Presidency, now in that, and Anglo-Indian scandal, are in themselves enough to nip the whole thing in the bud; but even supposing that the natives consent to believe that the persons reckless of their reputation amongst ourselves are not representative but are exceptional women, will the increasing numbers of Hindoos proceeding to England have any encouraging effects? We must always bear in mind that natives have a very rational if slightly unpleasant distrust of us English, and wherever they meet us, in their own or in our own land, they do not see the best side of our character—if we have any. The Government are now sending home two native youths from each Presidency a-year, and these youths and others of their creed and caste will of course be all eyes and all ears wherever they go. They will usually live in our great cities, and what will be their experience? What the Round Table says of New York might also be written of many parts of London and Paris. All this the Hindoo on his travels observes, and in every probability what he thus sees only tends to intensify his innate conservatism, and to strengthen his determination not to have his female relatives "educated" after the European model.

THE LATE CAMPAIGN.

The Ukbar Alam observes that now-a-days the war on the frontier between the English and the Hussunzaies and Swatees is engaging attention. The cause of this has from the first rested with these tribes, while on the side of the English there has been a good deal of affecting not to hear or know what was going on; for this reason they became encouraged; had they been well beaten at the first and punished for their conduct, in future they would not have been so troublesome. It is nothing strange that the Government has taken the steps it has, but it has been done more for the justice of the country. Still, up to the present time the reason of all this war has not been published in any Government Gazette, and the people of the country, through their own ignorance, give out that the war is with Feroze Shah; some say that it is the intention of Government to take Cabul, while others declare that the Russians are coming; in short, each one has his own tale and idea on the subject, but the wise and just will consider it quite proper on the side of the Government, and know full well that the British Government will never break their treaty with any country. When war is pending the announcement that it is so should be made public through the Government Gazette, for it is to be regretted that people in general, and even those of high standing who read the papers as well as those who do not read them, join with the ignorant masses and misrepresent matters without feeling the least shame.

TENANT RIGHT IN INDIA.

The Times of India thinks it would be well if the journals which use their columns to give the public mind a one-sided version of these Bengal disputes about the rights of landlords would make themselves acquainted with the history of the Permanent Settlement. It will perhaps surprise them to find that Lord Cornwallis never dreamed of the zemindar exercising such powers as he now claims. For proof of this we refer them in particular to his lordship's minute of 3rd February, 1790, where Lord Cornwallis assumes it to be a matter of course that the zemindars could "receive no more than the established rent" of the land. We admit that it is a question whether, as a matter of policy, Act X. of 1859 was not too late enacted. So subversive of all ancient rights has the Permanent Settlement proved, so largely has it annihilated the old yeoman class of cultivators, that it may be questioned whether we would not have done better to have allowed it to complete its cruel work. It reduced the masses of Bengal to abject poverty, and it may be allowed to us to doubt whether Act X. will ever prove an efficient remedy for the disorder and decay of the provinces, blighted by the mistaken policy of Lord Cornwallis; of its justice and its humanity there can be no question amongst disinterested men. To sum up. The Bengal planters and zemindars complain that they are not allowed to exact the full "rent" of the land, which "rent" Sir Barnes Peacock declared to belong to them. The question is one, therefore, of fact. Did the Government of Lord Cornwallis confer such a right upon these men as is claimed? And the answer is undoubted. Lord Cornwallis conferred upon the zemindars no more than the right which the State itself possessed. He could confer no more; and to maintain in these days that the land revenue of India, the khiraj, is identical with "rent," by which word we popularly render it, is monstrous. We call it "rent" for want of a better term; but the impost, though partaking somewhat of the nature of "rent," is in no way to be confounded with it. Instead of being determined, as rents are, in the open market, the extent to which khiraj may be imposed is strictly limited by the law of India to one-half the produce. It is contrary to law to exact more; while Sir Barnes Peacock held that the zemindar may levy any proportion he can squeeze out of the ryot. By usage, moreover, the established rate of the khiraj in the country was one third the produce; and it is a violation of the intentions of the founder of the permanent settlement for the zemindars to exact more. The wrong done the ryot is this: that because we have misrendered the term khiraj by the term rent, the ryot is therefore liable for all that modern political economists comprehend under that term—a decision most welcome, no doubt, to the zemindar, but destructive to the rights of the cultivator. Will the supporters of the zemindar venture to tell us that the land revenue of India and the "rent" of political economists are convertible terms, and if not, what becomes of their case? In no part of India are we ourselves taking at this moment more than a fraction of the produce from the cultivator, while we are to allow the Bengal zemindar, it seems, to take whatever he pleases. So cruelly has the impost been levied in Bengal that the cultivators are reduced to bitter poverty, while in all other parts of India they are rising into comparative wealth.

Bengal.

THE FAMINE AND THE CROPS.

"The accounts," writes the Indian Daily News of the 25th Nov., "received from Orissa during the last few days of the food prospects of that province are not of a very assuring character. There, as well as throughout the Bengal Presidency, from the Sone westward and north-westward and to the heart of the Punjab, will great scarcity undoubtedly be felt—a scarcity that but for the wise and timely precautionary measures of the Government of India would be certain to assume the worst features of famine. There is a short supply of food in Behar, but from Dinapore westward and north-westward, to across the Sutlej, may be traced a belt or zone, of varying breadth, of scarcity-stricken country. This zone is comparatively narrow at Dinapore, and between that place and Allahabad, but it widens as it passes through the Doab, attaining its greatest width when near Agra, where it expands so as to include all Rajpootana and Central India. After passing Meerut it again narrows, and the districts of the Eastern and Western Jumna canals and that of the Ganges canal are as verdant, and covered with as fine crops as the best portions of Lower Bengal. Whirled through them by rail the traveller has forced upon him the now beginning to be universally admitted truth, that the greatest want of India is irrigation, and that her best benefactors will be those who do most towards pushing on works of that character."

BENGAL.—The Indian Daily News of November 26 publishes the latest report on the agricultural prospects of Bengal. In the Gya district the construction of a road has been sanctioned for the purpose of affording relief. In the Tirhoot, Sarun, Chumparun, and Shahabad districts of the same division, Patna, the out-turn is estimated from four to eight annas, and relief operations will probably be necessary throughout the division in a month or two. In Bhau-gulpore also distress may be anticipated, more especially in Monghyr and Rajmehal. In the Burdwan division Midnapore will suffer, and in the Palamow district of Chota Nagpore the native Deputy Commissioner has been induced to recommend stopping the exportation of grain. In Cuttack the crops will be somewhat below the average, and in order to husband the stocks of Government rice in the division its selling rates have been raised, and will be raised still higher if necessary. The stock on the 31st October was—Cuttack, 292,280 maunds; Pooree, 85,561; and Balasore, 19,706; total, 397,547 maunds. The harvest in Dacca promises to be unusually good. In the Presidency and Rajshahye divisions prospects are very favourable, except in the tract in the 24-Pergunnahs district that suffered during the rains, in which about Rs. 46,000 have up to date been expended on relief operations.

We hear from Bundelcund that the crops have altogether failed in the district near Punnah, and that the villagers are crowding into the town to avail themselves of the generosity of the chief.—Englishman, Nov. 25.

STATION TALK.

KURSEONG, Nov. 12.—You must be at present in the full enjoyment or non-enjoyment of what has been termed the "silly season." The Governor-General of India that is left his Capua two days ago; the Governor-General that is to be left England six days ago:—

"The great expedition of twenty thousand men, Scaled the Black Mountain and then came down again," and is now comfortably settled in cantonments; there is no commercial crisis to record; no respectable murders or forgeries perpetrated; no cyclones, no earthquakes, no wrecks, no conflagrations at sea or on land; even the cases in John Blessington Roberts' Court leave no scope for his wit and humour. Under such circumstances I have taken heart of grace to write you a few lines, although I have nothing uncommon or marvellous to relate. No traveller, I suppose, ever came from the plains to these beautiful mountains without feeling that mental pleasure inspired by the grand and varied scenery, and that elasticity of frame produced by the inhalation of the cool mountain breeze. And yet, although the site that I write from, and that of Darjeeling (only eighteen miles distant), have been known for more than thirty years, are situated at so short a distance from the capital of India that a railway train would reach the base of the hills in fourteen hours, there is no sanitarium in the Himalayas that is more difficult of access, or more neglected. The road from Caragola to Punkabaree is very rough and bad. The bridge over the river on this side of Purneah, within hail of its magistrates and other magnates, has been broken for the last two years, and it is necessary to cross the river in boats. The River Mahanuddy has also to be crossed in boats, and there are but three kinds of conveyance for the traveller. The first is by the mail cart, and if the traveller is strong enough to sit perched in one posture on the roof of a box, and endure sun and rain, he will be landed at Punkabaree in seventeen hours. The second is by Shigram, which will cost the traveller more than a rupee per mile (Rs. 151 for 140 miles), and as it is country made, and with very indifferent springs, the traveller will be deposited in twenty hours at Punkabaree in a lamentable plight from excessive jolting. The third is by Champoney—a sort of covered cart without springs, drawn by bullocks, that travel at an average rate of two miles per hour. Such are the only means of arriving at the finest sanitarium in the Himalayas, and nearest to the Great City of Palaces. During holidays, then, or sickness, when "pain and anguish wring the brow," the Calcutta resident goes to sea, to the Neilgherries, to Delhi, to Simla, even to Burmah, rather than attempt the rough, dilatory, and uncomfortable journey to Darjeeling. It is not possible in any way to account for this prolonged neglect of a hill location so valuable, for its advantages and its proximity have long been known to the residents of Calcutta. As, however, the London Times has fixed upon Darjeeling as the proper spot for the capital of India, we shall, no doubt, soon have a railroad, and these hills will be covered with the rural retreats of all the wealthy classes. The site of Kurseong appears to me to be preferable to that of Darjeeling; it is nearer the plains, and the climate is more equable, while there is abundance of space for building. Darjeeling proper is very cold and damp in the winter, and is visited by snowstorms, which are unknown here.—Englishman Correspondent.

SIMLA, Nov. 18.—Sir William Mansfield left this place to-day at about 2 P.M., under the usual salute. Lady Mansfield preceded him by half an hour, riding down, escorted by one of the staff. From what I heard, I believe they travel by the new or cart road, which, though longer than the old one by fifteen or twenty miles, is by far the more pleasant and convenient of the two. Colonel Hatch, the Judge Advocate-General, will also leave on or about the 26th inst., while the other heads of the several military departments will take their departure at intervals between this date and the 1st proximo. The subordinates will of course start immediately after the heads, and are preparing to leave, so that, by the end of the month, Simla will be nearly clear of all its visitors. Besides the above, there is hardly any other news, and the spot seems to be tending towards the state of stagnation peculiar to the winter months. While penning the foregoing I received a letter from a friend among the tea plantations, from which I hear that the Palumpore fair which recently took place was nothing to be compared to the first one by which the place was inaugurated last year under Mr. Commissioner Forsyth's auspices. Only a few European visitors were there and a few Rajahs. Some presents were distributed to individuals who brought goods for sale from a distance, and prizes were given to a number of scholars belonging to the schools of the valley. Merchants from Yarkund and Cabool brought many ghoots (most of which were sold) and purchased a quantity of the Kangra Valley teas, it seems for the Russian market. Among the cattle were three yaks or Thibet bulls, rendered conspicuous by their shaggy manes and bushy tails. It does not appear if they met with a ready sale, or if they were sold at all, as they rarely live when taken down to the plains, and exist only so long as they are kept in the cool climate of the hills. I bought one as a curiosity for 30 rupees at the last Palumpore fair, and tried to take it down to Jullunder, but it died shortly after it arrived at Hoshiarpore, partly from the carelessness of the keeper, as I was led to believe, and partly from the sudden transition of temperature the animal underwent from its accustomed snowy regions and the warmth of the sun's rays in the lowlands, even during the early part of winter.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

BHUTPORE.—Owing to the absence of his Highness the Maharajah and that of the Political Agent, the station has been dull, but their return from the hills has effected a vivifying process, turning everything into gaiety and cheerfulness. On the nights of the 1st and the 3rd parties were given by the Maharajah. They were well attended by the European and native officers. The actors on the stage being Frenchmen, the performances were admirably gone through, and were received by the visitors with long-sustained applause. All hopes of rain are now over, and famine stares the people in the face; but, happily for the poor desponding zemindars, while suffering under this scourge of heaven, they are not deprived of sympathy on the part of their immediate authorities. Captain Walter, whose benign disposition needs no comment, directed, before proceeding to the hills, all the tushceeldahs to use their utmost zeal in affording every possible relief and alleviating the distress by making liberal payments of "tuccave" advances to the needy zemindars for the construction of pucca wells and other agricultural purposes; and his instructions on the subject, I am glad to say, have been duly carried into effect. The new revenue settlement for twenty years, which was under contemplation, has been postponed pro tem., and the native bankers, on the guarantee of durbar officials, have opened money transactions with the village communities. All sorts of corn have been exempted from duty, and a project on a grand scale for the construction of roads and other works of public utility is under contemplation. This project, which would provide employment for many poor indigent people, will be shortly executed. In all these beneficial and charitable views and measures Captain Walter is cordially seconded and supported by the Maharajah, whose naturally kind disposition is ever ready to aid the cause of justice and humanity.—Delhi Gazette Correspondent.

CALCUTTA, Nov. 22.—The Viceroy arrived in Calcutta last week, but owing to the train having, as usual, been delayed, the Volunteer Rifles and the band of the second battalion 60th Rifles were not in attendance. The Major-General and his staff, and the Brigadier-

General with his, were in waiting at Government-house to do honour to him, and must have had a pleasant hour and a half in the sun. The Fort William battery fired a salute, and his Lordship retired to breakfast. The Commander-in-Chief and his staff will not arrive until the 8th proximo. Colonel Lumsden, the Quarter-Master-General of the Army, will make his appearance on the 1st. Owing to some domestic affliction the Lieutenant-Governor's ball for the 27th has been postponed. Her Majesty's second battalion 60th Rifles give a ball to-morrow, at which the Viceroy will be present. The lodge "Star in the East" and its members give a ball at the Town Hall early next month. Numerous furloughs have taken place since the new rules have been published. The following officers are now going home, leaving good acting berths;—Colonel J. Reid, B.S.C., Commissioner of Fyzabad; Colonel S. J. Davies, B.S.C., Judicial Commissioner Chota Nagpore; Major S. B. Cookson, B.S.C., Commanding 43rd Assam Light Infantry; Major D. Mocatta, B.S.C., Commanding 3rd Sikh Infantry; Captain L. H. Williams, B.S.C., wing officer 14th Regiment N.I.; Captain P. S. Yorke, late 12th L.I., second in command and squadron officer 12th Bengal Cavalry; Surgeon-Major J. William, Bengal Medical Establishment. Lieutenant-Colonel A. C. Wroughton, Deputy Commissary General, has resigned his appointment from ill-health, and is about to do general duty. There has been a grand row at Buxa, Bhootan, in the 32nd N.I. Colonel E. L. Dennys, second in command, has been turned out of his appointment and sent to do duty at Agra. Lieut. T. P. Stevens, of the Unattached List, adjutant of the regiment, has also been turned out, and a jemadar summarily dismissed. Apròpos of a story in one of your issues of a Mr. Pagan being supposed to be dead, did you ever hear of the European soldier who was taken to the deadhouse in a state of coma from drink? A native sentry over the door was startled by hearing some one rapping against the wall. With perfect sang-froid he called out—"Baito, Sahib, buccus nay aya"—(Sit down, sir, the coffin has not come). This joke was made use of in the old Indian Punch, then called the Delhi Sketch Book. Edward Parry Moore, once in the Austrian army, afterwards in the 53rd Foot, editor of the Indian Standard, The Phoenix, Oudh Gazette, Lucknow Times, &c., is now the editor of the Oudh Argus. I regret to hear of the death of the Rev. Arthur Stone, a junior chaplain on the Bengal Ecclesiastical Establishment, and formerly the chaplain of Dum-Dum. He died at Dehra Doon on the 9th, at the age of forty-two. He was formerly the Calcutta correspondent of the Pioneer, and was much missed when he had to take leave on medical certificate to Madras. The Rev. M. R. Burge, domestic chaplain of the Lord Bishop, is about to proceed to England on furlough. No one has yet been named as his successor. The officers who joined the Staff Corps on its formation in 1861 are, I believe, about to send in a memorial for brevet rank, as they are being rapidly superseded by their juniors. Many of those who entered in 1866 have lost very considerably, and will have the youngsters of their old cadres passing over their heads.

Miscellaneous.

SIR J. LAWRENCE.—His Excellency the Governor-General was to hold a levee at Calcutta on Thursday afternoon, the 3rd December.

COLONEL LONGDEN.—There is a rumour current to the effect that Colonel Longden, Adjutant General of the Army, is likely to vacate his appointment.—Mofussilite.

CHANGE OF TITLE.—The Indian Daily News says that all unco-venanted officers, holding appointments as Assistant Commissioners, will in future be designated Personal Assistants to Commissioners.

GUNPOWDER MAKING.—Lieutenant-Colonel Haggard, the Agent for gunpowder in the Bombay Presidency, and his assistant were shortly to proceed to Bengal to learn the process of making gunpowder as introduced at Dum-Dum.

THE PORT CANNING CASE.—A Calcutta paper states that the Port Canning case was to come on before Mr. Justice Norman on the 1st inst. On the 25th ult. Mr. Woodroffe, counsel for Mr. Schiller, made an application to the Court to postpone the trial of the case, which was opposed by the Advocate-General, and refused with costs.

SIR W. MANSFIELD.—We observe that Sir William Mansfield left Umballa on the 25th of November at 8 A.M. by special train, and arrived in Meerut at 2 P.M., the staff accompanying him. His Excellency was to leave on November 28 for the eastward, and was not to visit Delhi at present. Sir William, says the Mofussilite, was looking hale and hearty.

THE RAJAH OF KUPPOORTHULLAH.—From the Englishman we learn that the Secretary of State has decided that the Maharajah of Kupperthullah shall have an extension of six months, within which to prepare his statement against the partition of his raj, and that until a decision has been come to on this statement the orders of the Government of India are to remain in abeyance.

HON. MR. MAINE.—Mr. Maine, says the Friend of India, will not resign his office so soon as he had originally intended, or in April next. He will not, however, return to Calcutta after the hot weather, so that his successor must be appointed by next cold season. The number of candidates for the office is unusually large, and includes the three Advocates-general. As the law member will be the only non-Indian member of Council besides the Governor-general, it is certain that the selection will be made in England. The new Ministry will probably be as glad to confer the office on Mr. Fitz-james Stephen, if he will accept it, as the present Secretary of State is understood to have been.

AN INDIAN "MONITEUR."—A well-informed correspondent writes to the Times of India:—"There is positively to be an Indian Moniteur, a purely official journal, written and conducted by members of Government, and generally of the services—if the Secretary of State for India will but graciously consent. There will, however, be nothing of the kind during Sir John Lawrence's stay in the country, and, when demi-officially written to on the subject, the Secretary of State may refuse his assent. Mr. Seton-Karr was spoken of as editor, but he at once declared that he considered his purely official duties required his whole time and undivided attention. Should the scheme be sanctioned Sir William Mansfield and Sir Richard Temple are likely to be the chief contributors."

A THUG INDEED.—The last Police Gazette N. W. P. publishes the confession of a mild Hindoo, named Ramadheen, not quite twenty-one years of age, who, for the last twenty months, has followed the calling of poisoner. There is no nonsense about Ramadheen. He does not pretend to scruples or remorse of any kind. He calls his victims "shikar," and alleges no other excuse for his practices than that it was very dull at home in his village. So far as we can enumerate the persons he poisoned in the year and a-half, they are about twenty seven; but he is very cavalier and careless in figure, and talks of a family whom he may murder with a lordly negligence as to the number of its members. Ramadheen is not in the least superstitious. Most of his victims were either Brahmins or fugees, and his favourite hunting-grounds were what he calls "holy places"—Bindachull near Mirzapore, and the Magh Mela here.—Pioneer.

OFFICIAL.—The Hon. Ashley Eden, the Bengal Secretary, and Mr. Thomas Jones, the Assistant Secretary, who returned to Calcutta by the last mail—the former from England and the latter from Madras—resumed charge of their respective offices on Wednesday, the 25th instant. Mr. S. C. Bailey, the Additional Secretary, will revert to a Mofussil Judgeship, but in the event of Mr. Dampier proceeding home, on a few months' leave of absence, as it is rumoured, Mr. Bailey will remain in the Secretariat. It is said that Mr. Eden will not remain long in the Bengal Secretariat, as he may shortly be transferred to one of the Secretariats under the Government of India. In that case Mr. Bailey will be permanently posted to the Bengal Secretariat. In the meantime, however, it is generally believed that the arrangements in connection with the amalgamation of the Board of Revenue with the Bengal office will be carried out by Mr. Eden.—Indian Daily News, Nov. 28.

A CURIOUS CASE.—The case of Lieutenant Grey, who allowed himself to be carried away in the hills by Kauri Khan, is now before the Chief Court. It is alleged that Lieutenant Grey promised immunity to Kauri Khan in return for being safely restored to his district. This Kauri Khan effected, but now finds himself brought up for wrongful confinement of Lieutenant Grey, and is, of course, liable to a very severe punishment. We hope that some friends will favour us with the true particulars of this extraordinary case. We cannot but think that Lieutenant Grey, who, it will be remembered, got one of the witnesses of the accusers arrested within the precincts of the Chief Court, has acted with his ordinary rashness in the matter, and that, whatever his physical pluck, he has not acted with moral courage in not defending the Frontier Chief who, under great provocation, carried him off into the hills, there to treat him with great respect, and finally to restore him to his friends and the Government.—Indian Public Opinion.

THE CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.—There was a rumour privately circulated in Calcutta only lately that, owing to his state of health, Sir Barnes Peacock meditated either to retire from the bench or to take a period of leave of absence somewhere about March next. In such an event it was believed that Sir Walter Morgan would be transferred to Calcutta as Chief Justice of Bengal, and the Hon. Mr. Phear of the High Court there take Sir Walter Morgan's place as Chief Justice of the North-West Provinces. It appears quite possible, however, that the recent trip of Sir Barnes Peacock to Cashmere, and the present cold season, may determine him to stay for another year, for his health has much recovered. The consideration of opening the new High Court, the roof of the second storey of which is about to be laid on, may also lend its influence in determining the aged but yet unbent chief to stay for a period longer. We give the rumour for what it is worth, but cannot vouch for its accuracy.—Pioneer.

THE MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.—Among the rumours in official quarters regarding the changes likely to take place in the Medical Department during the ensuing year, or on the retirement of the present Inspector-General of Hospitals, is one that, in case the proposal for abolishing the office of the Inspector-General of Hospitals of the N. W. Provinces, and of retaining only one Inspector-Generalship is carried out, the duties attached to that post will be considerably reduced and lightened. It is reported that the supervision and control of the jail hospitals will be transferred to the several local Governments, and that in that case a separate Secretariat will be formed under those Governments. It is also said that the number of Deputy Inspectors-General of Hospitals is to be reduced, and that the secretaries to the local Governments, in the Medical Department, are to be selected from the Deputy Inspectors-General. The regimental hospitals of the native army and all the Government charitable dispensaries will remain as heretofore, under the Inspector-General of Hospitals of the Indian Medical Service.—Indian Daily News.

SENTENCE OF DEATH.—Private Robert Dore, 20th Hussars, who was tried by Court-martial at Peshawur, on the 17th Oct., for the murder of John McCourt, was found guilty, and has been sentenced to be hanged. The Commander-in-Chief has confirmed the sentence, and the confirmation has been approved of by the Governor-General in Council. In confirming the sentence Sir William Mansfield made the following remarks:—"1. His Excellency must express his deep regret that the General Court-Martial has so conceived its duty as to throw a most unusual responsibility on the Commander-in-Chief in India and the Government in the decision of this very painful and grievous case. If the Court believed that the case was one not deserving of capital punishment, the Court should have given effect to that opinion in the sentence, instead of recording a sentence of death on the one hand, and practically recording its disapproval of it on the other. 2. After the most careful consideration of the proceedings, his Excellency is obliged to record his conviction that a more dastardly and cold-blooded murder was never committed than that proved against the prisoner, there being no extenuating circumstances. 3. His Excellency, therefore, is under the most painful necessity of disregarding the recommendation to mercy."

THE CIVIL FURLOUGH RULES.—The Governor-General has declared that the revised rules for dealing with applications for leave and furlough from members of the covenanted civil service are not applicable to military officers in civil employ, and that other regulations will be issued hereafter for the latter. The revised rules empower local governments and administrations to grant leave of absence of all kinds subject to the exigencies of the public service. The Governor-General however, has desired that whenever the total number of civil servants belonging to any province absent on furlough of any kind or on special leave reaches the limit of twenty per cent. on the number employed in such province, a special report may be submitted to the Government of India, and the grant of further furlough be stopped, except in cases of certified sickness, or of officers returning from furlough. The Viceroy has also directed that the grant of leave or furlough may be strictly confined to cases where there is no doubt whatever as to the title of the applicant to the leave or furlough for which he applies, and in which the case is so certified by the Local Account Department. Should any question arise as to the construction of the rules, it should be referred to the Government of India for decision. With these reservations, the Governor-General leaves the grant of leave of absence to the discretion of local governments and administrations.—Indian Daily News.

THE PERSONNEL OF THE POST-OFFICE.—The duties of the Director-General of the Post-Office of India having increased to a considerable extent, the Government of India, in the Home Department, on the proposition of the Director-General, has sanctioned a Deputy Director-Generalship commencing on a salary of Rs. 1,750 per month, and rising to Rs. 2,000, by an annual increase of Rs. 50, with house-rent allowance of Rs. 200 monthly, subject to the confirmation of the Secretary of State for India. Mr. C. K. Dove, Postmaster-General of the North-Western Provinces, who has made over charge of his office permanently to Major Battye, will be temporarily appointed to the new post. On the return of Dr. Impey, who is now on sick leave in England; Mr. Dove will revert to his old appointment—the Postmaster Generalship of Bengal, as intimated by us a few days ago; and Mr. F. R. Hogg, now acting Postmaster General of Bombay, is likely to succeed to the new post of Deputy Director-General permanently. Mr. Dove is expected to reach the presidency from the Upper Provinces in the course of a week, and join the new appointment pro tem. There seems a tremendous shuffling of the official cards just now. It is to be hoped that it is not all of the place-making order. There is no disposition to starve the upper storey of the postal department. Might not something more be done for the wretched subs, and a little for the public?—the abandonment of the practically compulsory thin paper and envelope for instance. It would prevent more rascality than the 8 anna registration fee.—Indian Daily News.

MILITARY.—The 3-25th Brigade (Garrison Battery) Royal Artillery left Fort William, on Nov. 22, for Morar; Major Dawson, Captain Dyce, and Lieutenant Sutton accompanied it. No. 3 Battery, 22nd Brigade Royal Artillery, from Lucknow, with Captain DeVic Carey and Lieutenant Dyce, had come in its place. The 1st Regiment N.I. had arrived at Agra, from Dum-Dum, on the forenoon of the 26th November. The regiment relieves the 41st N.I. at that station. The 41st has left for Sahibgunge en route to Bhootan. The 38th Foot have returned to Sealkote and the 16th Bengal Cavalry to Rawul Pindoe. Indian Public Opinion hears that the 29th Regiment Punjab Native Infantry, at present stationed at Moradabad and Shahjehanpore, have been ordered to Peshawur, the two former stations having been condemned as military stations. Rohilkhand used, not many years ago, to be called "the garden of Upper India," and it was considered to possess a most healthy climate. It seems strange, therefore, that any of its stations should be condemned for the cantonment of troops, and Peshawur preferred to them. We observe that the head-quarters of H.M.'s 58th Regiment was to commence its march from Darjeeling to Sahibgunge on December 1, for Allahabad, arriving there probably on the 28th January. The Mofussile of the 26th November understands that in consequence of information recently received from the Peshawur frontier, all the troops now returning from Hazara have been ordered to stand fast for the present. The Indian Daily News (of the 25th) seems to make some similar allusion when it says:—"We hear that his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief is not likely at present to visit Calcutta. In the opinion of Sir William Mansfield there are strong reasons why the head of the army should remain in the north. It is also believed that many of the troops who were to have come down will remain in the upper provinces for reasons that are doubtless satisfactory to those who are responsible for the peace and safety of the country."

WRECK OF THE "CLASMERDEN."—The Clasmerden visited Akyab for orders, and anchored about five-and-a-half miles from the light-house, in five-and-a-half fathoms of water, the light bearing north-east. Her draft was 15 ft. 3 in. aft, and 14 ft. 9 in. forward. About 8 P.M. of the 7th heavy weather set in, with a very strong sea. The weather was thick, and the strong seas and set of the current drove the vessel on the bank without changing her bearings as regards the light. No observations could be taken on account of the thickness of the weather. About 9.30 A.M. on the 9th Nov. the vessel struck heavily; she must have injured herself fatally, for in a few minutes it was found there were three feet of water in the hold. In about ten minutes she struck again with fearful violence, and in a short time, with seven feet of water in her, settled down on the sand. There was a depth of three-and-a-half fathoms where she took the ground. As soon as she became fast the sea made a clear breach over her, and she began to break up. The crew, finding all was lost, got out a few boats, and endeavoured to save themselves before the fall of the iron masts should deprive them of the means of doing so. Some managed to get ashore on bits of the wreck, and others clung to the wreck, from which a few were rescued by the boats of the Oriental, though not without great peril to the rescuers. The following are the particulars:—Men saved by the boats of the S.S. Oriental: W. D. Dawson, chief officer, and able seamen, James Meherlop, Michel Box; Peter Johnson, James Cavanagh, and Thomas Melia, ordinary seamen; Men saved by the ship's boats: Captain Charles Thomas, second mate James D. Little; A.B.'s, John Carpenter, Porker Creswell, John Boyd, William Robinson, Andrew McEwen, John Fox, O. S. Griffith Pool; boy, George Jones. Men saved on pieces of the wreck: A.B.'s Thomas Campel, A.H. Burg, John Morland, and Richard McCourtney, O.S. Men who were drowned: Angus Morison, carpenter; William Werner, steward; John Stevenson, cook; John Dewar, boat-swain; A.B.'s George Rayner, John Collins, Martin O'Rourke, Edward A. Brendon; O.S., Arthur H. Thompson. The heavy loss is a proof of the suddenness and completeness of the catastrophe. The survivors have been brought to Calcutta, but it requires no stretch of the imagination to paint the distress in which they find themselves. The wreck of the Clasmerden is just one of those cases in which the well-known and princely liberality of the merchants of the city would be well applied. We understand that several are anxious to aid the sufferers, and we shall therefore be glad to receive subscriptions, and to hand them over for disposal to the Committee of the Sailors' Home.—Englishman, Nov. 27.

Madras.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN BAGENAL.—The Madras papers announce the death in Fort St. George early on Wednesday, the 25th ult., of Captain Walter P. Bagenal, of H.M.'s 16th Lancers. He entered the army as Cornet on 31st August, 1858, was promoted to Lieutenant on 16th July, 1859, and to Captain on 28th August, 1863.

DEATH OF MAJOR SINCLAIR.—The Rangoon Times says:—"Major Sinclair, of the 38th Regiment M.N.I., died at his residence in cantonments on Saturday afternoon (Nov. 14) at six o'clock; he was found dead by Dr. Dougall. His interment took place on Sunday evening with the usual military honours."

EARTHQUAKE AT TRIPPTORE.—A shock of earthquake was felt in Tripptore, in the Collectorate of Salem, Madras Presidency, on the 8th November, at seven o'clock in the morning. The shock was very slight, and it appeared to pass from east to west. Its duration is stated to have been a few seconds.

EARTHQUAKE AT SEA.—We are informed that the ship Codabuz in August last, and in latitude 13 deg. 58 min. north, longitude 91 deg. 56 min. east, in the Bay of Bengal, experienced two shocks of earthquake, at intervals of two or three minutes between each. The vessel is reported to have trembled considerably.

THE MYSORE COMMISSION.—If Mr. Kindersley felt disappointment at the Judicial Commissionership of Mysore being given to Mr. Gordon, there is some reason to hope that he will be more than satisfied with the coming changes; for there is a rumour abroad that he is destined for the higher post of Chief Commissioner, which is likely to become vacant shortly by the retirement of Mr. Bowring.—Madras Athenaeum.

THE NEW MILITARY SECRETARY.—General Wilde, commanding the Frontier Force, has been appointed Military Secretary to the Government of Madras. He was close to his promotion, and the frontier appointment can only be held by a colonel with rank of Brigadier-General. He will be succeeded by Colonel Vaughan or Colonel Browne, probably the former, though the appointment of the latter would be more popular.

RUMOURED DISTURBANCES AT HYDERABAD.—A bazaar rumour obtained currency the other day to the effect that disturbances of some kind had taken place at Hyderabad, and that troops were wanted in that direction. While the rumour may be safely discredited there is no doubt that a tempest on a small scale is brewing up there. The anomalous position of the minister, and the discontent in the city, are rendered more important by the fact that the Nizam is highly irate with the Viceroy about a letter he has recently received. Lord Mayo will have quite enough on his hands when he comes out here, one way and another.—Bangalore Herald, Nov. 25.

THE MADRAS ARMY.—The Madras Athenaeum hears that a despatch from the Secretary of State had been received by this Government directing that the local officers who were removed from their commands last year under Sir Gaspard Le Marchant's order are to be immediately restored to them; and all losses they may have incurred by their being superseded are to be made good to them. We believe the locals owe this act of justice to the Madras Government (and especially to the Hon. Alexander Arbuthnot), who remonstrated very strongly against the locals being removed from commands in favour of staff corps men.

THE CROPS.—The Madras Government has received the following telegrams:—"Ganjam, 23rd November.—Weekly report, taking average of three principal marts—rice, fifteen seers per rupee; raggy, thirty-three seers. Market easy." "Vizagapatam, 23rd November.—During past week season unfavourable. Rain-fall none; market supply good; prices rising; public health middling; pasturage limited." "Cocanada, 23rd November.—North-east monsoon entirely failed; wet crops in bad condition. Under tanks there will not be more than a quarter crop, under anicut channel three-fourths crop. Rice is being exported to Madras at rupees six annas four a bag, free on board. A demand is rising from Vizagapatam for food-grains. Market here well supplied; first sort rice, fifteen seers per rupee; second sort, sixteen seers a rupee; raggy, twenty-six seers; cholum, twenty-five seers; these are retail rates in Cocanada Bazaar. Prices of all other grains rising fast. A little fever as usual in some talooks. No cholera. Pasturage plentiful."

TIGERS ON THE NALLA-MULLA HILLS.—The collector of Kurnool, on the 14th October, reported to the Board of Revenue that, up to the 1st September from the date on which Major Christie's party killed a tiger on the Nalla-Mulla hills, eight men and two women have been killed on those hills by tigers. On the Nadial side, four shikaries, at Rs. 7 a month, and on the Cumbum side, five shikaries, at Rs. 6 a month, have been employed since November, 1867, as sanctioned by Government. They have not succeeded in killing any tigers, but they undoubtedly serve to give confidence to persons crossing the hills, and probably, though the collector has had no complaints against them, exact fees from the parties they escort. He does not think they are of any use, and recommended that they should be discontinued. The only way of rendering the pass through the hills safe, in the collector's opinion, is to effectually clear the jungle for 100 yards each side of the road, and to keep up a regular establishment for keeping it down; but this has been objected to on account of its costliness, and the Board recommended four halting places at short distances along the road. The Board concurred with the collector in regarding the longer maintenance of nine shikaries, on Rs. 58 a month, as useless, and their discharge was accordingly sanctioned by Government.

Bombay.

THE BROACH EXHIBITION.—The Bombay Gazette learns that the Broach Exhibition will be opened on the date already notified, no change having been made in the arrangements.

ABELMANDEB.—We learn that when H.M.S. Dryad was at the Island of Perim, on the 7th November, a fight was going on between two of the Arab tribes at Abelmandeb. A report on the subject has been prepared for Government.

CIVIL.—Mr. H. N. B. Erskine, recently appointed Acting Collector of Poona, has assumed charge of the office, relieving Mr. Bell, First Assistant Collector, who has been officiating since the departure to England of Mr. Oliphant, the late Collector.

THE GOVERNOR'S LEVEE.—On the afternoon of December 3, at four o'clock, his Excellency Sir Seymour Fitzgerald held a levee in the Durbar Room, Town Hall, which was attended by a large number of gentlemen.

THE B. B. AND C. I. RAILWAY.—We learn that the Agent of the B. B. and C. I. Railway has received intimation, by means of a telegram from London, that the Secretary of State for India has sanctioned two Bombay termini for the B. B. and C. I. Railway—one at Colaba, the other on the Elphinstone Company's property.—Times of India.

MILITARY.—We observe that the left wing of the Poona Horse came into Kurrachee from Jacobabad on the morning of the 24th November. Mehidpore and Augor are again to be garrisoned by Bombay troops, the 15th B.N.I. now being en route there from Mhow, at which station they have been quartered for five years.—Englishman.—Major Blunt's troop of Royal Horse Artillery with the undermentioned officers—namely, Major Blunt, Captain Theobald, Lieutenants Hanbury and Gordon, and Assistant-surgeon Turton, with one hundred and thirty-five men, and one hundred and seventy horses, marched into Kirkee from Ahmednuggur on the morning of Monday, the 30th November, and took possession of the barracks and horse lines vacated by the C Troop R.H.A.—The Major-General commanding Mhow Division of the army recently recommended the construction of buildings as ironing-rooms for regimental dhobees, in view to the prevention of soldiers' clothes being carried to dhobees' houses as at present. The Government of India, it is said, considered the application an entirely novel demand, and negatived it.

THE INDO-EUROPEAN TELEGRAPH.—The interruption in telegraphic communication by cable between Bushire and Fao does not appear to have been caused by a break, as reported originally, since the line has resumed work without the necessity of taking up the cable. There is, however, some fault which, we believe, was not wholly unexpected, but which doubtless will be soon remedied. The Ambervale proceeded up the Makran Coast on Saturday to lay eighty miles of cable up to Angaam. Colonel Goldsmid, Colonel Pelly, and Mr. Walton leave for the gulf on Thursday with the steamers Elphinstone, Canning, and Sind. Captain Phelps, R.E., goes also by this opportunity with reference to the erection of new telegraph stations.—Sindian, Nov. 25.

SAD CASE OF SCURVY ON BOARD SHIP.—The ship Ne Plus Ultra has just arrived from Liverpool, after a passage of over 150 days. Scurvy broke out among the crew some months ago, from their drinking bad-smelling impure water. The disease spread, and at this moment, with two or three exceptions, the whole crew are afflicted with this fearful scourge. Ten men lie prostrate at this moment in their bunks in the forecabin, and two of these will require the greatest care, if indeed their case is not past all cure. One man jumped overboard yesterday as the vessel neared the light-ship, and though a dubash's boat was at hand, the poor man sunk with his fevered brain (another form of the disease). We regret to learn that one of the two men above referred to has died, and that two others are in very low state.—Bombay Gazette, Dec. 5.

SAINT ANDREW'S DINNER.—Saint Andrew's Dinner of 1868 will long live in the recollection of those who were present thereat, as one of the most pleasant evenings they have enjoyed out of the Land o' Cakes. Everything went off splendidly from one end of the evening to the other. Framjee-hall is well suited for meetings of the kind, and this contributed not a little to the success of the evening. The acoustic properties of the hall are such that a speaker can make himself heard with a little exertion, while a speaker in the Town Hall could not make himself heard at all. Those at a distance from the speaker were therefore on even terms with those near him, and the spectacle was avoided of one-half of the company cheering lustily or in roars of laughter, while the other half sat demurely looking on, and wishing the inaudible oration over. The committee deserve the greatest credit for all the arrangements, which were perfect; the dishes were plentiful and choice, and so were the "drinks." For this, however, we believe the committee refuse to take any credit, giving it all to Mr. Dunlop, the honorary secretary. Indeed, the chairman, in proposing Mr. Dunlop's health, said that but for his indefatigable exertions as honorary secretary it is doubtful whether there would have been a St. Andrew's dinner at all. It is due to Herr Schmuck, the professor of music now in Bombay, and who trained a band specially for the occasion on barely a week's notice, to say that his exertions were most successful. Considering the difficulties under which Herr Schmuck laboured, the compliments addressed to him during the evening must have been particularly gratifying. The toasts had all been done justice to by twelve o'clock, at which time "Auld Lang Syne" was sung in due and ancient manner. This concluded, most of the Englishmen and a few Scots were observed to depart; many, however, remained to dance Tullochgorum and other reels, to sing together the songs of other days, and to drink a few toasts which could not very well have been included in the toast-list. At a late hour of the morning, about which hour, we believe, there is some difference of opinion, they too parted, "unco happy."—Times of India.

GOVERNMENT GENERAL ORDERS.

THE NEW CIVIL SERVICE RULES.

Simla, Nov. 12.—No. 4,565.—The following rules have been laid down for the disposal of applications for leave or furlough from officers of the Bengal Civil Service, or from officers of the Madras or Bombay Civil Service, employed in the presidency of Bengal, in modification of the rules published in notification No. 3,414, dated Aug. 19 last:—

1. Subject to the exigencies of the public service, lieut. governors and the chief commissioners of Oude and the Central Provinces are empowered to grant any leave of furlough authorised by the rules to officers serving under their respective orders.
2. If an officer applying for leave of furlough be serving out of his own presidency, the local Government or Administration under which he is serving will, if the leave or furlough be granted, inform the Government of India, Madras, or Bombay, as the case may be.
3. All applications for leave of furlough should be accompanied by a certificate from the local accountant-general, showing that the applicant is entitled to the leave asked for, and should be forwarded, through the usual channel, to the local Government or Administration under which the officer is serving.
4. Except under orders of the Secretary of State, the term of leave or furlough cannot be altered without the permission of the Government or Administration by which it was granted.
5. Every officer who obtains leave or furlough shall supply himself with a last pay certificate, and with a statement showing the pay which he is entitled to draw while absent. It shall be the duty of the local Accountant-general to furnish these documents, and no leave allowances will be payable without their production.
6. A quarterly statement of the officers absent on furlough or special leave, with the dates of the grant and expiry of such furlough or leave brought up to March 31, June 30, September 30, and December 31 of each year, shall be punctually furnished by local Governments and administrations to the Government of India in the Home Department.

7. From these quarterly returns a register will be compiled and kept at the office of the Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department of all grants of leave or furlough, of all extensions of leave or furlough, and of all returns to duty from leave. This register will be published quarterly in the Gazette of India.

8. Every officer returning to duty shall report his return to the Government of India, and to the local government or administration by which his leave or furlough may have been granted.

9. If any local government or administration shall see fit to refuse a furlough on the ground of the exigencies of the public service, it shall report such refusal for the confirmation of the Government of India.

THE REVISED MILITARY FURLOUGH RULES OF 1868.

The military furlough rules of 1868 have been revised in some minor particulars. In lieu of reprinting the entire original document, we give the portions only that have been subjected to emendation:—

Simla, Nov. 10.—No. 1,061.—The Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India having, with certain modifications, approved generally of the rules relative to the absence on leave of military officers, published in G.G.O. No. 613, dated June 19 last, the following revised rules are published in substitution of those contained in the order above referred to.

These rules will be applicable to all officers who may elect to adopt them belonging to the several Indian staff corps or the Indian army; and in regard to the period of leave of absence during which appointments may be held, and in regard to the increased allowances they will also be applicable to officers of the royal artillery and royal engineers, late of the Indian army, holding permanent staff appointments not of a regimental nature.

The question of the application of these rules to the officers generally of H.M.'s British forces serving in India is still under the consideration of H.M.'s Government.

To obviate confusion or misconception as to the rules referred to, those previously in existence and those now sanctioned will be severally designated as the furlough rules of 1796, of 1854, or of 1868.

The term "furlough pay" having now a changed and twofold signification in all future orders and references, "furlough pay" will be understood as the half-Indian salary within the prescribed limits, specified in paragraph 5 of these rules, converted at the exchange of two shillings for the rupee; whilst "English furlough pay" will represent the rates heretofore allowed to the several grades as English pay under the rules of 1796 and 1854.

The alterations in the rules commence with Chapter I.—Furloughs.—Rule V. having been amended, we repeat the clause, with the note appended:—

CHAPTER I.—Furlough.

V.—An officer drawing staff pay in addition to pay of rank, proceeding on furlough, will be allowed pay at the rate of 50 per cent. of the salary of his substantive office. But an officer on civil employ, and drawing consolidated salary, will be allowed 50 per cent. of the average salary drawn by him for three years prior to his proceeding on furlough. No absentee shall in either case draw more than £1,200 or less than £250 per annum. The term salary will signify the total amount drawn by an officer, whether as consolidated pay or staff allowances in addition to pay, but will not include any extra or special allowances. It is to be clearly understood that an officer absent on furlough, who may be transferred to another office during his absence, shall be entitled, for the entire period of his furlough, to pay at the rate sanctioned to him when leaving India, provided that an officer whose term of office shall lapse during his furlough shall cease to draw his half staff salary from the date of such lapse. An officer will also be entitled to the benefit of his promotion to a higher staff corps or regimental rank whilst on furlough, subject to the maximum limit.

Officers not in staff employ will receive half the Indian pay of their rank, provided that in no case will an officer entitled to furlough receive less than the above minimum of £250 per annum.

Note.—Officers who may be entitled to income allowance from the military fund during absence in Europe will draw their half salary, or minimum absence allowance, under the foregoing clause, subject to a deduction equivalent to the amount of such income allowance. This is in substitution of the following note, which appears among the original rules:—"The annual allowance of £50 heretofore granted in certain cases to subalterns will cease to be drawn with reference to the amount fixed as the minimum of furlough pay."

Rule XI. stands amended as follows:—"Furlough on urgent private affairs for six months, with pay equivalent to the British regimental pay of his rank, to be extended to a year if necessary, may be granted, when the officer is not eligible for ordinary furlough. The said period may form part of the periods of either eight or six years referred to in Rules VIII. and IX. [The reference was to Rule IX. only in the original rules.]

XIII.—Absence on medical certificate for a longer period than two years at one time, or departure on such furlough within three years of the date of return from a previous furlough, except furlough under Rule XI., will involve forfeiture of appointment. Such furlough may, however, be extended to a third year on English furlough pay.

An addition to this clause has been made as follows:—

"In the event of an officer not being able to return to his duty after an absence of three years, it will rest with the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India in Council to order him to appear before a medical board, with a view to placing him on the retired list if entitled to pension, or on the half-pay list. Should the circumstances of the case warrant a further extension of leave, it can only be granted without pay."

XIV.—An officer not entitled to furlough, whose health may neces-situate his taking it within three years from the date of last return, may, under the usual medical certificate, obtain such amount as may be duly certified to be necessary for the restoration of his health, but will only receive English furlough pay, and must vacate any appointment he may be holding. [The addition to this rule is marked in italics.]

Rule XV. has been altered, and now stands as follows:—"An officer entitled to furlough, whose health may necessitate his absence from India, will be compelled to take leave as furlough under Rule IX., but without forfeiting any passage money to which he may be entitled under military fund rules, or, if a subaltern, by regulation when proceeding on medical certificate."

Any extension of this furlough beyond the period to which he may be entitled under Rule IX. will be regarded, in all respects, as furlough on medical certificate. Such extension will not be allowed to take effect until the officer shall have exhausted the entire amount of his available furlough on private affairs. If the aggregate of two years' leave is exceeded, the officer will after that date come under the provisions of Rule XIV.

Rule XXIV. has been amended, and now stands as follows:—"In computing the furlough on private affairs to which an officer who has already enjoyed some portion of such furlough will be entitled under these rules, it will be necessary to deduct the total amount of the furlough on private affairs of which he may have availed himself during his service from the total periods to which under Rule IX. he can lay claim. The balance will represent the leave to which he will be entitled on the expiration of not less than three years from his last return to duty."

Illustrations.

(1).—An officer, who had obtained under the existing rules two years' furlough after ten years' service returns to India on the date on which this order is promulgated. He accepts its conditions, and serves four years longer in India. On the expiration of that term he can take one year's furlough, thus:—

Total service in India	14 years.
Leave to which that service entitles him	3 "
Already enjoyed	2 "

Balance ... 1 year.

(2).—An officer of four years' [in the original draft two years'] service has proceeded on sick certificate to England for 20 months, extended afterwards to two years. He returns, serves six years in India, takes two years' furlough, and returns to India about the time of the promulgation of these rules, which he accepts. He must serve four years before he can take an additional year's furlough, thus:—

Total service up to return from furlough	14 years.
Total service in India	10 "
Furlough enjoyed on that service	2 "

Further period of service to entitle him to one year's furlough ... 4 years.

The Subsidiary Rule which ended the original document has been altered and now stands as follows:—

XXXIV.—Officers of the Indian military and medical services will be required generally to notify their intention to accept these rules or to adhere to those now existing, on the first occasion of their taking furlough or general leave after the publication of this order. Such election must be considered final, and under no plea whatever will an officer be subsequently relieved from the choice thus made.

Officers who may determine to abide by existing rules will be allowed to proceed on furlough on the conditions laid down in Rules VII., VIII., and XII. to the extent to which they may be entitled under the Furlough Regulations of 1854, and on the rates of pay contemplated in those regulations, but retaining their appointments. The principle laid down in Rule XV. must, however, be applied in those cases.

If an officer under the Furlough Rules of 1796 elects the present Rules, his service for pension will be reckoned under the former Rules up to 1st July, 1868, and thenceforward under the Rules of 1868.

The foregoing Rules take effect from the 1st July, 1868, as respects retention of appointments and terms under which leave will be granted, but half staff allowances will not be available for officers now on leave in cases where the acting officer has already come into receipt of the full staff salary. Nor can officers who have vacated appointments which have since been permanently filled up, have any claim to be restored to them.

THANKS TO MAJOR-GENERAL WILDE FOR SERVICES IN HAZARA.

Head Qrs., Simla, Nov. 14.—With reference to G.O. No. 1,046 of the 7th inst., and the despatches connected with the late Hazara campaign, the C. in C. in India desires to offer his very sincere and hearty thanks to Major-general Wilde, C.B., C.S.I., Brigadier-general R. Bright, Brigadier-general J. L. Vaughan, C.B., and the officers and troops under their orders, for the excellent performance of their duty. The conduct of the expedition has been admirable, and the alacrity of all ranks, in pressing forward to join the force, beyond all praise. H.E.'s opinion of the several officers and troops concerned has been fully expressed in the letter to Government from the Quartermaster-general, No. 563, dated Nov. 5, 1868, which is amongst the published despatches.

SPECIFICATIONS OF INVENTIONS.—The undermentioned specifications of inventions have been filed, under Section 10 of Act XV. of 1859, in the office of the Secretary to the Government of the North-Western Provinces:—"For an improved form of anicut or weir for impounding water for canals and purposes of navigation;" by Mr. J. DESPATCHES OF THE HAZARA FIELD FORCE.

No. 3.

From Major-general A. Wilde, Commanding Hazara Field Force, to the Adjutant General, head-quarters, Simla.

Head-quarters, Hazara Field Force, Camp Oogie, Oct. 25, 1868.

Sir,—With reference to my previous Despatches, Nos. 1 and 2, respectively, dated 24th and 25th October, 1868, I have the honour to continue, for the information of H.E. the C.-in-C., the relation of the operations of the Hazara Field Force subsequent to the occupation of the Muchaie Peak of the Black Mountain on the 5th October, 1868, until I finally left the Patan country on the 14th October, 1868, and the force encamped at Chermung, in the Tikaree Valley.

2. The 6th was passed in the completion of a road up to the crest of the mountain, to enable me to move up the supplies and ammunition of the force. Fortunately a supply of good spring water was found at Chit-tabut, also at the hill Doda; and subsequently, much to the surprise of all, in the forest, about 300 yards below the Muchaie Peak itself. Roads were speedily made down to it by the soldiers of 1-19th Foot, and all anxiety on this most vital point ceased. Located on the most commanding plateau of the range, with seven days' food and an abundance of water, with my line of communication with Agore secure, I had every reason to expect that the objects of the Government—viz., "the vindication of the British character, and the future security of the frontier from invasion"—would shortly be attained.

3. Beyond the mere fact of our prestige among the hill men having been raised considerably by the late achievements, I had in my hands the power of inflicting considerable damage and loss on all the villages of the Patan tribes situated on the slopes near the top of the mountain; and, while the troops held the ridge and the upper spurs, it was easy to let lose the Hazara Levies, men as light-footed as the hill men themselves for this work of destruction.

4. On the morning of the 7th the enemy had made no sign of submission. In concurrence with the Commissioner, I detached the 24th Punjab Infantry, under the command of Lieut. col. G. N. Cave, down the Bilund Kote spur from the camp at Munna-ka-Dunna, covering these movements with the guns of D. F. R.H.A. The above orders were conveyed to the officer commanding at Munna-ka-Dunna, by Captain W. K. Elles, deputy assistant adjutant general. Supported by the above troops, a large body of levies was at this time despatched from the crest of the mountain, and in a few hours many of the Puraree Syuds' villages were in flames. Little opposition was offered, as the attack came suddenly. Before night the troops and levies were back in camp.

5. On the 7th also the 1-6th Foot and the Mortar Battery were moved up and occupied the hill of Dadah on the crest. Arrangements were made the same day to carry out still more extensive punitive operations against the Puryaree Syuds (the chief offenders in this spot); but owing to the tribes making overtures of peace, the orders for the movement of the troops and levies were countermanded.

6. H.E. will observe that, during the 6th and 7th, no Patan villages were destroyed. I had, however, determined, in concurrence with the Commissioner, that active and punitive measures should be resumed on the 8th had the tribes not submitted as they eventually did.

7. The 8th and 9th were passed in negotiations, which were most successfully brought to a close on the 10th, and peace was made with the following Patan tribes:—Hussunzaies, Chuggurzaies, and Akarzaies, who, in all, can collect 9,000 to 10,000 fighting men.* Terms were also given to the Puryaree Syuds, whose property had already suffered considerably. I would here beg to pay a tribute to the tact, temper, and judgment displayed by the Commissioner, Major F. Pollock, who unceasingly laboured for the Government interests, and who, by his firmness in exacting what was due to the State, at once impressed the deputation with the necessity of an immediate compliance.

8. During the 9th I moved up the 21th Punjab Infantry to assist in the protection of my park of commissariat stores at Muchaie Gully, a vale just below the plateau of the same name; and on the same day Lieut. col. E. Atlay, commanding Royal Artillery, succeeded in bringing up two elephants to the peak, a proof that had it been necessary I could have brought my elephant battery into action at an altitude of ten thousand feet above the sea.

9. During the progress of negotiations a few flags belonging to the Swatees of a Talikote were visible on a distant point of the mountain, and their presence gave the troops high hopes of a future encounter. The flags, however, disappeared as soon as the Swatees found that, consequent on their powerful allies—the Patans—having concluded terms with us, the chance of opposing our troops with success was destroyed.

10. The 11th and 12th were passed in the withdrawal of the troops and commissariat stores to the camp at Munna-ka-Dunna. This movement was conducted with the strictest precision and regularity; not a shot was fired, nor was any loss incurred as long as the force was moving in Patan lands. The deputation of the tribes accompanied the troops, and remained, from that time to this, faithful and true to their engagements and honour. On approaching, however, to within a mile of the camp of Munna-ka-Dunna, an attack was made on the rear guard of the 2nd Goorkha Regiment by some of the followers of the Puryaree Syuds. The guard under the command of that gallant young soldier, Lieut. Arthur Battye, turned upon them, and inflicted a loss of two killed and several wounded, without any casualty on our side. Excepting this incident, and the cowardly wounding during the night of a servant of the commissariat, in the forest below Chittabut, by the same miscreants, nothing occurred to interrupt the evacuation of the Black Mountain.

11. On the 13th the troops remained at Munna-ka-Dunna, resting, after their late severe work, in picket and road-making, and the Commissioner peremptorily called on the Syuds (a community of divided proprietors, and not a tribe) for reparation for the insult and breach of faith offered to the British Government, and for the cowardly assault on the camp follower. The chief offender, Kudrut Shah, sent his son into camp to crave forgiveness. He was summoned to attend himself, and his son was sent to inform him that, unless he came in, troops would proceed to exact retribution.

12. On the morning of the 14th the 1-6th Foot, the 3rd Sikh Infantry, and Peshawur Mountain Battery, with a body of levies under command of Brigadier-general Vaughan, C.B., occupied a most difficult and rugged spur of the mountain overlooking the offending villages. In a few hours the ascending smoke announced that the work of destruction had been effected. At evening General Vaughan, C.B., withdrew his force, exchanging a few shots with the enemy, to my camp at Chermung, in Tikarce, to which place the headquarters and rest of the force had marched during the day. In recording the above day's work I have to thank Brigadier-general Vaughan, C.B., for the skill, knowledge of hill fighting, and shrewd precaution he displayed in effecting a very difficult task, and one in which a false step would have produced disastrous results.

13. Before leaving the camp of Munna-ka-Dunna I detached four native regiments, under the command of Lieut.-colonel C. H. Brownlow, C.B., to hold the village of Koongulle and the Jaigully Pass, as I had, by marching to Chermung, changed my line of communication. I shall have an opportunity of further explaining this in a subsequent report, when I treat of my operations in the valleys of the independent Swatees.

14. In concluding this section of my report descriptive of the subjugation of the Patan tribes of the Black Mountain, I would allude to a subject which gave the Commissioner and myself many days' anxious thought—I mean the possibility of being able, during our success against the tribes, to inflict a blow on the Hindustanee Wahabee colony, which, since its expulsion from Bonair, had moved north, and was known to be at this time in an unsettled state; for awhile at Beeah, on the right bank of the Indus, and then again at Judbaie, on this side of the river. Before seeing the country where the colony is at present resting (for it has not as yet obtained a permanent footing there), I had hopes of succeeding in the removal of this standing menace to the peace of the border, but I found that such an enterprise was not feasible. Had the Hindustanees combined with the Patan tribes (as there was a fair chance at one time of their doing) to resist our troops, an opportunity of defeating them would have occurred. They could not, however, come to any agreement with the tribes, and the result was that when the Patans sued for peace, the Hindustanees began to recross the river. To have sent a column against them was impossible, owing to the inaccessible nature of the glens near the Indus where they were encamped, and when terms had been given to the tribes to have attempted, an attack would have been a breach of our engagement. As it is, these Patans will not give the Hindustanees an asylum, having in fact refused to do so; and to have made their expulsion one of the terms of peace with the Chuggurzaies would, in the opinion of the Commissioner and myself, have resulted in prolonging the war without any advantage, since we had not the means of cutting off the retreat of these men.

15. I believe that the colony is near its end, and that by diplomacy it may be got rid of altogether; for the prestige of the Hindustanees is lost among these tribes, since the former refused their assistance against our troops from the Black Mountain.—I have, &c.,

A. WILDE, Major gen. comdg. Hazara Field Force.

ANNEXURE I.

DELHI AND LONDON BANK.—We are instructed from the office of the Delhi and London Bank that the paragraph headed "Lucknow," November 11, in our issue of the 16th inst., has no reference whatever to the branch of the Bank at Lucknow, conducted by Mr. Beresford.

TROOPS FOR INDIA.—A detachment of the 109th Regiment, to the number of 100 non-commissioned officers and men, and three officers, left Chatham garrison on Saturday for Portsmouth, there to embark for India, to join the service companies of the regiment. Lieutenant J. H. Campbell, Lieutenant A. Hoyes, and Ensign F. F. R. Burgess embarked with the troops.

THE HEAVY BOMBAY MAIL.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Poonah, Captain Methven, with the heavy Bombay mails, thirty-three passengers, specie £9,642, and a general cargo, arrived at Southampton on Saturday morning. The Poonah experienced in the Bay of Biscay heavy gales from north-west to west, and was compelled to be hove to, during which she lost one of her cutters.

ALTERATION IN THE FRENCH MAIL PACKET SERVICE TO INDIA, CHINA, JAPAN, AND MAURITIUS.—Information has been received from the French Post-office that the mails for India, China, and Japan, which are at present despatched from Marseilles by French packet on the 19th of each month, will in future be despatched once in four weeks. The next packet will leave Marseilles on Saturday, the 23rd of January, and thenceforward the packets will start every fourth Saturday. Mails for conveyance by these packets will be made up in London on the evening of the previous Thursday, and supplementary mails on Friday morning. MAURITIUS: Mails for Mauritius will continue to be despatched from Marseilles on the 9th January, 9th February, and 9th March next, by separate packet; but, after the latter date, the mails will be forwarded by the packets of the Indo-China line, sailing every fourth Saturday, the first mails under the new arrangement being sent by the packet leaving Marseilles on Saturday, the 20th March.

THE BOMBAY DEFENCE SHIP "ABYSSINIA."—The first selected test armour-plate for the side armour of the Abyssinia, twin screw (armoured, iron) turret ship, building for the defence of Bombay by Messrs. J. W. Dudgeon, at Cubitt Town, Millwall, was tested on Thursday last at Portsmouth on board the Thunderer, target ship, under the supervision of Captain A. Hood, C.B., commanding the gunnery establishment of H.M.'s ship Excellent. The plate was 14 feet long by 3 feet in breadth and 7 inches in thickness. Seven shots, fired from the 8-inch smooth-bore gun at 30 feet distance from the muzzle of the gun to the plate's face with 13 lb. charges, brought out the usual diagram of indentations with overlapping edges. Two bolts (supplied from Government stores) broke off at the first and second shot, from the brittle and unsuitable nature of the old worked up iron with which they had been made; but, notwithstanding this loss of support, the plate passed through the test in a most successful manner, and must take a certificate of the highest class. It was manufactured at the rolling mills of Sir John Brown and Co., the Atlas Steel and Iron Works, Sheffield, where the whole of the plating for the Abyssinia is being manufactured.

DEATH OF SIR HERBERT EDWARDES.—It is with sincere regret that we learn the death of Major-General Sir Herbert Edwardes, K.C.B., and Knight Companion of the Star of India, at the early age of forty-nine. This event occurred in London on the morning of December 23. His early distinction before the walls of Mooltan, in the year 1848, will be readily recalled—how, as a simple lieutenant, he, on his own judgment and responsibility, raised a force of the Frontier Mahomedans and twice defeated in the open field the army of "Dewan Moolraj," the rebellious Governor of the Sikh kingdom, and the murderer of our two English officers—how he reconquered the province of Mooltan, and from its revenues maintained his newly-gathered force. Again in 1856 he rendered services no less important in proposing to Lord Dalhousie, and successfully accomplishing a treaty of alliance and friendship with Dost Mahomed Khan, the ruler of the Afghan nation—an alliance which was one of the greatest securities of the Empire, when the sudden sweep of the Mutiny of 1857 had nearly overwhelmed it. Through his great ability, his dauntless courage, his marvellous foresight and resource, and his singular ascendancy over the roughest hearts, the most advanced, the most exposed, and the most dangerous portion of India, the position of the Peshawur Valley continued tranquil and undisturbed, and proved the fruitful source of strength to the Government of India during that great crisis, for from the border fastnesses and the martial districts of that frontier were sent forward the best and bravest of those levies of the Punjab which at Delhi reconquered the capital of India. A man of heroic stamp, of firm and yet gentle nature, the friend of the two Lawrences, of Robert Napier, of John Nicholson, and of a host of the native princes and chiefs of the Punjab, he has left to England and to its Indian empire the example of great and unselfish devotion, and of a sincere and unaffected piety.—Home News.

THE HAZARA CAMPAIGN.

The Broad Arrow thinks that something less than an army was required to cut a "Gordian knot" composed of savage tribes who live like any other guerillas, chiefly by plunder; and in the intervals of robbing and murdering one another become burglars and highwaymen, looting the post-office of an outlying European station, or stopping a treasure party on its lonely road to some out-of-way cantonment. Our "police" system of protection in the interior, and on the frontiers of our Indian possessions has ever been inefficacious. It is a miserable excuse for garrisoning. So entirely are a people, such as the Hussunzais, given to plunder, that General Wilde might have bought the permanent peace of our settlements on the frontier for probably a considerably smaller sum of money than the late campaign has cost. Suppose some of the tribes invited to join our service as a sort of additional or rural police, with regular pay, and rations when on any service; the effect, we believe, of such an arrangement would be to ensure the peace and protection of our distant stations near the frontier. The pay of an Hazara police need not be on the European scale. It need be very trifling, in fact, and still satisfy the moderate needs of the exceedingly frugal aborigines. The tribes of the "Black Mountains" prey on each other, often urged by the terrible goad of famine and imminent starvation. Raise out of their numbers a protective police, give the new force a little pay, and a few annas would be found to go a long way towards the relief of recurrent distress amongst the poor mountaineers and primitive villagers of the Hazara country. With the means of obtaining grain, the cultivation of the soil would proceed where it is much neglected. Thus one great cause of the fierceness of the mountaineers—starvation and famine—might be provided against; or, at any rate, the trial might be made of affording a liberal encouragement to the cultivation of the soil as a means of employing and feeding the people. We suggest this much, fully aware of the axiom that it is easier to propose remedies than to carry them out. But whatever are the difficulties to be encountered in dealing with the border races, it appears certain that the experiment of sending expeditionary armies against them, to be immediately withdrawn on their laying down their arms, and promising allegiance and abstinence from aggression in the future, is a short-sighted policy. We have sent a score at least of "expeditions" against the Hazara Highlanders, only to discover that nothing short of the actual presence of our troops can keep the tribes in subjection. The moment the expedition has returned the marauders break out anew, and this is what will probably occur again on the first opportunity.

Advertisements.

INDIA OFFICE, 29th December, 1868.

THE SECRETARY of STATE for INDIA in COUNCIL HEREBY GIVES NOTICE,—That the Advertisement from this Office, dated the 23rd December, 1867, stating "that the RATE of INTEREST of FOUR per CENT. on East India Bonds will Cease and Determine on the 1st January, 1869, and that from and after that date such Bonds will carry Interest at the rate of Three Pounds per Cent. per Annum," is CANCELLED, and the Rate of Interest on East India Bonds will therefore continue, as at present, at Four per Cent. per Annum.
M. E. GRANT DUFF.

BY ORDER OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That it is intended to SEND to INDIA annually a certain NUMBER of YOUNG MEN, Trained and Educated for ultimate EMPLOYMENT in the Higher Branches of the Department for the Conservation and Management of the FORESTS under the Government of India.

Eight Young Men will be selected in February next to go to India at the end of 1871.

The Salary will be at first £300 a-year, and the salaries of the appointments in the three Presidencies range between that sum and £1,900 a-year. Promotions will depend upon efficiency, and the occurrence of vacancies in the higher grades.

Applicants must be British subjects above seventeen and under twenty-five years of age.

As active habits and a strong constitution are most important, Candidates will have to undergo a strict Medical Examination.

They must send to the Revenue Department of the India-office, on or before the 8th of January, 1869, a statement of their names and parentage, with a certificate of birth, and of being possessed of a competent knowledge of the following subjects, and they must be prepared to undergo an examination in them:—

1. English writing from dictation and English composition.
2. Arithmetic in all its branches.
3. Algebra, elementary principles, simple and quadratic equations, ratios, and proportions, logarithms, arithmetical and geometrical progression.
4. Geometry (1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 6th Books of Euclid), and plane trigonometry.
5. Free hand and plan drawing.
6. A good colloquial knowledge of either French or German, with the facility to read and translate the works of some classical writer in the language.

A preference will be given to those Candidates who obtain a certain proficiency in—

1. Surveying and land measuring.
2. The elements of any of the following natural sciences:—
Mechanical and natural philosophy.
Chemistry.
Botany.
Geology.

If selected, they will be further required to go through a course of training and instruction in Forestry and cognate sciences for two years and a-half, in France or Germany, previous to their departure for India, and the Secretary of State will contribute £50 at the end of each half-year towards the expenses of their training, in the case of such Candidates as are favourably reported on by their instructors. In addition to this, if it should be found practicable, the young men will be required to place themselves under an approved Forester in Scotland for a few months before they go out to India.

More detailed information as to these appointments may be had on application to the Under Secretary of State for India, India-office, Westminster.

(Signed) HERMAN MERIVALE.

TEXTILE MANUFACTURES

AND THE

COSTUMES of the PEOPLE of INDIA

Prepared under the Authority of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

By J. FORBES WATSON, Reporter on the Products of India.

Imperial quarto, morocco back, cloth, with numerous coloured Photographs. £3. 5s.

OPINIONS of the PRESS.

THE TIMES.—"On no point, perhaps, in regard to India, has greater ignorance prevailed in England than in respect to the clothing of her vast population. Late as it is, and for the first time within the last hundred years of our Indian dominion, the work just completed by Dr. Forbes Watson supplies, and supplies it, too, in a most complete and intelligible manner. It would be impossible to follow Dr. Watson's work in detail; but, whether to the manufacturer or to the general reader, the interest throughout will continue unbroken. His book is written in a clear and thoroughly intelligible style throughout; it is handsomely got up, and embellished by numerous coloured photographs, from which the various styles of costumes and portions of clothing, male and female, will be more readily understood than from mere descriptions."

THE ATHENÆUM.—"We may safely say that a more important work on the manufactures of India has never been given to the public than the Industrial Museum, and this Commentary by Dr. Forbes Watson. Advantages are sometimes slow to follow, even when the channel for them has been skilfully made and clearly marked out, but we certainly do anticipate very great results from this work, and that before long its author will be acknowledged to deserve a place amongst the real benefactors of India."

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW.—"It is a matter of national importance to study and ascertain what the traditions of India in respect to dress really are. This task has been most ably performed by Dr. Forbes Watson in the volume before us. We call attention to the work and to the subject, not as a matter of mere curiosity, but as an inquiry of direct interest to the manufacturing industry of Europe. Dr. Watson has evidently brought his personal Indian experience to bear upon a mass of materials which, in less skilled hands, would most likely have proved wearisome and unintelligible. As he has arranged his details, they are as entertaining to the general reader as they are full of information and instruction to the manufacturer."

THE MORNING POST.—"The conception of this splendid work reflects the highest credit upon the wisdom of the department to which we are indebted for its publication; and the manner in which it has been executed by its author. No one can fully appreciate the value of this work without seeing it, because neither analysis nor extracts can give any idea of the immense mass of minute facts which it contains, and the admirable manner in which they are grouped and made subservient to the practical requirements of the manufacturer and the merchant, and the cravings of the student of ornamental art. The illustrations are as magnificent as they are appropriate. In fact, as mere productions of beauty and taste, they give the work the air of a book of art luxury, and we have no doubt that from this feature it will find many admirers and purchasers beyond the ranks of trade and commerce."

THE ART JOURNAL.—"The work, indeed, is as well fitted, as far as embellishment is concerned, for the drawing-room table as it is for the study; and its contents will be found far more interesting to the general reader than its mere designation would lead to a supposition that it might be. The motive and purpose of its publication is highly creditable to the present Home Government of India."

LIVES OF INDIAN OFFICERS,

Illustrative of the History of the Civil and Military Services of India.

BY JOHN WILLIAM KAYE,

Author of "The History of the War in Afghanistan," &c., &c.

Contents.

The Rev. HENRY MARTIN.	Sir HENRY LAWRENCE.
Sir CHARLES METCALFE.	General JAMES NEILL.
Sir ALEXANDER BURNES.	Brig.-gen. JOHN NICHOLSON.
Lord CORNWALLIS.	Captain ARTHUR CONOLLY.
Sir JOHN MALCOLM.	Major ELDRED POTTINGER.
The Hon. MOUNTBATTEN	Major D'ARCY TODD.
ELPHINSTONE.	Appendix, &c.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

"I am not without a hope that these memoirs may be regarded, in some sort, as a Biographical History of India from the days of Cornwallis to the days of Canning. * * I have not attempted, indeed, to write History; the work has grown up spontaneously out of the Lives of the great men who make history * * and, unless the ability of the execution has fallen far short of the sincerity of the design, I have done something, in these pages, to do honour to a race of public servants unsurpassed in the history of the world. * * I have striven to show how youths, from the middle-class families of our British Islands, have gone forth into the great Eastern world, and by their own unaided exertions carved their way to fame and fortune.

"J. W. KAYE."

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

From the ATHENÆUM.

"We say at once that more admirably-written and interesting narratives are scarcely to be found in any literature. We do not envy the man who could read without deep emotion the lives here given of Conolly, Lawrence, and Nicholson; and we doubt whether the whole range of history can show more perfect characters. Nobler subjects of biography could not have been chosen, and higher praise it is impossible to bestow on a writer than to say, as we do of this author, that he is fully equal to such a theme. * * Mr. Kaye's 'Lives of Indian Officers' will take a high place among the standard books of England."

From the SPECTATOR.

"A cadet, an artillery officer, an editor, an employe of the first rank, a successful historian, Mr. Kaye unites in his own person all the qualifications requisite to the biographer of the great Indian soldiers."

From the EXAMINER.

"Two stout volumes of biography, which, arranged chronologically, have, in addition to their biographical interest, great historical value as illustrations of the progress of political government, warlike exercise, and philanthropic effort in India during the last three generations. It is a work of remarkable interest; the interest being due not only to the stirring subjects of which it treats, but also to the admirable way in which the subjects are treated."

PARIS EXHIBITION, 1867.—GOLD MEDAL.
CLAYTON, SHUTTLEWORTH, & Co.

At the Triennial Trials of THE ROYAL AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY OF ENGLAND, held at Bury St. Edmunds, July, 1867, received the following Awards:—

For Single Cylinder Portable Steam Engine, THE FIRST PRIZE OF £25.

For Double Cylinder Portable Steam Engine, THE FIRST PRIZE OF £25.

For Horizontal Cylinder Fixed Engine, THE FIRST PRIZE OF £20.

For Double Blast Finishing Threshing Machine, THE PRIZE OF £15.

ALSO

THE SOCIETY'S SILVER MEDAL for ADJUSTING BLOCKS for MACHINES.

The duty performed by all C. S. and Co.'s Engines on this occasion considerably exceeded that of any others. C. S. and Co. refer with pleasure to the fact that the duty of their "Commercial" or single valve Engine at Chester, so long ago as 1858, was not equalled by any "ordinary" Engine at Rylwy.

DYSENTERY, CHOLERA, FEVER, AGUE, COLDS, &c.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S (Ex. Army Med. Staff)

CHLORODYNE

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE. The Public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

Remedial Uses and Action.

THIS INVALUABLE REMEDY produces quiet, refreshing sleep, relieves pain, calms the system, restores the deranged functions, and stimulates healthy action of the secretions of the body, without creating any of those unpleasant results attending the use of Opium. Old and young may take it at all hours and times when requisite. Thousands of persons testify to its marvellous good effects and wonderful cures, while medical men extol its virtues most extensively, using it in great quantities in the following diseases:—

Diseases in which eminently useful—Cholera, Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Colics, Coughs, Asthma, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Whooping Cough, Cramp, Hysteria, &c.

Those exhaustive diseases—Fever, Ague—so common in tropical climates, are rapidly arrested, and the cold stage in a few moments checked by a timely dose, when warmth and a general glow of the system is established, and comfort secured.

As a Sedative, Neurotic, and Antispasmodic, it is unequalled by any other known Medicine, and not to be surpassed in its specific effects.

Extracts from Medical Opinions.

The Right Hon. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians and J. T. Davenport that he had received information to the effect that the only remedy of any service in Cholera was Chlorodyne.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

From A. Montgomery, Esq., late Inspector of Hospitals, Bombay.—"Chlorodyne is a most valuable remedy in Neuralgia, Asthma, and Dysentery. To it I fairly owe my restoration to health after eighteen months' severe suffering, and when other remedies had failed."

Dr. Lowe, Medical Missionary in India, reports (Dec., 1865) that in nearly every case of Cholera in which Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne was administered, the patient recovered.

CHLORODYNE, the Great Remedy for CHOLERA.—See Report in the Times, Sept. 6, from the Malta Correspondent, who states, August 24th, that "108 cases and eighty-one deaths occurred at Messina; 50,000 people fled from the town, which is in a most deplorable condition; that Chlorodyne has been found most efficacious as a remedy, and a number of persons are reported to have been saved by its use."

Now as there are various imitations sold under the name of Chlorodyne, containing Indian Hemp, Morphia, &c., ingredients highly adverse to the cure of Cholera, the public are cautioned against the use of any compound under the name of Chlorodyne, unless it bears the name of Dr. J. Collis Browne, who coined the word Chlorodyne to designate his wonderful discovery, which he fully tested for many years in her Majesty's Service before introducing it to the public, the wonderful success of which has given rise to various imitations totally different to genuine Chlorodyne. See the decision of Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood, reported in the Times, July 13th, 1864.

The extraordinary medical reports on the efficacy of Chlorodyne renders it a subject of most vital importance that the public should obtain the genuine, which is now sold under the protection of the Government of Great Britain, authorising a stamp, bearing the words "Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne," without which none is genuine. Sold in bottles, 1s. 14d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d., by all Chemists. Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

DR. LOCOCK'S WAFERS.

FREEDOM from COUGHS in TEN MINUTES AFTER USE is INSURED by Dr. LOCOCK'S PULMONIC WAFERS.

From Mr. W. J. Dale, Chemist, 65, Queen's-street, Portsea:—

"From the immense sale I have had of Dr. Locock's Wafers throughout this populous locality I must do you the justice to say that I consider them invaluable for coughs, colds, asthma, &c."

To singers they are invaluable for clearing and strengthening the voice, and have a pleasant taste.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.

EASY DIGESTION.—Any one distracted by that demon of discomfort—bad digestion—should send for a box of these Pills, round which are wrapped brief, sagacious, and practicable instructions for removing dyspepsia. These admirable Pills cannot be too highly appreciated for the wholesome power they exert over all disorders of the stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels. They instantaneously relieve and steadily work out a thorough cure, and in their course dispel headache, biliousness, flatulency, and depression of spirits. It is wonderful to watch the daily improvement of the complexion as Holloway's Pills purify the blood and restore plumpness to the face, which had lost both flesh and colour. These Pills combine every excellence desirable in a domestic remedy.

WHITMORE'S COMPOUND LINIMENT OF ARNICA.

A SPECIFIC for the CURE of RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO, SCIATICA, SPRAINS, CONTUSIONS, WEAKNESS of the JOINTS, CHILBLAINS, &c. It is also an excellent remedy as a stimulating application to the surface of the chest and back in bronchitis, inflammation of the lungs, pulmonary consumption, and whooping cough. When the liver is inactive, rubbed over it, its stimulating properties have a beneficial effect, and in all cases where counter irritation is desirable, it will be found invaluable.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

WILKINSON'S BRONCHIO-THORACIC LOZENGES.

Prepared from the receipt of an eminent Physician, and experience has fully justified their recommendation as the most speedy remedy in irritation of the throat, catarrhal coughs, bronchitis, incipient consumption, spitting of blood, &c., &c. To public speakers and vocalists they will be found invaluable, as they impart a clear and beautiful tone to the voice. Free from any preparation of opium, and of an agreeable taste, they are applicable to all.

In bottles of one uniform size.

WHITMORE'S STOMACHIC DINNER PILLS.

No Pill is so efficacious in promoting digestion, strengthening the stomach, correcting acidity, preventing or removing headache, giddiness, &c., arising from a costive habit, debilitated stomach, or torpid liver.

They require no change of diet, and those of the most delicate constitution may take them with safety.

Taken as an adjunct with WILKINSON'S SARSAPARILLA with the greatest success.

In bottles, small, medium, and large.

Prepared by THOMAS WILKINSON (late Bridge and Co.), 270, Regent-street, London, W.

DINNEFORD'S FLUID MAGNESIA.

The Medical Profession for thirty years have approved of this pure Solution of Magnesia as the best remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion; and as the best mild aperient for delicate constitutions, for Ladies, Children, and Infants; and for REGULAR Use in Warm Climates.

DINNEFORD and Co., Chemists, 172, New Bond-street, London; and of all other Chemists throughout the World. N.B.—Ask for Dinneford's Magnesia.

PAINFUL TEETH, or DISEASED STUMPS EXTRACTED WITHOUT PAIN. No chloroform, and perfectly safe.

"There is no shame to our manhood if we distrust our own ability to endure the anguish of the body."

It is no secret that of late local anesthesia has been produced to such a degree, that the patient, retaining his consciousness, can watch the surgeon's knife as it cuts to cure, and yet be without the slightest sensation of physical suffering.—Daily Telegraph, July 13, 1868.

TEETH PAINLESSLY STOPPED with Permanent Enamel Cement of the exact natural colour. Guaranteed not to turn black, or make the Teeth look unsightly.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER AS A BASIS FOR ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

MINERALISED INDIA-RUBBER.—This material being soft and elastic, no springs or fastenings are required; the acids of the stomach produce no effect on it; it fits to the mouth with an accuracy which renders detection impossible, and it is entirely free from taste or smell. Where the gums are in any way tender, and great absorption has taken place, this system will prove invaluable.

INSPECTION OF MODELS AND SPECIMENS.

Feeling that illustrative specimens of the above improvements would impart a more accurate appreciation of their object, effect, and value, than any written description, a number of models have been executed representing the adaptation of Teeth, and sets to several different shapes, sizes, and defects of the mouth and gums. These models furnish a clear, practical exposition of the principles adopted, and may be seen every day at Mr. Webb's residence, free of charge.

His Treatise, "Dental Mechanics and Surgery," which explains the above painless and inimitable system, free by post, or on application to Mr. WEBB, 27, NEW BOND-STREET (late with Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon-Dentist, 8, Grosvenor-street).

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 229, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, 1s. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 10d.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, 6d.

JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 229, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

KEATING'S COUGH LOZENGES.—

UPWARDS OF FIFTY YEARS' experience has fully confirmed the superior reputation of these Lozenges in the cure of ASTHMA, WINTER COUGH, HOARSENESS, SHORTNESS OF BREATH, and other PULMONARY MALADIES.

RECENT TESTIMONIAL.

August 23, 1868.
Dear Sir,—Having tried your Cough Lozenges in India, I have much pleasure in testifying to their beneficial effects in cases of incipient consumption, asthma, and bronchial affections; so good a medicine ought to be known to be appreciated. I have prescribed it largely with the best results.
W. B. G.

Apothecary H.M. Indian Medical Service.

To Mr. Thomas Keating.

Sold in boxes, tins, and bottles, of various sizes.

KEATING'S CHILDREN'S WORM

TABLET.—A PURELY VEGETABLE SWEETMEAT, both in appearance and taste, furnishing a most agreeable method of administering a well-known remedy for INTESINAL or THREAD WORMS.

It is a perfectly safe and mild preparation, and is especially adapted for Children.

Sold in tins and bottles of various sizes.

KEATING'S PERSIAN INSECT DE-

STROYING POWDER.—This Powder is QUITE HARMLESS TO ANIMALS, but unrivalled in destroying Fleas, Bugs, Emmets, Flies, Cockroaches, Beetles, Gnats, Mosquitoes, Moths in Furs, and every other species of insect in all stages of metamorphosis.

Sold in packets, tins, and bottles, of various sizes.

CAUTION.—The Trade Mark is the Dome and Cross of St. Paul's, which is engraved on every article.

JOHN GOSNELL and Co.'s PATENT
